That, however, didn't mean that she was going to let them off for looking down on her and her kin. She turned around right as she made her way through the gate and activated the Coercion, Intimidation, and Domination skills all at once whilst also directing at the girl and the man standing beside her a powerful wave of bloodlust.

「Hiii!」

「Kuh...」

The girl's face paled as fell flat on her butt, whereas the man ended up taking a few steps backwards. All their immediately ended up springing to their feet in surprise before sending their glares in Fran's direction. Though they tried, they were unable to hide their fear of her.

As mercenaries, and hence, people experienced in the art of combat, they were able to recognize Fran's overwhelming power.

「W-What...」

Fran calmly walked through the gate as she took note of the fact that the out of breath Blue Catkin girl behind her had muttered something in a lifeless tone.

『Look at you, all smug and stuff...』

「Heheh.」

『That wasn't a compliment, you know?』

「Nn?」

175. The Ten Original Tribes

175. The Ten Original Tribes

「Hey, welcome.」

「Nn.」

The maid we met the first time we visited, Shara, led us through Aurel's mansion and towards our destination, the dining room.

「Sorry it had to be here of all places. I was stuck in a meeting with a bigshot all day, so I haven't really had a chance to eat anything yet.」

「Don't mind.」

「Care to join me? My personal chef just happened to get back from Barbra last night. I'm sure his dishes will be able to catch your interest.」

Why the hell not? The fact that Aurel called the chef his personal one pretty much instantly convinced me that the person in question was incredibly skilled.

「Please.」

It looked like Fran shared the same sentiment, as she immediately consented to having another meal.

「Shara, make sure the chef makes enough for her as well.」

「Yes sir.」

It was only then that I finally realized the implication of Aurel's statement. He was a pretty influential figure, but he was so busy that he hadn't a chance to eat until the afternoon had come to pass. That could only mean that the person he'd been entertaining was even more influential than he was.

「Weird people outside.」

「Some sort of mercenary band, I hear.」

「Famous?」

「Well, it's not a group I've ever heard of, at least. My guess is they want to talk to me so they can boost their prestige.」

「Really?」

「Yeah, it's something that happens all the time. People love to make claims about how well known they are elsewhere. They'll boast about slaying powerful demons and knowing influential nobles.」

Oh, I get it. So everyone new in town is just desperate to leave an impression on all of Ulmutt's more important people.

「Aren't't they aware that I can tell how strong they are just by looking at them?」

「Gahahaha! That so? If so, then there's only be two possible ways for them to truly be well known. The first would be because one of their members happens to be incredibly strong. The second would be because they were cruel.」

「Nn.」

「To be honest, I didn't like their attitudes. Their leader had sent a representative instead of coming on his own. At first, I'd almost wondered if said leader was a noble instead. Either way, I ended up deciding to just leave them be. I was hoping they'd eventually give up and go home.」

Huh, so they really were just scrubs after all. I guess that makes sense given that they seemed rather weak.

「Aurel. This.」

「Hmmm... I see, I take it you've completed my request then?」

Aurel opened the pendant and confirmed that we'd delivered the letter he wrote.

「Want to ask about evolution.」

「Well, it does look like you did as you were asked and got the pendant to Rumina.」

「Nn.」

「I guess that must mean I'll have to pay my dues.」

「Won't need payment if told about evolution.」

「I'm not capable of providing you enough knowledge to have made the request I gave you worth your time.」

「Really?」

「I wouldn't have sent you to see Rumina if I was capable of telling you what you wanted to know. I simply would have told you it myself. I myself have spent many years looking into the the Black Cat Tribe and its potential for evolution, but I've never been able to find satisfactory results. All I know is one has to do more than just reach a certain level.」

Damn... Not even Aurel's figured anything out after spending several years researching the topic despite the fact that he's an influential B ranked adventurer...?

「Then would like to ask about the Black Catkin in the past.」

「...Where'd you catch wind of that?」

「Radyr.」

「That loose-lipped son of a...!」

「Was told about incredible strength.」

「Yeah... She was quite the strong one...」

Aurel began speaking in a quieter tone as he recalled his youth. He told us about the Black Catkin he met, how she saved him, and how the two of them had hit it off.

「It's already been 53 years since then.」

「That person. Couldn't evolve?」

「She couldn't. She, like you, had been out on a journey in search of a way to evolve. She'd even visited Rumina fairly frequently in hopes of finding a clue.」

「But still failed?」

「I presume so.」

Wait, he presumed so? Did that mean he wasn't certain?

Fran had also caught onto his lack of confidence, and tilted her head in response.

「A few things happened, and she ended up leaving town. We haven't been in touch since then.」

「Few things?」

「A few things indeed. Anyways, that's enough of that. There's no point talking about someone that's been long gone. You'd best try talking to Dias if you'd like to know more about her. The two of them got along quite well. Anyway, why don't we get back on track?」

I didn't even need to activate the Principle of Falsehood in order to know that he was still hiding something, but I figure out exactly what that thing happened to be.

If I had to guess, I'd probably assume it was because she'd died off in a dungeon somewhere. If that were the case, then Aurel would probably find it rather difficult to talk about her. He also probably thought that Fran would end up mourning her predecessor's death as well. I figured that there was no point putting a damper on Aurel's mood, and that we could probably get Dias to tell us everything we wanted to know, so we just went with the flow and allowed him to change the topic.

「I'm sure you already know this seeing as how you've spoken to Rumina, but it used to be much less difficult for Black Catkin to attain evolution.」

「Nn.」

「That, however, has changed. It is exactly that change that leads us to our next question: why? Why did the circumstances change? I personally believe that the answer is that the change is most likely a result of divine retribution.」

「Divine retribution? Punished by Gods?」

「It's something often applied to those that have committed grave sins or opposed the Gods. The most famous example would be what occurred on the continent of Goldishia.」

Oh right. I remember hearing about that. Trismegistus, Lord of the Dragonmen, made use of the Evil God's power in order to create a magic beast. Said magic beast went berserk and basically fucked the whole continent. Trismegistus was punished by being forced to fight his creation for the all of eternity.

「I know that it's something that happened far in the past, but I still find it strange that there's so little information that links evolution to the Black Cat Tribe. It almost seems to be exactly like the method in which one manufactures magic beasts in the sense that all pertinent information is simply gone. It's like the Gods have simply erased all records of it. I dare say that they have even gone as far as to fiddle with people's memories.」

Well I mean, that does sound like something a God would be capable of.

「Some beastkin tribes practice the art of keeping their evolutionary methods a secret, but it's relatively easy for one to discover the methodologies so long as they refer to books or other works of literature. It's not like that with the Black Cat Tribe's evolutionary methods. Only a few works remain at best. I've also tried asking the Elves, but none of them seem to remember it at all. In fact, they seem to have completely forgotten the fact that the Black Cat Tribe was even capable of evolution to begin with.」

Okay yeah, that does sound pretty damn unnatural. I wouldn't really be surprised if the Gods had just tinkered with people's heads and forced them to forget stuff. Again, that sounds like something they'd be capable of.

I ruminated on it for a bit, but none of that God stuff actually served for anything more than an afterthought. I was much more focused on one of the other things that Aurel had said, as it simply couldn't be ignored.

「Still some remaining literature?」

Fran had addressed the exact same point I'd caught onto. Aurel hadn't stated that there were no longer any works of literature containing details regarding the Black Cat Tribe's evolutions. He'd only said that most were no longer present.

「Truth be told, I did happen to find a single work that contained a few pertinent details.」

「What kind?」

「Calm down. What I found was not something that addressed the matter directly.」

Aurel smiled bitterly at the fact that Fran had gotten so excited that she ended up slamming the table while rising to her feet. Apparently the book he found wasn't one that'd addressed the topic directly, but only mentioned it in passing.

「Have you ever heard of The Ten Original Tribes?」

「Ten original tribes? No.」

「The Ten Original Tribes refer to the first ten groups of beastkin that the God of Beasts and Insects had birthed into the world. Each is said to possess the power of a Divine Beast laying dormant within.」

「Divine Beast? Cool sounding.」

「Nine of the Ten Original Tribes have been known since ancient times: The Golden Flame Lionkin, The White Snow Wolfkin, The Yellow Dust Ratkin, The Purple Wind Elephantkin, The Orange Iron Foxkin, The Red Earth Horsekin, The Green Water Turtlekin, The Blue Life Snakekin, and The Cherry Blossom Cowkin. The tenth was, for some odd reason, unknown. For many years, its identity was thought of as one of the Beastkin's greatest mysteries...」

「Last is Black Catkin?」

「Possibly, yes. The work I happened to procure stated that the last tribe was the Black Heavenly Tigerkin, and it just so happens to be that Rumina is of the Black Tigerkin race.」

「Black Heavenly Tigerkin same as Black Tigerkin? Then, Aurel, White Wolfkin same as White Snow Wolfkin?」

「Not exactly. We, the White Dog Tribe's members, are capable of evolving into White Snow Wolfkin as opposed to White Wolfkin if we happen to fulfill a certain set of conditions. I myself was only capable of becoming a White Wolfkin.」

According to Aurel, his species, the White Dogkin, descended from a line of White Snow Wolfkin. Hence, its members were also capable of becoming a White Snow Wolfkin so long as they were qualified to do so.

Through extrapolation, one could then assume that it was possible for Black Catkin to either evolve into Black Heavenly Tigerkin if they too met a certain set of conditions. Else, they do as Rumina did and simply evolve into Black Tigerkin instead.

As a tribe that descended from one of the ten, White Dogkin were and are to this day respected by their beastkin peers.

「And that is why I believe it to be odd for the beastkin to have simply forgotten about the Black Cat Tribe, which has likely also descended from one of The Original Ten Tribes.」

「Nn.」

Many tribes have performed investigations in order to determine which of the tribes was supposed to be the last of the ten, many of which ended in an assertion of the superiority of one's own lineage. Naturally, most of these assertions were false. Had he not known of Rumina, Aurel would have disregarded the work that made mention of the Black Heavenly Tigerkin as one of these false claims. But he didn't. His knowledge of her made it so he simply couldn't. Instead, he'd been convinced that the work he came across spoke merely of the truth.

But that, again, begged a question. Why exactly had that one work been left behind if all the rest had been purged?

「And that is all I have come to know.」

Aurel's face twisted in what could only be expressed as deep rooted frustration. He'd evidently thought at length about the topic, quite possibly because of the Black Catkin girl he'd known in the past.

「However, I do still have one thing to say. Divine retribution comes not without salvation. Even Trismegistus may one day be released from his curse if he simply defeats the magic beast he spawned. By that logic, the Black Cat Tribe must also be capable of the same. There must be a way for you and your kin to release yourselves from the fetters that bind you.」

「Nn.」

「But again, that is the extent of my knowledge. I'm sorry I wasn't able to be of much use.」

「Not useless. Helped lots. Thank you.」

「You really think so?」

「Nn.」

「That's quite comforting to hear.」

Fran's words caused Aurel's expression to blossom into a heartfelt smile.

176. Having Curry in Ulmutt

176. Having Curry in Ulmutt

Shara, the maid, brought Fran and Aurel their meals shortly after they finished discussing evolution. She was accompanied by a pudgy man, who I presumed to be the chef Aurel had mentioned earlier.

「I'm sorry about having kept you waiting.」

「No worries, Asuto. The dish you've prepared has quite the delicious smell to it.」

「It's one I learned of during my time in Barbra.」

Asuto, the chef, lifted the pot's lid and started to stir its insides with a ladle.

「Oh? I'm looking forward to giving it a try.」

「Don't expect too much. I'm still in the process of tuning the recipe.」

「And you're still serving it in spite of that?」

「I'm serving it to you because I know you've a very sharp sense of taste. I'd love for you to help me figure out what the dish is lacking. The version I tasted in Barbra was much more complete, and also the most delicious thing I've ever tasted in my life.」

「Well, now I'm really looking forward to trying the dish.」

「This prototype is already quite delicious in and of itself, but it seems to be missing something, so I'd really appreciate your opinion on it.」

「Hah hah hah. I'll give you as many opinions as you'd like so long as it means I get to enjoy delicious food.」

「I was also wondering whether or not it'd be best for me to make several of my regular dishes for the guest. Should I?」

「Well? What do you say?」

「Nn. Don't need.」

「Then please do give me your opinions on the dish as well.」

「Leave to me.」

「Woof woof!」

Urushi simply couldn't stand for missing out on a free meal, so he made sure to make his presence known.

Oh God damn it Urushi, stop drooling! We might have to pay for it if you mess it up!

「Some for Urushi too.」

「Not problem. Urushi, Magic Beast.」

「Woof!」

「Oh, he's your familiar? He seemed so friendly that I didn't even realize. Alright then, I'll get some ready for him too.」

Asuto scooped the pot's contents, a thick, syrupy, brown liquid composed of potatoes and other vegetables, onto a plate of rice.

The dish the chef had created was one I'd seen before. Rather, it was one I had a vast amount of tucked away inside my dimensional storage. Hell, there was no way I wouldn't recognize it. It was the dish I'd popularized back when we visited Barbra.

「Curry?」

「Wow, I'm surprised you knew. You hit the hammer right on the head, it's the dish that took this year's cooking contest by storm, curry.」

「Oh, right, you did say you were just in Barbra, right Fran?」

「Nn.」

「Then I take it you've had it before?」

「Nn.」

「Great! That's just perfect.」

Yeah uh, it was more like she ate the stuff every single day, but apparently that didn't matter, seeing as both she and Urushi were looking at it with their eyes sparkling regardless.

「Enjoy.」

「It looks a bit odd, but smells delicious.」

「Nom nom.」

「Worf worf. Bork bork.」

「That's a good appetite the two of you have there.」

The chef complimented Fran and Urushi with a smile.

「Hmmm... The taste is... unusual, but really fuels the appetite!」

Curry seemed to suit Aurel's palate. He'd initially started off eating at a rather slow pace, but soon began shoveling it into his mouth as quickly as he could.

「Seconds.」

「Woof.」

Fran and Urushi finished three plates each by the time Aurel finished his meal.

『Is it good?』

(Mediocre?)

She ended up eating five dishes despite not really being satisfied with the taste.

(Nn. Still tasty, but bad compared to Master's curry.)

「It's called curry. Barbra's actually currently in the midst of a curry boom. Everyone's developing recipes for curry bread, curry pasta, and other things that make use of it. Dozens upon dozens of stores have also started putting it on their menus.」

「Given its taste, I'm not surprised. You said this recipe still needed some work?」

「It does. It can't hold a candle to the original I had in Barbra.」

「The original's that good?」

「Everyone there has been saying that it would've won had the cooking contest not been cancelled due to the incident.」

「Nn! Guaranteed victory.」

Fran nodded happily in order to assent to Asuto's statement.

We hadn't managed to win, but we'd still at least managed to get that one dude to acknowledge the dish, which in and of itself made me quite happy.

Likewise, the fact that the recipe had started becoming more and more widespread did the same. It looked people were already starting to come up with decently interesting spin offs too, like curry pasta, for example.

「Well, you sure seemed to suddenly get all giddy. Why the change?」

「Master won.」

「Master? Master who?」

「Oh, are you talking about the Master that everyone's been talking about? The Curry Master?」

Wait. Wait what? Did he just say what I thought he did? He was referring to me, right?

「Was your cooking Master the person that introduced curry to Barbra?」

「Not just cooking. Master for everything.」

「Magic and swordsmanship included?」

「Nn. Master capable of anything.」

「That's one impressive Master you've got right there. Wait, didn't you enter the city all on your own?」

「Nn. Master elusive like phantom.」

「Well, you're just as skilled as any full fledged adventurer, so I can't say I'd be surprised if you were going around without any supervision.」

「Huh? So you really are the Curry Master's disciple?」

Okay, yeah, apparently I actually heard him right. God dammit! Why did I end up with such a stupid sounding nickname!?

『Hey Fran, you mind double checking that by the Curry Master, he means me?』

「Asuto. Curry Master, who?」

「Wasn't he your Master?」

Aurel raised his brow; he was a bit confused.

「Oh, that may be because he doesn't actually refer to himself as such. The person responsible for inventing curry remained anonymous, and otherwise went only by Master. That's why people started calling him the Curry Master to begin with. I myself chose to follow the trend because a group of adventurers I am acquainted with calls him that, and because I only managed to get my hands on a recipe through my connections with said group.」

「Yeah. They're a party by the name of the Scarlet Maidens. Do you acquainted with them?」

「Nn. Acquaintances.」

Oh god damn it! It was them? Zzz... My bet's on this all being Lydia's fault.

「So, what did you think of the curry I made?」

「Nn. Okay.」

「I see...」

Asuto's face clouded over; he immediately caught onto the fact that Fran hadn't been complimenting him.

『Why don't we give him a copy of the recipe?』

We owed Aurel, and we were probably going to be relying on him much more going forwards as well, so I figured we might as well do him a favour.

Fran told Asuto our curry rice recipe in exchange for his own. It turned out that some spices were rather hard to get in Ulmutt, so he'd been using different ones to fill in for the missing flavour.

I wasn't able to actually try what he'd made, but I was at least able to imagine it to some extent by making use of the Cooking skill. That, in turn, made it possible for me to give him a bit of advice.

As a result, we were able to create a type of curry that varied greatly from the one we made in Barbra, an Ulmuttian original.

I couldn't help but look forward to the possibility of curry spreading through Ulmutt as it had Barbra.

And so, an hour passed.

During said hour, Fran had asked Aurel about a few more things, most of which were with regards to the Beast Lord that Dias had told us about earlier in the day.

「And here's what I owe you for finishing the request I gave you, as well as a bit of an added bonus as thanks for the recipe.」

「Don't really need.」

「Please just accept it. You'd leave me feeling awkward if you didn't.」

Aurel handed us a leather bag containing 300k Golde.

I didn't really think we deserved it. He'd only given us the request so he could acquaint us with Rumina. Likewise, us giving him the recipe was just more or less our way of thanking him for what he'd told us, so I felt like we were still in his debt. That said, cash was cash, and he was kinda just giving it to us, so we decided to just accept it anyways.

「Thanks.」

「No problem. Do stop by again.」

「Nn.」

177. The Menace Known as the Beast Lord.

177. The Menace Known as the Beast Lord.

Fran left Aurel's manor after receiving her award. The blue catkin that'd been gathered outside earlier were already nowhere to be seen. They'd likely already given up and gone home.

「Will talk to Dias.」

『Good point. Let's go ask him about the Black Catkin he knew 53 years back, and get all our questions answered right away.』

「Nn.」

And so, we went to the Adventurer's Guild. The act of visiting it, however, in no way guaranteed our ability to actually meet with Dias. He was known for going in and out of the building, so our only choice was to just check if and hope that he was present.

But we couldn't.

We were instead ended up immediately taking a stance the moment we tried to enter the guild. More accurately, we became unable to resist the urge to ready ourselves for combat.

『Woah!』

「Nn!」

「Growl!」

The reason for which was the sheer extent of the pressure that'd suddenly assaulted us. Said pressure didn't contain any bloodlust or even the slightest hint of aggression, but, we felt overwhelmed and intimidated regardless. That was just how strong its source happened to be. We were the only people around, and hence, the only people on guard, but I was sure that any other adventurer would've reacted in the same manner.

I surveyed my surroundings, only to find what could only be described as a strange looking door. It was in the middle of the road and didn't have anything to support it. It was just there. I immediately interpreted it as something along the lines of a Dokodemo Door. a portal that could lead basically anywhere. Though, it was a bit different from the standard variant, seeing as how its appearance was that of a pair of super fancy double doors. The pressure's source was evidently whatever lay waiting for us on the door's other side.

I almost seemed to have jinxed it, as the door slowly began to open the moment I had that exact thought. In said moment, I managed to catch a quick glimpse of the furniture that lay beyond.

Okay, welp. I guess that must mean it really is a Dokodemo Door, huh?

「Sure.」

A figure emerged from the door's other side. The man's frame was so massive that it put even Erza's to shame. He stood at almost two meters tall, and had pretty much built purely of muscle. The way his shimmering, yellow-gold hair was arranged to look like a lion's mane really seemed to match with the way his movements almost seemed to resemble those of a felines'.

I instantly appraised the man the moment I saw him.

Ohhhhhhhhhhhh shiiiiiiiiiiiiieeeeeeeeeeeeeetttttt! The fuck is with his stats!? The hell!? Why does he have over 1k strength!? Holy shit, dude makes Amanda and Dias look like fucking kittens.

He also had a tonne of skills we hadn't seen before, alongside an extra skill and several unique and innate skills.

All those, however, were basically completely overshadowed by the two titles he held: Beast Lord and S Ranked Adventurer. Wait, wait, did that mean that he was the Beast Lord? The one paying Ulmutt a courtesy visit? He isn't just some really strong adventurer crowned the Lord of the Beasts, right? I mean, he is an S ranked adventurer, so that is at least a possibility of some sort, right...?

I wanted to examine his skills in more detail, but stopped myself as I noticed someone follow him out the door.

We looked up to see yet another man with a massive frame. His muscles were massive; they bulged to such an extent that I almost wanted to say he'd be able to beat a stone golem in a punch out. Unlike the Beast Lord, he was a man I at least knew of, one of the Beast Lord's two guards. I recalled him being named something along the lines of Goldalfa.

Apparently he thought Fran had seemed rather suspicious, given how she was staring at the pair in silence.

Crap. The Beast Lord'll probably end up making note of us at this rate.

『Hey Fran, let's get the hell out of here while we still have the chance.』

I figured that we'd best get out of here, so I tried calling out to Fran, but she didn't respond.

『Fran? Hey Fran, you alright?』

She instead continued to just stand there with a pale look on her face.

(Too strong... Can't win...)

Fran had always been able to keep her cool, even in front of beastkin that'd evolved, like Aurel or Rumina. Sure, she respected them, but she was capable of handling herself. But now, she was completely frozen over in fear.

Though, I guess it was kind of fair. The Beast Lord was a Golden Flame Lion, a member of the original ten tribes Aurel had just told us about. We'd imagined the tribes' members to be strong, but never could we have even fathomed for them to be this strong. He was already intimidating enough as he usually was. I could totally see him instantly killing any weaker foes just by throwing his bloodlust at them.

Beastkin seemed more or less capable of intuiting how strong other beastkin were, so I didn't really think it'd be weird for someone like Fran to get like this in front of one as strong as the Beast Lord.

「Huh? Oh, hey, you girl. Aren't you a Black Catkin?」

Shit. The Beast Lord actually noticed us. Worse, he was looking at Fran as if he was trying to evaluate her.

「It's pretty rare to see a Black Catkin adventurer.」

「Especially one with a decent amount of skill.」

Goldalfa added to his lord's comment with a compliment.

「She doesn't look skilled to me.」

「That is just because your standards are far too high, Lord Rig.」

「That so? Oh well, I can't say I'm not curious, so I guess I'll bite and show her a bit of affection.」

Tsk. Fran had caught his eye, and not in a good way.

The manner in which he looked at her was akin to that of a lion that'd found itself some prey; his gaze was full of fighting spirit.

Fran, on the other hand, was still completely frozen. The fact that she was in the beast lord's presence had already caused her to completely break down.

(No... Will be killed...)

(Whimper...)

Urushi was the same, despite the fact that he was still hidden away in the shadows.

I considered teleporting us out, but realized that it was possible that running away like that would just bring us even more trouble further down the road. In other words, warping was nothing but a last resort. Neither option was really much better than the other, so I decided to just prioritize Fran's will and go with what she wanted.

Or at least that's what I would have done had I needed to.

「I am sorry Lord Rig, but I do not think you have the time for it.」

「Ugh, come on, Royce.」

A third person emerged from the door and called out to the Beast Lord. He too was someone I remembered, the carriage's second guard.

The door almost seemed to melt away the moment he touched it. It was probably something he'd created with one of his abilities to begin with.

「We're already late for the meeting we scheduled with the Guildmaster. We really need to hurry it up.」

「Mannnn, I guess it can't be helped. Be grateful, girl. It looks like you'll get to keep your life, for now at least.」

「Lord Rig, the line you just said made you appear like a gangster.」

Goldalfa offered Rigdis some advice on his lack of etiquette, but was immediately shot down.

「There ain't much of a difference between a noble society and a mafia anyways.」

「I would very much beg to differ.」

Again, Goldalfa offered a correct, and again, his opinion was ignored.

「Yeah, yeah, yeah, shut up already. Let's just hurry the hell up and get a move on.」

Whew. Thankfully, it looked like Rigids ended up losing his interest in Fran, as he ended up going further into the guild whilst speaking with his bodyguards.

Fran collapsed onto her hands and knees the moment he vanished from her line of sight.

She was gasping desperately for air with all four of her limbs on the ground and sweat profusely dripping from her body, a miserable state.

『Hey, you still doing okay?』

「Nn...」

Yeah no. There was no way she was, but she nodded in a show of assent regardless. Well, at least she'd finally regained the ability to respond to me.

『Let's just get out of here, go back to the inn, and get ourselves rested up. We can head back into the dungeon first thing tomorrow morning and put off talking to Dias till some time later, alright?』

「Nn.」

I teleported us near the inn after helping Fran up with telekinesis. I knew it was flashy, and that people might see us, but I figured it would be best for us to have her get some rest right away, teleporting was still less conspicuous than having her walk through town in her current state.

『Can you still walk?』

「Still fine...」

She only barely managed to drag her feet along as she walked. She was clearly even more drained than she would be after a fierce battle.

『Man, the Beast Lord sure did live up to his name. Dude was a total monster. Let's try making sure we're C rankers by the next time we run into him.』

[1] Seems as good a time as any for me to explain the difference between the two types of Qigong. In Japan, Qigong is described as “Hard” and “Soft,” which I translated as “Combat” and “Inner” respectively. Combat Qigong is effectively the same thing as martial arts. You use it to punch people. Inner Qigong is what relates to the healing other people with your qi (ki) stuff and whatnot. Note that these are derived from Chinese meanings, and, funnily enough differ greatly from their roots due to some sort of ancient localization error. China doesn’t actually have the “hard qigong” or “soft qigong” terms. They do have the hard/soft strength concept, but it’s applied quite differently. The hard concept is when one strengthens one’s own body. The soft concept is when one makes one’s own body more flexible. Both can be applied in a combat sense; the first is related to brute force or head on strikes, whereas the second is more closely related to receiving another individual’s blow and returning with a counter, preferably one that uses the attacker’s strength against them. Do keep in mind that Qi (Ki) is still related to the concept of healing, and good fighters are commonly also people with great control over their ki, and therefore capable of healing others. It’s quite difficult to explain this in detail without like 5k words, so I’ll just leave it at this for now.

[2] One piece reference. I was going to localize it the same way they localized it in one piece, but the I found out that the lazy fucks didn’t... which I guess makes sense because they have to worry about lip sync, but still. Gdi, I wanted to slack off and not think.

[3] This is higher tier than “Divine” because Japan says so. I was thinking of not literally translating it and instead going with “Transcendent,” but I ultimately ended up just saying fuck it. I remember someone warning me about this, but I didn’t want to think of something to replace “Divine X Arts” at the time. I still don’t. Now, if the series was finished and I already knew all the tiers, then I’d actually bother, but it’s too much of a pain when the author can still introduce higher tier shit going forward.

We were currently back at the inn; 30 minutes had passed since we met the Beast Lord.

『Want to just call it a day?』

「Still okay.」

Fran, whose face finally had its colour restored to normal, shook her head. It seemed she'd fully recovered after staying away from the Beast Lord for long enough.

『You sure? Don't force yourself, alright?』

「Nn. Will go take bath.」

Fran liked baths, so having one for a change of pace sounded like a pretty good idea.

It would take her at least half hour to return. Normally, I would use the time she spent in the bath to practice using my skills, but today was going to be different. I happened to have a certain something else in mind.

『Hey Urushi, let's go appraise the Beast Lord and his companions.』

「Woof?」

『Let's go hang around the guild, appraise them the moment they leave it, and then run the hell away.』

「Ruff...」

『Don't sweat it, it's not like we're going to go pick a fight or anything.』

「Whimper...」

Urushi was scared of the Beast Lord, and therefore not exactly willing, but I insisted anyways because I wanted to know more about his abilities, especially seeing as it was possible for us to encounter a worst case scenario in which we ended up antagonizing them.

We needed to know if they had any skills that'd aid them in a pursuit. It'd be difficult to escape them if they did, but fairly easy otherwise. The former of these two possibilities implied that there was a chance we'd have to devise ourselves a few schemes ahead of time. There was also the fact that examining their skills in more detail would allow us to learn about what we might end up having in the future.

Things were looking pretty good so far. Goldalfa and the Beast Lord were both the more combat oriented types. Neither really had too many skills that'd help them in a chase or search. The ones they did have were rather high level, but still not enough for them to actually prevent us from escaping them. Hence, all our issues lay with the other guard and the coachman, both of which I'd missed the chance to appraise.

There was also always the possibility that the Beast Lord had a ninja-like covert ops division protecting him from the shadows.

『Don't worry. We won't need you to get really close to them or anything like that. In fact, it'd be better for us to stay rather far away.』

「...Woof.」

『Let's try looking for them real quick. We'll just totally back out if they're not in the guild anymore, alright?』

「...Woof.」

Urushi's fear of the Beast Lord made him reluctant to go with the plan I suggested.

Welp, just asking him didn't work. It looked like I had to try giving him the carrot.

Apparently, you weren't actually supposed to train dogs through a reward or merit based system, as it'd lead to them only doing things when also given treats. That said though, the same probably didn't apply to Urushi. I knew that I myself wasn't always exactly conscious of the it, but Urushi was in fact a Magic Beast, and not a dog.

『Well, how about this. I'll make you some super spicy curry after we get back. It'll be so spicy that not even Fran'll find it too hot to eat.』

「Growl...!」

Sweet. Looks like he's taken the bait.

『Alright! Let's do this!』

I situated myself on top of a roof that happened to have a good angle on the guild not too long after I finished negotiating with Urushi.

My wolf companion was hidden in a position a bit further distance away. It was safer for me to be alone. I was just a sword, so most people wouldn't notice me so long as I made sure to use Presence Isolation. It didn't even matter whether or not they happened to have Appraisal Detection, as they'd probably just think of me as a mysterious item that was capable of appraising things at most. Besides, it probably wouldn't even come to that. Appraisal Detection simply told its user that they were being appraised. It wouldn't be able to pinpoint me as the thing doing the appraising in the first place. Plus, they probably wouldn't be able to trace me back to Fran even if they did. Who in their right mind would suspect that the sword she was carrying around was the same as the one that'd appraised them?

That said, one could never be too careful, so I made sure to shrink my body down as much as possible whilst also changing its shape.

The form I took was like that of an odd looking metal ball, and hence, functioned for more than enough of a disguise.

The reason I had Urushi accompany me is because I needed a pair of feet to get around town. I was a sword, so I kinda couldn't just randomly head out. I mean, I'd considered using a doppelganger, but, my doppelgangers' skills had their levels reduced, which in turn would make me more susceptible to being discovered. I figured stealth was more important than anything else at this point in time, so I chose that over the ability to carry out the whole operation alone.

The Beast Lord's presence was a fairly obvious one, especially seeing as how he wasn't trying to hide his presence. Thanks to all that, I managed to sense him fairly easily even from outside the guild.

After thinking about it a bit, I realized that the Beast Lord hadn't actually seemed all that intimidating at all when he was riding the carriage earlier in the day. The discrepancy between the two states caused me to immediately question it. Had he been trying to hide his aura back then? Or was it the opposite? Did he just recently decide to start seeming all terrifying because he had to deal with Dias or something?

Welp, Dias seems kinda young and all, but he is still technically an old man. Hopefully the guy doesn't give a heart attack.

One of the only issues that I could really see with this whole plan of mine was the fact that I didn't know how long the meeting was going to last. Ideally, I wanted to get back before Fran finished with her bath, so we probably only had around another 15 minutes.

The other thing that could totally mess up my plans was the possibility of the Beast Lord's party choosing to leave Dias' room through the Dokodemo Door they used to port into the guild in the first place. I wouldn't even so much as have a chance to appraise them if they didn't leave through the Guild's front door.

Fortunately, I soon discovered that my worries were needless, as I sensed that they began moving, and more specifically, heading in the direction of the building's entrance.

『Alright, I've only got one shot at this. I'm going to have to get the hell out of here the moment I finish appraising them.』

It probably wouldn't be an issue if none of them had Appraisal Detection, but you know, just in case.

『There they are!』

The Beast Lord stood at the forefront. He was immediately followed by Goldalfa. The shorter guard we spotted earlier had taken up the rear. The coachman guy was missing, so I decided to just appraise the third guy and call it a day for now.

『Fuck yeah! It worked! I'm out of here!』

I executed the escape plan I thought up just in case they happened to have skills that would allow them to chase me down. That is, I warped over to Urushi, grabbed him, and started spamming Long Jump in the inn's direction while also consciously hiding my presence. I figured I was probably going a bit overboard, but ended up carrying it through just in case. I chose the safest possible option because peeking at the Beast Lord's status had caused me to feel a bit nervous.

It turned out the last guard was just as ridiculously strong as I'd been expecting him to be.

It looked like the Dokodemo Door he had came from his job in the form of an innate skill, and was actually referred to as the Dimensional Gate skill.

Man, that was nerve racking.

『We're back~』

「Woof.」

It seemed I messed up and ended up eating up a bit too much time, as Fran had gotten back before us.

I immediately recognized the state she was in as a bit abnormal. The lights were off, and she was on top of the bed with her face in her knees and her arms around them.

『Hey Fran, why are the lights off?』

「Nn...!」

Fran rushed towards us the moment we called out to her. She then wrapped her arms around Urushi and buried her face in his fur.

『Woah. What's up?』

「Woof?」

「Master... Urushi...」

「Nothing...」

Her words were in direct contrast to her expression. Her eyes were red, and she seemed rather uneasy. It looked as if she'd just been crying.

「Woof woof?」

「Nn. Ticks.」

She didn't end up cheering up and smiling until after Urushi started to lick her.

That was when it finally hit me. The Beast Lord's strength had totally broken her will, there was no way for her to have already recovered from it. She'd merely been putting up a front so she wouldn't worry me.

And then there was the fact that we were just flat out gone by the time she got back. She wasn't in exactly what I'd call mentally secure right now, so she ended up in a state of anxiety; she worried that we'd abandoned her.

And hence, Fran, a girl I'd always thought to have nerves of steel, had ended up crying.

I was assaulted by a sense of guilt. It was all my fault. I could've just appraised the Beast Lord's guard whenever. There wasn't really much of a point in going out of my way and doing it now of all times, even if I did feel a bit worried that we'd end up making enemies of them. I shouldn't have acted on my impulses. I shouldn't have let Fran all on her own.

『Sorry.』

「Not problem. But sleep together tonight.」

『Huh? Wait, what? You're talking to me, right?』

「Nn.」

『But I'm a sword you know? I'm not exactly what you'd call huggable.』

「Don't care.」

『Well, as long as you're fine with it.』

「Urushi too.」

「Woof?」

And so, I ended up spending the night as Fran's body pillow. I mean, I did have a sheath and all that, but I was still technically a sword, so... I didn't exactly see how it was even the slightest bit comfortable, but whatever.

Fran ended up falling asleep wrapped in Urushi's fur while also desperately clinging onto me with both arms.

『Welp. I got nothing to do.』

I wasn't exactly able to mess around with my skills given that I didn't want to wake Fran up. The only thing there really was for me to do was to stare at her face as she slept.

You know, this doesn't seem too bad from time to time.

179. Rumina's Oddity

Chapter 179. Rumina's Oddity

Rumina's Oddity

The night passed, and with it, almost every remaining trace of Fran's display of weakness. She still seemed a bit frailer than usual, but the look on her face demonstrated that she was back to being herself.

I decided not to pursue the topic any further, and instead decided to discuss the day's plans with her over breakfast.

『How about diving back into the eastern dungeon and getting stuff done? You know, so we can rank up and all that.』

「Nn. Agreed.」

「Woof.」

Both seemed totally on board with my suggestion, possibly in part because they'd seen the extent of the Beast Lord's strength with their very own eyes.

I myself felt the same way. We would probably be able to take either Goldalfa or Royce one on one and somehow manage to win so long as we used everything we had at our disposal. It'd be pretty close, but not something we wouldn't be able to handle. The Beast Lord, on the other hand, was on a whole new level. Beating him in our current state was more or less just flat out impossible.

First was the fact that his stats were through the roof. He simply overwhelmed us from a numerical standpoint. We didn't even come close to holding a candle to his might. His skills more or less gave off the same impression. That is, he had a tonne of high leveled abilities we knew nothing about. He'd be able to exploit our lack of knowledge and completely obliterate us. The icing on the cake was his aura. He simply radiated an air of superiority. The way he carried and projected himself made him incredibly difficult to oppose.

The Beast Lord was a freak of nature, a walking natural disaster, and last but not least, an entity that could turn into to an enemy of ours at any given moment. To be honest, that very fact almost made me want to just instantly throw in the towel.

『Let's just focus on finishing our quests as soon as possible instead of worrying about training and whatnot.』

「Nn.」

We decided to try finishing all the requests we had on hand by the day's end if possible. We knew for a fact that we'd be able to finish them some time tomorrow at the latest.

The reason we thought such a tight schedule was even remotely possible was because we already knew where the monsters and traps spawned. Hence, we figured that it wouldn't take long for us to reach the dungeon's lower levels so long as we went all out.

It took us about an hour to get everything ready and arrive at the dungeon's entrance.

「Hey there little missy. You're headed back in already?」

「Nn.」

「Alright. I know you're really skilled, so I think you'll probably be fine anyways, but I guess I'll tell you what I've been telling everyone else just in case. Be careful, the dungeon's been acting up a bit as of late.」

「Acting up? Something happened?」

「Apparently the place has started to spawn magic beasts it didn't used to spawn in the past.」

The guard cum dungeon receptionist stated that Evil Beings had been spotted within the dungeon's confines. The specific species discovered were all variants of goblins or orcs.

「The dungeon's structure hasn't seemed to have changed yet, but, there does seem to be something odd going on inside of it, so you'd best be on your guard.」

We entered the dungeon while heeding the guard's advice, only to run into a goblin almost immediately after entering the dungeon.

The goblin left me a bit confused, as it was several times weaker than all the other stuff the dungeon typically spawned.

If anything, it made it seem like the dungeon had gotten much easier to handle than it'd been before, especially seeing as how its structure and trap placement had yet to change.

Getting on Urushi's back and having him dash through the place made clearing the dungeon a ridiculously simple feat. It only took us about 3 hours to reach the 15th floor.

We spotted Evil Beings in the forms of orcs, goblins, and kobolds as we engaged in our descent. Again, I noted that all three species felt out of place, as none of them fit the dungeon's theme or feel.

They didn't really have any stealth skills, nor did they take advantage of the traps that happened to be lying around. If anything, it was the opposite. They'd end up popping and getting screwed by the traps more often than they'd actually make decent use of them.

I couldn't help but wonder what'd happened. I mean, the fact that Rumina had done something was a given, but the things she'd done made absolutely no sense whatsoever.

「Evil beings. Weak.」

『Yeah, but they've kinda made clearing through the place a lot easier than usual.』

An easier clear wasn't the only benefit we derived from whatever it was Rumina was doing either. We also managed to get a tonne of creation-type skills from the monsters we encountered, something we hadn't really had any chances to get much of up till now.

The High Ogres we met starting at the 12th floor were especially helpful in that regard, as some had smithing and leather crafting skills that went all the way up to level 5. Naturally, they also had pretty decent combat skills, so I was able to profit out the ass by absorbing their magic stones.

The smithing and leather crafting skills were the ones that leveled the most though, as both hit level 3. None of the other skills gained nearly as many levels, but we still managed to give a boost to what was almost 20 different skills for free, so I wasn't complaining.

Again, I wasn't really complaining, but I did happen to notice an issue. It felt that more and more of the magic beasts were slowly getting swapped out for Evil Beings, which in turn meant that we were going to have trouble finishing the requests we'd set out to complete, as they required us to hunt certain magic beasts in particular.

『We should probably be a bit more careful of the traps from here on out. That said, let's keep pushing forward.』

「Nn.」

『Urushi, you keep an eye out for enemies, alright boy?』

「Woof.」

The only requests we had left to complete all involved retrieving materials from magic beasts that'd been rare and difficult to come across to begin with. It getting harder for us to find them only meant that actually finishing the requests would end up being a huge pain in the ass.

Or at least that's how things would've been had I been right.

『Sweet. That's one request out of the way.』

There basically weren't any Evil Beings past the 15th floor. If anything, there seemed to be more monsters than usual, so we actually managed to finish all the stuff we had to do without really eating up all that much time at all. I didn't get why everything had ended up the way it was, but it worked for us, so again, I didn't really mind it. That said, I figured it'd probably be a good idea for us to ask Rumina what was going on seeing as how we happened to be in the area anyways.

「Will go visit Rumina.」

『Go for it.』

I didn't know whether or not Dungeon Masters actually slept, so I actually would've been a bit concerned about visiting her if it was any later in the day. Fortunately for us, it wasn't.

We kept on guard as we entered the boss room, the room in which we defeated the Disaster Pillbug. Rumina had said that we'd be able to pass right through it, but we were a bit concerned that may no longer be the case given that there seemed to be something wrong with the dungeon.

But once again, my suspicions turned out to be needless. The worry we'd spent was completely wasted, as we were promptly greeted by both the teleporter that led back up to the dungeon's entrance and the passage that led to Rumina's quarters.

Naturally, Fran, Urushi and I chose to enter the latter of the two options presented, and made our way over to the room Rumina had invited us to last time.

She was in a bit of an unusual state; she was kind of just sitting there, completely zoned out. She didn't actually raise her face till after Fran called out to her.

「Hello.」

「Why... Good evening, Fran...」

Wait, did she not actually realize that Fran'd been here? Was she maybe feeling a bit under the weather?

I couldn't tell. What I could tell was that she began beaming the moment she saw Fran, but reverted to a stern looking expression shortly after.

「Nn. Visiting.」

「I see.」

She was acting a bit cold. Last time, she welcomed us. This time, she didn't even do so much as even offer Fran a seat.

「Evil Beings appearing in dungeon.」

「I see.」

She barely responded even when Fran tried talking to her. It almost looked like she didn't want to welcome the younger black catgirl.

「Um...」

「Fran, it would be best for you to leave.」

「What?」

「I have much to attend to, and very little time to mind you.」

Rumina grabbed Fran, who was staring in blank surprise, by the shoulders and started pushing her towards the exit.

Wait what? Why was she acting so different?

I figured she probably had a reason of sorts, but I couldn't bring myself to accept her actions.

「Leave. You are disrupting me.」

「Um...」

「Never return to my quarters.」

Fran was, once again, flabbergasted. It didn't look like she could grasp Rumina's sudden change in attitude either.

I'd tried using the Principle of Falsehood real quick to double check whether or not she was just bullshitting us, but apparently she was telling the truth, Fran really was getting in her way. That, however, didn't necessarily mean that she really wanted to treat Fran the way she was. The Principle of Falsehood wasn't almighty. It could tell the difference between a true statement and a false one, but it wasn't capable of figuring out the emotion that drove the statement. That was left to its user.

In my opinion, it'd be best for us to straight up ask her what was going on, for Fran's sake. Leaving the dungeon here and now, and thereby not fishing out Rumina's emotions, would lead to uncertainty. Fran would never know whether or not Rumina had really come to hate her, especially seeing as how it'd also become extremely difficult for the two to ever meet again.

Fran, however, would never be able to actually ask Rumina for the truth herself. She was too crestfallen, too... afraid. The fear she felt wasn't the same type of terror she'd felt when she met the Beast Lord. It was a sentiment much more emotional in origin than the primal, instinctual rejection of death. Fran was instead afraid of losing someone she'd grown attached to. She was afraid of being disliked by one of the few people she admired.

Rumina was the first fellow Black Catkin Fran had met after a life of solitude, the life she'd lived after losing both her parents and being sold into slavery. Moreover, she was someone that not only earned Fran's respect, but also treated her with affection. That was precisely why I found Fran's confusion to be completely understandable. She was in shock. There was no way she'd be able to doubt Rumina, let alone analyze her given the circumstances.

And that, in turn, meant that it was up to me to ask the question. It meant that I would have to expose myself, but I honestly could care less so long as it cleared things up between the two catgirls.

Given that, I steeled myself and spoke.

『So, are you really trying to reject Fran?』

180. Of Master And Godblades

180. Of Master And Godblades

『So, are you really trying to reject Fran?』

「Who...exactly was that...?」

『Me.』

「A sword capable of speech...!? Are you perhaps an Intelligent Weapon?」

『I am.』

「Well... I am quite surprised to see that your race is one that truly exists.」

『Of course not. But it can't be helped at this point.』

This was my first time intentionally exposing myself to anyone other than Fran of my own accord, and to be honest, doing it made me feel like a fool. I immediately regretted my actions because I knew they were incredibly stupid, but ultimately ended up deciding that all was fine. As of this moment, my highest priority was no longer keeping my identity a secret. Nor was it minimizing the number of eyes on us. What mattered most right now was Fran. I couldn't let Rumina do something as detrimental to her as cutting all ties with us here and now.

While that was the driving force behind my decision, it wasn't the only one that'd pushed me to expose myself. To be frank, it was in part because I felt apologetic. Fran had made sure not to tell Rumina about me. She'd gone out of her way to keep a secret from the predecessor she respected from the bottom of her heart.

All for my sake.

The stress the act had caused her was only further evidenced by the light sigh she breathed as I announced my identity.

「I see... And that would mean that your journey was not one spent in solitude... Knowing that puts my heart at ease.」

「Nn?」

「Mind me not. 'Twas nothing.」

Nothing my ass. She too had clearly breathed a sigh of relief, one that proved she still cared for Fran. I mean, I'd clearly heard her. She'd even muttered that knowing Fran wasn't alone had put her at ease.

It seemed that she really had just been putting on an act in order to keep Fran at bay.

「L-Let us move on and discuss matters of greater interest. Sword, are you by any chance a Godblade?」

Rumina brute forced her way through the conversation and blatantly changed the topic — not that I minded. We'd already gotten proof that her feelings for Fran hadn't changed. In that sense, it was safe to say that I'd accomplished my goal.

『Unfortunately not. I was told by a famous blacksmith that I was nothing more than a sword with a strange ability.』

「And what precisely might this strange ability be?」

Hmmm... what do? I accidentally told her a bit more than I'd been intending to. In doing so, I allowed her to catch onto something that could lead all the way down the rabbit hole, and I wasn't really sure exactly how much it would be best for me to say.

『Hey Fran, what do you think? Personally, I don't really think we need to do anything more than just make a few brief mentions.』

(Can't... just say everything...?)

Her response was exactly what I'd been expecting it to be. She didn't want to keep any more secrets from Rumina. Besides, it seemed that the only other person the older Black Catkin was willing to meet face to face was Dias, and Dias already knew I was an Intelligent Weapon anyways, so there kinda wasn't really that much of a point in hiding my abilities from her.

Besides, I wanted to abide by Fran's will. She really seemed eager to tell Rumina, and that alone was enough to convince me to give her the green light.

『You know what? Just go for it.』

(Thanks.)

And so, Fran began to speak. She told Rumina everything she knew about me. She told her how I used to be human, how I had the ability to absorb skills and magic stones, and how I had somehow first come to inside the centermost part of the Maohkami Plains.

To be fair, Fran wasn't the only one all gung ho about telling Rumina about me. The older Black Catkin was a Dungeon Master and one that'd lived for over 500 years at that. There was a chance she'd know a bit more than us about the circumstances surrounding my origin.

「Your sword can absorb skills by absorbing magic stones, you say? That is quite an interesting ability to have. C-Can it absorb any sort of skill whatsoever? Does it function with Unique Skills? What about Extra Skills?」

『I've pretty much been able to absorb any and every type of skill I've ever encountered so long as it comes from a magic stone.』

「So you truly have the ability to attain any skill you wish for...」

『Only if you can find a magic stone that happens to have it.』

「Something matter?」

Rumina suddenly broke out in a fit of laughter. I was a bit surprised, but could tell from the bright smile she wore on her face that she was still both lucid and sane.

「No, no, 'tis nothing. I simply laughed in response to what I had just come to realize.」

『Right, I've been meaning to ask you. Why exactly were you rejecting Fran just now?』

「I have my reasons.」

『And those reasons are...?』

「I must apologize. I cannot inform you of them. It is unfortunate, but I have no choice but to ask you to believe that my actions serve to Fran's benefit.」

That, in other words, meant that whatever she'd been doing must be related in some way to Fran's evolution. Could she maybe have been doing something that would allow for Fran to evolve?

『But then why were you trying to distance yourself from her?』

「I wished to create distance between the two of us in order to prevent myself from harming her. It seems, however, that my efforts were in vain, as I have done precisely that regardless.」

Rumina's expression wavered as she spoke.

「Fran...」

「Nn?」

「I am sorry.」

Fran and I both stared in confusion as Rumina began bowing and apologizing immediately after she finished laughing.

「I have done you harm by making for myself a foolish choice. I would like to apologize to you from the bottom of my heart; I am truly sorry. My actions contained within them far too much haste.」

「Doesn't matter if Rumina doesn't hate me.」

「My emotions are all but given. I could not possibly bring myself to hate you, Fran.」

「Thank goodness.」

That was great and all, but her sudden change in attitude could only be described as odd. There had to be a reason for it. Looking back, I realized that Rumina stopped wanting to distance herself from Fran the moment she heard about my abilities, which in turn meant that my ability to absorb skills must be in some way related to Fran evolving. I wanted to pursue the topic further, but it didn't seem like something she'd be able to tell us more about.

「Your potential is truly astounding. Are you absolutely certain that you are not a Godblade?」

『Apparently I don't qualify because my stats are too low.』

「It appears that you are misinformed. Not all Godblades have been deemed so for their offensive abilities.」

『Really?』

「Indeed. Hold for just a moment.」

Rumina headed deeper into her quarters, only to return a bit later on with a scroll in hand.

「I apologize for the delay. Behold.」

「'Tis an incomplete list of Godblades, one I obtained long in the past.」

『Holy crap! You serious?』

I couldn't help but feel excited as hell after finding out what we had right in front of us.

The Godblade of Origin — Alpha — Ulmer

The Godblade of Insanity — Berserk — Dionysius

×The Blade of Wisdom — Cherubim — Ermella

The Warmount Blade — Chariot — Folkan

The Demon Lord's Blade — Diablo — Dionysius

The Seeker's Godblade — Explorer — Ermella

×The Blade of Zealotry — Fanatic — Dionysius

The Earth's Edge — Gaia — Ulmer

×The Holy Spirit Blade — Holy Order — Ulmer

The Blade of Imprisonment — Hell — Folkan

The Brilliant Flameblade — Ignius — Ulmer

×The Blade of Conviction — Judgement — Ulmer

The Emperor Serpent Blade — Jormungandr — Fargo

The Sacred Blade of Water — Krystalos — Ulmer

The Raging Dragonblade — Lindwurm — Fargo

×The Nuclear Strikeblade — Meltdown — Ulmer

The Moonbeam Blade — Moonlight — Kruselka

The Blade of Sorcery — Necronomicon — Ermella

The Divine Songblade — Oratorio — Kruselka

The Blade of Hypocrisy — Pacifist — Dionysius

The Winged Rainbow Blade — Quetzal — ——

The list contained the names of a bunch of different Godblades alongside what I assumed to be the smiths that'd crafted them. Some were marked with an x, but I couldn't really figure out why.

「Do you happen to be familiar with the Extra Skill by the name of “Oracle?”」

「No.」

「It is a skill that allows one to pose questions to the Gods in exchange for a proportional amount of magical energy through the act of manifesting a God within one's body. This list was one created through said method, as there once existed an individual that had asked the Gods for the Godblades' locations.」

But wait, why would the list be incomplete then? Was it because the guy cancelled his skill so he could start writing, or what?

「It appeared that the individual did not have enough magical energy for the Gods to heed his request. Thus, the skill began to drain his life force instead. Still, he hungered for knowledge and continued to write to his last breath. He was a fool to the end, and failed to even record all of the blades' names and creators.」

『So why do some of them have x's beside their names?』

「The blades marked are blades that exist no more. I am unsure as to how they were lost, as I am doubtful as to how one would go about destroying a Godblade to begin with.」

So I guess that means Cherubim, Fanatic, Holy Order, Judgement, and Meltdown all got destroyed then.

「Alas, the list I have here is one over 500 years old. The information contained within it may no longer be accurate, as some of the list's items may have long been replaced」

「I see.」

「Now, I would like to redirect your attention to a matter I wish to discuss. Specifically, I would like to direct your attention to the blade named Explorer.」

「Seeker's Godblade.」

「Indeed. There exists another skill possesses a skill not too different from the Oracle skill I had just informed you of. It, Named Index, has the ability to provide additional information on whatever topic one wishes, so long as they know its name. The compensation required to activate this ability is, once again, magical energy.」

『I'm getting a bad feeling about this.』

「It is as per your conjectures. There once existed a man that had tried to use the skill in order to learn more about Explorer. He too had lost his life in the process.」

『I knew it!』

「He too left behind a document as death came knocking on his door. He testified that, while Explorer was capable of granting its user high leveled search and detection based abilities, it was in fact not exceptional in terms of its other specifications. It bore only the same strength as an average Magic Sword.」

「Indeed. These two pieces of knowledge lead us but to a single conclusion. Not all Godblades are named as such for the sheer destructive force they provide. Given that, I feel the temptation to classify you as a Godblade, but I cannot. For if you were truly a Godblade, you would possess a name granted by a God. Your lack of such a name can only serve to evidence that you are by no means a Godblade.」

You know, I actually kinda figured that after looking over the list she'd shown us. I didn't really have the sort of fancy title you'd find attached to a Godblade. The only name I had was the one Fran gave me, and honestly, it was all I needed. At this point, being called Master made me proud. In fact, I'd go as far as to say that I wouldn't actually be able to stand being referred to as anything else.

「Fret not. You may be no Godblade, but you are still an Intelligent Weapon, a sword that one could only deem as legendary.」

「Nn. Master amazing.」

I was glad she was trying to cheer me up and all, but it also kinda made me feel all embarrassed

『So who do you think might've made me anyways?』

「I have not the faintest idea. I have never seen any other Intelligent Weapons before you, nor do I know much of the altar situated within the Maohkami plains. I do, however, have a piece of information that you may find useful as a clue.」

『Do tell.』

「You simply must be the work of a God tier blacksmith.」

『But didn't you just say I'm not a Godblade?』

「God blades are not all God tier blacksmiths work to create. Their reasons are numerous. Godblades are super weapons, and only 26 are ever allowed to exist in conjunction. Further, I have heard rumours that the crafting of such a blade takes upwards of 10 entire years worth of preparation.」

『10 whole years? The hell do use all that time for?』

「That is not a question I have the answer you, as, once again, the information's source is but a mere rumour.」

『Right. I guess that means I'm something someone happened to make between a few Godblade projects or something?』

「I believe that is indeed a possibility.」

I wasn't sure whether I was supposed to be proud of the fact I was made by a God tiered blacksmith, or sad about not being a Godblade. But either way, I figured it'd probably be best for us to do a bit of research on God tiered blacksmiths, as it could potentially allow me to find out a bit more about how I came to be. Our conversation with Rumina made it so we now knew what we didn't know, which, in and of itself, was a pretty decent bit of progress already.

181. The Trio's Reasons

181. The Trio's Reasons

It turned out that Rumina really hadn't been lying about being busy. Her familiars came to consult her almost constantly, to which she would always respond by giving out a series of orders. The familiars she had out this time around seemed to be designed a bit differently from the one we saw last time we visited. They looked more like mannequins and had the ability to communicate through human speech.

「Do we need to summon any more go-」

「No, that is enough.」

「Understood, ma'am.」

「In fact, I believe it is time for us to stop summoning Evil Beings altogether.」

「Yes, ma'am.」

Given that she was still in the middle of something, we decided to ask her a few final questions before heading back on our way.

『Is it true that the only reason it's hard for Black Catkin to evolve is because the tribe suffered from from Divine Retribution?』

「Indeed. That is precisely the truth.」

『So what happened? Why'd they get punished in the first place?』

「That... I cannot say.」

Damn it, I figured as much. Her answer was a bit disappointing, but I was satisfied nonetheless. We weren't able to learn the juicy details we wanted to hear, but I was at least able to verify that Aurel's theory had been on the mark.

『So Aurel told us about that whole Ten Original Tribes thing. Was the Black Cat Tribe one of them?』

「I cannot say.」

It seemed that her saying she couldn't tell us was more or less equivalent to her affirming our statements, so I decided to continue asking her stuff to see if we could really dig at what we wanted to know. Naturally, the whole affirmative thing was just an assumption on my part, but something was better than nothing, and I was pretty confident I was right.

『So I remember seeing a cloak by the name of the “Black Heavenly Tiger's Mantle.” Does it have anything to do with the Black Catkin?』

The item I happened to be thinking of was one of the things Salrut had been wearing. Taking the item's name and assuming the worst possible scenario allowed me to come up with the conjecture that it was something made out of one or more evolved Black Catkin. Using a deceased beastkin as a material wasn't something that you could call within the realm of common sense, but the fact that he was a Reidosian made it so it didn't actually seem like too far a stretch.

「I believe that the most understandable reply to your inquiry would be one that comes in the form of an example. You are aware of the White Snow Wolves of the White Dog Tribe, correct? There used to exist a monster that shared the same name. It was referred to as the White Snow Wolf, and, like the Beastkin Tribe, descended from the Divine Beast. The difference between the two is that one was created through the union of a Divine Beast and a human, whereas the other was born from the union of the Divine Beast and an animal.」

You know, that actually doesn't even weird me out or anything. Earth's supposed Gods would do stuff like that too. Some went around taking different forms and having children with pretty much anything and everything.

「The two were once the same, but have now been separated in classification. One side is treated as would a human, while the other, as would a magic beast, a definition born from a time in which there was no choice but for them to consume one another for sustenance. But again, 'tis simply the talk of old. The magic beasts have long devolved and lost all resemblance to the Divine Beast save for their form. Moreover, the White Dog Tribe cares not whether one hunts the White Snow Wolf magic beast. This same concept also applies to all the remaining nine original tribes.」

I guess that made sense. It seemed to be kinda like how I wouldn't think much of people killing monkeys. There wasn't any reason for me to accuse them for picking a fight with one of my ancestors just because they happened to murder one.

Welp, that was all I happened to want to know for now, so I figured it was time to go.

「I have heard that the Beast Lord has come to Ulmutt. Do be on your guard. Very little good is said of him.」

「Nn...」

Fran grimaced in response to Rumina mentioning the Beast Lord; she wasn't completely over what'd happened yet.

『We've already met him.』

「What!? Has he done anything to you? Are you unharmed?」

『We're fine, least for now. All he did was intimidate us a bit.』

The way I saw it, the Beast Lord hadn't been intending on completely crushing Fran's will. He just happened to be a bit too strong for his own good was all.

「Alright now.」

「A-Are you certain?」

「Nn.」

「S-Still, I believe it would be best for you to be on your toes. Not even I have the slightest clue as to the manner in which he will act.」

「The current Beast Lord is known for the act of parricide. I doubt it is even possible to be too careful when in his vicinity.」

Rumina made a bit of a dreadful face as she issued us a warning. She bore for the Beast Lord what appeared to be a rather deep seated sense of resentment, one that I couldn't help but want to assume came from a personal grudge she bore for one of his ancestors.

The thought jogged my memory and reminded me about something we'd heard from Dias. He'd said that the Beast Lord was the first to order the Black Cat Tribe to be sold into slavery. If that were true, then Rumina herself most likely knew quite a bit more about it, not that she'd be able tell us anything either way.

「I would just like to say it once more to emphasize that I really do mean it. Be careful, the both of you.」

「Nn.」

『Yeah, we know.』

「Good.」

Rumina nodded before continuing.

「Ah, right. Before you leave, I would like to ask you to complete a task. Could you relay for me a message to Dias?」

「Message?」

「I would simply like for you to ask him to come see me.」

「Got it.」

「Now go. Do be careful on your way back, and look forward to what is to come.」

「Nn?」

『Look forward to what now?』

「Hahaha! That, I cannot say. What I can say, however, is that Fran was lucky to have met you, Master. And for that, I am thankful.」

Rumina refused to say another word, so ended up bidding her farewell without learning any additional details.

We hurried over to the guild the moment we left the dungeon. This time, we'd actually managed to get ahold of Dias. We weren't unlucky enough to actually end up having a second run in with the Beast Lord.

「Have you already completed all your remaining requests?」

「Nn. Here.」

Fran handed the materials we'd gotten over to Dias, who immediately confirmed that there wasn't anything wrong with any of the stuff we'd procured. He was a bit surprised at how quick we managed to get everything done, but ended up confirming he could now elevate Fran's rank regardless.

Dias called over one of his subordinates and issued to him a few orders. Specifically, he told him to queue two announcements. The first was that Fran had been promoted to C rank. The second was that she'd accepted a designated request.

『You sure it's okay to announce that she's accepted a designated request?』

「Don't sweat it. It's just a little something I'm doing to keep a few certain individuals in check. I know for sure that the Beast Lord wouldn't want to antagonize us in any which way.」

Well, I guess that's fine then.

「Want to ask something.」

「What is it?」

『You remember the Black Catkin you used to talk to about 53 years ago?』

「I see... I guess that means Aurel let the cat out of the bag.」

「Nn.」

「Oh, right, that reminds me. Did you guys happen to have some sort of run in with the Beast Lord?」

『How'd you know?』

I had Perfect Thought Isolation up and running, so there was no way for him to have read our minds.

「Heh. Just wanted to remind you that I am technically a professional. Did you really think I wouldn't be able to read you just because I'm not actually reading your mind anymore? I'm not actually totally reliant on the skill, you know?」

『Seriously?』

「Seriously. It's mostly because Fran happened to react the moment I mentioned the Beast Lord is all.」

Honestly, I should've seen this coming. Dias was not only a Guildmaster, but also someone whose skills focused around the concept of taking advantage of other people's weaknesses.

「Met in front of guild.」

「I'm guessing you ran into him yesterday then?」

「Nn.」

『We happened to run into him when we tried checking in with you yesterday.』

「That's unfortunate. He happens to be the type of person that considers intimidation as a method of negotiation. You know how he was pretty much full force when he came to visit? I guess it still is a passable behaviour though, since it stops people from picking fights with him...」

「Well, I guess I might as well tell you. Have a seat.」

「Nn. Got it.」

Dias personally brewed us a pot of tea, sat down, and started to speak.

「It all happened 53 years ago. Both Aurel and I were still just D ranked newbies back then.」

Wait wait, wouldn't that mean they managed to become D rankers while they were still in their teens? Honestly, that sounded pretty damned impressive if you asked me.

「I was really proud back then. I loved to brag about all my achievements. But one day, she showed up, and in doing so, tore my beloved pride to shreds.」

「The Black Catkin girl indeed. Her name was Kiara, and back then, she'd only been a mere 15 years old. Me and Aurel, we honestly used to look down on her, but not because she was a Black Catkin. The reason we didn't really approve of her was because she was younger than us. We didn't really think adventuring was something a kid could pull off.」

I guess adventurer culture really hasn't changed in the last 50 odd years, has it?

「Our negative view of her, however, was incredibly short lived. She shut us up almost immediately by putting her strength on display, as she would always beat up anyone that mocked her. I can't deny that she had the tendency to go a bit overboard, but that only served to emphasize her ability. Though she only went solo, her dungeon raids could only be described as extremely successful. I don't know exactly when it happened, but she ended up earning herself a nickname, we adventurers had started referring to her as "The Black Cat." 」

That's pretty damned impressive. I wonder, did she have some sort of magic item that assisted her? Or was she simply a genius of some sort?

「So a few things happened, and she ended up saving both Aurel and I from certain death. The three of us started partying up thereafter from time to time. Honestly, she was a lot of fun to be around. I don't recall ever being bored in her presence.」

「Ahahahaha! Man, you just went straight there without a moment's hesitation. Hmmm... I'm not quite sure, to be honest. What I can say for sure though is that I used to look up to her, and that she was indeed quite the beauty.」

Dias' smile was tinged with an ever so slight bit of sadness. It seemed he still missed her.

「Kiara... wanted to evolve. She'd already hit her maximum level, but didn't know what to do thereafter, or at least until she met Rumina. The two talked about several different things on several different occasions. One of their conversations seemed to have ended up giving Kiara a hint as to what she needed to do, and thus, prompted her disappearance.」

「I put it that way because I don't actually know what happened to her. She disappeared before telling me any details.」

『Did she disappear so she could go evolve?』

「I doubt it. At one point, she'd told both Aurel and I that she wanted to us to accompany her and lend her our abilities so that she could evolve.」

Huh, then why'd she end up leaving without saying anything to either of them then? She had to have a pretty damned good reason to just up and vanish.

「Aurel and I both came to the conclusion that she got involved in some sort of incident, so we tried our best to find her. In the end, all we managed to get were a few hints.」

「Details?」

「The first hint was that Rumina and Kiara seemed to have ended up arguing with each other just before it happened. Aurel happened to overhear the latter shout at the former while telling her to mind her own business, and that she was going too far.」

I wonder what ended up leading to that? Rumina didn't really seem to be the type that'd try to harm a Black Catkin.

「Well, that part's actually not too relevant. Kiara's disappearance wasn't Rumina's fault. That much, I verified with by reading Rumina's mind.」

Specifically, he'd drawn the conclusion because Rumina had ended up reacting with both surprise and sorrow when she caught wind of Kiara's disappearance.

「However, it seemed that Kiara really had caught on to what Black Catkin needed to do to evolve. Hence why I thought it to be something to do with her disappearing.」

『Did someone end up targeting her because they found out she knew what to do in order to evolve?』

「That's what I thought too. I even actually ended up identifying the person likely responsible for her disappearance..」

「Who?」

「I was convinced it was the Beast Lord that happened to be in power at the time, the current Beast Lord's father. To be more exact, the perpetrators had been the Blue Catkin that worked under him. I don't have any real proof, but I did manage to get myself enough evidence to at least make them out to be suspects.」

Dias and Aurel had heard rumours of several Blue Catkin often visiting the place she stayed at immediately following her disappearance. Thus, they investigated them.

They used Aurel's influence and information network to snoop around until they came across a piece of information that stated that the the Beast Lords of old weren't actually Golden Lionkin, but instead Black Tigerkin.

From that, the two came to the conclusion that the Golden Lionkin had ended up usurping the Black Tigerkin after the latter incurred the Gods' wrath.

The Golden Lionkin had obtained dominion over the Beastkin. But even then, they were still afraid, terrified that the Black Tigerkin may one day reclaim what was once theirs. Hence, they eliminated any and all documents pertaining to the the past, destroyed anything that would hint at what the Black Catkin needed to do in order to evolve, and ordered the Blue Catkin to persecute them and keep them as weak as possible. And that, in turn, explained precisely why none of the other tribes give the Blue Cat Tribe flak for selling their fellow beastkin into slavery; the ruling tribe had their backs.

It was a deal the Blue Cat Tribe only derived benefit from. They not only rose in prestige, but also gained a significant source of income from their dealings in the slave trade. Plus, it was an opportunity for them to trample upon those that'd been thought of as superior to them, an opportunity they took with glee. Through this, one could clearly tell that the Blue Cat Tribe's disdain for the Black Cat Tribe remained despite the fact that the Gods had erased from their memories the other tribe's sins.

「We tortured and interrogated all the Blue Catkin in town at the time, only to find that one of their higher ups, one that still resided within the Beastkin's country, had ordered Kiara's capture. Through that, we also learned that the Beast Lord had sent a skilled warrior that hailed from a tribe that'd served by his side for generations, and that said warrior had happened to come in contact with Kiara.」

In other words, the Beast Lord had either killed, kidnapped, or silenced Kiara...

Hearing Dias' tale had caused Fran to become angrier than I'd ever seen her before. She trembled in rage and irradiated an air of bloodlust so powerful that I actually felt grateful we were talking to Dias in particular. Her desire to kill had swollen up to the point where it'd probably terrify just about anyone else.

「Truth?」

「Again, I can't really say 100% for certain, as these are just my deductions, nothing more, nothing less. That said, I'm convinced that she did end up getting involved with the Beast Lord.」

「Ok.」

Fran's expression turned dark. I felt as if she probably would've charged straight at the Beast Lord and challenged him had she not been aware of the extent of his strength. Having met him, she and I were now both aware just how bad an idea that was. Approaching him without a plan could only lead to death. To make matters worse, his guards were highly capable. We'd at least need Fran to evolve before even thinking of challenging him. Knowing that, Fran held herself back, but in doing so, ended up clenching her fists so hard that she started bleeding.

「I know you're angry, but don't go challenging the Beast Lord, alright?」

「Nn...」

Fran nodded despite being about as frustrated as could be. She probably would've immediately stormed over, beat the crap out of him, and made him divulge everything she knew if she could.

「Listen. Don't throw your life away. Evolve and get stronger before even thinking of challenging him.」

「Nn.」

Dias shifted gears and began talking about his association with Rumina.

The two of them suffered a mental blow from Kiara's disappearance, and thus, ended up agreeing to a pact, one in which both parties would work to support any Black Catkin that happened to follow in her footsteps, any Black Catkin that sought evolution.

Rumina used her abilities in order to create a second dungeon, Ulmutt's western dungeon. She'd intentionally crafted it as a training ground for new adventurers, for Black Catkin that wished to become more powerful. The western dungeon was advertised as a second dungeon, its own independent labyrinth. But in reality, that wasn't the case. It was merely an extension of the eastern one. There was no second Dungeon Master. The role had simply been played by Rumina all along.

That wasn't all she did either. She'd also saved up as much strength as she could in order to assist any and all Black Catkin that'd reached their level caps in the process of evolution. Dias didn't know the particulars himself. Rumina couldn't tell him what was needed for Black Catkin to evolve. However, she was able to tell him that he was still able to be of assistance. She would need an exorbitant amount of magical energy in order to provide the assistance she wished to. It wasn't an amount that was outside of the scope of her abilities so long as she conserved as much as she could over the course of several decades. That, however, wasn't something she could just do. There were naturally downsides to her actively conserving her magical energy. The act of it left the dungeon defenseless. She needed a method by which she could ward off powerful adventurers in the meantime.

And that was where Dias came in.

He reported to the Adventurer's Guild and state that he'd managed to negotiate with the Dungeon Master. That, of course, wasn't all. He also spoke to the country's leaders and convinced them that the dungeon was valuable, both for its resources and for its ability to rear new adventurers. The scheme paid off. The Kingdom viewed his contributions as phenomenal, and hence, he was not only able to guarantee Rumina's safety, but also become the city's Guildmaster.

Dias had done it.

He'd obtained all the power he needed in order to protect the Black Cat Tribe.

The elderly adventurer's words hadn't contained even the slightest shred of falsehood. He, Aurel and Rumina were all truly working towards the same two goals: identifying Kiara's enemies and protecting the Black Cat Tribe as a whole. That was why all three individuals had treated Fran so favourably.

「We'll announce that you've ranked up some time tomorrow.」

「Nn. Got it.」

「That said, there is an official process that we need to go through. Why don't we go ahead and get all that out of the way right here and now?」

182. Getting One's Thoughts in Order

182. Getting One's Thoughts in Order

We headed back to the inn after we finished going through the formal rank up procedure.

『Looks like we're finally officially C rankers.』

「Nn.」

『Let's throw a bit of a celebration. How about this, I'll let you guys can eat as much curry as you want tonight. There won't be any limit on the number of toppings you can have either.』

「Nn! Want curry with hamburgers, karaage, tonkatsu, egg on top. Extra large.」

I gave Fran exactly what she asked for. The end result turned into something that looked like it came straight out of a food challenge, but whatever. She was happy, and that was all that mattered.

『Try not to bloat yourself too much, alright?』

「No problem.」

『And as for you, Urushi, I've finally made that super spicy stuff I promised you yesterday.』

「Bark bark.」

The pot of curry I showed Urushi was a modified version of the spiciest curry I had sitting around in storage. I added a whole sloth of extra spice to it and caused the amount of capsaicin within to skyrocket. The liquid within had been turned crimson, and almost looked like a boiling vat of blood that'd come straight out of hell. To Urushi, however, the mixture evidently looked and smelled delicious, as he immediately began to drool the moment I procured it.

I honestly didn't really get how or why he was actually looking forward to consuming the stuff. It was so spicy that it even caused Fran to reel back; she didn't even want to try it. I felt that I probably would've reacted the exact same way had I still been human.

The pair went through their curry incredibly quickly, so I decided to serve them some desert in the form of ice cream as I began getting my thoughts in order. I decided not to think about the possibility of me having been made by a God-tier blacksmith, and only focused on concepts related to Fran and evolution.

The Black Cat Tribe was one of the original ten, and the tribe had originally held either the Beast Lord's position or something similar. That, however, all changed somewhere in the neighborhood of 500 years ago.

We were never able to figure out exactly what the Black Cat Tribe's sin had been, but whatever it was, it was enough to merit having the Gods deliver onto them Divine Retribution. Specifically, the Gods changed the conditions under which Black Catkin evolved; they made it much more difficult. Not a single individual had managed to fulfill the necessary requirements ever since.

And that was when the Red Cat Tribe's Golden Lionkin stepped in. They toppled the powerless Black Cat Tribe's rule, and stole for themselves the Beast Lord's seat. They then ordered the Blue Cat Tribe's members to persecute the Black Catkin in order to prevent them from ever regaining their former glory. It was an order the Blue Cat Tribe had likely abided by due to the fact that the Red Cat Tribe was one of the original 10, and therefore of a higher status. It was a firm measure, but it alone failed to sate the Red Cat Tribe's concerns. They still feared that the Black Cat Tribe could one day rise again to power, and thus, they destroyed any and all texts relating to the Black Cat Tribe's evolution. It was a plan that, in their eyes, ensured that no Black Catkin would ever evolve again.

Their efforts paid off; the combination of the Gods manipulating everyone's memory and the Red Cat Tribe eliminating all the relevant documentation made it so that the Black Cat Tribe's history had almost been forgotten. The number of people possessing knowledge of their ability to evolve had been cut down to just a few handfuls at best.

But, 53 years ago, someone had pulled off the nigh impossible. That someone, Kiara, had started solving the mysteries that shrouded the Black Cat Tribe's past. She managed to get in touch with Rumina, and in doing so, somehow managed to find a clue that led her towards her goal, evolution. She'd asked both Dias and Aurel for their assistance in evolving, but disappeared before telling either of the two any further details.

All three of the people that Kiara had bonded with, Rumina, Dias, and Aurel, attempted to figure out what had happened to her. They gathered information from all over, only to ultimately arrive at the deduction that her disappearance most likely had something to do with the Beast Lord. They were fairly confident in what they'd thought up, but had no way of confirming it for certain. For that reason, all three individuals happened to regard the Beast Lord with a sense of animosity.

To be frank, I thought their theory seemed like it'd pretty much hit the nail on the head. The royal family being afraid Black Catkin even to this very day was honestly quite plausible.

Either way, Kiara's whereabouts ended up remaining as an unknown. None of the three were really ever able to move on, and so, they ended up banding together in order to protect any that followed in their friend's footsteps.

Dias was unaware as to the details, and hence, unable to inform us, but we were still made to know that Rumina had been storing magical energy for decades, and that said magical energy would be used in order to aid one or more Black Catkin in their quest for evolution. Both Aurel and Dias were assigned the role of protecting her in the meantime, as saving up her magical energy was equivalent to her lowering her defenses. I'd say the two were quite persistent in their task. Dias had even gone as far as becoming the master of Ulmutt's Adventurer's Guild.

Fast forward a few years to present day, and finally, enter Fran, a young Black Catkin girl out on a journey to achieve the exact thing they'd been looking to facilitate. Unaware to us, the three had played a bunch of cards under the table in order to assist us in the whole ordeal. Specifically, Aurel had arranged for us to meet Rumina while Dias had tried his best to help us rank up so he could confer upon us the guild's protection.

Rumina had also started setting something up. I didn't know exactly what that something was, but I did know that it was something that'd work to Fran's benefit.

My lack of understanding was precisely what fueled me to think further on the topic. Why exactly did she start summoning Evil Beings? For what reason did she try driving Fran away? Her changing her attitude the moment she heard about my ability to absorb skills made it obvious that said ability must in some way be related to helping Fran evolve, but how? Did I need some sort of skill in particular? Was it something we could get from Evil Beings?

There were too many holes and missing links for me to go any further with my deductions. I couldn't figure out anything unless I had a bit more information, and so, I decided to shelve my thoughts for the time being. The Martial Arts Tournament was coming up, we didn't have time for me to just sit around and think myself into a ditch. What we needed to do now was to train and level our skills if possible.

『Oh yeah, Fran, remember how I told you to think about how you wanted me to use my Self-Evolution Points? Did you ever end up figuring out what skills you wanted to level?』

「Nn.」

I'd originally been planning to ask her about this last night, but you know, shit happened.

My guess was that she probably wanted to at least put a few points in both Divine Sword Arts and Divine Sword Techniques, as they were straight forward, something she used often, and probably two of the skills that'd give us the greatest boost in strength.

Presence Detection was a pretty likely contender as well. It was pretty close to its maximum level, and could see some decent use in battle. Its sensing abilities aided us in reading the opponent's next move.

The other fairly likely contenders were Flame Magic, Lightning Magic, and Elemental Blade.

『So what've you decided on?』

I was fairly confident in my deductions.

「Blacksmithing.」

But I was wrong nonetheless.

『Wait. What? Blacksmithing!?!』

My predictions were off by a mile. They were so far off, in fact, that I ended up shouting in surprise.

「Nn.」

『What? I don't recall you ever having even the slightest interest in Blacksmithing. Shouldn't you try investing in something that'll help you out in battle seeing as how the tourney's right around the corner? Why choose it all of a sudden?』

「Because Blacksmithing.」

It seemed that Fran had totally made up her mind, and that I wasn't going to be able to convince her to change it.

「Master's maintenance, important.」

『That's why you wanted to level up the Blacksmithing skill? I really appreciate the thought, but I don't think you need to use points on it. Go ahead and just level up the skills you actually want.』

「Blacksmithing.」

And so, given the fact that Fran was being stubborn, I ended up maxing out the Blacksmithing skill.

《Blacksmithing has reached its maximum level. You have obtained the Blacksmith Magic skill. It is currently at level 1.》

I ended up getting the Blacksmith Magic skill as an added bonus. That was nice and all, seeing as how it became possible for me to maintain myself and whatnot, but I had a bit of a hard time accepting the fact that we ended up using my self evolution points for Blacksmithing of all things. It just felt wasteful.

「Nn!」

『Wait, Fran, what're you doing?』

「Maintenance.」

『Right now?』

「Nn.」

I really had to admit, Lv 10 Blacksmithing really did prove quite effective. Fran was pretty much doing exactly the same thing she'd always been doing, but it ended up feeling just as good as when Zerld did it. Fran rubbing a cloth across my blade felt as good as a full body massage.

『Ahhhhhh, yeahhhhh, that's the spot.』

I ended up getting polished for a whole 30 minutes; I wasn't really able to ask her to stop because of how good it felt.

Thinking about the fact that Fran planned to polish me every day put a huge grin on my face. Man, this is the life. I guess I finally understand why fathers love it so much when their daughters give them backrubs.

『Oh man, that was refreshing. Thanks.』

「Will polish more in future.」

『Please do.』

I'd been planning on using most of the rest of my remaining self-evolution points on a few specific skills, but realized that Fran hadn't benefited at all from me maxing out Blacksmithing, so I offered to let her use all the points I had left on whatever she wanted.

「Already chose what wanted. Will let Master use rest.」

『But...』

「Just use.」

I ended up conceding to Fran and spending points on whatever I wanted. Specifically, I ended up throwing a bunch into Divine Sword Arts. It went without saying that leveling the skill worked to Fran's benefit, but that wasn't the only reason I pointed it.

The other was something that I'd ended up becoming curious about after seeing the Beast Lord's skillset. He was a bonafide spearman. His job described him as a Spear Lord and he evidently had one equipped. However, he didn't have access to Spear Arts or Divine Spear Arts. He instead had a skill by the name of Spear Lord Arts.

Spear Lord Arts was, in all likelihood, what one would obtain after completely maxing out one's Divine Spear Arts. From that, I figured that maxing Divine Sword Arts could potentially unlock a new skill, and hence, wanted to try getting my hands on it.

『Alright, here we go.』

Maxing both Blacksmithing and Divine Sword Arts ended up eating a total of 34 points, and left me with only 20 remaining.

《Divine Sword Arts has reached its maximum level. You have obtained the Enhanced Sword Arts skill.》

Well, that wasn't what I was expecting, but hey, that works too I guess.

《You have unlocked a unique skill by the name of Sword Lord Arts, as all necessary requirements have been fulfilled. All Sword Art related skills have been merged into the Sword Lord arts skill. Acquisition of the Sword Lord Arts skill has caused your wielder, Fran, to obtain the Sword Lord title.》

Woah, that was a lot all at once! It looked like I actually did manage to get the Sword Lord Arts skill that I'd been hoping for. The merged part confused me, so I quickly appraised myself. Every single last one of my Sword Art related skills had ended up disappearing. Naturally, I wasn't just referring to the Divine Sword Arts skill, but also stuff like Short Sword Arts and Katana Arts.

For a moment, I was tempted to immediately begin screaming in frustration, but stopped almost immediately as I realized what the word "merged" meant. I decided to give the skill a quick once over just to be sure.

Sword Lord Arts: Allows use of all swords.

Oh hell yes. This means what I think it means, right?

『Hey Fran.』

「Nn?」

『I'm going to shapeshift a bit. Do me a favour and try swinging me around when I do.』

「Got it.」

The first form I took was that of a dagger, otherwise known as a short sword. Fran readily grabbed ahold of me and began swinging me around. She cycled between a series of relaxed and more intense actions so easily that one could probably mistake her as a sword dancer.

『Alright, how about this?』

The next form I took was that of a foil, a fencer's sword. Again, Fran managed to wield me with ease. The way she moved around and used the sword's flexibility made it seem like she'd trained with a foil for years and in doing so, completely mastered the blade's use.

「Interesting to use. Boingy.」

『Does it feel even the slightest bit unnatural?』

「Nope. No issues.」

『Sweet.』

The skill did exactly what I thought it did. It basically allowed the person that had it to use any type of sword they wished. Better yet, they'd be able to use it just as well as if they had they maxed out the divine arts for whatever sword subcategory they happened to be working with. To us, that was nothing but good news, as it meant that there wouldn't be any issues even if I was to warp myself into an actual katana and not just something that happened to resemble one.

With that out of the way, I decided to check Fran's new title.

Sword Lord: A title granted to one that mastered the way of the sword and obtained the Sword Lord skill.

Effect: All stats increased by 20. Bolsters the Enhanced Sword Arts skill. Allows one to judge the quality of a sword.

Sword Lord looked to be even more effective a title than both Match For a Thousand and Big Game Eater despite the fact that both titles were typically only bestowed to heroes. Boosting all one's stats by 20 provided the same amount of effective strength as four or five levels.

Though, thinking about it, I realized that maxing out one's Divine Weapon Arts was actually incredibly difficult under normal circumstances. In fact, neither Amanda nor Forrund had actually managed to do so, and they were both famous A ranked adventurers.

It looked like maxing out Divine Sword Arts was indeed the right choice to make. I immediately considered maxing out Divine Sword Techniques to match, but I wasn't 100% sure if that was the best idea. I had a few other skills I wanted to pump points into as well.

『Hey Fran, you sure you didn't want me to point anything else in particular?』

「Nn... Dimensional Magic?」

183. Dimension Gate

183. Dimension Gate

Fran's reply to my query caught me off guard. The fact that she was interested in Dimension Magic wasn't something I'd been aware of.

That said, I could easily see why she felt the way she did, as I shared her interest in it.

『You sure you don't want to pump a few points into Divine Sword Techniques first?』

「More curious about Dimension Magic.」

『Why's that?』

「Door used by Beast Lord's guard.」

『Oh nice. Looks like we're on the same page then.』

Royce's skill, Dimensional Gate, sounded like something one would probably learn if they pumped a few levels into Dimension Magic. It looked super convenient to use, and it seemed that having it could potentially make visiting Rumina a hell of a lot easier.

Long Jump was nice and all, but it was too limited in its use.

The number of things that bothered us about it numbered two, with the first being its carrying capacity and the second being its ease of use, or rather, its lack thereof. Its carrying capacity was limited by mass, and was actually so lacking that it couldn't even allow us to warp Urushi unless he shrank himself down. Even then, the distance that could be teleported was inversely proportional with the mass, so we weren't really able to go all that far. The furthest we could go, even without Urushi, was like five or six floors worth of distance at best; we weren't able to instantly warp ourselves over to Rumina's place of residence. The ease of use part pertained to the fact the only objects that could get warped were ones the caster was in direct contact with.

Dimension Gate looked like the type of skill that didn't really care about the mass of whatever it transported so long as you plopped a pair of doors down. It didn't look like the type of skill that really had much use in battle, but, man did it make getting around a helluva lot easier. The convenience factor alone made it look like something that was honestly well worth investing in.

『Alright. I guess I'll try feeding Dimension Magic a bit and seeing what happens.』

I only had 20 self evolution points remaining, so I decided to give the skill one level at a time.

「That's level 2... Looks like I learned how to do two new things?」

Pointing the skill once had allowed me to obtain a skill by the name of Turn Shield. It allowed one to block long ranged attacks and disrupt enemies by twisting space itself. The amount of magical energy the skill consumed scaled with the size of the spatial distortion created. Unleashing something on a scale large enough to completely engulf my surroundings seemed like it would end up eating somewhere in the neighborhood of 2k mana. The skill seemed pretty decent, and appeared to have a whole slew of different use cases.

The other spell I learned was named Beacon. It allowed me to sense the areas in which and objects on which I cast it, even from a fair distance away. It was pretty convenient, but I didn't immediately see why it was something I got from leveling up Dimension Magic of all things. I only came to realize why it was classified as it was after giving its parent skill another level.

Getting Dimension Magic to level 3 unlocked a skill by the name of Apport. Apport allowed me to pull anything within sight towards me. It didn't seem all that special at first glance, but thinking about it made me to realize that moving an object towards oneself was actually a step up on moving oneself over to an object.

Combining it with Beacon only made it even more impressive; Apport became able grab anything I wanted so long as it happened to have a beacon placed on it ahead of time. This use case immediately caused me to realized that Beacon was capable of working with more than just Apport. It also enhanced Long Jump, and allowed me to teleport even greater distances with it. Beacon had seemed rather plain at first, but it turned out to be something hella useful.

Apport wasn't all I got from level 3 Dimension Magic. I also managed to learn Over Haste, which was basically just the same thing as regular Haste, save for the fact that it had a bit of an AOE to it.

Only after pointing Dimension Magic all the way to level 4 did we finally get the skill we'd been gunning for.

『Sweet, looks like I finally learned how to use Dimension Gate.』

Dimension Gate's ability was to create a pair of doors. The first would always appear at the caster's present location. The second, on the other hand, was up to the caster's discretion, but could only be placed in an areas that lay within the caster's memory. Anything could pass through the gate, so long as it fit, which was just perfect seeing as how the gate's size would grow based on the amount of magical energy used. I was capable of creating one big enough to fit Urushi at his largest if I didn't mind throwing in all my mana.

Our skill, Dimension Gate, was actually slightly different from the Dimensional Gate skill that we'd seen on Royce. Though their names were similar, the two actually functioned completely differently, as ours basically just ripped a hole in space, whereas Royce's seemed to operate based on a different sort of mechanism altogether.

Dimension Gate was like every other spell derived from the Dimension Magic family; its performance could be improved upon through the use of Beacon.

Specifically, Dimension Gate was capable of opening doors to places I'd never been before so long as there happened to be a beacon present — we'd confirmed this functionality by casting Beacon on a random rock and having Urushi carry it off somewhere.

The spell seemed like it could be really handy so long as we were careful and placed a few beacons at a few critical junctions ahead of time.

Under normal circumstances, Beacons would expire after a few days. The caster could extend this preset duration by increasing the amount of mana used in the spell's initial casting. It seemed like I'd be able to leave a beacon somewhere for about a year so long as I put every single last drop of mana I had into crafting it.

I figured it'd be a pretty good idea for us to just casually dump a beacon somewhere in Rumina's living quarters in order to make it easier for us to visit her whenever. The gate's size would decrease as distance to its target location increased, but it didn't seem like it'd be too hard for us to somehow fit ourselves through it regardless.

The other spell I was granted for leveling Dimension Magic to level 4 was called Slow Mine, and more or less allowed us to deploy triggerable debuff zones. They were hard to detect, and could be placed both on the ground and in the air. Our ability to deploy multiple at once seemed pretty useful for allowing us to catch someone off guard.

『Looks like we managed to get the skill we wanted. Did you happen to have anything else in mind?』

Each level in Dimension magic ate up 3 self evolution points, so getting the skill all the way to level 4 left us with only 11 remaining.

I mean, we could've just kept pumping points into Dimension Magic regardless, but we did always have the option of just doing something else instead. It wasn't like we were locked into it or anything.

「Vigour Mastery...?」

「Beast Lord had. Might have connection with evolution.」

Looking at the Beast Lord's stat sheet had more or less convinced us that Vigour Mastery was basically an upgraded version of Vigour Manipulation. The reason she wanted it was pretty clear as well. She wanted get all the skills the Beast Lord had that we didn't, as it was possible that evolution was something linked to a skill.

『Sure. Let's give it a shot then.』

「Nn.」

I spent 5 points on Vigour Manipulation, which in turn unlocked Vigour Mastery as expected.

『So? How do you feel?』

It turned out that Vigour Mastery didn't have anything to do with evolution. However, it had a clear, immediate effect nonetheless. The manner in which my mana flowed through my body seemed to change. It became much smoother, and I could feel my detection-based skills growing much more sensitive as a result.

But that wasn't all.

『I feel like my body just got easier to control.』

I activated Shape Shift and transformed a part of my body into a series of threads. The threads seemed quite easy to manipulate; I'd managed to use them to form a number of different geometrical patterns with ease. I then split my blade into ten smaller pieces, and moved them all around simultaneously. I was able to do what the System Announcer did to the Legendary Skeletons did back when we fought a whole bunch of them at once. That is, I was able to form each into a thin but solid thread and thrust them in different directions.

My blade deformed and moved exactly how I wanted it to; I became capable of manipulating it to much finer a degree, and at a much lower mana cost to boot.

Vigour Mastery hadn't seemed like anything too fancy, but it turned out to be useful as hell.

『Want to just hold onto the last few points for now?』

184. The Dungeon's Barrier

t184. The Dungeon's Barrier

We immediately headed back into the dungeon the day after we ranked up, reason being that it was critical for us to get as strong as possible as quickly as possible given that the tourney was right around the corner.

Both Sword Lord Arts and Dimension Magic were incredibly potent skills in and of themselves, but we wouldn't be able to use either properly if we didn't first accustom ourselves to them. To that end, we decided to fight while purposefully imposing upon ourselves a series of heavy restrictions.

Doing combat training also doubled up as grinding magic stones, as we'd be able to earn another batch of self-evolution points if we did enough of it. Training was a reliable, proven way for us to get stronger. Though it was definitely important, it didn't end up being the only thing we did. We had also visited the guild prior to heading out in order to check whether or not it'd be possible for Fran to undergo a class change and beef up her stats.

One would assume that obtaining the Sword Lord title would also unlock the Sword Lord class, but unfortunately, it didn't. She did, however, unlock a whole slew of other classes, many of which centered around smithing or advanced magic. The training she'd gone through had also allowed her to unlock several stealth and scout-like classes as well, but none were to our fancy. Thus, she ended up remaining a Magic Warrior.

Upon entering the dungeon, we discovered that it'd turned back to normal. The Evil Beings that'd flooded it were nowhere to be seen. They'd been replaced by the magic beasts we saw on our first pass through. In other words, Rumina had reverted all the changes she'd made.

Knowing that, we cut our way through dungeon and slowly progressed towards its depths.

Fran needed to be back in town within 4 days, as that was when the tourney's prelims were set to begin. For us, however, heading back to town was a trivial non-issue, as we'd already set up several beacons that'd facilitate the process. Specifically, we'd placed one at the inn and several others just outside the city. Thanks to that, we'd be able to keep training until the very moment we needed to show up in person.

That said, we did have something to do prior to actually heading back, so it wasn't like we could just spend the whole four days wandering.

Specifically, Fran and I had been planning on setting up an addition beacon inside Rumina's room, as it'd make visiting her much more convenient.

We'd spent some time experimenting with the Beacon spell in order to figure out its limitations. It turned out that we could only actually have 8 active beacons at any given point in time. The skill followed a first in first out methodology, as creating a 9th beacon would immediately cause the 1st we made to disappear. Moreover, its range wasn't actually unlimited. Beacons would only remain active so long as they were within a radius of about 10 kilometers.

Now, one might wonder how exactly we managed to figure out that 10km was our upper limit. The answer to that question was actually a rather simple one; we had Urushi grab a rock with a beacon on it and just run off into the sunset. We made him keep going until we could no longer pick up on the beacon's signal.

We also discovered that Dimension Gate's mana consumption varied with the amount of distance between it and its target. It normally ate up about 100 mana, but could consume up to 500 if we tried to jump a whole 10 km in one go.

I'd originally been expecting to be able to use the spell to teleport back and forth between Barbra and Alessa, but that unfortunately didn't actually seem all that practical. That said, it could potentially be possible if we set up a whole slew of beacons along the way and warped between them till we hit our destination. Fortunately, that issue wasn't one we had to consider when contemplating whether or not we'd be able to tele into Rumina's room, as we'd only need to set a single beacon for it to be in range.

And so, with a clearly defined goal in mind, we spent the rest of our day grinding our way down into the dungeon's depths. It was already our third time through, and we'd already committed all the traps to memory, so it'd ended up turning quite the easy excursion.

The manner in which Rumina greeted us this time around was completely different than it'd been just yesterday. Moreover, her expression was bright, and her skin, which'd been a bit darker than usual, had reverted to its usual shade. I was glad to see that she was in good health, and that the light had returned to her eyes.

「Welcome. And for what purpose should I attribute your visit to on this fine day?」

「Wanted to ask favour.」

『You see...』

I told her about the Beacon spell we'd recently obtained, and asked if we could put one in her room in order to make it easier for us to visit.

「I mind it not at all. In fact, I would have very much wanted for you to place one in my place of residence.」

『Would have?』

「The answer to that question shall come to you should you make an attempt. Fret not, no harm shall come to you in the process.」

She seemed rather convinced that we'd fail, and implied it in her speech. However, we decided to give it a shot anyways since she affirmed it wasn't dangerous.

『Beacon.』

I placed a beacon on the floor in one of the room's corners and in doing so, made it so I'd be able to teleport back.

『Alright, let's head back up a few floors.』

「Nn.」

We made our way back up to the dungeon's 14th floor before attempting to activate Dimension Gate — only to have the spell totally fizz out and fail despite consuming mana.

I could still feel the beacon we'd set, and Rumina's room was naturally still in memory, so I didn't really see why the skill would fail to function. We'd fulfilled all its conditions, after all.

I purposefully activated the skill several times, but to no avail. It was never capable of doing much besides just fizzing away.

『Yeah. It looks like something's preventing the skill from actually activating.』

The sensation I felt was fairly similar to the one I had when we were stuck inside Rynford's barrier. It was like something was getting in the way and interrupting the skill before it went off. Unfortunately, I wasn't able to discern exactly what that something was, nor even really sense its identity or location despite the fact that I could feel it interfering with the casting process.

Going back and checking in with Rumina allowed me to verify that I'd been in the right.

「It appears that you were unable to break past the Goddess' barrier.」

Her words made me realize that her having a barrier of some sort should've been something I'd taken as a given from the very start.

Dungeons were supposed to be extremely difficult to conquer. Even something like a D ranked dungeon could lead to a whole slew of casualties. Higher ranking adventurers were generally better at eluding death, but even they could meet their ends if they got caught off guard by traps, or ran into a magic beast that just happened to be able to take advantage of their weaknesses.

That, of course, naturally begged a question: what was the most risk free way for one to conquer a dungeon? I was sure that many would claim that it'd best be done by training up one's detection based skills, joining balanced parties or bringing a ton of potions, but none of those answers were in fact correct.

The simplest and safest way to conquer a dungeon was to not conquer a dungeon in what you'd call a traditional manner.

I could imagine a whole slew of methods that worked off that precise paradigm of thought. You could teleport into the core room, blast magic into said room from afar, or pull off many other similar tricks that'd allow you to destroy the dungeon's core without having to go through a series of challenges.

Though the methods I imagined had many strict requirements, they were by no means unrealistic. Teleporting directly into a dungeon's core room sounded like something that was honestly quite easy so long as one maxed out Dimension Magic and threw in a magic item or two for a bit of extra assistance.

Plus, it wasn't like you could just not take the fact that Godblades existed into account. Godblades were known for their incredible power, and frankly, they seemed like items that could defy what one viewed as common sense altogether. Meltdown no longer existed, but its title had implied that it was a nothing less than a veritable nuke, a weapon of mass destruction that was most likely capable of completely wiping a dungeon and everything around it off the map with ease.

I thought it seemed fairly logical for dungeons to have defensive mechanisms built in to prevent scenarios like that from happening.

Dungeons more or less seemed to be equivalent to trials imposed by the Gods, so there was no way for them to not have mechanisms that would prevent you from totally cheating your way through them.

The barrier being something created by a God only made the fact that I couldn't sense it all the more understandable as well.

「I advise you attempt placing the beacon just outside my room instead.」

『Iunno if that's the best place for it. Someone might accidentally blow it up while fighting a boss or something.』

We couldn't put it on any floor above the boss floor either, seeing as how people might see us using the gate and whatnot.

「Am I correct in assuming that it will function so long as the barrier does not prevent your spell from activating?」

「Nn.」

「In that case, I ask that you wait while I make accomodations.」

Rumina headed deeper inside her chambers and didn't come out until after we'd heard the sound of something heavy scraping against something else of equal mass.

A brand new corridor had spawned along a nearby wall.

「I thank you for your patience. The room that lies beyond this corridor is outside of the core room's territory, and thus, is treated as any other one of the dungeon's rooms would be. It will be possible for you to teleport inside of it.」

Rumina had made use of her Dungeon Master abilities in order to create a brand new room.

Man, that's a Dungeon Master for you. She and I think on totally different scales.

「Thanks.」

「You need not thank me. As I stated prior to your excursion, our wills had happened to align. I too wish for it to be easier for you to visit.」

We ran a second experiment and confirmed that Rumina had been spot on.

The inn we were staying at was rather close to the dungeon, so placing a beacon in Rumina's newly created room had made it super convenient for us to go back and forth between the two locations with ease. Moreover, it was basically impossible for anyone to catch us in the act. We'd ran into a few unexpected mishaps along the way, but ultimately accomplished our goal and met every single requirement we'd set for it along the way.

「Please, visit as you see fit. I will welcome you at any time.」

「Nn.」

『Alright, see ya. We'll make sure to stop by.』

185. Reunion

Chapter 185. Reunion

Reunion

『You ready to get going?』

「Nn.」

We had breakfast, checked to make sure all our equipment was in good form, and headed out.

Our destination was one of the many venues in which the tournament would be hosted. The tournament had actually started yesterday, but today was more so the one Fran had been looking forward to, as it had finally come time for her first match. According to the schedule we got from Dias, the tournament was to last for 14 days, with the first 4 dedicated to the preliminaries. The preliminaries were defined as a 2 step process, with each of the 2 taking up half the allotted time.

Over 1000 people had signed up for the tourney, and thus, there simply wasn't enough time for the preliminaries to be done in the usual 1 on 1 style. They were instead organised such that they'd allow for four people to be eliminated at once. That is, the preliminaries consisted solely of 5 person battle royales in which only the last man standing would be allowed to progress.

Not surprisingly, the tournament's managers knew exactly what they were doing. They understood that the only way for them to complete all 200 plus preliminary matches within the 2 day timebox was for them to have multiple matches running at once. Thus, they had set up a series of locations around town in order to facilitate the process, a feat only made capable precisely because the tournament happened to take place in Ulmutt. Ulmutt was unique in the sense that it existed for and because of adventurers. Hence, its city plan included a great number of open areas that often saw use as training or dueling grounds.

The second preliminary round would have far fewer participants than the first, and thus, they had it hosted within a pair of larger stadiums instead of a bunch of smaller ones scattered all over. Unlike the first, the second also allowed for spectators.

The main event consisted of 6 rounds, which meant a total of 64 participants. About 50 of the combatants typically came from the prelims. The rest were seeded and thereby excluded from the qualification process.

Interestingly, killing one's opponent was not actually considered a crime, as you weren't allowed to participate in the tournament unless you signed a waiver. Said waiver included a statement about the fact that you knew you were going into something that might lead to your death. Honestly, I'm not really sure what else I should've expected from a world as violent as this one.

That said, I had to admit that it wasn't actually as bad as it may have otherwise seemed. After all, health potions were a thing, so you probably wouldn't die unless you were killed instantly. That said, the organisers only really supplied that kinda stuff to the main event's participants. You could say it was rather cold hearted for them to not assist those that got eliminated early on, but I couldn't really blame or antagonize them for it. Culling the weak was kind of what this tournament was all about in the first place. Besides, distributing potions to all thousand or so participants would probably put the organisers well in the red, so it was honestly only fair. There was also always healing magic for people that couldn't afford potions, though again, healers weren't really something supplied to people participating in the prelims.

Speaking of which, healing magic was precisely what made it possible for the tourney to take over the course of such a short time period. Its effects were more or less instant, so injured participants didn't have to wait for their injuries to heal. All they needed was for someone to say the word, and they'd be back in tip top shape.

『You feeling nervous at all?』

「Nn. Fine.」

Fran nodded. We'd done everything we could these past few days to get ourselves as ready as we could possibly be, and so, the look on her face almost seemed to be the spitting image of confidence.

『I'll just stay on the sidelines and watch unless we run into someone really strong. Alright?』

「Nn. Want to know how far we can go.」

Fran wanted to both test her own strength and see how much stronger she was when we fought together.

There was still a decent bit of time before the match started, so we walked through town at a rather leisurely pace. The venue we were headed to happened to be right by the guild, so we weren't even the slightest bit worried about getting lost.

I made use of our travel time by explaining to Fran the tourney's rules.

Given that this was a martial arts tournament, an event that almost seemed to ooze with violence, there weren't actually all that many restrictions. We just had to be careful not to consume any potions mid-combat, and we were pretty much good. There weren't any rules against any skills and spells, you were pretty much allowed to do whatever. The only thing one would probably want to avoid would be the Evil Arts, as using them would more likely than not cause one to get instantly mobbed by any and all nearby adventurers.

The only part of the rules that we really had to pay attention to was the part that detailed what you could and couldn't do with summons. Any non-human summons were in fact allowed, but only under the condition that they weren't summoned ahead of time. In other words, we could bring Urushi so long as we had him hide in Fran's shadow and have him not come out until she pretended to summon him. The reason that this was in fact legal, and not against the rules, was because they stated that rules regarding summons applied not just to summons, but also to anything else that happened to function in a similar manner. Specifically, the rules would apply so long as the creature you called was initially either not present or hidden from sight.

Fortunately, there weren't any restrictions with regards to magic items, you could use whatever you wanted. It seemed that what this tournament cared about wasn't one's base stats, but rather how strong one was with all one's gear and familiars factored in as well.

There were only two possible ways to get disqualified. The first was to leave the ring, and the second, to deliberately attack someone that'd already surrendered.

Fran looked at all the stalls around her as she slowly made her way forwards, but as one could expect, not even she was enough of a glutton to start chowing down the moment before she had to fight her first match.

『You can eat as much as you want after we're done, so sit tight for now, alright?』

「Nn.」

She continued glancing at the stalls in our vicinity despite voicing her agreement. It was simply something that couldn't be helped. Stalls started appearing en masse the moment the tournament began, and their merchandise honestly looked nothing short of delicious.

Her staring any longer would only serve to tempt her, so I had her rush back over to the guild. I didn't think we'd end up stopping on our way there given that she'd hit the gas, but for some odd reason, we did.

『Is something the matter, Fran?』

「That.」

I looked in the direction Fran's finger was pointing, only to find a stall that almost seemed a bit familiar.

『Wait, isn't that... The Dragon's Table?』

The Dragon's Table, one of the stores that'd competed against us back in Barbra, had a stall set up right by the Adventurer's Guild. Upon closer inspection, I discovered that they seemed to be selling the Dragon Bone Soup they happened to be famous for. Standing behind the counter was a familiar face, a tall, A ranked adventurer by the name of Fermus. He was looking just as sharp as he was the last time we saw him.

「Oh, well if it isn't the Black Tail's Fran.」

「Nn. Long time no see.」

「It has been quite a while. Are you perhaps here in order to participate in the tournament?」

「Nn.」

「Well, then please do try your best.」

Fran ended up speaking with Fermus till we had to go.

It turned out that he was also taking part in the tourney. But as one would expect of a former A ranked adventurer, he'd been seeded and wouldn't be going through the prelims.

「I would normally opt out of participating seeing as my age is what it is, but this year happens to be a bit special, as one of my acquaintances asked me to participate. I was unable to turn him down because I owed him a favour.」

He had nothing to do in the meantime, so he ended up deciding to set up shop for publicity's sake. I had to say, Fermus seemed really into this whole merchanting thing. Dude's spirit was brimming with entrepreneurship.

Well, that's one more powerful foe we might end up running into. He's literally killed dragons. Like shit, no way in hell we'll be able to beat him easily.

Fermus also told us a bunch about what happened to Barbra in the event's aftermath. The former Lords, the Krystens, had effectively thrown away their fortune by using it to fund the city's reconstruction. The guild had helped out as well, so the reconstruction was pretty much right on schedule.

Amanda's support had allowed the orphanage to get back on its feet, which in turn allowed Io go all out and do cook to the best of her ability. The soup Io made was ridiculously delicious despite the fact that she used nothing but super low quality vegetables in it. I really couldn't help but wonder just how delicious the stuff she was making now was, given that she finally had access to all the spices and condiments she could ever dream of.

Last but not least, he mentioned that Barbra was currently going through what could only be described as a curry boom. People were setting up curry stalls all over and naming them after our own. They'd call themselves the X Tail, or the Black Y, with X and Y being substituted out for random words. Many of these stalls would claim that they'd inherited our recipes, which I guess wasn't entirely false seeing as how I'd handed the recipe over to the Chef's Guild and told them to do whatever with it.

Fran was really engaged in the conversation, and seemed really interested in everything else Fermus had to say, but we had to go.

『Hey Fran, it's time.』

「Nn. Time for match.」

「Well, I won't keep you any longer then. Sorry for the hold up.」

「Not problem. Wanted to talk about Barbra.」

「Great. Then I'll look forward to trading blows with you in the ring.」

「Nn. Got it.」

「Fufu. You sure do seem eager.」

It seemed that Fermus' words had flipped Fran's switch, as the smile she flashed him was one filled with drive and battlelust.

Welp, here's to hoping she doesn't hit the people we'll be facing in the prelims too too hard.

186. The First Preliminary Round

Chapter 186. The First Preliminary Round

The First Preliminary Round

Upon arriving, we found the venue to be surprisingly quiet. Further consideration made me feel like I'd stated the obvious given that the first preliminary round wasn't actually open to the public.

Men we presumed to be adventurers were entering and leaving the building, their bodies exuding auras of passion and excitement.

『It looks like they're handling all the reception stuff over by the entrance.』

「Nn.」

Fran approached the receptionist in her usual, calm manner, with Urushi hidden in her shadow. He'd actually chosen to hide there on his own volition, as he knew he would've ended up having to do once we got into the waiting room anyways.

「I'm sorry, we aren't allowing spectators today. The second preliminary round starts tomorrow. You'll have to come back then.」

The receptionist did the usual thing and treated Fran as a non-participant despite the fact that she had me shouldered. It seemed that the receptionist had thought Fran to be an adventurer that'd just joined up or something.

I was a bit confused as to why the receptionist didn't recognize Fran given the guild had announced that she'd hit C rank and all that. I only came to understand exactly why it'd happened after appraising the receptionist and finding out that he wasn't actually associated with the guild, and was instead a civil servant working under the local lord.

「R-Really? What's your name?」

「Fran.」

「Let's see... Oh, there it is. Wait, you really are participating in the tournament?」

「Nn.」

「Are you sure you want to? There aren't any healing services available for the first preliminary round, so you can get hurt really badly. It's okay for you to back out if you want.」

The receptionist seemed like a pretty good guy, but he wasn't really doing Fran any favours. That said, she wasn't getting irritated either, seeing as how she could tell that he was only saying what he was because he was actually concerned for her safety.

「Not problem.」

「I'm serious. It really is dangerous, alright?」

「Thanks. Bye.」

「Make sure you surrender if you feel like you're outclassed, okay!? And do it before you get hurt! It'll be too late for you to regret your choices if you do!」

The receptionist wasn't able to leave his desk, so he ended up voicing his concerns by shouting them at Fran as she headed inside.

Meeting the receptionist was pretty much the only hiccup we encountered along the way; everything that happened thereafter went rather smoothly. The person that showed us around after we got inside was an old adventurer, one skilled enough to tell that Fran was much stronger than she looked.

In fact, he'd even ended up looking at the other participants with a look of pity, as most seemed to be grinning at her as if she was mere prey.

「Heh. Looks like the last participant's just a brat!」

「I guess that means this'll effectively just be a 4 way free for all then.」

「You do know that this tournament isn't some sort of game, right? I'm supposed to be winning it big and making a name for myself, not playing with some kid.」

The other 4 participants were already present. Half of them looked like mercenaries, and the other half like adventurers.

All but 1 of the participants had ended up looking down on Fran. The sole individual to regard her with a stern gaze was also the only person bothered appraising immediately. It turned out that he was actually a decently strong adventurer; his stats indicated that he was at least D ranked, which in turn meant he probably knew exactly who we were.

「Take your places, we'll soon begin.」

The old man that guided us over immediately began acting like a referee. However, he was interrupted by the less skilled adventurer before he could continue giving directions.

He approached the old man and asked him to remove Fran from the fight.

「Look, I get that kid's qualified for this and all, but she really shouldn't be here. I'm only taking part in this tournament in order to make myself famous. I'll probably end up going down in infamy instead if word gets out that I ended up hurting a little girl like her just to get past the preliminaries!」

「Say what you want. I don't have the authority to disqualify her.」

「Hey kid! Back out, right now! This is a martial arts tournament, not some sort of children's game!」

He likely would have continued yelling at us if the other adventurer hadn't called out to him.

「I'm guessing you just got here then?」

「Arrived yesterday. What of it?」

「I see...」

The more skilled of the two adventurers breathed a bit of a sigh. He seemed to have guessed that the other adventurer had only just in Ulmutt, and hence, had yet to hear about Fran. From that, he determined that convincing the other man was impossible, so he instead turned towards the judge and urged him to start the match.

「We should probably begin if you want the tourney to stay on schedule.」

「Come on! You've got to be kidding me!」

「Look, man, you're wasting everyone's time. If you don't want to fight the kid, then just forfeit.」

「He's right. You're getting really annoying.」

「What did you say!?!」

The two mercenaries joined the fray, which ultimately caused the four men to enter a staring contest in which they all glared at one another.

(Master. Can't just send flying?)

Fran was starting to get a bit frustrated.

The old man responsible for doing all the rep work seemed to feel the same way; he started the match because he didn't really want to put up with everyone's bickering.

「The match will begin in 5, 4, 3—」

「Hey, wait, what the hell!」

「—2, 1, start! 」

And so, the match ended up starting despite the weaker adventurer's complaints.

Both mercenaries immediately kicked off the moment the ref said the word 'start.'

「...Is to immediately team up and jump the strongest guy!」

Though both mercs were rather weak, they still did have a fair amount of experience in combat. As they worked in the same field, the two established a mutual understanding and immediately began working together.

I'd always thought of mercenaries to be the type of people that were capable of using all sorts of different weapons, but weak nonetheless. However, after being presented with live samples, I came to realize that they were in fact individuals rather skilled at cooperating. My guess was that they were most likely even more skilled than adventurers were in that regard.

The weaker adventurer immediately reacted to their words.

「Kuh! How cowardly! I can't believe you'd gang up on me right off the bat!」

Wait, did he seriously think that he was the one that was going to get ganged? Just how in the world did someone as weak as him end up with that much confidence? Dude's been rattling on about getting famous and all that, but as far as I could tell, his attitude wasn't backed by his ability. I didn't understand why he assumed he'd be actually able to get past the first round of the prelims.

「First up is you!」

「Oraaahh! Go to hell!」

The individual the two mercenaries immediately approached was naturally the more powerful of the two adventurers; they closed in on him from both directions while swinging their blades. Their choice seemed logical, as the man did give off the sense that he was rather strong.

But they were simply too weak in comparison. Both were sent flying out of bounds with a single swing of the adventurer's sword.

「No way!」

Fran faced off against the other adventurer in the meantime. He really seemed to be the type of guy who wasn't good at reading the mood, as he ended up trying to convince her to forfeit even now.

「Listen here kid. I hit ranked all the way up to E faster than of Corrent Village's other adventurers. There's no way a little girl like you could possibly match up to my genius! Forfeit, walk yourself out of bounds right now if you don't want me to hurt you. This is your final warning, you hear!」

Did he end up turning out the way he did because the tiny ass village he came from thought him to be a genius or something? Is that how all this happened?

「So yo—」

「Shut up.」

Fran interrupted the weaker adventurer by kicking him in the stomach and sending him flying so far he almost fell out of bounds.

「Urgh!!」

He held his stomach and looked up at Fran with eyes filled with disbelief as he vomited all sorts of different things. It seemed he was incapable of comprehending the fact that she'd just sent him flying about 10 meters back.

「Will get serious next time if you still want to fight.」

「Hiiii...」

The adventurer lying on the ground in front of us was rather unskilled, but, even he could feel the aura of intimidation that Fran's body had began exuding. He finally shut up and immediately rolled himself right out of bounds without even bothering to voice anything about shame or dishonor.

『Why'd you purposefully make him not go out of bounds?』

(Stupid and annoying, but wasn't bad person.)

For that reason, she'd intentionally allowed him to choose whether or not he wanted to back off as opposed to just sending him flying further. I got where she was coming from, but honestly, I almost wanted to say that the way she did it was even more cruel than just finishing him in one hit. The way she attacked him made it so he wouldn't be able to make excuses or say that he'd been caught off guard, which in turn might've just broke his spirit and made him lose heart.

「I knew this would be how things turned out...」

「Nn.」

「I doubt I'll be able to triumph over you, but I will at least get a hit in!」

He drew his blade and attacked in a fluid, skillful motion, but failed to damage Fran regardless.

She swung her left fist, smacked him with a counter, broke his stance, and caused him to collapse on the spot.

「How... mortifying...」

And so, Fran ended up moving onto the second round of the preliminaries.

187. In the Waiting Room

Chapter 187. In the Waiting Room

In the Waiting Room

Today was the day we would fight our second preliminary match.

Its location, a large stadium, was practically the exact opposite of the the puny training ground in which we'd fought the first round.

The first round's 1000 plus participants had been cut down to a measly 240. Soon, that 240 would be further reduced all the way down to 48.

The participants were split into 2 groups of 120, with each assigned to one of the two larger stadiums the event was to be hosted in. Both stadiums were known to get pretty full seeing as how the second preliminary round not only functioned as the first round open to spectators, but also the only public round that featured battle royale style matches. The 5 FFA format was actually quite popular, as people thought it fresh compared to the standard 1v1 format used throughout the rest of the tourney.

Another reason spectators enjoyed flocking to both this round and the tournament as a whole was the fact that one could gamble. Everyone other than the match's participants would be allowed to bet to their hearts' content. Participants were banned from placing bets in order to discourage them from fixing their matches. Match fixing was considered a serious crime and any found guilty of it would be put to death.

In my world, gambling had been an act that was often associated with organized crime and the underworld as a whole, but that apparently wasn't something we had to be concerned with. Dias was rather strict, he was known for cracking down on and preventing it. Larger criminal organisations would always be destroyed the moment they were discovered. Smaller scaled organisations sometimes managed to find themselves staying off the radar, but none of them held nearly enough power to have their way.

Plus, the Adventurer's Guild was the entity responsible for all the bookkeeping. They possessed the power, authority, and talent necessary to make sure nothing happened, so there really wasn't much to worry about.

『Alright, let's go.』

「Nn.」

We still had a fair chunk of time before Fran's match began, but apparently, all participants actually needed to arrive earlier than was scheduled. Hence, we'd planned to spend about 30 minutes in the venue's waiting room.

Fran didn't actually seem nervous. She was still her usual taciturn self despite the upcoming second preliminary round. Since we had a bit more time to spare today, she even ended up buying and eating a bunch of stuff on her way over to the stadium.

『Man, this place is huge.』

「Nn.」

The venue was a massive cylindrical building that looked almost exactly like a colosseum. Today was our first time viewing it from up close, but I could feel the excitement contained within nonetheless. The sheer hype amount of hype that filled the arena was only evidenced by the ridiculously loud cheers we heard booming out from within.

Fran headed inside through the combatants' entrance at the building's rear. Today's receptionist seemed to be the kind that had their shit together, and so, we managed to make into the waiting room without anyone stopping us in our tracks. All of the other participants immediately turned towards Fran the moment she entered the waiting room. Most regarded her with surprise, contempt, or a sense of bewilderment, but she ignored them and found herself a seat.

To her, this was only normal.

There were a total of 5 different waiting rooms. The tournament's organisers had intentionally made it so people wouldn't run into their opponents prior to actually entering the arena in order to minimize the amount of potential conflict. They'd also even gone as far as to set a rule stating that combat was banned within the waiting rooms' confines.

「The hell's a brat like you doing here? Scram!」

Unfortunately, people were people, and rules weren't always respected.

One of the second round's participants immediately started blabbing off to Fran despite the fact that he would've realized that she wasn't just some random kid if he'd so much as just used his brain. A mere moment worth of thought would've allowed him to realize that she'd had to at least have some ability given that she'd gotten through the first preliminary round.

The man in question, a dude with a vulgar look on his face, went out of his way to rise to his feet and approach Fran. The fact that combat was against the rules put me at a loss. I wasn't really sure how to handle the situation given that we weren't allowed to do the usual thing and just smack him to shut him up.

It turned out that Fran didn't share my sentiments. She knew exactly what to do, as evidenced by the fact that she activated all her intimidation-type skills without a moment's hesitation. That is, she immediately filled the entire room with an incredible amount of pressure.

『Hey Fran, you're going a bit overboard there.』

「Nn?」

Fran's aura had caused many of the other participants to rise to their feet with the faces paled and their weapons drawn out of sheer habit — and they'd only been hit with collateral damage.

The man Fran had been aiming her bloodlust at had lost control of his legs and fallen flat on his ass. He was trembling in fear and almost on the verge of passing out.

「Nn.」

「Hii....」

He even went as far as immediately scuttling backwards the moment Fran laid eyes on him.

Welp. It getting all quiet was good and all, but I kinda felt bad for what we did to all the other contestants.

They weren't able to relax until after Fran cancelled the skills and bowed her head in apology. That said, their expressions had ultimately ended up remaining stern; most seemed to have come to understand their own relative weakness.

Yup, she definitely went overboard.

Everyone present remained dead silent, which in turn made the cheers coming from the colosseum's arena sound strangely distant. Fran, however, literally didn't give a shit. She simply sat down, pulled a glass of juice out of her dimensional storage, and started drinking it with an innocent look on her face like it was nobody's business.

The atmosphere ended up remaining as is until another contestant ended up entering the room.

「Oh hey, well if it isn't the Magic Sword Girl.」

「Nn? Lydia?」

「Hey, long time no see. So you're taking part in the tourney too?」

The girl that walked into the otherwise tense room was Lydia, an adventurer we met back in Barbra, and a member of the Scarlet Maidens. She was fairly easy to recognize, as her face was currently decorated with its usual expressionless mask.

The fact that she was here immediately led me to assume that the other two members of her party were also actively participating.

「Judith and Maia here too?」

「Yup, they've also both signed up for the tourney. Judith's over in one of the other rooms. Maia had to go to the other venue instead. But seriously, whew.」

「Nn?」

「Well, it's just that you being here means I won't have to worry about fighting you.」

Lydia had seen the extent of Fran's strength back in Barbra, so learning that she wouldn't have to fight her had caused the older girl to breathe a sigh of relief.

「Our goal is to make it past the preliminaries.」

「Not win?」

「That's just not something that's going to happen. Both Colbert and Forrund are going to be participating, and there's no way any of us could even imagine matching up to them. To be honest, we're just entering in order to make ourselves better known so people won't look down on us. Our party only has girls in it, so it's a necessary measure.」

The reason the Scarlet Maidens had decided to take part in the tourney seemed like one of the more common ones. It did make sense though. Getting filtered through the preliminaries despite the tournament's scale really would serve to evidence one's skill to some extent. I mean, that was interesting and all, but I cared much less about the reasons he was participating than I did about the other participants she had just mentioned.

「Colbert and Forrund participating too?」

After all, it seemed that two more powerful opponents had joined the fray.

「Uhhmmm... Could you not smile like that? It's kinda scary!」

Hearing that Colbert and Forrund had come seemed to light both Fran's spirit and her desire to fight aflame, as she immediately smiled a belligerent smile.

「Oh, yeah! Congrats on ranking up! The fact that you're already a C ranker is really impressive.」

「Thanks.」

「Please go easy on me if we happen to happen to get matched up against each other after the prelims are done with. Please try not to hurt me, 'kay?」

「Nn.」

「I'll hold you to it then! I swear I'll get really mad if you make me hurt all over!」

I honestly couldn't tell if Lydia was weak or strong from a psychological standpoint. But either way, Fran ended up getting called shortly after the two started to converse.

The clerk that called for us led us through a narrow passageway. Blinding sunlight flooded into it as we made our way through; it almost seemed to emphasize that the arena lay beyond.

『Are you ready, Fran?』

「Nn.」

『This is your last chance to avoid garnering the Beast Lord's attention, so if you want to back out, it'll be now or never.』

「Won't forfeit.」

『You sure? Even though the Beast Lord might end up making note of you?』

「Nn!」

The Beast Lord had broken Fran's spirit and left her trembling thereafter simply by standing before her.

But it didn't matter.

Fran didn't care that the actions she was about to take were ones that could ultimately attract his attention. The moment she learned of Kiara's fate was the moment she threw away the very consideration of backing down. Doing so, running away with her tail between her legs, had become equivalent to casting away her tribe's pride.

And that, she simply refused to do.

『Go all out, do whatever it is you want. Don't worry about the Beast Lord. We can always just teleport the hell away, find ourselves a ship, and sail off to another continent if really need be. But that's not something you'll have to worry about, I'll take care of everything if worse comes to worst, so don't let your fears hold you back.』

「Thanks.」

『Alright, that's all I had to say.』

There was no point in dwelling on what ifs. All we needed to do for now was focus on and conquer the second preliminary round.

『Let's do this!』

「Nn!」

188. The Second Preliminary Round

Chapter 188. The Second Preliminary Round

The Second Preliminary Round

Fran pumped herself up and stepped into the arena, only to be greeted by a stage of epic proportions, one so massive and well decorated that it simply couldn't be compared to the dingy thing used in the first preliminary round. Its construction consisted of two parts, a round platform and the larger cylindrical wall that enclosed it, a large cylindrical wall. Around the arena were enough seats to fit over a thousand spectators. The place was beyond packed; every single seat was filled and then some.

Our entrance was welcomed by a set cheers from the audience, cheers so deafeningly loud that they caused my blade to tremble in response.

In spite of all that, Fran was as usual; she literally didn't care about her surroundings.

Three of our four foes already stood atop the stage, one of which we happened to recognize.

「Huh? Fran!?!」

「Judith?!」

「Oh come on! Now I'm sure to lose!」

Judith fell forward onto her knees the moment she realized she was up against us. It was an action I honestly couldn't blame her for. There was basically no way for her to win given how the fact that Fran was way stronger than she was..

Apparently she wasn't the only one to have recognized Fran, as the other contestants had also adopted similar expressions of unease.

「So that's the Magic Sword Girl...? Huh, she really was just a kid.」

「Don't let your guard down. Her ranks even higher than ours are. I hear she's a C ranker now.」

The first round of the preliminaries seemed to have filtered out most of the weaker adventurers, as the only one of the contestants present understood that Fran was no weakling. The only one that failed to recognize her strength was the last to enter the ring.

「Hahahah! Why's there a brat here? Isn't this supposed to be a Martial Arts Tournament?」

The obnoxiously loud Blue Catkin that joined the fray laughed before taking a closer look at her and furrowing his brows.

「How the hell did you manage to get past the first round? Did you bribe all your opponents? Or were they just all pedophiles?」

「Strength.」

「Heh. Bullshit! You're a god damned Black Catkin! No way in hell a wimp catkin like you could actually put up a decent fight. Know your place. Wait, I know. That old White Dogkin geezer must've pulled a few strings. That has to have been it.」

Getting a closer look at him allowed me to recognize that he was in fact a member of Blue Pride. Specifically, he was one of the two people that'd been standing by the gate and trying to convince Aurel to see them.

The realisation immediately explained why he was aggressive on both Fran and her benefactor.

「Just you wait, wimp cat. I'll tear your jaw off so you can't surrender, strip you nude and embarrassed the hell out of you before finally slowly beating you death.」

「Haah? What'd you just say?」

「You tried to visit aurel by lying and claiming you were famous, but you were turned away at the gates because your lie seen through right away. You're just a group of weak, pathetic, small time mercenaries. And stay away from me. You stink.」

Fran seemed to have snapped given that she'd started speaking in longer, more drawn out sentences.

A large screen that resembled the kind you'd see in a sports stadium decorated one of the stadium's sides. It seemed to be some sort of magic item, as it was doing as a monitor would, and displayed a blown up version of the interaction that'd just occurred in real time.

The crowd's response to the Blue Catkin's remarks was rather poor. A few of the men had urged him on, but a greater number of women had ended up booing. Fran's rebuttal, on the other hand, had caused the entire stadium to erupt into cheers. The man immediately popped a vein in rage, but Fran just totally ignored him and everything he said from that point onward, which, as one might suspect, only caused him to get even angrier.

Their interaction was one the crowd really seemed to like, as its members began to jeer in an attempt to urge the two on.

With the mood set, the match finally began.

The Blue Catkin immediately locked his eyes to Fran's position and lunged straight at her. His skill with the sword wasn't too shabby, and he came at her with nothing held back; it was clear that he planned to kill her. His actions caused me to want to scoff at how childish he was. He ended up completely losing all sense of rationality just because of the slightest bit of mockery.

Though, that much, I'd honestly expected.

What I didn't expect, however, was for the three other contestants to join him. They all immediately decided to cooperate in order to eliminate Fran, as, the Blue Catkin aside, they were aware that she was the strongest in the group. Judith happened to stand out from her peers, as she purposefully placed herself at the rear so she could use the other three contestants as meat shields.

Both Fran and I were rather impressed by her actions. She hadn't given up on winning despite the fact that she knew we'd be able to overwhelm her.

The unexpected four versus one situation put Fran in what could be thought of a numerical disadvantage, but she didn't mind. Fran simply didn't care that all four other contestants had ganged up her. She didn't complain, nor did she bother calling any of the four out for unfairness.

Instead, she simply retaliated.

「Fmph.」

「Guahhh!」

She swung me without bothering to draw my blade from its sheath and hit the Blue Catkin right in the jaw. The impact caused him to fly into the air before spiraling back down towards the ground.

Fran then struck again; she used the rising momentum that accompanied her first strike in order to deliver a powerful horizontal blow.

「Heavy Slash.」

「Kyaah!」

「What!?!」

「Gyaaahhh!」

Heavy Slash was considered a relatively low tier skill, but it'd proven to be more than effective enough given just how powerful Fran had become. The attack sent the swordsman and spearman that followed the Blue Catkin tumbling back into Judith. Neither of the three were capable of recovering from the attack and so, they were all forced out of bounds.

Only a few seconds had passed, but Fran had already eliminated three of her four opponents. She could've easily done the same to the last of the bunch, but instead, intentionally chose to draw out her assault.

「Hiiii! F-Fwelp me...!」

She swung me downwards. In doing so, she caught the Blue Catkin in midair, smashed him into the ground, and caused a dull crack to reverberate through it.

「Gahiii... fuaarghh...!」

The blood in the Blue Catkin's mouth rendered him incapable of anything but a few groans. He'd barely managed to hang onto his consciousness, not because he was sturdy, but because Fran had made sure to hold back just enough for him to do so.

「I... huwwenda! I huwwenda!」

「Don't understand.」

「Horheit!」

「Still don't understand.」

Well, yeah, it's kinda hard for him to actually speak given that he doesn't have a jaw or chin anymore.

「I horheit da hatsh!」

「Too stupid to know how to surrender? Well, can't be helped since Blue Catkin.」

Fran basically totally admitted to knowing exactly what he was trying to say, but it didn't matter. What did was the fact that she'd done onto him exactly what he claimed he'd wanted to do to her.

「Should strip and humiliate you?」

「Hiiii! I'm hwory! I'm hworry! Pweave, htop! Haf murhy!」

The sheer amount of bloodlust Fran'd been emanating caused the Blue Catkin to become as scared as he could possibly be; a warm, wet patch spread across his nether regions as he deliriously begged for her forgiveness.

Naturally, the referee had realized that the match couldn't go on, and so, he hurried over to the stage and attempted to climb atop it.

Fran noticed him approach, so she immediately moved to deliver the finishing blow before he could stop her.

「Will end as requested.」

「Gobaaarrgggh!」

She muttered a few words under her breath while swinging me like a golf club and sending the Blue Catkin fly right off the stage. She seemed to have gone a bit overboard, as he soared for what looked like 10 whole meters before finally hitting the ground.

I was a bit worried that the crowd would end up finding her actions distasteful, but it turned out that they actually ended up liking them as they immediately broke into applause.

「And it's over! The young lady just pulled off the impossible and sent a full grown man flying off the stage with just one hit! Ain't that just incredible ladies and gentlemen? It's not something you'd expect from someone with such a cute face, that's for sure!」

Wait, there's been a shoutcaster this whole time? How the hell did I not notice?

The caster's announcement caused the crowd to break out into an extra loud cheer.

「And with that C rank adventurer Fran, the Magic Sword Girl, wins the 11th west block and secures herself a spot in the main event without even drawing the blade she's nicknamed after!」

189. The Brackets

Chapter 189. The Brackets

The Brackets

「Congratulations, Miss Fran. You have earned the right to participate in the main event.」

「Nn.」

Fran ended up having to visit what almost looked to be yet another waiting room after winning the match. There, she was met by a clerk who explained how things would work from here on out.

The tournament wasn't set to start till the day after tomorrow, but, tomorrow was going to be a busy day regardless. The matchups and brackets were to be posted in the morning and an opening ceremony was to take place around noon. The tournament's participants didn't actually have to participate in the opening ceremony. In fact, the clerk's tone made it seemed like we were or more or less discouraged from doing so, which honestly only made sense. Putting a bunch of hot blooded warriors in one spot sounded like a terrible idea no matter how you spun it.

They pushed the idea even further by stating that copies of the brackets would be delivered straight to the inn we were staying at so we wouldn't even have head out in order to check them.

To us, not having to attend the ceremony was nothing short of a blessing. Fran wasn't the type of girl that'd be able to sit still while nobles and other bigwigs went about with their long speeches and whatnot. Plus, the Beast Lord was pretty much guaranteed to be present as a VIP of sorts, and being around him didn't quite seem like what one would call the best idea ever.

We were also informed that the main tournament's participants would be given preferential treatment at all smithies throughout the city for the event's duration. Injuries could be fixed on the spot with ease. All one would need to do to restore themselves to perfect health was to either chug a potion or two, or have someone cast a few healing spells. Gear, however, couldn't really be fixed unless you took it in for maintenance.

Luckily, there wasn't too much new information to absorb, so we ended up leaving the arena not too long after our victory — only to immediately run into Judith.

「Hey Fran. It looked like I really didn't even stand a chance.」

「Not hurt?」

「Haha... Only because you held back enough for me not to be.」

The way she spoke made it clear that she was feeling a bit down. Fran had no idea what to say given the circumstances, and so, she just ended up not saying anything at all. Instead, she simply looked at the other girl with a bit of a troubled expression.

「Oh uh, sorry, don't mind me. I just wanted to wish you good luck and to tell you to give it your all, in part for my sake.」

「Nn.」

「Oh, and make sure you win the first round! I'll be betting all the spare cash I have on you!」

「Might fight Lydia if she wins prelims.」

「That doesn't matter! I'll still be betting on you anyway」

Judith smiled cheerfully while giving us a thumbs up.

With that, we departed, our minds and hearts filled with Judith's half sincere, half greed-driven words of encouragement.

「Will do best.」

『That you should, for Judith's wallet's sake.』

The tournament brackets were delivered to us the next afternoon.

We immediately began looking them over the moment we got them. The brackets were split into four distinct blocks, labeled A, B, C, and D respectively. Each naturally contained 16 of the tourney's 64 contestants.

Fran'd been placed in slot A-11, which... honestly didn't really mean much to us. It told us who we were up against and all, but did nothing to tell us how strong he or she was supposed to be.

『Looks like we're up against someone named Zefmate...?』

「Don't recognize.」

『He isn't seeded, so I guess that means he must've at least been strong enough to win his way through the prelims.』

We decided to put Zefmate aside for the time being and look into him a bit later on. I figured we'd at least be able to learn a bit about his fighting style if we just asked Erza.

After shelving the thought and putting something on our to-do list, Fran and I immediately looked over all the seeded combatants.

「Forrund and Amanda.」

『Royce and Goldalfa are on here too.』

The four A ranked adventurers looked to be the tourney's top seed, as their names were placed in the page's four corners. Though some tournaments involved having seeded individuals fight less matches, this one didn't. There were exactly 64 participants, so it was fair in the sense that each and every single individual would have to fight the exact same number of battles to win the event.

As were were in Block A, the first top seed we'd end up encountering, if any, would have to be Goldalfa, one of the Beast Lord's escorts. He was in the same block as us, and specifically had been placed in slot A-1. Block A's second seed, Colbert, had been placed opposite him in slot A-16.

Having 16 seeded combatants meant that there were naturally four in each block. They all seemed to be quite strong, but Goldalfa and Colbert, the ones we'd have to fight, seemed especially intimidating. Both were capable of bringing Fran to the verge of death with a single strike. Fortunately, we knew about both their abilities to an extent, so we could at least begin thinking up how we could best deal with them ahead of time.

The first of the two we would face would be Colbert, which in turn meant we'd need to be able to do something about opponents that made use of Martial Arts. But again, he wasn't the only person we needed to defeat. There were so just many people we needed to look up and do research on — a fact that worried me to the point where I'd started doing mental laps.

「Kufu.」

Fran, however, wasn't. The possibility of having to go up against one of the Beast Lord's guards failed to frighten or worry her. In fact, it'd done the exact opposite. Hearing that she might get to fight Goldafa had pushed her battlelust over the edge and caused her to break into a smile.

『So if we win the first round, we'll probably have to fight... Wait, seriously? Him?』

「Kurusu Ryuuzel? Don't really remember?」

『I'm not surprised you don't remember him, but he was that one C ranked guy that was there when we went dungeon diving with Amanda.』

「Nn?」

『Oh come. He was the one guy that kinda functioned as both a guide and examiner at the same time. Dude was kinda handsome, but almost seemed kinda pitiable given how worldly-wise he was. He must've seen some shit.』

「Maybe vaguely recalling?」

Welp... It didn't look like I'd be able to jog her memory, so I just gave up. I figured she'd probably remember him if she saw him. I was fairly confident Kurusu himself would likely recognize her on sight, as the impression she'd left on him had been a pretty deep one. It'd probably get all awkward if Fran ended up treating him like a total stranger, so I decided to make a mental note to remind myself to remind her that she knew him the moment we came across him.

That said, the mental note I made wasn't really one I'd classified as anything even remotely close to high priority. There was a fair chance we wouldn't actually end up getting pit against Kurusu anyways. He would have to win against the individual seeded into slot A-9 in order to actually see us in the ring.

『Looks like Kurusu's going to have to fight that old guy, Radyer.』

「Said he was C ranked?」

『Yeah, but he's apparently as strong as a B ranker and even used to serve as a court magician.』

Radyer getting seeded honestly seemed nothing short of reasonable. I kinda felt a bit sorry for Kurusu; I really couldn't see him winning against the old mage.

「Radyer will win.」

Fran voiced her agreement.

Well, I guess we'll have to figure out how to best fight mages if we wanted to beat Radyer.

『And if we manage to make it past Radyer, we'll have to face off against Colbert.』

「Nn! Will need to try hard. Excited.」

Colbert was much more experienced than us, and even had a trick or two up his sleeve. He'd had something that disguised his stats, so we didn't even know if the values we'd seen back then had really been his actual ones. All I really knew about him was that he had that a mysterious martial arts-type skill referred to as Dimitris-Style Martial Arts, which was yet another thing we'd have to look into.

『And if we beat Colbert, we'll have to fight Goldalfa.』

「Nn.」

Goldalfa, like Colbert, seemed to be fairly strong, so I didn't doubt that he'd win his first three matches. I wasn't really confident as to whether or not we'd be able to bring him down ourselves; there was a fair chance he'd be able to plow through us and win his fourth match as well.

「Will win!」

『Hell yeah we will!』

If we did beat him, then I'd say we actually had a fair chance of actually winning the whole goddamn tourney. He, as an A ranked adventurer, was someone strong enough to single handedly upset the balance of of a country's military power so it went without saying that he was a likely contender for the championship title.

『Though, beating him isn't really going to get us out of fighting all the other A ranked adventurers present.』

If all went well, Fran would have to fight Amanda in the semis, and Forrund in the finals, the realisation of which practically left her trembling in excitement. Both gave off the impression that they were even stronger than Goldalfa, especially since we'd witnessed their power first hand back in Barbra.

「But will still win.」

『That we will.』

They were extremely formidable, but I refused to back down. There was no point in me doing so if Fran actually intended on giving it her all. After all, victory was something that necessitated the right mindset; there was no way for us win unless we fought with that precise purpose in mind.

『Fuck yeah! Let's do this!』

「Master?」

『I was just getting myself pumped, cause we're gunna win this shit!』

「Nn!」

We'd identified what seemed to be our main threats, but that didn't mean we could actually let our guards down. As there were many other strong contestants, there was a chance we could be caught off guard and completely obliterated by someone we hadn't expected to fight if we didn't remain vigilant.

Having come to that conclusion, we decided to once again look through the brackets in order to identify our acquaintances.

The first name that happened to catch our eyes was Fermus'. He happened to be in Block D together with Royce.

The second name we noticed was Erza's. It seemed the tournament was fairly flexible and its managers were willing to accommodate people's needs, as they hadn't listed him by his real name. Erza, like Amanda, was placed in the Block B. I kinda wanted to see the two fight, but also kinda didn't, as it'd likely be a showdown that'd determine which was the more fearsome woman.

The third name that caught our eye was the name "Phillip Krysten," which happened to be listed alongside Forrund's in Block C. I was a bit unsure as to whether or not he should actually be here given Barbra's status quo, but figured he probably had his reasons for participating. Plus, he honestly had seemed pretty damned strong given what he was able to do to Rynford, so I was looking forward to seeing the full extent of abilities; Phillip vs Forrund was a match I didn't want to miss.

Our eyes moved around the page a bit more and located the name Charlotte. I recalled her immediately. She was the young War Dancer that'd helped us out back in Barbra. She seemed to me like the type of person that'd fight through the rituals she performed with her dance as opposed to engaging in direct combat... which wouldn't really help her given that her first match was against Erza. I felt pretty bad for her, so I at least, in my mind, offered her my heartfelt condolences.

Her name was the last familiar one we found.

The person we'd been looking for hadn't made the list.

「Lydia missing.」

Wait, didn't she ask Fran not to hurt her too much if they came across each other during the main event and all that? How could she actually not make it after saying something like that?

God damn it, Lydia! What the hell!?

190. Gathering Intel

Chapter 190. Gathering Intel

Gathering Intel

Fran and I stopped by the Adventurer's Guild not too long after we finished staring down the brackets. Our goal was to figure out as much as we could with regards to all the other participants.

「Erza not here.」

『I'm honestly not all that sure he would've told us what we wanted to know anyways.』

「Nn?」

『I mean, he's technically one of our competitors, you know? Though, I guess he does seem like he'd gladly comply so long as it's you that's asking...』

Relying on someone we might have to fight against for information just didn't sit quite right with me.

『How 'bout asking Dias or some other adventurers instead?』

「Got it.」

Fran began moving towards a group of nearby adventurers so she could ask for a bit of information — only to be immediately denied the chance by the person she'd originally been looking for.

「Congratulations Fran! You did it! You made it to the main event!」

Erza dashed right over with a huge grin on his face, one so friendly it made me feel like an idiot for even considering him a rival of sorts.

「I watched your match! You did soooo well!」

「Nn.」

「That Blue Catkin was really rude... You should've beat him up some more, mhm!」

「But might've been disqualified.」

「Oh... right, I almost forgot you weren't allowed to attack people that've already surrendered. Oh well, I guess he gets off easy then... More importantly, Fran, something about you seems a bit different.」

「Nn?」

「Let's see... It's kinda like you've gotten a more reliable. You've really got this huge sense of presence.」

「Trained hard.」

「Is that really it? Mmm... I guess that does make sense. You seem like the type that'll grow at an explosive rate the moment I take my eyes off of you. I'm sure the tournament will help you get way stronger.」

「Nn.」

「So what made you want to come to the guild today?」

「Wanted to research opponents.」

「Really? I always thought you were the type that wouldn't really care who you were up against.」

「Intel very important.」

「Yup yup! Totally! As for the person you'll be going up against first... Hmm... I don't know anything about him.」

「Don't know?」

「Mhm. I've never heard of any adventurers named Zefmate before.」

Erza not recognizing Zefmate meant two things: he wasn't from Ulmutt and he wasn't anyone really famous.

「Let's try asking someone else.」

Erza approached the adventurers seated at the bar and asked them if they knew of Zefmate.

「Do any of you know an adventurer named Zefmate?」

「Zefmate? Never heard of him.」

「Me either.」

None of the ten adventurers present had any idea who he was, which in turn led me to suspect that Zefmate wasn't actually an adventurer given that some of the participants were in fact not.

There were also mercenaries, Knights like Phillip, mages, and other decently strong non-adventurers present as well.

『Alright, looks like he isn't someone anyone around here knows. Let's try switching gears.』

「Nn. Would like information on Dimitris-Style Martial Arts instead.」

「Oh my. Whyever would you need that?」

「Might have to fight person with it.」

「I didn't know any of the tournament's entrants knew how to use Dimitris-Style Martial Arts.」

「Don't know why, but won't use.」

「Oh, I guess that must mean the person you're talking about is going through his trial.」

「Trial?」

「You didn't know about the Dimitris Trial? They're really famous. Anyone that wants to be an official disciple has to go through one of them. The trial goer needs to become an A ranked adventurer with a part of their strength sealed by a really special magic item.」

The trial apparently really was famous, as all the other adventurers seemed to know about it and filled us in with a few additional details. They told us that the magic item sealed away both a portion of one's skills and stats.

No one present knew the exact details, but it seemed that one's stats would drop by a minimum of 20 percent upon equipping the sealing item. It prevented one from using many of the Dimitris-Styled Martial Arts and also pretty much lowered the level of every single skill one happened to have.

Learning that promptly allowed us to understand why Colbert had suddenly gotten stronger the moment Barbra fell into chaos. He must've undone his seal in order to help us kill Rynford.

Erza himself had partied with someone familiar with the Dimitris-Style Martial Art in the past, and had the opportunity to witness its techniques from up close.

「Though, she wasn't too high ranked, and couldn't do anything too incredible at the time.」

Apparently, the thing that made the Dimitris-Style so amazing was its focus on Qi.

Qi was defined as the act of applying one's energy either within or on the surface of one's body in order to either use it as a weapon or simply reinforce oneself. It was similar to magic, which used the exact same energy source to create the phenomenon known as a spell. The distinction between the two basically lay in the manner in which the energy was directed. Like magic, Qi's strengths and weaknesses were dependant on its users skills and natural disposition.

「Dimitris-Style Martial Arts take the concept of Qi to a whole new level. I don't know too many details, but I think they've started to mix the concepts of Qi and Magic together. Mhm.」

「Qi and Magic at same time?」

「Yup yup. Dimitris-Style martial artists can send their Qi flying or deploy it as a shield. I think they can also send their Qi into their opponents' bodies in order to destroy it from the inside out. I've heard that the style's more experienced users can do even more than just that, but I haven't really heard any details.」

Apparently Dimitris-Style martial artists were able to do a lot more than just fire off the Kamehameha. Being able to totally wreck someone's body from inside out sounded really troublesome to deal with.

「I don't really think you need to worry about it though. At least not for the purposes of the tourney.」

「Why?」

「Trial goers aren't supposed to be allowed to lift the seal unless it's to help people or defeat someone thought to be evil. You aren't supposed to release the seal out of self-interest.」

Doing well in the tourney pretty much fell into the self-interest category, which meant we probably wouldn't have to worry about Colbert undoing his seal, which, to us, was fairly beneficial. It boosted the hell out of our chances of victory.

「Nn. Understood.」

「Is there anything else you wanted to ask?」

We asked for details about Royce, Goldalfa, Amanda, Forrund and last but not least, Radyer.

「Radyer?」

「Good old Radyer? He's a strong one~ He doesn't have too much stamina due to his age, but he's really well experienced. You'll need to be able to deal with all sorts of magic if you want to beat him.」

「What kinds?」

「As far as I know, he can use Greater Earth Magic, Greater Water Magic, and Storm Magic.」

Radyr sounded hella tough. He was the only mages we heard of capable of using three different advanced magics. The closest to his level would be Royce, who was capable of using Greater Earth Magic, Moonlight Magic and Space/Time Magic.

We didn't really know much about Greater Earth Magic or Greater Water Magic, so we were going to have to proceed with utmost care.

「Did you want to know anything else, or is that all?」

「Nn. All for now.」

「Mkay. Tell me if you ever want to know anything else. I'll tell you everything I can!」

「Nn.」

「But that doesn't mean I'll go easy on you if we end up getting matched against each other, mkay? We'll have to fight it out fair and square. That'd be rude.」

「Oh my, you seem really pumped and willing to go already. Fufufu.」

Erza was a bit surprised by Fran's happy looking smile, but soon began matching it with his own while also returning her aura of belligerence.

Oh god damn it! Erza was a battle junkie too!?

191. The Morning of the First Round

Chapter 191. The Morning of the First Round

The Morning of the First Round

『Morning Fran, you get a good night's sleep?』

「Nn...」

Fran was still only half awake, but somehow managed to have absolutely no difficulty shoveling her breakfast down her throat regardless.

『Today's the day. The tourney's finally starting.』

「Nn...」

I'd been a bit worried as to whether or not Fran would actually be able to get a good night's rest, but it turned out that my concerns had been totally needless. To her, today was honestly just another day.

Our morning routine went just as usual. I washed her face, dried her hair with warm air, and gave it a good brushing.

『Today's your big day, so we'll have to make sure you look even cuter than usual.』

「Doesn't matter.」

『Don't be silly. Of course it's going to matter, you're practically going to be put on display.』

I finished styling her hair as I responded to her. Only after I finished that did her eyes finally snap open and fill with energy. She promptly began imitating my actions by brushing Urushi's. The wolf narrowed his eyes and enjoyed the sensation for a few moments before flipping onto his back and demanding more affection. The way he acted reminded me of the Golden Retriever one of my older neighbors had in the past. He seriously didn't give off even the slightest bit of the feral feel you'd normally expect from a wolf.

『We still a bit ahead of schedule. Feel like doing anything in particular, or?』

「Nn. Master, over here.」

『Huh? What's up?』

「Nn.」

Fran grabbed a cloth and began polishing me off.

『We haven't actually fought yet, so make sure you don't tire yourself out doing that, alright?』

『But-』

「Because not just me.」

「Master also being put on display. Will have to make Master look cool.」

She continued polishing me as I brooded over whether I should thank her or tell her to stop. As far as I was concerned, Fran was going to be the star of the show, and I was just going to be an extra. I would've loved to keep contemplating so I could actually arrive at an answer, but ultimately stopped giving a shit not too long after she started because of how good it felt.

My loss of control led her to continue polishing me for a good 30 minutes, after which my blade became nice and sparkly.

『Are you sure that didn't tire you out?』

「Still okay.」

『Alright, let's head out then.』

「Nn!」

All contestants were to report to and gather in the Adventurer's Guild. Block A was scheduled to be the first to fight, so its members had to get there extra early.

Upon arrival, we were immediately led upstairs by one of the guild's clerks. It seemed that the rooms on the second and third floors were being used as temporary waiting rooms. The fact that the rooms were private rooms as opposed to larger rooms with participants aggregated within them was one that I could only possibly conclude as beneficial. Hot blooded adventurers, like Fran, would probably start fights if left with all the other participants.

「Please wait here until we call for you. Your match will be the 6th, and each is timeboxed to 30 minutes, so I believe you won't have to wait more than 2 hours. It depends on how long each match lasts, the shorter they are, the sooner you'll be up.」

「You're free to observe the rest of the day's matches once you're done with your own, but you're not allowed to leave the room until we call for you.」

The fact that matches were timeboxed meant you couldn't really stall forever and just bore the crowd. It'd also prevent the tourney from getting thrown off schedule. However, it also meant that it was possible to run the timer. To that end, all combatants had to put on a magic item known as a Bracelet of Judgement prior to engaging in combat. The bracelet would allow one to determine a victor should the combatants eat up the whole 30 minutes they were allotted. The bracelet was capable of determining the contestants' HP and MP values, as well as their relative consumption thereof. It would use the numbers it read to discern which of the two combatants would have emerged victorious had the match continued indefinitely.

「There'll be a staff member just outside the door at all times, so please don't be shy. Let us know if you need anything. 」

The tournament's participants were treated like VIPs and could order the staff to do all sorts of stuff. A few examples of the services provided were preparing light meals and acting as a proxy in order to do one's shopping. It seemed convenient and all, but didn't quite pertain to us. The stuff we had in our dimensional storages served to more or less satisfy all our needs.

As a result, Fran basically ended up just sitting down and taking it easy for a while.

We weren't bothered at all until about an hour passed, after which someone gave our door a knock.

「Excuse me.」

「Nn.」

「The fourth match has just begun. Your match will begin after the next one ends, so we would like to show you to a waiting room closer to the arena.」

It seemed like the tourney was a good bit ahead of schedule, so we decided to ask the staff what was up. Apparently, what'd happened was that Goldalfa had lived up to his reputation and ended his opponent in what was literally an instant.

Both the other matches, however, ended right around the 30 minute mark, and apparently not because they ran out of time. Most combatants naturally disliked having things decided by their bracelets, and so, they'd often pull off their biggest moves and decide things right before the match was forced to end.

We moved to the venue by taking an underground passageway with one of its entrances in the guild's basement. It seemed like a pretty good measure to take, as having more popular participants waltz right through the streets would probably lead to the populace kicking up a fuss.

The room we were moved to was, not surprisingly, yet another private room, one several orders of magnitude more luxurious than the one we'd been staying in at the guild. The sofa they had in the room was gorgeous, and the bed was seemingly filled to the brim with down.

「The fifth match has now begun, so we may end up calling for you at any moment now. Please make sure you're ready for us when your turn comes around.」

Fran dove straight into the super soft looking sofa and began enjoying it to its fullest.

After a moment's consideration, I realized that the match that was going on right now was the one between Kurusu and Radyer — which meant the explosions I'd been hearing from time to time were Radyer's spells. They were so loud that they even eclipsed the crowd's deafening cheers, which I actually had to strain my ears in order to catch.

Unlike me, who'd spent my time thinking about the match and whatnot, Fran had instead focused on relaxing. She'd leapt off the sofa, jumped onto the bed, and played on it with Urushi until an incredibly loud series of cheers resounded through the room.

『Sounds like the match's been decided.』

Given that realization, I strained my ears even further so I could hear the caster.

「And it's over! Despite popular speculation, Kurusu has taken the win!」

Wait, seriously? Kurusu won?

「Master, something wrong?」

I must've seemed really shocked, as Fran had immediately turned her head towards me in confusion.

『It's just that Kurusu's the one that ended up winning is all.』

「Kurusu?」

「Nn. Got it.」

It didn't take long for a guide to show up at our door after Kurusu's and Radyr's matches came to an end. Said guide not only led us over to the arena, but also handed us a Bracelet of Judgement along the way. Surprisingly, the bracelet didn't actually take up an accessory slot, so we didn't have to swap any of our stuff out.

The venue used for the main tournament was both gigantic and incredibly well lit. I called out to Fran on our way to the actual arena part because I was a bit worried as to whether or not she'd be nervous. Again, it turned out that my worries were completely needless, as Fran was in such a good mood that she'd actually been skipping along as we moved.

『Are you really not even the slightest bit nervous?』

「Nn!」

『Nice. Let's do this then.』

「Can't wait.」

『Make sure you stay in the shadows till after Fran gives the signal, alright Urushi?』

(Woof.)

The moment we entered the arena, we discovered that there were over ten times as many audience members present as there were during the secondary preliminary round.

They were so numerous that I found it incredibly difficult to discern individual comments anymore. There were so many different people cheering that the whole thing just kind of came off like a wave of sound.

「Mmph.」

The crowd's cheers roared at such high volume that Fran ended up grimacing and lowering her ears.

『You alright?』

「Nn... Alright used to it.」

Whew.

The sheer volume of the sound waves blasted at us made me understand that having sensitive hearing wasn't actually always a good thing. I didn't get how rabbitkin like Royce and basically anyone else with super sensitive hearing could actually manage to cope.

「And our contestants have arrived! In one corner we have a fair maiden whose strength betrays her looks, the youngest C ranked adventurer to date. Ladies and gentlemen, please, extend your welcomes to Block A's 11th contestant, Fran, the Magic Sword Girl!」

Fran slowly stepped up onto the stage with the caster's announcement as her cue. On top of it stood her opponent; he'd already been awaiting her arrival.

「Mmph.」

Her expression immediately stiffened the moment she saw him.

「And in the other corner, we have an incredible man with a mercenary band at his back. Put your hands together for one of the younger generation's most respected Blue Catkin: Blue Pride's Leader and Block A's 12th contestant, Zefmate, the Blue Strike!」

Fran's opponent was not only none other than one of the Blue Catkin she detested, but also Blue Pride's leader. Knowing that, she glared him, reached for me, and silently drew me from my sheath.

192. Zefmate

Chapter 192. Zefmate

Zefmate

Fran stared Zefmate down as the two stood across from each other at the arena's center.

「Hey there, heard you totally wrecked one of our guys.」

「...」

「Could you maybe do without the glare?」

「Fmph...」

Though it was in part because we were about to have to fight him anyways, Fran didn't bother concealing her naked hostility. She narrowed her eyes and stared in his direction without bothering to say a word. He, however, responded not with bloodlust, but instead with a perplexed, bitter smile.

「I had Seiz punished.」

「Nn?」

「I'm talking about the guy you beat during the second round of prelims.」

「Because lost to Black Catkin?」

「Nah. It was because he was far too rude. He shouldn't have said what he did even if it was just for provocation's sake. In fact, let me apologize for him. Sorry.」

Zefmate caused Fran's eyes to widen his shock as he gave her a prim and proper bow alongside an apology. She wasn't the only one to feel the way she did, I also ended up surprised as all hell.

The reason for my surprise was a bit different from Fran's. I'd popped the Principle of Falsehood because I thought he was trying to bullshit her to butter her up, but it turned out that his words hadn't been laced with lies; he speaking from his heart.

「Seiz won't be one of our execs for much longer. I'm planning to demote him because I feel that we really shouldn't be thinking of or treating Black Catkin the way we do.」

「Saying that even though Blue Catkin? Maybe not actually Blue Catkin? Something else?」

「Ahaha... I really am a Blue Catkin you know? Though, I guess I can see where you're coming from. I understand that you don't trust me, but I'd like to say that I don't approve of the slave trade, nor do I plan on looking down on you just because you're a Black Catkin.」

『Wow. He actually isn't lying. Everything he's said so far is true.』

(Huh? Telling joke?)

『I'm being serious. He really means what he says. His apology was genuine.』

My words prompted Fran to once again glare at Zefmate, this time, as if probing him. He, however, didn't mind. He simply stood there exactly as he had been despite her looking at him the way she was — which made sense. There was no reason for him to react any differently given that he'd been speaking the truth.

「Can't be trusted!」

It was a result that led Fran to flare up in agitation, an emotion I couldn't really blame her for feeling. To her, Zefmate was basically the equivalent of a mafia boss, and good natured mafia bosses were a concept limited to the realm of fiction. There was simply no way for one to exist in the real world given the nature of their work. Hence, the result of the Blue Catkin communicating his intentions to Fran had caused her to be stricken with bewilderment, which wasn't exactly what you'd call the best emotion to be feeling going into a duel.

『Calm down. You don't really need to think too hard about what he's said. It doesn't change the fact that we're going to need to beat him in battle.』

「Nn. Will attack first, think later.」

「Ready... Begin!」

Both Fran and Zefmate immediately began to act the moment the battle began.

「Haah!」

「Cheiyaaah!」

Fran gave into her frustration and launched an attack backed only by brute force. It was a bit crude and lacking in finesse, but more than powerful enough to end the match if it happened to land.

Zefmate defended against the strike by crossing his blades and blocking. He then began attempting to wrap his two swords around me in order to disarm her. The technique was stellar, but his attempt ended in failure for the sole reason that he wasn't capable of matching Fran in terms of pure power.

The fight turned into a series of back and forths after the initial clash; both combatants continued to swing their blades at one another in an attempt to get a hit in. Though Zefmate was armed with two swords, and Fran only one, she gradually gained an edge on him and began taking control of the battle's momentum. The reason she was able to suppress him wasn't just because of her strength stat, but also because she was simply more skilled in the way of the sword.

Realizing that he was at a disadvantage, Zefmate leapt a whole ten meters back and disengaged, an effect likely brought about by that Leopard's Paw skill of his. The sheer amount of momentum it gave him was so great that it rendered Fran unable to catch up and immediately assault him as he landed.

「You sure are strong.」

「Not too bad yourself?」

「Thanks. You being both a Black Catkin and as strong as you are really seems to prove my point. We Blue Catkin really have been wrong to look down on your kind.」

「First time... Meeting not scum Blue Catkin...」

Fran's emotions had finally settled, she managed to grasp the truth and accept it for what it was. The gaze she threw in his direction was no longer one filled with anger or hatred, but instead driven by curiosity. She had taken an interest in him.

「Ahahaha... Yeah... You're right... We Blue Catkin really do have to stop acting the way we do.」

Zefmate's laugh was dry, he seemed to be feeling both really depressed and somewhat awkward at the same time.

「Though I am still feeling apologetic, I won't be able to throw in the towel or let you have the match else risk harming my band's reputation. I'll still be winning this match of ours.」

「Right back at you.」

Fran took a stance. She kept her guard up despite smiling and seeming a bit curious as to what Zefmate would do.

The amount of magical energy dwelling within him began to skyrocket.

「Fuh... Awakening...!」

His muscles began to bulge and expand at an incredible rate the moment he muttered the skill's name. All visible parts of his skin were immediately covered by blue fur with black spots on it. His appearance warped into exactly what his race suggested — he became a blue leopard.

「We Blue Leopardkin are a species that specialize in enhancing our own bodies. You'd be best off not thinking of me as the same person you just exchanged blows with! Blink Strike Blade!」

「Gmph!」

Zefmate's attack almost seemed to be paired with an instant transmission, as he almost seemed to vanish, only to reappear right next to us as he delivered his blow. The strike was so fast that Fran was unable to counter, and forced into only blocking it.

「To think you'd block even the first strike...! Haaaah!」

The Awakening skill had boosted his strength stat by more than 30 and his agility by almost an entire 200. If one were to judge him based solely on his speed, he'd likely be classified as an A ranked adventurer. His assault was fearsome, and really ingrained into my mind just how much more powerful Beastkin became upon evolution.

Blink Strike Blade seemed to be the type of skill that boosted one's speed as one used it to attack. It, combined with Zefmate's innate high speed, made him so fast that we actually couldn't keep track of him with just our eyes. He seemed to be the most speed focused fighter we'd ever encountered to date.

He began using both Blink Step and Leopard's Paw to move around at super high speed in an attempt to throw us off while also attacking with Blink Strike Blade.

A ridiculous number of incredibly fast attacks came at us from every direction. If Zefmate were up against any weaker adventurer, he probably would've already completely torn his opponent to bits.

However, Fran wasn't what one could call a weaker adventurer. Thus, he hadn't even managed to get a single clean hit on her.

All that training we did had allowed Fran to grow much more accustomed to using her detection-based skills. Through their use, she was able to sense every single one of his moves — and that was all she needed. The fact that Fran could detect his attacks allowed her more than enough leeway to react to and defend against them.

「Impossible...!」

Fran's sheer ability had led Zefmate to panic. Though he stated he didn't look down on the Black Catkin race, he, as an evolved Beastkin, probably never even considered the possibility of losing to one in combat given that they weren't capable of evolving.

He must've simply thought that he, as an experienced veteran, would be able to trump Fran, a little girl, in all of stats, experience, skill quality, and skill quantity.

The Blue Leopardkin's attacks grew more frequent as he as he lost his cool. He stopped doing as many feints, and moved around much less between repeated offensives. His impatient attacks would've ended anyone that couldn't keep up him. But again, Fran could. As a result, his assault only grew duller. His strikes became monotone, repetitive, and predictable.

「Stone Wall」

「Gabahh!」

A low rising stone wall spawned in Zefmate's path as he closed in on Fran from behind.

The result mirrored exactly what would expect to see if a bike smashed into a guardrail at full speed; the impact of ramming into the wall caused Zefmate to go flying through the air.

「I was read like a book and baited!?!」

「Inferno Burst」

Fran fired a spell towards what I presumed to be the now defenseless Blue Leopardkin — only to have me realize that I'd been underestimating the effects of his Leopard's Paw, as Zefmate kicked the air and changed his trajectory to avoid the incoming flames. His actions had been so far out of the scope of my predictions that I even ended up unconsciously clicking my tongue.

『Tsk!』

I felt like the only reason I thought it was over was because I'd decided to leave everything to Fran. If I wasn't effectively functioning as a spectator with the best tickets in the house, I probably wouldn't have assumed that victory was assured even after Fran fired that supposedly final spell.

In other words, I wouldn't have let my guard down.

I would've instead acted as Fran did.

「Burnia」

「When did you!?!」

Fran had immediately started moving after firing off her attack. She used the flames she shot at Zefmate as cover, got around him, and approached him from the rear through the use of Fire Magic the moment he attempted to dodge the attack by using Leopard's Paw.

「Haaah!」

「Gaaaarrggh!」

Zefmate was fast, but so was Fran. She was capable of moving just as quickly as he was, even after he'd awakened.

To him, it must've felt like Fran had instantly teleported behind him, like someone had matched his speed. And that was something he didn't quite seem to be used to. He wasn't capable of properly defending himself from her assault.

All he managed was to throw the sword in his left and thrust the one in his right in order to retaliate.

Both attacks, done purely out of desperation, proved ineffective. The sword he thrust at Fran only barely managed to scratch her cheek, whereas the one he threw ended up getting tossed inside her dimensional storage.

Fran slashed her opponent's legs as she pushed him out of bounds. She could've just sent him flying, but chose to rob him of his mobility as well, just in case he somehow managed to recover. Without his speed, Zefmate was sure to lose.

As a result, Zefmate had lost one of his legs, and with it, his sense of balance. He was unable to steady himself, and ended up falling outside the arena's boundaries.

「Its over! It's over!! I can't even tell what happened! Ladies and gentlemen, that, what we just saw was merely one of the tournament first rounds! Can you believe it!? Both combatants were moving so quickly I wasn't able to tell what either was doing!」

The fact that both Fran and Zefmate had dashed around as quickly as A rankers had caused the caster to start screaming in excitement.

「And our winner today is Fran, the Magic Sword Girl! Her victory has set a new record! She, as a 12 year old, has become the youngest contestant to ever win one of the tournament's rounds!」

193. Seren

Chapter 193. Seren

Seren

We weren't left to our own devices until after we were led back through the underground passageway we used to get to the arena. The guide informed that our next match was scheduled to take place two days from now and that we'd have to arrive just as early in the morning as we had for this one. We were also told that we were pretty much allowed to do whatever we wanted in the meantime.

『So, what now?』

(Will spectate.)

『Hey, that's a pretty good idea. We might make it in time for Colbert's match if we rush over.』

(Nn. Want to see other matches too.)

Fran mentioning that she wanted to spectate the other combatant's matches made me realize that we'd never actually had the chance to actually just sit down and watch other people fight.

I figured doing so would actually work to Fran's benefit. It'd allow her to see things from a whole new perspective, which, in turn, could probably allow her to learn a new trick or two.

『Alright, let's go.』

(Nn.)

Fran turned to leave the guild and head towards the arena, but was stopped by the guide before actually setting off.

「Were you intending on watching any of the remaining matches?」

「Nn. Planned to.」

「In that case, I recommend you wear some sort of disguise. The other spectators might make a fuss if they see you, especially since your match just ended and is still fresh in everyone's minds.」

The clerk's advice was spot on. Most of the spectators present for Fran's fight were probably still at the arena, and there was fair chance they'd be able to recognize her on sight if she didn't keep her face hidden. Some of the spectators might've lost a fair bit of money because of her, and getting involved with them sounded like a pretty bad idea if you asked me. The same applied to people that were overly interested in her. Actively avoiding pedophiles interested in her sounded like something that we'd probably benefit from doing.

「Then will put on disguise.」

「Please do.」

That said, we probably weren't actually going to disguise ourselves too much. A quick change of attire seemed like it would probably be enough to do the job so long as we popped all our stealth based skills.

As such, all Fran did before heading towards the arena was throwing on a cloak. The tourney's contestants were allowed to enter through the back door, so she did. The guard responsible for watching it ended up not only letting Fran in, but also giving her a salute of the highest order immediately after seeing her guild card.

The place was packed. It didn't look like we were going to be able to find a place to sit.

『Looks like there's one spot free over there.』

But fortunately, I did happen to spot a single empty seat.

「Nn.」

The seat wasn't broken or anything, so we were pretty confused as to why it was empty, and remained so until just after Fran sat herself down.

「Oi, where the hell do you think you're sittin'?」

「Nn?」

「Move brat, that seat's taken.」

「That seat's for our bro!」

There were a bunch of tough looking dudes sitting right next to us. They seemed to have been chasing off everyone that tried to take the seat.

A quick appraisal allowed me to understand that they were basically a few of Ulmutt's local thugs. They tried to scare Fran away, but completely failed given that she was used to dealing with people much more intimidating than they were. The fact that they were annoying basically made it so we didn't mind depriving them of their seats.

「Stun Bolt」

「Gyah!」

「Higgiii!」

「Orpghh!」

Fran stunned all three thugs and threw them into the aisle.

「Urushi.」

「Woof.」

The people in our surroundings immediately stood up in surprise the moment they spotted Urushi, but Fran ignored them and loaded his back with two of the men while the wolf grabbed the third with his mouth.

「Ruff.」

Fran saw Urushi off and then sat down, which, in turn, also caused the people around us to return to their seats. They didn't bother talking to her though, seeing as how they likely thought that doing so would bring trouble, which, to us, was pretty much the best possible outcome.

Nothing in particular happened thereafter. We watched the remaining matches in peace.

Unfortunately, we weren't able to gain too much from watching Colbert's or Amanda's matches, as both ended their opponents in an instant.

The match between Erza and Charlotte was actually quite worth mentioning. The crowd had really cheered for the latter as she danced, but she was unfortunately too weak to take down Erza.

She managed to start dancing in a rather bewitching manner, but her moves were cut short, as she ended up having to fight a desperate, one sided struggle in order to dodge Erza's mace. In the end, she ended up getting grabbed by the nape of her neck and chunked out of the ring.

Though we didn't learn much about Amanda or Colbert, we were still at least capable of learning a few neat ways to apply certain skills, ways we never would've thought up ourselves, even in our wildest dreams.

One of the more interesting combatants was a thief that buffed his opponent's sense of smell and then started throwing stink bombs and other foul smelling shit. The takeaway we got from that wasn't his technique itself, but rather the concept of buffing one's opponent and then turning that buffed stat into some sort of disadvantage.

We'd also learned just how one was actually supposed to use Lava Magic in combat. The mage we saw use it not only melted his opponent's weapons, but also superheated the ground for the sake of zone control. It was a magic that really allowed its user to take advantage of an opponent's weakness. Learning more about its applications really made me really consider leveling it up.

The sun had started to set by the time the day's matches had come to an end.

『Looks like it's about time for us to start heading home.』

「Nn...」

『Did you want to go somewhere instead, or?』

「Still have Zefmate's sword.」

Right. I'd almost forgot that we were still holding onto Zefmate's Blue Dragon Fang Shortsword. It was a pretty strong weapon, and honestly seemed to be on the more expensive side.

『We should probably give it back to him.』

「Nn.」

We didn't exactly think well of Blue Pride, but Zefmate himself didn't seem too bad. In fact, I'd honestly had to say I thought him to be a pretty good guy. Plus, giving it back to him probably wouldn't take that much time, so it wasn't like doing it would be detrimental.

『Hey Urushi, do you still remember Zefmate's scent?』

「Woof!」

The operation was a go, and so, we had Urushi lead us over.

All in all, we spent about 20 minutes walking, after which we arrived at the city's outskirts. There weren't many houses around. The place was practically a large open field.

『Is this it?』

「Woof.」

Set up on that large field were a whole bunch of tents. It seemed Blue Pride had chosen to camp out instead of staying at an inn, as renting out rooms for all their members would be a pretty sizeable expense. Plus, camping out wasn't really that tough on the mercenary band's members anyways, seeing as how they were all fighters and whatnot.

I soon realized, however, that there was a bit of an issue. We weren't really too sure how we were supposed to get to Zefmate. We couldn't just waltz right through the camp seeing as how his band's members would probably end up spotting us and kicking up a fuss.

Maybe I could create a doppelganger and deliver the sword that way?

My brooding was interrupted as one of Blue Pride's executives ended up exiting their tent and spotting us.

「Ah! It's you!」

The person that'd caught sight of us was one I recognized, the stuck up, 17-18 year old girl we met in front of Aurel's manor.

「Who?」

「I'm Seren, Blue Pride's second in command.」

「Nn. Fran.」

「Yeah, I know. You're the one that's completely played our band for fools. Why are you here?」

「Returning this.」

「That's... my brother's sword! You thief!」

Seren immediately began giving off an aura of hostility.

Wait, did she just call Zefmate her brother? I guess that'd be why she gets treated as the band's second in command.

「Just how did a little Black Catkin girl like you manage to beat him in the first place!?!」

「Nn? Strength.」

「Stop lying! Black Catkin are famous for how weak they are! There's no way you could ever be stronger than my brother! You must've done something underhanded or cheated!」

「Didn't.」

「There's no way you didn't! There's no other way he could've possibly lost to a Black Catkin!」

Seren stamped her feet on the ground and threw a tantrum in a childlike manner unbecoming her age. She didn't seem to share Zefmate's views despite being his little sister.

「Ugh! Fine, whatever! If you want me to forgive you for being a cheater, go to the Adventurer's Guild, tell them you cheated, and make them let my brother take your place!」

Fran's eyes narrowed a bit because of how ungrateful Seren was acting.

「Refuse...」

The black catgirl's mood was getting worse by the moment. She'd visited because she wanted to see Zefmate, not because she'd wanted to deal with this shit.

「Haaah!? What are you saying? I was offering to go out of my way to forgive you for cheating. You're supposed to thank me, not give me attitude!」

I was starting to doubt whether or not Seren was really Zefmate's younger sister. Their temperaments were... a little too different.

「Oh come on! This is why I can't stand you stupid black catkin! I'm telling you to know your place!」

「...」

「Why are you looking at me like that? I'll never forgive you if you refuse! Do you know what that'll mean?」

「Don't.」

Fran responded in an irritated tone; she was only barely managing to not to lash out because Seren was Zefmate's sister. Her efforts were praiseworthy, but and she did manage to hold on, but it definitely wasn't something that could last too much longer.

「Hmph. You Wimp Catkin only remain free because we Blue Catkin allow you to. If you refuse to forfeit, then we'll not only capture and enslave you, but every other Black Catkin out there!」

Ah, she said the word. RIP Fran's self control.

Seren had pushed Fran all the way to her boiling point; my wielder was as angry as she had been when Dias told her about Kiara. There was actually already no more helping Seren. Fran was going to kill her, and if worse came to worst, the entirety of Blue Pride would likely follow in her footsteps. I kinda felt bad for Zefmate, but it seemed to us that his followers were all your everyday average Blue Catkin. And if we were going to kill Seren, then wiping the rest of them out was probably for the better. They'd likely demand revenge if we didn't bother tying up all our loose ends.

Fran didn't say a thing. She simply drew me and attacked the girl in front of her eyes. The attack wasn't a well refined one. All Fran was doing was just lashing out in anger. Still, her strike contained more than enough power to reap the other girl's life.

But my blade never reached her.

Instead, it cleaved the flesh of another.

「Gafuuhhh....」

「Z-Zefmate!」

Zefmate had dashed between Fran and Seren so he could function as a meatshield and tank the hit; my blade smashed through his collarbone and dug all the way down into his lungs.

Fran had just tried killing his sister, but, despite that, Zefmate's glare fell not on her, but on person he'd been trying to protect.

「What... are you saying...Seren...?」

「Zefmate!? Are you okay!? What the hell did you just do to my brother!? I swear I'll never forgive you, or your kind! I'll wipe out every single last Bl-」

「Stop it...!」

「Kyah!」

The Blue Leopardkin slapped his little sister across the face shortly after she began cursing at Fran.

He didn't bother treating his wound, and instead just immediately prostrated himself before the person that had just mortally wounded him in an attempt to apologize.

「I'm... sorry... my sister... didn't mean it...」

「Don't... care...」

Despite that, Fran's response wasn't a favourable one. She'd been pushed way past the limit of what she could bear. Her anger could no longer be abated by a mere apology.

「I swear... I won't... ever let her... say something like that... ever again! I'll... re-educate all... my troops... and exile the ones that won't listen... no... I'll even force them... into slavery...!」

Zefmate knew that something like mere banishment wouldn't be enough to calm Fran down. It was too half-hearted. And so, he even offered to voluntarily sell his own blood related sister into slavery.

His battle with Fran had caused him to realize that she was way out of his league, and that she might end up slaughtering every single last one of Blue Pride's members if he didn't manage to influence her mood..

「Wait, what are you saying? She's just a-」

「Shut... Up...」

Zefmate clobbered Seren, knocked her unconscious and caused her to collapse on the spot.

「I'm... really sorry...」

His injuries were serious. He was on the verge of death, but he completely ignored his own safety and only continued to apologize.

I sensed the people that lay within their tents begin to move.

『Well, Fran, what do you say? More people'll start showing up if you don't make up your mind fast.』

「I'm... sorry...」

「...」

『I'll have your back regardless of what choice you make, so don't hold back. Do whatever you want.』

「...」

Fran hesitated.

「Greater Heal.」

She couldn't make up her mind immediately; it took her a few moments, but ended up deciding against completely obliterating every Blue Catkin present. She didn't trust them. In fact, she hated them, but her impression of Zefmate was a good one and she didn't think he deserved to die.

「Will be back another day. If no changes by then, will take action.」

「Thank you so much!」

Sensing the fury that lay within, Zefmate dropped to his knees and thanked Fran for her mercy.

194. Golden Flames

Chapter 194. Golden Flames

Golden Flames

『You sure you're okay with letting them off?』

「Didn't let off. Just gave time.」

『Well, alright, so long as that's really what you wanted.』

Fran began walking around town immediately after leaving Blue Pride's campsite. The mood she was in was nothing short of terrible.

Zefmate had been a pretty good guy. Fran had felt that she might've been able to get along with him despite their races, and by meeting him, she'd learned that not all Blue Catkin were scumbags. Coming to know that had caused her to really want to become his friend. However, the circumstances had made Fran's desire extremely difficult to achieve. Zefmate had been an exception. None of his underlings shared his mentality, which in turn meant that the two could potentially end up at each other's throats.

There was a chance Fran would have to kill Zefmate in the near future.

To Fran, Seren's words had been nothing but offensive. They were so sick and twisted that they'd even gotten to my head, so I could only imagine the extent of the rage that dwelled within her. Neither of us could stand the attitude that most Blue Catkin had, and we probably would've murdered every single one present if Zefmate had been even a second later.

The things that'd been said to her continued plaguing her mind even now. They caused her darker emotions to swell and whirl around within. I hoped that she wouldn't encounter anyone that'd piss her off, as she'd probably end up losing control if she was to be encouraged to attack them.

Fortunately, there wasn't anyone stupid enough to do so given that her aura reflected her thoughts; she was emanating an air of pure danger, one that forced the people around us to look the other way.

She wandered around like that for about twenty minutes before suddenly turning heel right as she felt an incredible amount of magical energy burst out from behind her.

『I can sense the...』

「...Beast Lord?」

Its source was Blue Pride's campsite, but it was so potent that we could measure the extent of its power from all the way back in town.

Sensing it had caused Fran to immediately begin dashing, not away from, but towards it.

The only person capable of giving off that much pressure was the Beast Lord. There wasn't anyone else that possessed such a ridiculous amount of strength. Moreover, we didn't even need to be present to tell that he wasn't just training; his magic was laced with bloodlust.

Something had happened.

Fran had no idea what we'd be able to accomplish by rushing over to Blue Pride's campground, but continued to pump her legs as hard as she could regardless. It was something that couldn't be helped given the circumstances. All we knew was that something had happened, something that involved both Zefmate, who Fran had a good impression of, and the Beast Lord, who she feared.

『Hey Fran, are you sure this is a good idea? I'm pretty sure you're heading straight for the Beast Lord.』

「Nn...!」

Getting to Blue Pride's campground took less than 2 minutes at Fran's full speed.

「Hah...Hah...!」

『I knew it. The Beast Lord really was here.』

The first thing we saw upon arriving was the Beast Lord. He calmly stood smack in the middle of the camp, his body cloaked in golden flames. The second was Zefmate, collapsed on the ground, charred black, and clearly on the verge of death.

「This is what you get for defying me, idiot. Whatever, I've had enough of you. Just die already.」

The Beast Lord reached towards Zefmate with his flame covered right hand — an action that prompted Fran to react without the slightest bit of hesitation.

「Master, engaging!」

She went on the offense without so much as even waiting for me to reply; she drew me in her right, popped Deathgaze into her left, and shot towards the Beast Lord as would a bullet. The slashing attack that came out of the action was one as swift as the strike she'd used to assault Rynford; it was one that combined all her skills and knowledge, stealth-based skills included.

Rigdis, the Beast Lord, wasn't all that proficiency when it came to detection. Rather, he was, but his wasn't nearly as skilled at it as we'd expected the average S ranker to be. That, in turn, made it difficult for him to pick up on Fran's sneak attack.

Ambushing the Beast Lord was a much better choice than calling out to him. Rigdis could always just ignore her and end Zefmate anyways, so attacking was, in fact, the most reliable option to go with if we wanted to save Zefmate's life. Besides, yelling at him to stop would mean announcing to him Fran's presence, which in turn meant losing the opportunity to get an initial first strike in. All that, of course, was only valid under the assumption that we would end up having to fight the Beast Lord anyways.

It was a choice only made possible by the fact that Fran had already resolved herself to fight him. For that reason, her blade held not even the slightest shred of hesitation.

She ended up going for his neck in hopes of ending him right off the bat; her goal was to disable him in a single strike. She didn't care about incurring the wrath of an entire country, nor did she give half a flying fuck about the international uproar that attacking the him would lead to. The only thing that she bothered considering was what she needed to do to save Zefmate's life.

We didn't have to worry about holding back, the Beast Lord's Sacrificial Bracelet would prevent us from murdering him regardless of what we did to him. Though we were willing to engage the Beast Lord in combat, actually flat out killing him was something I wanted to avoid, as it'd put us a bit more than just neck deep in serious ass international shit. Attacking him was still a problem in and of itself, but, it was still a significant bit better than actually lopping his head off. You could say that we were only capable of going all out in our assault precisely because the Beast Lord happened to have a Sacrificial Bracelet on hand and equipped.

I was convinced that not even someone like the Beast Lord would be able to act if he was in a state terrible enough for him to actually need to pop a Sacrificial Bracelet, so I figured we'd be able to grab Zefmate and fall back before he managed to retaliate.

What Fran was doing was dangerous. That much, I understood. I knew that teleporting away and leaving Zefmate to die would've been in the interest of her safety.

But that wasn't something the person in question herself would be able to accept. If I really had been totally concerned about nothing but Fran's safety, I would've long advised her to take up a job less dangerous than adventuring. But I hadn't. That was in part because I wanted to go out and see the world with her, but wanting to adventure wasn't really why I'd chosen not to bother convincing her to change her mind. The other, more important reason was because I wanted to abide by her will. Fran wanted to be an adventurer, and that was that.

As Fran's guardian, it was naturally important for me to try to keep her as safe as possible. That was simply what being someone's guardian entailed.

But I wasn't just her guardian, I was also her sword. Thus, I needed to do utmost to fulfill her wishes, even if those wishes involved something as dangerous as jumping straight off a cliff.

As her sword, I'd already decided to follow right in her footsteps if she was to ever make that type of decision. And as her guardian, I'd decided to protect her to the best of my abilities regardless the of what the consequences of her choices were.

In other words, my role was support Fran in her decisions every step of way so long as it remained possible for me to do so.

The Black Catkin girl swung both her blades to form a cross the moment she closed in on the Beast Lord. His defenses were ridiculously high, but we figured we'd be able to pierce them so long as we focused everything we had on a single point. The two swords that closed in on the Beast Lord's neck... failed to do anything to him at all.

Fran, both blades still drawn, stared at the uninjured Beast Lord with a look of bewilderment. She hadn't felt any resistance when slashing at him, so she didn't realize what'd happened until she looked down to my blade.

「Haah? Who the fuck are you?」

We'd successfully managed to stop the Beast Lord from slaying Zefmate, but Fran had fallen onto his radar as a result.

Fran lacked the composure to answer the Beast Lord's question. She instead stared at the two hilts in her hands.

Hilts.

Both her swords had lost their blades. In fact, Deathgaze was flat out done for, as all its magical energy had already drained out from within it. Even the Black Cat's Mantle, which happened to have gotten a bit singed, was acting abnormally. That is, it was repairing itself at a much slower rate than usual. You almost couldn't actually tell that it actually worked based on visuals alone.

The catgirl didn't understand what was going on.

But I did.

The reason Deathgaze and I had lost our blades was because we touched the golden flames that cloaked the Beast Lord's body. We both basically evaporated the moment we did. The flames didn't radiate any heat, but holy shit they were potent. The lack of consistency between the two facts was one only made possible because the golden conflagration was born of a skill.

「Master!」

「Hah? Master? You're this damned Blue Catkin's disciple?」

『Calm down Fran, I'm fine. Don't shout or throw a fuss. Just talk to me through telepathy, same as usual.』

(Whew...)

Fortunately, my blade was the only thing that ended up getting burnt off, so I was still fine and not yet irreparable. Unfortunately, the magical flames had robbed me of so much mana that I no longer contained any more than Deathgaze normally did.

『Man, this is looking pretty bad...』

Attacking the Beast Lord had caused me to come to understand that his flames functioned as an automated self-defense mechanism. They were that powerful even when just left in full auto mode.

I couldn't really see myself successfully fending them off in the case that he used them to attack.

「Oh come on kid. Answer me already. Don't just sit there with your mouth shut.」

「Did... what to Zefmate?」

「Heh, responding to a question with another quest? You ain't got no manners, Black Catkin.」

Being taunted by the Beast Lord caused Fran to grind her teeth in anger, but she ultimately ended up suppressing it and asking him a question regardless.

「Tried to kill Zefmate. Why...?」

「The fuck? Is something wrong with your ears? Did you actually not hear me? Ah, well, whatever. Fine, I'll talk. All I was doing was punishing a subordinate real quick.」

The Beast Lord's word seemed to insinuate that Blue Pride worked under him, and that Zefmate had done something that'd gone against his orders. Was it because Zefmate was pro-black catkin? Did that mean that the Beast Lord was anti-black catkin?

「So I take it you're siding with him? Even though you're a Black Catkin?」

「...Nn.」

「Huh, alright. Hey, you've got a pretty interesting sword right there. Whole thing just instantly fixed itself.」

I managed to fix my blade by using Instant Regeneration, but that didn't mean I'd actually be of much use from an offensive standpoint given the Golden Flames' effects. It looked like we were going to have to end up falling back on magic.

The Beast Lord's element was fire, so we would probably need to counter him with either water or ice/snow. We couldn't afford to be stingy with our skill points, I needed to invest them right away so we could make the most of our situation.

「Fran... Don't...」

「Will save now, Zefmate.」

「Hahahah! What is this? A Black Catkin and a Blue Catkin acting all buddy buddy? Man, that's so funny it actually makes me kinda pity you guys!」

「Shut... up...」

「Man, you're still giving me that attitude? What a shame, I had some pretty high hopes for you. Alright girly, I'll show you just how terrifying I, Rigdis Narasimha, the Beast Lord, can be. Lament the fact that you were stupid enough to oppose me!」

The golden flames that enveloped the Beast Lord's body began to quiver and sway with a ferocious energy.

They were dangerous. It'd all be over if they so much as grazed us.

I got myself ready to teleport us out at a moment's notice.

Fran and the Beast lord stared each other down, both ready to immediately attack the other.

But they were denied the chance to act.

「Your Majesty! What in God's name are you doing?」

「Ugh... You again, Roche...?」

「How did this even happen? I only took my eyes off you for a second!」

A man I immediately recognized as the carriage's coachman suddenly joined into the conversation and began chiding the Beast Lord in a reprimanding tone.

Roche was a sort of hunter, specifically the jack of all trades type that could use magic in tandem with more traditional scout-like skills.

「I really can't believe you... Why are you fighting a Black Catkin of all things? Have you completely forgotten why we came here in the first place?」

「Blame it on her, not me. She's the one that decided to side with Blue Pride.」

「That doesn't mean you need to fight her, you muscle brain!」

「That's enough for now, Roche. Lord Rig, I've captured every member of Blue Pride that happened to have a hand in the slave trade and disposed of those that resisted.」

Royce calmed Roche down while simultaneously reporting in.

Wait, did he just say he dealt with the everyone that had a hand in the slave trade? Uh... what?

195. The Beast Lord and the Blue Cat Tribe

Chapter 195. The Beast Lord and the Blue Cat Tribe

The Beast Lord and the Blue Cat Tribe

Rigdis had already lost the will to fight. Likewise, Fran had done the same despite still being on guard. The reason for her sudden change in attitude was because Royce, one of the Beast Lord's guards, had started healing Zefmate.

「Explain situation?」

「Your Majesty, did you perhaps forget to inform her as to the current circumstances?」

Roche immediately began questioning the Beast Lord's actions, or rather, the likely lack thereof.

「Uhh....」

「Hah... Let me guess. You provoked her by acting in your usual cocky manner without actually telling her what had happened?」

「Hmph...」

「Do you have any injuries, young lady?」

「...None.」

「That's good. So, exactly what kind of relationship do you have with Blue Pride?」

「Zefmate... Friends. Hate rest.」

「Ah, I understand now. As for your, Your Majesty...」

「I know, I get it already. My bad, alright?」

「So? Why wanted to kill Zefmate?」

「'Cause he tried to protect his buddies.」

「Hah... Allow me to explain.」

Roche gave us a detailed explanation of exactly what had happened.

Much to our surprise, Rigdis was against the enslavement of Black Catkin. In fact, he'd been going around freeing as many Black Catkin slaves as he happened across.

That precise action had caused an ideological rift to form between him and his father. The rift was so vast that he'd almost gotten disowned, so he ended up organising a coup d'état, murdering his father, and claiming the throne with his own two hands.

It was an act that he'd always suspected he might need to perform, and to that end, he'd joined the Adventurer's Guild, tempered his body, and secretly built up his connections. The only reason his coup had gone as smoothly as it did was because he'd managed to make every single last one of the Beast Kingdom's A or higher ranked adventurers into his subordinates.

Upon his ascension to the throne, Rigdis had promptly purged all of the spies and slave merchants formerly connected to the royal family. He'd then gone out on a mission in order to find all slave merchants outside the bounds of his country so he could free every single last Black Catkin that remained in captivity.

「But fought Zefmate? Why?」

If that really were the case, then him fighting Zefmate didn't really make sense. The two seemed like they'd get along from an ideological standpoint.

Or at least it did until one considered that Blue Pride was effectively Zefmate's family. He couldn't assent to allowing the Beast Lord to murder any of its members, even if they happened to betray his ideals. The Blue Leopardkin had ended up begging Rigdis to let Blue Pride's members keep their lives so he could rehabilitate them and fix their ways.

As the Beast Lord was rather short tempered, he ended up flaring up in anger and engaging Zefmate in combat upon hearing what he could only interpret as an excuse. That was when Fran had thrown herself into the equation.

Hearing the Beast Lord's side of things made me realize something. His manner of speech was crude, but he'd never actually said anything to belittle the Black Cat Tribe as a whole.

He had said, "So I take it you're siding with him? Even though you're a Black Catkin?" not because he wanted to insult Fran, but because he thought it was odd for a Black Catkin to want to side with the type of people that sold their kind into slavery.

The same pretty applied to when he'd said, "Hahahah! What is this? A Black Catkin and a Blue Catkin acting all buddy buddy? Man, that's so funny it actually makes me kinda pity you guys!" It came off like a sort of cheap provocation, but was actually far from it. He hadn't actually meant to insult the Black Cat tribe in any which way..

The Beast Lord's intentions were further evidenced by how subordinates had ended up capturing Blue Pride's members while we were attempting to engage him in combat.

「Fuck...!」

Zefmate groaned remorsefully.

「Hate me all you want. Just know that this is your own fault. I told all you Blue Catkin to stop with the slavery shit already, but your underlings ignored my orders and kept their black market dealings going anyways. And you didn't even notice. Seriously man, that one's all on you.」

「I... know...」

A fair bit of Zefmate's regret stemmed precisely from the fact that he understood that he'd failed. He would've been able to avoid this whole mess had he just kept a tighter leash on his subordinates.

「How many... are still alive?」

「Approximately twenty, I believe.」

「Only twenty...」

「Lord Rig, I've found the pair behind the whole incident.」

Goldalfa entered the scene with a pair of Blue Catkin in tow. And when I said in tow, I meant they were literally in tow. He was dragging them along the ground with the very same piece of rope their hands were tied by.

「These two are both connected to the Slavery Syndicate your predecessor managed.」

「Sennek, Tord, were you two really responsible for manipulating everyone into doing all this?」

「Hmph! Why the hell should we care about Black Catkin? Why do we have to go through all this for just turning them into slaves? They can't even evolve!」

「Yeah, I know right! All we were doing was making use out of an otherwise useless bunch!」

The two old Blue Catkin spouted off bold claim after bold claim.

Both were members of the many mercenary groups that'd come together to create Blue Pride. They'd functioned as something along the lines of consultants ever since the new organisation's formation. They'd always been in positions of power within every band they'd ever been a part of, and thus, managed to use them in order to engage in the underground slave market.

The two had intentionally raised Zefmate to feel repulsed by the slave trade. They'd done so because it then made it easier for them to fool those that they wished to hide the true nature of their business from. His sister, on the other hand, had been brought up in the exact opposite manner. The two had effectively brainwashed her to have her current scumbag-like mindset.

The Blue Leopardkin likely would have been able to notice that something about his band of mercenaries was off had the two not constantly been one or two steps ahead of him — they'd trained him to not only be pure of heart, but also the type of person that wouldn't doubt his comrades.

「But I guess we went a bit too far. We trained you so well you became unable to shake that stupid sense of justice of yours.」

Sennek attempted to mock Zefmate, but was hit right in his sore spot by Rigdis in retaliation.

「Says a no-tail.」

「How dare you!」

(Long-tailed beastkin without tail.)

Longer tailed beastkin species put great importance on keeping one's tail, as losing it typically implied cowardice. Thus, those that were supposed to have tails but didn't were mocked as no-tails.

It normally wasn't too much of an issue as one could recover a chopped off tail so long as it was immediately treated with either magic or potions, but, in cases where one's injuries were more severe, priority was instead given to the limbs and whatnot. As a result, those with a lesser degree of access to healing would end up permanently losing their tails.

The old man known as Sennek appeared to be precisely someone that'd ended up in that kind of scenario. I'd thought that he'd just hidden his tail away in his pants, but apparently that simply wasn't something that long tailed Beastkin with tails would actually do for reasons I failed to intuit.

Getting called out by the Beast Lord had, for some odd reason, caused Sennek to glare in Fran's direction.

「I would still have my tail if not for you meddling Black Catkin...!」

「Nn?」

「Fuck! How dare you look down on me like that? And with a face that looks just like that annoying brat's to boot!?!」

「Brat?」

「Yeah, fuck her! Fuck Kiara for taking my god damned tail! And fuck you for looking just like her!」

「Know Kiara?」

「Of course I fucking do! Fuck her to hell!」

It seemed Sennek hated the Black Cat Tribe because Kiara had caused him to hold some sort of grudge. That, in turn, explained why he'd purposefully raised all the Blue Catkin around him to see Black Catkin the way they did.

「But you know what, it's fine. I don't care anymore, because that bitch got sent right off to the Beast Lord! Hah! Probably got turned into a slave and forced into a straight up living hell alright. Gyahahahah! Bitch got right what was coming to her!」

Fran immediately approached Sennek with me drawn and in hand.

『Wait, Fran! Hold on! Don't kill him!』

Ending his life here and now seemed like an act that could potentially anger the Beast Lord and his bros. To them, Sennek still had value, as he likely knew about others that worked in his trade.

Convinced, Fran sheathed me and instead started pummeling both men with her fists. I realized that she'd went too far by the time their already old, twisted faces had ended up even more deformed and bent out of shape than they were before. I figured it'd be best for me to stop her, but the Beast Lord actually beat me to the punch.

「Hold on kid. Hey, you assholes. When you said Kiara, did you mean the old lady? You know, Grandma Kiara?」

196. Kiara's After Story

Chapter 196. Kiara's After Story

Kiara's After Story

「Hold on kid. Hey, you assholes. When you said Kiara, did you mean the old lady? You know, Grandma Kiara?」

The Beast Lord's inquiry caused Sennec to respond in a bit of a suspicious tone.

「Grandma Kiara?」

「She's taciturn, blunt, and proud, but a ridiculously skilled Black Catkin swordsman nonetheless. I know she's an old lady, but I can't remember how old. You happen to know off the top of your head, Royce?」

「Lord Rig, asking for our master's age is no different from tying yourself a noose.」

「How 'bout you, Gold?」

「I'm pretty sure she's in her late 60's.」

Goldalfa's response seemed to match with what we knew about Kiara. She was 15 years old 53 years ago, so she should currently be around 68.

「Based on what we've heard, I'd say the Kiara you guys are talking about is our master.」

It seemed that, unless I was misunderstanding things, Kiara was actually the person that'd taught Beast Lord to fight. Fran had come to the same conclusion, so she ended up closing in on him in order to demand a clearer answer.

「Explain circumstances.」

「You do know I'm the Beast Lord, right? How about 'bout you reword that a bit so it's more polite.」

「Explain.」

「Oh god damn it. Fine!」

The Beast Lord began fondly speaking of his memories shortly after one last expression of indignance.

Apparently, the first time Rigdis met Kiara was in the earlier days of his youth. Back then, she'd been a slave that served the imperial court. Her duties mostly focused around garbage disposal. At the time, he'd still been like any other young, mischievous Beastkin. That is, he thought the Black Catkin to be inferior, as per his father's wishes.

But that all came to change. His opinion of the race took a complete 180 degree turn not too long after he turned seven.

An incident occurred.

A summoner from a hostile nation managed to summon a magic beast in the royal palace. Back then, the Beast Kingdom had been at war with a neighbouring country, hence, most of the palace's more competent fighters had been sent to the battlefield. As the guards and soldiers responsible for the palace were relatively weak, the place was basically instantly overrun. Both Goldalfa, who'd just enlisted, and Royce, who'd only just started learning magic, had been dealt serious wounds.

The situation looked grim. None of the troops left within the palace's confines were capable of dealing with the Tyrant Saber Tiger that'd invaded it. To Rigdis, it had seemed like he was left no choice but to abandon the palace.

Or at least that was how he felt until she took action.

A Black Catkin slave ended up doing what none of the soldiers could and took down the Magic Beast. The Tyrant Saber Tiger itself wasn't a particularly strong one, it was still young, and yet to reach maturity, but it was still a C rank threat regardless.

Thus, he simply failed to process the fact that she'd easily slain it while armed with only a mop.

Bearing witness to the Black Catkin slave's technique had caused Rigdis to take interest in her. He snuck around and eventually managed to speak to her, only to find that she was named Kiara, and that she had a blunt, straightforward personality. At the time, Rigdis hadn't had any friends, so he immediately grew attached to her.

The mix of his attachment to and admiration for her caused him to ask her to take him as her disciple, and so, she soon began teaching him the art of combat.

Her instruction was ridiculously tough, but proved more than effective as it caused Rigdis to become much stronger in a fairly short period of time. Noticing his rapid progress, both Goldalfa and Royce followed his example and became Kiara's disciples.

Since Kiara couldn't be seen instructing the group in public, they were forced to train in a secluded area away from the public's eyes. Specifically, the location they made their own was the garbage disposal site, a place that smelled so awful it automatically warded off any and all unwelcome visitors.

Rigdis had offered Kiara freedom, but she firmly refused it. His father had threatened her and told her that he would murder her tribesman should she escape.

The only reason Rigdis' father had let her live was because he'd suspected that she would come of use in the future.

Learning of her circumstances caused Rigdis to begin wondering why the Black Catkin were treated as they were. He started to investigate the mysteries surrounding their inability to evolve while also functioning to protect them.

Upon reaching adulthood, Rigdis was informed of a secret known only to the royal family's members, a piece of information that revealed why his predecessors regarded Black Catkin the way they did. With said secret, he also learned the reason why the Black Cat Tribe's members had become incapable of evolution.

「My old man told me everything because he wanted to open my eyes to his cause. Wanted to tell me to stop doing something as stupid as protecting Black Catkin.」

But it didn't work. In fact, telling Rigdis the truth had the opposite effect his father had been hoping for, as, to him, the truth simply reinforced the idea that looking down upon the Black Cat Tribe was nothing short of a mistake.

Thus, Rigdis and his father ended up in conflict for many years, with the former eventually beating out the latter through a coup.

(Master?)

『Doesn't look like he's lying.』

Something this important obviously called for verification through the Principle of Falsehood. Using it allowed me to determine that the Beast Lord's words were almost entirely free of lies. The only times my lie detector ever went off was when he insulted Kiara or called her by a nickname that made it seem like he didn't respect her. Conversely, it didn't go off when he referred to her as his master. In other words, all the Principle of Falsehood had done was inform us that the Beast Lord was a veritable tsundere. [1]

「Kiara, doing what now?」

「Our master has gotten old, so she's effectively retired and just living within the castle. She spends most of her time sleeping, but will occasionally see to our soldiers if she feels up to the job.」

Royce followed up the Beast Lord as he paused to take a breath.

「The royal palace has moved on from looking down on Black Catkin. None of the people that work and live within it are willing to insult them any longer.」

「That's impossible! Black Catkin are an inferior race! Why else do you think we Blue Catkin have been pushing them around for all these years!?!」

Sennek responded to the rabbitkin's words with a violent shout.

「The palace functions off a meritocratic system. We don't evaluate people based on their race, only their competence. Though, I admit we've been giving the Black Catkin a bit more leeway to make up for all that they've suffered.」

The Beast Lord casually refuted Sennec's declaration.

「I assume you haven't heard about what's happened to the Blue Cat Tribe as of late.」

According to Royce, most beastkin had recently started ostracizing the Blue Cat Tribe. There were two reasons that functioned as the driving force behind the aforementioned movement. The first was that most other beastkin had a bit of a hard time trusting the Blue Cat Tribe knowing that they'd sold other Beastkin into slavery. While most other Beastkin did indeed look down on Black Catkin, they never went as far as treating them as slaves. The reason the Blue Catkin's treatment of the Black Catkin was so much harsher than all the other tribes' was because the Black Catkin used to have a higher social status than the Blue Catkin. This caused the Blue Catkin a lot of grief, and led to them going wild the moment their social positions were flipped.

The second reason was because the Blue Cat Tribe was regarded to be in decline. Their business dealings allowed the Blue Catkin to live luxurious lives, so few became true warriors, and even fewer trained themselves as hard as Zefmate had. As a result, the number of Blue Leopardkin had plummeted far beyond just a noticeable degree. This, in part, was the fault of the Beast Lord's ancestors. The Beast Lords of the past had ordered the Blue Catkin to become slave traders and persecuted all that dared disobey. Hence, most of today's Blue Catkin were the descendants of slave traders as opposed to the descendents of warriors.

In other words, most other Beastkin looked down on the Blue Cat Tribe both because they were weak and because they were repulsive from a psychological standpoint.

Fran didn't really care for the details nor Sennek's reply, so she ended up asking more about Kiara instead.

「Happy as long as Kiara is alive. Okay to tell other people?」

「Other people? Whaddya mean other people?」

「Dias and Aurel, Kiara's acquaintances. Worried about her since didn't know what happened to her after she was taken away by Beast Lord.」

Hearing Fran's question caused the Beast Lord to nod as if he had come to a sudden understanding.

「Huh. I guess that's why they've been treating me with that hostile ass attitude. That explains that. Yeah, I don't mind at all, go right the hell ahead. In fact, how 'bout I tell them myself right after we're done here. Was planning to pay the both of them a few visits anyway.」

「Nn. Do tell」

「I'm pretty sure you have lots to ask me, but I'm too busy for it right now. I'll answer all your questions after the tournament's over, so check in with me once it's done.」

「Got it.」

「Aight. I'll be looking forward to seeing how you do. Show me that you'll at least be capable of getting to the fourth round. There won't really be a point in me telling you anything unless you can.」

The Beast Lord grinned at Fran in an intimidating manner, but this time, she didn't freak out. In fact, she responded to him by speaking in a motivated sounding tone.

「Planned to win from start.」

「Hahahahahahah! You hear that, Gold? Royce?」

「It sure is nice seeing a young fighter all pumped up and motivated.」

「Indeed, but I won't show her even the slightest shred of mercy should we meet in the ring.」

「Bring it on.」

「Buhahahaha! I like the way you talk smack, even to Gold and Royce. Fine then Fran, come visit me after you've won the tournament. I'll look forward to seeing you then.」

The Beast Lord let loose a hearty laugh before entering the tent in which the remaining Blue Catkin were being kept.

This caused Fran's expression to change to one of worry, so Royce ended up ushering her off.

「What happens from this point onwards is the Beast Kingdom's business, so how about you head home for now?」

「What do to Zefmate?」

「Disobeying the Beast Lord is a crime, but I doubt Rig will do too much to harm Zefmate. He's taken a liking to him, after all.」

「...Got it.」

The Beast Lord was the kind of guy that tended to be a bit rough around the edges, but the fact that he liked Zefmate meant that he probably wouldn't execute him or shove him in some sort of prison.

Royce's words seemed to have offered Fran enough to allow her to relax, so she bowed to him before finally turning around and leaving the area.

『Welp. Looks like we're going to have at least win ourselves three rounds if we want his approval.』

「Nn! Master. Will try hardest from now on.」

『Sure thing.』

「Nn! Will win for sure!」

[1] I'm too lazy to translate Tsundere.

Tl;dr, this is tsundere: "I-It's not like I like you or anything okay! S-So don't get the wrong idea!"

197. Vs. Kurusu

Chapter 197. Vs. Kurusu

Vs. Kurusu

Fran, Urushi, and I idled about in the waiting room as the second round drew closer. Our match was the third, and the first had already begun, so we were guaranteed to take the stage in less than hour.

A lot had happened yesterday, but none of it had functioned to discourage Fran. In fact, I'd say that the events that'd transpired ended up motivating her more than anything else; she now was practically dead set on at least making it past the tourney's third round.

The fact that the Beast Lord was going around crushing Blue Cat slave traders made her feel a sense of satisfaction, so she'd recently started acting in a much less aggressive manner than she otherwise normally would have. That said, she would still do the usual and beat up any that attempted harassing her. Though she didn't seem to realize it herself, it seemed that hitting them wasn't enough to dispose of all the stress they brought, and as a result, she'd been on edge for the past day and a bit. To be honest, her much more frequent interactions with Blue Catkin weren't the only reason she was so much sharper than usual. Participating in the tourney, in and of itself, had also put her in a more belligerent mood.

Given that our match was coming up soon, Fran decided to warm herself up. Namely, she swung me a bit and practiced dodging by having Urushi jump at her.

『Our turn'll be coming up soon, so don't push yourselves too hard just yet, alright?』

「Nn.」

「Woof.」

Both Fran and Urushi continued to accelerate despite voicing their agreements. The pair had already gotten so fast that their actions had become indiscernible to the average person. That, however, wasn't enough to make me stop them, as to Fran, her current actions were pretty much the equivalent of a walk in the park.

A clerk came knocking not too long after the two started warming up. I was honestly surprised with how quickly it came; we'd only been waiting for about 30 minutes.

「Excuse me, Miss Fran? The second round is over. It'll soon be your turn, so please get ready.」

Asking the clerk allowed us to confirm that Goldalfa had once again ended his opponent in an instant.

Yeah, beating him definitely looked like it wasn't going to be easy.

「Please follow me.」

『Oh yeah, Fran, don't forget to say something like “nice to see you again,” when we run into Kurusu. We have met him already after all.』

「Nn?」

『Make sure you do, alright? Don't pretend you forgot who he is, okay?』

「No problem.」

Hmm... I couldn't help but feel a bit worried. Fran seemed to have totally forgotten that Kurusu existed, but he was still technically a C ranker and therefore not exactly what you could call a small fry.

The impression I had of him was that he was the leader type as opposed to the type that was actually all that skilled in single combat. But that impression didn't really hold. He seemed a bit different this time around. The man we found upon climbing our way onto the stage had a sort of fierce air to him.

「You're not someone I ever expected to see here.」

「Nn.」

『Huh, is that really supposed to be Kurusu? He seems a lot more... wild than he did last time we saw him.』

It looked like he'd switched from being a Blink Swordsman to being a Mad Swordsman. As a result, he'd lost a fair bit of vitality and dexterity in exchange for a boost in his strength and agility. In other words, his role seemed to have transitioned into that of an all out attacker.

Seeing his face had finally caused Fran to recognize him, but she ended up a bit confused because of the disparity between how he was now and how he was before.

「What happened?」

「Fufufu. That's a mean question to ask.」

「Different feel.」

「Seeing the way you and Amanda fought let me to contemplate a few things and alter my own style a bit. I just so happened to get a bit too immersed in retraining myself is all.」

In other words, seeing Fran and Amanda go at each other had caused him to go into shock and question his own abilities. Thus, he ended up trying a few things and adopting whatever he thought was best.

Personally, I think he probably changed a bit too much.

「This is perfect. I knew going into this that I'd never be able to catch up to you, but fighting you is still exactly what I needed to see just how far I've come!」

Kurusu drew his blade, a longsword carved from the fang of a Tyrant Sabertiger. It was something we had to be careful of, as it had the Vibration Fang skill.

「You've even ended up matching my rank. I guess that means I'll have to make sure I don't disgrace myself.」

「Also won't lose.」

Fran drew me and took a stance.

The caster seemed to take that as a signal of sorts, and immediately declared that the match had begun.

「Here I go! Madness, activate!」

Kurusu immediately threw his defenses out the window and cast a buff that caused him to focus purely on offense; he chose to try hitting her before she hit him. It wasn't a bad choice, as he knew that Fran's offenses would've overwhelmed his defenses either way.

「Down Break!」

The Mad Swordsman's training had evidently paid off. He'd raised his stats and discovered for himself a new way of engaging in combat.

But he wasn't the only one to have grown stronger.

Fran had done the same, and unfortunately for Kurusu, the changes in her stats had been much more dramatic than the changes in his.

The gap between him and her was even wider than it'd been back in Alessa.

「Haaah!」

「Slow.」

「Gah!」

Fran easily sidestepped Kurusu's downwards swing before countering by directing her blade towards his sword arm.

Realizing her intentions, Kurusu forced his left arm between him and me in order to trade it in and save his right.

「Forfeit?」

「Fufu. Not yet. My left may be done for, but I've still got my right!」

「Thought so.」

「Kuh!」

Fran took the initiative and went on the offensive. Her foe was able to avoid her first two attacks, but that was it. The loss of a hand had caused him to lose his ability to balance, which, in turn, caused her third strike to embed itself within his body. Naturally, it didn't just end there. She aimed me at his right hand and attempted to strike it once more in order to force him to surrender.

But he still didn't give up.

「Last Stand!」

Kurusu's body began glowing the moment he shouted the skill's name.

I sensed a sudden influx of mana, so I decided to appraise him. Doing so allowed me to figure out that he'd lost most of his HP, but gained a massive boost to all his stats. He'd even gotten the Nullified Sense of Pain skill to boot.

The skill he'd just used was one that could only be used when on the verge of death.

「Gaaaahhh!」

「Mmph!」

The Mad Swordsman didn't attempt to avoid Fran's strike despite the boost to his agility. In fact, he willingly facetanked it while roaring and throwing out a counter.

Only then did I finally come to understand his strategy. It was perfectly fine for him to take a fatal hit given that he had a Sacrificial Bracelet. His Nullified Sense of Pain allowed him to take advantage of the instant he tanked Fran's attack. Specifically, it allowed him to retaliate regardless of all other factors.

It was a strategy that didn't sound too bad given how the tournament worked. It didn't matter how injured he got. He'd end up getting healed by the tourney's staff so long as he didn't die. Pushing himself to the very edge of death would make it possible for him to defeat foes whose stats were higher than his own.

「Gah!」

「Still slow.」

But it didn't work.

Fran warded off the blade he thrust at her by smacking its side with her palm and throwing it off course, an action only made possible by the fact that she could track his sword with pinpoint accuracy.

And then she kicked him, right in the cut she'd given him earlier. It was an attack that he simply couldn't possibly have dodged. He was too far off balance, not that he could actually keep up with her to begin with.

All the air was sucked out of his lungs; he wasn't even so much as able to scream as he was sent rolling off the stage. He stayed on the floor even after getting sent out of the arena; it looked like he'd lost consciousness.

「And that's game! The winner is Fran, the Magic Sword Girl! She's managed to triumph through not only the first, but also the second round despite all the adverse rumours and speculation!」

Apparently the crowd had thought that Kurusu was more likely to win, which, to be honest, wasn't all that unexpected given that he'd been a C ranker for much longer than we had.

「Kurusu had attempted to apply the same suicidal strategy he'd used in the first round, but this time, his sword fell short! What a shame! It looked so close too!」

198. Vs. Colbert

Chapter 198. Vs. Colbert

Vs. Colbert

Two days passed in the blink of an eye. Fran and I found ourselves staring the third round in the face before we knew it.

We were up against Colbert, the exact person that we'd been expecting to have to fight. We'd known that our confrontation with him was coming for a long while already, but I ended up feeling a bit nervous regardless. It wasn't something I could really help.

Fran, on the other hand, was calm and serene, seemingly in part because she was currently engaging in meditation, specifically zen meditation. I'd been the one that taught her the concept, but honestly, I barely knew anything about it myself. My knowledge of Zazen pretty much did nothing but scratch the surface. I was only able to tell her the concept and the fact that it involved closing her eyes and concentrating. She really seemed to like the idea, so she'd more or less figured the rest out all on her own.

Her current session had spanned just over ten minutes. Urushi hadn't wanted to disturb her, so he ended up laying down beside her instead of attempting to warm up as he had while waiting for the tourney's second round.

It seemed that the opponent Goldalfa faced in the third round was much stronger than the ones he'd faced in the first two, as he hadn't actually done his usual thing and won the round in a matter of moments. We would've had to leave the room basically immediately after entering it if he had. We instead had to wait for about another five minutes before finally being called for.

「Good morning. It's time for your match. Please follow me, I'll lead you to the arena.」

Fran's eyes shot open the moment the clerk said her name.

「Go time.」

Her lips curved into a smile as she got back onto her feet.

She didn't seem to be even the slightest bit nervous, nor did it seem like she'd be off because she was way too hyped up.

Today, Fran was in perfect condition.

(Master, will go all out this time.)

『Want me to start helping right off the bat?』

(Nn. Will try to go for quick win.)

Like most battle maniacs, Fran normally tended to prefer a bit of a more wait-and-see type attitude, but today, she decided that it would be best to go full throttle right off the bat. Her decision to treat this battle differently from all the ones that preceded it was one I agreed with.

That tendency to allow one's opponent to go all out wasn't what I'd call wise. We couldn't really afford cutting our opponent any slack given that we had to live up to the Beast Lord's expectations if we wanted him to actually bother speaking to us, especially because said opponent happened to be Colbert.

Another factor that played into her shift in attitude was that she no longer had to worry about antagonizing the Beast Lord. The possibility of him attacking us had basically been shrunk all the way down to zero, so we wouldn't need to pull our punches nor keep a few trump cards in reserve just because he was watching.

Fran passed through the usual dark corridor and entered the ring, only to be greeted with cheers and shouts even louder and more passionate than the ones she'd heard just two days prior.

「And there she is! Our first contestant today is the girl that's overwhelmed both the opponents she's fought so far despite all expectations, a Black Catkin, Fran! I can't wait to see just how far her strength can take her!」

Colbert had yet to arrive, but the crowd had started to roar regardless.

The screams directed towards Fran could be split into three main groups. The first, were the angry folk that'd bet on her opponents in the first and or second round. The next type cheered in a much higher pitch, and seemed, in general, to have taken a liking to Fran because of how cute she was. The final group was a bit different from both of the first two and mainly consisted of adventurers.

At first, I was a bit surprised that there were so many of them rooting for us, but I soon realized that they were mostly members of Erza's faction. I kind of suspected that he'd probably ordered them to cheer for us, as the extent of their motivation almost seemed a bit unnatural. I apparently wasn't the only one to feel that way, as many of the other guests also seemed a bit shocked.

Seeing the crowd caused Fran to recoil a bit in embarrassment, but she still seemed kinda happy they were cheering for her regardless. The audience as a whole immediately reacted to her bashful attitude by getting even rowdier. It seemed she was really popular.

Even so, the noise was soon overwhelmed by a series of hollars that matched the one that'd first greeted her when she entered the ring.

「And there's her opponent! This round's second contestant is no less popular than the first. Ladies and gentlemen, I present you a man known for using nothing but his fists to defeat even the most powerful of foes, B ranked adventurer, Iron Claw Colbert!」

I appraised Colbert and confirmed that his stats were basically the same as what they'd been back when we met him in Barbra... which meant basically nothing given that the stats that showed weren't actually his real stats.

「Hello Fran. I can't say I was expecting to see anyone else.」

「Nn. Colbert too.」

「Hahahah. As a B ranker, I won't lose that easily, especially not to anyone weaker than me.」

「Including me?」

「Well, I don't think you're any weaker than I am... but I will have to win anyway if I want to keep face.」

「Can't lose.」

「I feel the same.」

Sparks almost seemed to fly as the two narrowed their eyes and looked at each other. The fighting spirit that emanating off their bodies expanded through the entire venue and shrouded it with an intense pressure powerful enough to silence the crowd. The spectators instead gulped as they observed the tense atmosphere that'd broke out between the two warriors.

「Let the third round's second match... begin!」

「Now come.」

Colbert was doing what we expected. He took on the typical wait-and-see type approach, not because he was going easy on us, but because he was confident he could handle anything we threw at him.

We, on the other hand, had already turned the dial to 11.

『Stone Wall』

『Fire Wall』

『Wind Wall』

The three spells I casted worked to form a sort of tunnel around Fran and Colbert.

He immediately tried smashing the its' ceiling in order to escape, but he was too late. The fact that he allowed us to take the initiative meant we were already a full step in front of him.

「Inferno Burst」

『Inferno Burst』

Both Fran and I immediately cast a flame-based spell and flooded the tunnel with fire before Colbert could escape it. The attack's heat was so intense that it caused the stone we created to start melting, but it didn't collapse right away. The flame and wind walls supported it and managed to keep it standing for a few seconds by regulating its temperature.

In other words, the other two walls attempted to feed heat back into the interior as opposed to allowing it to leak outside, which in turn meant that it ended up not only trapping Colbert, but also providing a bit of a boost to our Inferno Bursts'.

We knew our attack was a fairly sound one, but we didn't let up. We trusted that Colbert was too strong to fall to just that, and so, we threw in a follow up.

「Wind Bullet!」

『Stun Bullet』

All the smoke and flames made it so we couldn't actually see him, but that didn't matter. We simply shot where we felt his presence in order to pin him down and keep him from moving.

Only then did we finally throw in an attack that was actually meant to inflict some more serious harm.

「Haaaaah!」

『Let's do this!』

The next attack was one I hadn't had a chance to use in quite a while, my ever so reliable Telekinetic Catapult. The arena was a bit too small for me to reach my full speed, but I still flew at him incredibly quickly nonetheless.

I was confident that not even Colbert would be able to avoid the strike without sustaining a significant injury.

「Nragh!」

『Woah!』

But I was wrong.

A mana-covered fist approached from my side right before I managed to pierce him, one that contained so much force that it seemed like it would send me flying into orbit.

His counter made me realize that he was much more dangerous than I'd been expecting. He was skilled enough to easily knock aside the attack I planned to finish him off with, and basically hadn't taken any damage from our prior bombardment. The only thing that'd even gotten the slightest bit burnt was his clothing.

We had to defeat him before he actually got serious.

I hit the brakes as hard as I could by using telekinesis and wind magic while also making myself as spiky as a porcupine and cloaking myself in lightning.

「What!?!」

Colbert's voice rose in shock. Never in his wildest dreams had he ever envisioned that the sword he readied himself to hit would stop in place and transform.

His defenses were ridiculous. My needles, which were capable of tearing metal armour to bits, failed to pierce his skin. However, he didn't remain unharmed. He was assaulted by the lightning I'd wrapped around myself nonetheless.

「Gugagagagargghh!」

「Stun Bolt!」

Fran followed up my attack by throwing another lightning-based spell at him.

The two potent electrical energies shot throughout his body and caused sparks to erupt all over it.

「Finishing blow! Gale Hazard!」

Fran's finisher, a blast of wind magic, evidenced that she wanted to end the match without having to engage in melee combat. She didn't want him pulling off what Kurusu tried, and turning everything around at the last second.

Colbert was sent flying over 20 meters. It looked like he'd ring out and crash into the audience.

Fran stayed vigilant, she carefully watched as he flew so she could prevent him from recovering with magic should he try it.

But it wasn't enough.

「Mmph.」

『Did he just use a Feather of Teleportation?』

Colbert suddenly disappeared. I immediately recognized that he'd teleported, but couldn't figure out where he went. I wasn't able to find him by scanning the stage.

『He took to the sky!?!』

Fran immediately caught onto the fact that Colbert had chosen to teleport way above the arena. His decision was a solid one that made good use of the item he'd employed. Gaining airtime allowed him to not only avoid losing but also respace himself. The only thing he had to really worry about was how he was going to land.

However, it wasn't without its demerits. Hanging around in the air basically made him a sitting duck given that Fran had an abundant amount of long ranged attacks.

「Nn!」

She took aim and bombarded him with a whole slew of spells. Specifically, she'd chosen wind-based ones that prioritized max range over power.

I matched her attacks by throwing out several flame-based spells. The wind-based ones functioned as visual clutter and prevented them from being seen, which worked quite well, as they were powerful enough to instantly end the match.

But again, I was hoping for too much.

Colbert tore every single last one of our spells apart with his fists the moment before they hit him.

He then changed his direction midair with a burst of Qi and oriented himself so he was facing Fran.

「Hraaaaaghhhh!」

An incredible amount of magical energy suddenly began emanating from his body. The martial artist swung his fists through the air. Each movement, each punch, was accompanied by a blast of Qi that headed straight for Fran.

The individual Qi based projectiles were rather weak, but they were threatening nonetheless due to their sheer quantity; Fran was forced to respond by blasting them out of the sky with a few techniques of her own.

Still, they'd accomplished their job. They bought Colbert enough time to land.

He took a guarded stance with an evident lack of openings the moment his feet touched the ground before turning towards Fran and narrowing his eyes.

Likewise, she raised me and matched his glare with her own.

「Fuh. You sure are impatient, trying to end the match right away like that.」

「Was just taking advantage of opening.」

「Was just taking advantage of opening.」

「Haha. I never expected you to be this good a Magic Warrior. I'm impressed. Have you been holding back this whole time?」

「Back at you. Suddenly more magical energy?」

Fran wasn't kidding. The amount of magical energy enveloping Colbert's body had undergone a drastic increase.

In other words, all his stats had risen by 50, save for magic, which had gained a whole 100 points. That, combined with his newly unsealed Dimitris Style skills, made it so we'd practically be fighting a whole different person from here on out.

『Be careful. He's undone his seal.』

「Undid seal?」

「...So you noticed?」

Colbert's expression seemed to waver in unease as he signed, an action that demonstrated that he hadn't actually been too willing to undo his seal. I decided to try probing him, given that his current state was clearly the result of self interest.

『Hey Fran, repeat after me for a bit, alright?』

「Nn.」

That is, I decided to try attacking him mentally instead of physically, as it seemed like we'd be able to profit from it.

「Won't be excommunicated for unsealing for self-interest?」

「That... does happen from time to time, yes.」

「Colbert, won't be excommunicated?」

「I might be.」

「Then why undo seal?」

Fran's words caused Colbert to look down and make a bit of a troubled face before returning his gaze to her and shaking his head.

「You're right. Undoing my seal like this might get me excommunicated, but, I don't care. That's not what matters most to me right now!」

Colbert raised his voice as he once again took a stance.

「Then what matters most?」

「The answer to that question is a simple one. What matters most to me right now is upholding the Dimitris Style's pride.」

His declaration came with a really cool sounding line.

「Getting serious and undoing seal against opponent with child's appearance for pride?」

「Ugh...」

Heh. Looked like we hit the sucker in a sore spot.

「Pride?」

「Sorry... I was just saying it that way because I was trying to make myself sound cool.」

「Expected.」

「Ugh... Yeah, you're right. I was trying to make it sound much better than it really was.」

Uhh... shit. I realized that we'd pushed him a bit too far, as our words had ultimately led to an effect opposite that of what I'd been hoping for.

「Sorry. You're right. I didn't undo my seal out of something as propossessing as pride. I did it because I wanted to, because I, as a practitioner of the Dimitris Style, wouldn't be able to forgive myself for losing this easily to a C ranker. That just isn't something I can allow to happen. I have always looked up to the Dimitris Style, and known it to be the world's most powerful.」

The magical energy Colbert emitted began wrapping its way around his body. It only took a matter of moments for it to grow so dense that it'd effectively become a suit of armour.

「That is why I cannot allow myself to lose. I will not let myself be the reason people look down on the Dimitris Style! I would much rather be excommunicated than put the style to shame!」

That was just how much the Dimitris Style meant to Colbert.

But despite his passionate shouts, Fran managed to retain her calm. Likewise, I'd done the same. This, him going all out, was within the realm of my expectations.

「Gale Hazard!」

Fran fired off an AOE projectile at him in order to keep him as pinned as possible as she rushed at him. His stats had risen, but his Divine Fist Arts had remained unchanged; he still possessed the exact same amount of skill with his hands. Hence, I suspected that Fran would retain the upper hand in terms of technique.

Or at least that's how things were if I didn't factor the Dimitris Style in. I was on guard for what would happen, but apparently not nearly as on guard as I should've been.

「Dimitris Style Martial Art — Asura!」

「Kuaahh!」

Colbert allowed Fran to slash at him, but immediately followed with a counter and sent her flying back. He then kicked off the ground in attempt to chase her down and follow up his attack with another before she could regain her balance.

「Oraaah!」

「Kuh!」

His strategy, taking a hit and then countering, was similar to Kurusu's, but he was much more skilled, and hence, his application of the tactic had been much more effective.

The first major point of deviation was the fact that we hadn't even been able to actually pierce his defenses; Colbert managed to remain unharmed despite the fact that Fran had attacked him with my element-cloaked blade. His martial art allowed him to condense magical energy and use it in the same manner as he would his arms. These four newly created energy-based appendages stayed close to his body and, in doing so, almost made it him truly resemble the six armed God the technique was named after.

It was precisely this technique that allowed him to avoid taking any of the damage we would've otherwise inflicted. It seemed to have both boosted his reaction speed and the range of his field of vision, as he'd used two of his magical arms to catch me mid swing. As the arms were constructed entirely of energy, the few scratches they did get from the act immediately regenerated and were made moot.

Naturally, all of his magic hands were also capable of attacking. Colbert being a martial artist meant that, the number of attacks he could execute was purely limited by the number of limbs he had, which, in turn, led to the conclusion that he'd become way deadlier than he'd been before.

One of his many attacks eventually ended up breaking through Fran's defenses and digging straight into her lungs.

「Bughhh」

『Greater Heal』

I managed to get Fran healed up immediately, but I couldn't stop her from momentarily flinching because of the hit. The bit of a stagger that resulted allowed Colbert enough of an opening to follow up with a third flurry.

One of his hands even ended up grabbing onto me. It tried tightening its grip in order to hold me in place the moment it did, but I managed to escape by using Telekinesis. Though I did indeed manage to retreat, I wasn't able to stop him from momentarily restricting Fran's movements, which, once again, caused Colbert to gain yet another shot of momentum.

Fran was still avoiding his attacks and returning fire, but she was doing so with her face warped in pain. Erza had mentioned before that some of the Dimitris Style's practitioners were capable of performing attacks that would permeate into one's body and destroy it from the inside out.

Colbert's attacks were in fact all of that precise type.

Even the ones that struck me instead of Fran carried through my blade and assaulted her hands with shockwave upon shockwave upon shockwave. I attempted to block the effects of his attacks by deploying a series of barriers, but to pretty much no avail. They passed right through them; even the lightest touch would cause Colbert's Qi to flow into her body and damage her internals.

Having Fran continue holding her ground like this was a bad idea. Simply patiently waiting for a chance wasn't going to work.

『It doesn't look like his attacks are just physically based, but I think it might be best for us to point both Physical Damage Resistance and Physical Barrier regardless.』

(Nn! Got it!)

I executed one of the contingencies I'd discussed with Fran earlier and threw 18 points into each of the two skills.

Fran and I had come into the tourney with more than just a few cards in hand. We'd pushed ourselves as hard as we could in order to farm magic stones so I could rank up as quickly as possible — which I did. I'd then just held onto all 66 of the points that we had, just in case we ran into any situations like this one.

Hoarding points and using them in the middle of a battle was much more effective than using them up ahead of time, as having them available meant being able to adjust to our opponents.

〈A new skill has been unlocked as you have fulfilled all of its prerequisites. Your Physical Barrier and Magical Barrier skills have been merged into the Perfect Barrier skill.〉

Perfect Barrier seemed to be a pretty damned good skill. Its level 1 output was equivalent to the two other skills' max level outputs combined. The term "perfect" initially led me to believe that the barrier could prevent any and all damage, but I was wrong, as it clearly wasn't completely impregnable. The "perfect" part of its name instead seemed to describe that it could at least attempt to mitigate all types of attacks.

〈The Physical Damage Resistance skill has reached its maximum level and evolved into Physical Damage Nullification.〉

And... we also ended up unlocking a skill I'd been expecting, but not really all that keen on getting.

『Let's go, Fran!』

「Nn!」

「What!? How are you suddenly no longer taking damage!?!」

Colbert's eyes widened as Fran began stepping forward while completely ignoring all his attacks. He didn't stop, and continued to assault her, but she didn't mind his strikes at all. At first, it seemed like she was trying to take damage in order to dish it out, but that wasn't the case at all. Our two newly obtained skills made it so she didn't have to force herself into a trade.

It'd almost looked like she'd become flat out invincible.

But I was panicking nonetheless.

『Shit, Rumina was right! That nullification skill is eating my mana ridiculously quickly! 』

Only a few moments had passed since we'd gotten the skill, but it'd already eaten up a whole 1000 mana. That was just how much energy it took to completely negate Colbert's incoming attacks.

Again, the skill's ridiculous mana consumption was something that Rumina had warned us about. Specifically, something she'd warned us about just before the tournament began.

「Master. That ability of yours is quite the powerful one, but warn you I must.」

『Warn me? About what?』

「I ask that you beware of skills capable of nullification. Some magic beasts carry them, and thus, I believe it very likely for you to one day obtain them. You must take utmost caution in their application.」

「Why caution?」

「Skills carrying effects akin to nullification bear the tendency to consume a great deal of magical energy to actualize their effects. Moreover, the skill's function is automatic. You will not be able to stop them from activating, and thus, it is quite possible for you to quickly lose all your magical energy should you fight a foe capable of a vicious assault.」

In other words, Flame Invalidation would drain one's mana pool extremely quickly if one decided to sit in a sea of flames or something.

The one Rumina emphasized as the one we should be the most careful with was Physical Damage Nullification. It was a skill typically possessed by monsters whose bodies were made of energy, so she wasn't sure exactly what would happen if we were to acquire it. There was a chance it'd end up activating every single time we so much as took a step.

But that wasn't all. She'd also warned us that nullification-type skills didn't actually provide invulnerability. Certain skills would just go right through them.

According to Rumina, the Gods had made it so that nullification skills weren't in fact the highest order of skill one could have. They could be broken through by both skills built to pierce defenses as well as skills containing the Gods' powers.

Rumina herself had actually bore witness to one of these incidents; she'd seen Ignius use its Godflame skill to roast and kill someone that happened to have the Flame Nullification skill.

She'd warned that it was possible that the Beast Lord's Golden Flame of Extinction skill also counted as a higher order skill.

「Do not let your guard down. Do not rely on nullification skills should you obtain them.」

「Got it.」

Our case was actually a bit different. We were able to choose whether or not we actually wanted a certain skill to be active, so, it was possible for us to avoid using any nullification skills we had unless we actually really needed them. They were quite perfect as far as trump cards went.

That said, I couldn't actually switch the skill out as of right this moment, as Colbert was still in the middle of attacking us.

『Hurry up Fran! You'll have to finish this real quick!』

「Nn!」

Fran raised me above her head and readied herself to a massive downwards swing — an opening Colbert failed to miss.

「Dimitris Style Secret Technique — Rupturing Strike!」 [1]

He poured his mana into his fist as he twisted it as he shoved it straight into Fran's gut. But it was rendered null. The strike hadn't even caused her to so much as flinch.

「Shit! It had no effect!?!」

Colbert's attack hadn't damaged Fran, but it'd contained so much force that it drained another 1000 mana straight from my pool, which, once again confirmed that Colbert was one helluva a foe. I couldn't even imagine how much damage his attack would've done had we not the means to completely negate it.

「Nn!」

Fran leapt into the air and delivered a downwards strike with every last bit of her power.

We activated two instances of Elemental Blade, popped Vibration Blade, Magic Poison Fang and Weight Boost as she drew me from a sheath of wind. Her skill with the katana, which had already been remarkable, had become even more refined because of the Sword Lord Arts skill.

Though we were basically in his face, our attack was one that was incredibly easy to read, and thus, Colbert had an easy time avoiding it.

Or at least he would have, had I not stopped him.

I bound him with both Wind Magic and Telekinesis and prevented him from moving either to the left or right. To him, that much was nothing. He easily shrugged it off, but in doing so, lost the instant he needed to avoid Fran's incoming strike. Realizing that escape had become impossible, he instead quickly opted to use all four of his magical arms to defend himself.

「Haaaaaaaaaahhhh!」

「Gaarrgghhh!」

But it wasn't enough.

We not only split all his magic-made limbs in two, but also left a giant gash running from his left shoulder to the opposite side of his hip. Both his arms were still fine, but the same couldn't be said for his internals. The majority of the damage had gone straight to his lungs, one of them had even been flat out turned to ash. The flames that cloaked my blade scorched his body and completely turned into a huge mess. The open wound was charred black; smoke wafted off of it alongside a foul, meaty smell.

It looked like he was done for, but we kept going. Colbert was strong. We knew that it was still possible for him to turn everything around despite how grim the situation looked, and so, we continued focusing on refining our magical energies.

『Keep it up! Don't slow down!』

「Nn!」

Fran brought me to her waist and followed up with a powerful horizontal slash.

I figured that Colbert could still fight, but I never expected him to do as he did. That is, he attempted to avoid the attack by leaping backwards and dodging despite his near fatal wound. He then focused his energies back into his magical arms and once again extended them towards us.

The situation was dire. We'd run out of mana if he hit us even just one more time. If we wanted to win this, we had to end it here and now.

Knowing that, I quickly responded by stretching my blade as far as I could.

「Come on!」

『Reach reach reach!』

「Guaagghhh!」

Colbert reached us right as we reached him. We managed to null his attack, but the same couldn't be said for him; my blade tore through his gut and caused his blood to splatter across Fran's face.

He took far too much damage to maintain his concentration, and so, his magic-made arms faded away.

「Sh...it...」

The martial artist fell onto his knees before groaning in pain and collapsing, after which he didn't even so much as twitch. He was bleeding heavily, crimson liquid leaked from his protruding internal organs began turning the stage into a sea of blood. To make matters worse, he was even badly poisoned.

Things were looking really bad.

Invalidating Colbert's last attack had used up the rest of my mana. I was flat dry. I couldn't do anything for him at all.

Fortunately, I didn't need to be the one to heal him. A member of the guild's staff immediately rushed over and did what was necessary in order to save him.

And with that staff member's actions came an enthusiastic announcement.

「It's over! The match has been decided! What a stunning upset, ladies and gentlemen! Today's winner is once again, Fran, the Magic Sword Girl! It looks like she just might end up being the most terrifying dark horse in this tournament's history!」

[1] This technique, in the raw, is Body Destroying Internal Organ Breaker. But that sounds like shit in English, so I just kinda put some random substitute name that kinda sounds martial artsy and has a bit of the meaning in there for now. Let me know if you guys can think of something better.

[2] This type of punch is called called a Seikenzuki in Japanese. Its pretty well known, and even used in a fair bit of media. It's basically the standard Karate punch. You thrust at chest level, with your fist upside down. You then turn it at the moment of impact for that extra bit of oomph. Animoo example here.

200. Vs Colbert — After

Chapter 200. Vs Colbert — After

Vs Colbert — After

We checked in on Colbert, who'd been carried over to the sickbay, not too long after the match ended. His wounds had been healed by magic, but he'd yet to regain most of his stamina, and so, he was still bedridden and unable to so much as sit up.

「Colbert, feeling okay?」

「Hey... It appears that I've narrowly managed to escape death.」

「Very close.」

「Hahah. You have me beat. I never expected to lose even after undoing my sea...ugh.」

Colbert placed a hand on his head and groaned.

「Okay?」

「Yeah... It seems that I've simply pushed myself a bit too hard. This happens every time I use Asura.」

Asura was the technique that caused him to suddenly sprout a bunch of magical arms. My assumption was that said technique boosted both his reaction speed and widened his field of vision, as I failed to see how else he would've been able to fight on par with Fran and her Sword Lord Arts.

「You were strong, stronger than any foe I've ever faced before.」

「Thanks.」

「Your next opponent will be a tough one, but I believe in you. Beat him, for my sake as well.」

「Definitely.」

We decided to leave the sick bay after exchanging a few more words with him. As he'd yet to recover, I figured that forcing him into an extended conversation probably wasn't exactly what anyone could call a good idea.

I expected that he'd end up getting some peace and quiet after we left, but apparently the exact opposite happened, as I happened to catch ear of a few panicked shouts just before we wound up out of earshot.

「God damn it! I went overboard and let the blood rush to my head! Damn it! I'm totally going to get excommunicated! There's no way my demon of a Master will let me get away with this!」

His tone made it incredibly easy for me to picture him cradling his head and shaking it in despair. It would've been something interesting to discuss with Fran, but I decided to practice tact and keep any mention of his circumstances to a minimum seeing as how he'd purposefully waited for her to leave before letting his emotions take control of him; he clearly hadn't wanted to show his more pitiful side.

『My condolences, Colbert. My condolences.』

「Nn?」

『Nah, it's nothing. Don't worry about. Let's just go.』

The next thing Fran and I did was head back to the arena. Specifically, we became spectators, as it was probably the best possible use of our time. There was a chance we would end up having to fight the people that emerged victorious today should we win the next round. It's not like we'd be wasting time even if we lost either, as observing these higher leveled fights served to broaden our horizons regardless.

There were only a total of eight matches scheduled today due to the nature of the single elimination tournament structure, and as we fought the second, there were only six for us to observe.

Amanda was the one fighting the day's third match, and had just finished wrapping up right as we managed to get back. She had once again basically finished her foe off in an instant.

「Didn't get to see anything.」

『Eh, can't really be helped. This next match should be interesting enough to make up for it though. Erza's going to be fighting.』

His opponent was a C ranked adventurer, one known to be rather difficult to fight because of his incredible technical skill with the spear. The battle was honestly one I was really looking forward to and didn't want to miss.

However, we were at a bit of an impasse. There wasn't anywhere for us to sit. We contemplated what to do, and I actually almost ended up creating a chair using earth magic, but, fortunately, one of the men nearby called out to us and, in doing so, stopped me before I did.

「Hey, are you Fran? The Magic Sword Girl?」

「Nn?」

He, the middle aged man, was spectating the match with a bottle of wine in one hand, and a skewer in the other. Based on that, I assumed the guy was probably doing pretty well for himself.

「W-Woah, it really is you. I'm guessing you wanted to spectate?」

「Nn.」

「A-Alright, feel free to take my seat then.」

「Really okay?」

「Yeah, go for it. I've been betting on you since the prelims, and at this point, you've earned me so much cash I can kick back and skip work for the rest of the month.」

Wow, he really has made a lot off us.

The fact that he's been betting on us since the prelims meant he was probably half doing it to cheer Fran on, and half because he wanted to see if could earn himself a big ass return off her efforts. That said, I still felt thankful because he had still been rooting for us either way.

「I'll gladly fork the seat over if you just let me shake your hand so I can brag about it to all my buddies!」

「Got it.」

「Thanks! I'll be cheering for you tomorrow too, so do your best out there!」

「Nn.」

And so, the man shook Fran's hand, relinquished his seat to her, and walked away with a bit of a chuckle. My guess was that he'd probably headed somewhere he could comfortably stand around while watching the remaining matches.

Erza's match began shortly after we sat down. His opponent was as difficult to deal with as his reputation suggested, and managed to stay out of Erza's range while attacking him with his spear.

However, the spearman's attacks were a bit too light to actually inflict any damage; Erza ignored all his strikes and managed to brute force charge right at him without really minding the incoming onslaught.

The spearman's incredible agility allowed him to dodge the attack that came out of it, but seeing that it'd destroyed a part of the arena with just one hit had caused his blood to run cold.

His movements started to dull with time, not because he ran out of stamina, but because the disparity in their attacks' effectiveness caused him a great mental burden.

He was in a pretty shitty situation, one we'd experienced several times before. His attacks did practically nothing, but everything'd be over for him if he failed to dodge even just once. He wouldn't be able to rake in a win unless he went out on a limb and shifted to a style that would put a bit more emphasis on pure power, a choice he was hesitant to make given that his opponent's giant ass mace kept only barely missing him.

It took a him a good bit, but he eventually managed to do it. He made up his mind and drove his spear straight towards Erza after dodging an attack that left the bigger man off balance. It was the fastest, and most powerful strike he'd demonstrated to date.

The crowd gasped as his spear closed in on Erza's unarmoured upper body.

But it didn't work. The spearman's weapon wasn't able to pierce Erza's skin. It was instead stopped by the bigger man's ridiculously high defenses.

From there, it all went downhill. The man was promptly caught by Erza and dropped to the floor, where he was pinned by a full body technique that rendered him unable to breathe. He ultimately ended up having to surrender with an oxygen deprived wheeze.

『Must suck to be him.』

「Close combat means openings.」

『Well, I mean, you're right, but...』

No way I was ever going to let Erza pin Fran to the floor, especially while making full body contact. Just, hell no.

『Pinning techniques are just terrible.』

「Nn. Dangerous.」

『In more than one way at that.』

「Nn?」

Erza's match was the only one that'd really been interesting. All the others basically ended in an instant or were kind of boring.

Forrund's match, the fourth match, was so short that it caused the crowd to boo. It didn't even take him five seconds to finish off his opponent.

Phillip, the Krysten family's eldest son, fought the fifth match. It was a harsh battle full of backs and forths, but we'd already seen him fight back in Barbra, so it ended up being kinda dull.

Neither Royce, nor Fermus ended up having to go all out, but they both finished their matches in less than a minute. All I could tell from watching them was that they had even more power hiding beneath the surface.

『We'll have to win tomorrow's match if we even want a chance at fighting any of them.』

「Will definitely win.」

We headed to the dungeon after we finished spectating the day's matches so we could not only try out our new skills, but also run a few simulations in order to figure out how we'd go about fighting Goldalfa.

Fortunately, Physical Damage Invalidation didn't actually activate whenever we took a step, but it did consume an incredible amount of mana nonetheless. It'd react regardless of whether we were attacking or defending; half of my mana pool had actually vanished into thin air before I'd even realized any of it was missing.

But, as evidenced by its ability to even nullify the shock generated by our attacks, it was ridiculously potent. Fran was able to punch an ogre many times her size without even feeling the slightest bit of backlash. In a real battle, the skill made it so we were able to ignore any and all of the attacks our opponents used to zone us. It didn't matter whether they slashed at us with swords or whacked us with hammers. None of it had any effect whatsoever.

Likewise, Perfect Barrier also turned out to be pretty useful.

It only consumed as much magical energy as either one of the two barriers that'd merged to create it, but had the full effects of both. The potency of its defenses did still fall short of our newly found nullification skill, but that was to be expected.

In other words, we were pretty much going to end up spamming Perfect Barrier whenever we could, and saving Physical Damage Nullification for when we really needed it.

『Alright, that's enough testing. Let's try figuring out what we should do against Goldalfa.』

The fact that Goldalfa was an axe user made me suspect that we would probably end up having to rely on Physical Damage Nullification if we wanted to beat him. I had no idea exactly how strong he'd get if he used Awakening, but I somehow doubted our defenses would be solid enough to hold off his attacks.

His offenses were but one of my two main concerns. The other was the extent to which he was capable of soaking up damage. The dude had High Speed Regeneration, Strengthened Skin, and over 1k HP to boot. We probably wouldn't be able to beat him by slowly wearing him down; I didn't think we'd be able to beat him in a more drawn out battle.

In other words, if we wanted to beat him without using Physical Damage Nullification, we'd have to not only dodge all his attacks, but also deliver attacks with enough power to break through his defenses and quickly end the match. My conclusion? Things weren't exactly looking up.

We spent a bit of time thinking up hypothetical situations and the skills we'd level to deal with each of them before finally calling it a day.

「Will go visit Rumina.」

Fran had already stopped addressing Rumina in the respectful manner that she'd done when they first met — not that the older Black Catkin minded it at all. In fact, she even seemed to enjoy being referred to more casually. The two's relationship almost seemed to have developed into one that was kind of like that of a grandmother and grandchild, a status quo with which both were satisfied.

『Good idea. We might as well go pop in and say hi before we leave.』

「Nn.」

We teleported into the room Rumina had made us a few days earlier.

She seemed to immediately pick up on our arrival, as she even ended up greeting us by the door as we entered her quarters.

「Welcome.」

「Nn.」

『'Sup.』

「It appears that you have triumphed once again. I believe your next match will be a quarter final round against an A ranked adventurer?」

『Yeap. We'll be fighting one of the Beast Lord's subordinates.』

「And will you be attempting victory? I believe you have already satisfied the conditions he has laid before you by winning this morning's match.」

「Will win. Will force Black Cat Tribe's strength to be acknowledged.」

『We're intending on playing every single card we have if that's what it takes.』

「I see... Very well, I shall say no more regarding the matter. Instead, I will offer you my encouragement. Forward, Fran, to victory!」

「Nn!」

And so, we headed back to the inn after having Rumina tell us a bit more about skills and magic.

Tomorrow, our match would be the first. We had to get up even earlier than usual.

201. Vs Goldalfa Part 1

Chapter 201. Vs Goldalfa Part 1

Vs Goldalfa Part 1

『Looks like it's finally go time.』

「Nn.」

『We're going to be up against an A ranker, someone as strong as Amanda. We'll really have to push ourselves if we want to pull a win out of this one.』

「Already know. But-」

『Yeah. Let's win this shit.』

「Nn! Will definitely win!」

We'd actually already leveled a few skills up in preparation for the fight, skills we decided would help us based on what we learned from consulting with Rumina.

「Good morning. It's time for your match to begin. Are you ready?」

One of the tourney's staff members called out to us and informed us that we needed to go.

「Nn. Ready.」

「Then please follow me.」

Fran walked down the usual corridor in her usual manner. She was pumped and looking forward to the match, but not even the slightest bit nervous.

It had finally come time to put one of the schemes we'd come up with into action — not that it was actually anything grand enough to be denoted as such.

The first thing I did was buffing Fran a whole bunch. Specifically, I'd use support magic in order raise her stats. She then poured her magical energy into me in order to make use of that magical conductivity stat of mine. Specifically, she emptied herself out, drank a few High Grade Mana Potions to refill her bar, drained her entire tank yet again, and then once again downed a few more pots to top herself off in preparation for the battle. Doing that allowed her to raise my attack a ton without having to put any strain on my blade. Numerically speaking, it ended up getting boosted almost all the way up to 3.7k.

There was a pretty major problem with the strategy we were currently employing, as I was only able to hold the magical energy she charged me with for about 20 minutes. We would have to end the match before my timer ticked all the way down to zero.

『Hey you sure you're alright? You kinda just downed 8 entire mana potions.』

「Fine.」

Luckily, it seemed like there wasn't any issue. I honestly felt like this strategy of ours wouldn't actually be possible if it wasn't for Fran's habit of eating as much as she did. Any normal person would probably feel bloated from suddenly drinking 8 glasses worth of stuff.

「Let's go.」

『Sure thing.』

Entering the stage caused Fran to be showered with the usual cheers. Evidently, she'd already grown used to them, as hearing them didn't cause any change in her expression.

「And entering from the eastern gate is the girl that's taken this year's tournament by storm, the cute face that's gained an explosive amount of popularity, Fran, the Magic Sword Girl! She's stomped competitor after competitor, and caused upset after upset, a trend she'll need to maintain if she wishes to beat the A ranked adventurer she'll have to face today! Can she do it ladies and gentlemen? We'll have to wait and see!」

The commentator's words almost made it seem like he was rooting for us, which, I kinda did understand. Seeing a kid like Fran give it her all just kinda made you feel like giving her a bit of encouragement. The only people that I could imagine not feeling that way were probably the Blue Cat Tribe's members.

「Do your best Fran!」

「Make sure you win, for our wallets' sakes!」

「We believe in your Fran! You have to win! The better you do, the more we'll get to eat tonight!」

All three Scarlet Maidens were present and cheering for us. I kinda felt like they were being a bit too open with their greed, but what mattered wasn't the reason that they were rooting for us, but rather, the fact that they were.

「And from the western gate we have one the most likely contenders for the championship title, a man that's crushed every single one of his opponents with an overwhelming display of strength, Goldalfa, the Impenetrable Fortress! His feats have been truly worthy of his A rank status. He's managed to remain entirely unscathed throughout all the battles he's won to date! What do you think, ladies, gentlemen? Will he be able to pull off yet another flawless victory? 」 [1]

Godlafa, like Fran, was also greeted by a ridiculously loud series of cheers. However, he seemed less popular than her, as there were also a couple boos thrown into the mix.

It was almost as if the crowd had already come to the conclusion that Goldalfa would come out on top. To me, it seemed that the people cheering for Fran were cheering in hopes that she'd put up a good fight as opposed to getting defeated in an instant, not because they believed that she'd be able to win. Honestly, it was something to be expected. Fran had been on a winning spree, but she was still just a C ranker. Goldalfa was an A ranker, so there wasn't really any reason for anyone to suspect that he wasn't way out of her league.

『I'm looking forward to seeing the looks on everyone's faces when we prove them wrong.』

「Nn!」

We faced off against Goldalfa at the arena's center.

The equipment he was wearing today was completely different from the first set we'd seen him in. His armour was much tougher looking; its massive scarlet frame was decorated with a series of flame-like streaks. Likewise, his axe also gave off a much more intimidating air. It was jet black, and had a design that made it incredibly obvious that its main purpose was to serve as a weapon in times of war.

The armour also seemed to have the ability to block us from properly appraising him. My Eye of Empyrea skill allowed me to at least discern his stats and skills, but I couldn't actually check any details regarding his equips.

「I see you've won your way here.」

「Will win today too.」

「You're really spirited, and I commend you for it. But you'll need much more than just drive and willpower to defeat me. Come! Come at me with all the strength you have!」

「Planned on it.」

Goldalfa didn't seem to be underestimating Fran, not even in the slightest, as he was glaring at her as he would a powerful rival.

The caster quickly went over an interesting detail as the two stared each other down.

「We'll be making use of the Cradle of Time from this match onward, thanks to the Beast Lord and his generosity.」

The Cradle of Time was a magic item that allowed one to turn back the clock within a prespecified area, and was set to activate in the case that one of the contestants happened to die. Best part of it was that apparently, the cradle didn't actually affect one's memory, so dying wouldn't meant losing the experience you gained. As one could imagine, it was really a expensive item, and hence, typically saved for the semis and beyond, but this time around, the Beast Lord had decided to sponsor the tourney with a huge chunk of cash. Thus, they were able to start using the item a full round earlier than usual.

In other words, we were able to go all the hell out without really having to worry about dying or killing our opponent. That wasn't the only factor that allowed us to go all out. There were now also a bunch of barriers set up around the arena in order to protect the audience members from any stray attacks.

Battles that included the use of the the Cradle of Time were different from other battles in the sense that there was no ring out option. One could only win by killing their opponent, disabling them, or forcing them to surrender.

「I don't really think this needs to be said, but I'll say it regardless. I will not underestimate you simply because you are a Black Catkin as it was a Black Catkin that made me as capable as I am today.」

「Exactly as desired.」

Fran unsheathed me and gave me a light swing as if to demonstrate her resolve.

「And I take it that's your Magic Sword? Interesting, it truly appears to be much more than just your average blade.」

「You too. Cool armour.」

「This armour is what I wear to battle. Me wearing it serves to prove that I'm taking you seriously. It has Appraisal Blocking, both types of passive recovery, and even Magic Resistance. It was none other than a product crafted by a God-tier Blacksmith, a Magic Armour powerful enough to perform its function, even against a Godblade.」

Wait, wait, you serious!? That's some shit dude! I mean, it was possible that I was actually be the work of some God-tiered blacksmith too and all that, but that, again, is just a possibility. His armour, on the other hand, was totally the real deal!

I mean, I was pretty confident and all that, but I couldn't really help but get a bad feeling about that armour of his. Specifically, I was concerned about the possibility that it'd have some sort of secret ability that'd totally wreck us.

「I'll bring everything right off the bat in order to crush you! Awakening!」

The few visible parts of Goldalfa's skin were dyed grey as he shouted the skill's name.

「Woah! It appears that Goldalfa has already awakened! He's activated what most Beastkin consider their trump card! Can you believe it, ladies and gentlemen!? He's already gone full throttle even though the match has yet to start! Things are getting heated up! I guess I'd better say, let the match... begin!」

Wait, seriously!? He awakened already!?

Goldalfa's awakening differed greatly from Zefmate's. That is, his stats didn't end up changing. However, the same couldn't be said for his skills. He'd gained a bunch of abilities that looked hard to deal with, namely, Muscles of Steel, Super Fast Reflexes, and Hardened Skin. His High Speed Regeneration had also gained several levels, and shot all the way up to 8. But that wasn't all. Highly dense magical energy had also began circulating throughout his body.

Shockwave

「Nrrrrrghhhhhhhhh!」

Goldalfa swung his axe downwards without moving from where he stood the moment the match began. The action caused three massive shockwaves to erupt from his axe and assault us.

They were powerful; they were backed by so much brute strength that I was pretty sure that launching those three attacks alone would've already been enough for him to instantly defeat most C ranked magic beasts.

It seemed to be an assault he'd launched in order to scout out our strength.

『Let's go, Fran!』

「Nn.」

『Explosion!』

I fired off a spell to intercept Goldalfa's attack.

The fireball bursted into a massive conflagration as collided with the shockwave and dyed the stage in red.

I took advantage of the resulting smokescreen and teleported us behind Goldalfa.

Fran immediately took advantage of the opening presented and attacked Goldalfa's neck by drawing me from a sheath of wind while activating all the usual skills.

It was both a deadly strike and a perfect sneak attack —

「Ggaaaaahhh!」

— one to which he couldn't react.

My blade sank straight into his neck. I felt it tear through his flesh and bones as his blood sprayed from his newfound injury.

Yet, it left me unsatisfied. I felt myself smashing through a wall of magical energy and a bunch of really tough skin and muscle before even hitting his armour. We'd lost a lot of the power that the strike had initially come with.

The attack that was meant to completely behead him stopped halfway through his neck. We were unable go any deeper because of how insane his defenses were.

That said, our attack had yet to end. We hadn't managed to do what I was hoping, but we'd opened up an opportunity, an opportunity I promptly attempted to take by turning my blade into a series of needles and stabbing them into his innars.

Unfortunately, I was too slow. Goldalfa reacted before I did.

「Shockwave!」

「Gaaahhhh!」

He released a burst of magical energy and sent us flying.

Shit, he has balls!

The dude completely disregarded the fact that we half beheaded him and managed to make a calm, composed decision.

His shockwave did much more than just give him some breathing room. It ate through a huge chunk of both my durability and Fran's HP. All in all, it seemed even more powerful than the thing he'd started the match with.

The Rhinokin immediately chased after us, so Fran had no choice but to dodge his attacks as she choked up blood.

「Gaffff...」

『Greater Heal!』

「Fuu... fuu...」

『You still doing okay?』

「Still okay.」

We'd already known long ahead of time, but I felt the urge to reiterate that tanking Goldalfa's attacks was a terrible idea.

『I'm surprised he awakened right off the bat like that. We also failed to actually take him in one go... Oh well, can't be helped. Let's start by stripping away his defenses.』

「Got it.」

I did as per the contingency we'd thought up ahead of time and shoved all my remaining points into a certain skill.

『Be careful of his armour. It's completely outside our predictions, and we have no idea what it can do. Either way, we'll have to go in for a melee. Make sure you don't get hit, not even once!』

「Nn!」

「Doraaaaah!」

「Tsk!」

『Shit, he's already healed up!?!』

Goldalfa leapt at us the moment we finished figuring out what to do. I honestly surprised that his wound had closed that quickly. His sheer vitality was terrifying.

The two fighters began exchanging blows, with Fran dishing out lighter attacks in rapid succession, and Goldalfa attempting to land hard hitting, decisive blows.

The Rhinokin seemed to be pretty much spamming axe techniques, as every single one of his swings was accompanied by a shockwave. I was pretty sure he would've killed at least 100 spectators had there not been a barrier protecting them. The shockwaves weren't too-too strong, but taking them head on wasn't what I could call good for my durability, so Fran ended up dodging or warding off all the hits as opposed to blocking them.

All of Fran's attacks were aimed at the cracks and seams in Goldalfa's armour, but we weren't really able to damage him nearly as much as we expected to. The cuts we gave him immediately closed because he'd just regenerate off the damage; we weren't able to inflict any lasting wounds.

I tried destroying the armour itself, but even it ended up healing back up immediately after sustaining damage, a trait that honestly wasn't too unexpected in and of itself given that Fran's Black Cat Set was capable of doing the exact same.

Another thing I tried was throwing a few spells at him from time to time, but to little effect. Attacking him with magic failed to do anything beyond verifying that he'd been telling the truth when he said that his armour gave him magic resistance. Goldalfa himself had already had ridiculously high physical defense to begin with, so slapping that flashy armour of his onto him basically turned him into a walking fortress.

「Haaaaaaa! Shooockwaaaaaaaaaveeeeeeee!」

Goldalfa once again used his innate skill at close range and sent out a blast of magical energy in every direction. The skill itself was a simple one, but it was incredibly difficult to deal with nonetheless.

At close range, the skill inflicted damage while also messing up our posture. It also appeared to be able to function as a sort of barrier if instead cast at medium range.

More importantly was the fact that it inflicted both physical and magical damage simultaneously; it didn't seem like we would be able to fully negate its effects through the use of Physical Damage Nullification.

We'd managed to mitigate most of the damage this time around by deploying a barrier, but we still did sustain some. Goldalfa had us right where he wanted us. We were currently deadlocked into a stalemate, one he knew Fran would eventually lose because he was able to outsustain her.

Fuck that!

『Urushi!』

「Ruff!」

「Huh. You can even use summoning magic!? Interesting, but doesn't matter. You won't be able to break through my defenses with any sort of attack that lacks in terms of power.」

That was something we already knew. Urushi was pretty strong, but he was indeed the type that relied more on chaining attacks than delivering single, more powerful blows — not that it actually mattered. We didn't call for Urushi because we'd wanted him to deliver a decisive blow. We had other, better plans in mind.

『Keep it up Fran! The plan's working. I managed to absorb some of his mana.』

(Nn!)

The skill I'd leveled up just a bit earlier was in fact Mana Absorption. I didn't have enough points to get it past level 9, but, it was still managing to exactly what I needed it to do regardless.

Fighting Colbert had taught that Physical Damage Nullification wasn't something that made us invincible. We could still take damage from magic, or anything else in its vein. Plus, the skill consumed a tonne of magical energy.

To that end, we devised a plan that would address both those points at once: absorbing our opponents' magical energy. It allowed us to not only drain mana directly from our opponents, but also from their attacks, which, in turn, would naturally weaken them.

I've had the skill at level 3 for a while. I could've boosted it up back when we were fighting Colbert as well, but I'd decided against it at the time because I didn't know how effective it'd become. I didn't want to make a bet we weren't sure to win, especially given the value of my self-evolution points.

Plus, we still had a few other cards left to play, so I'd kinda been on the fence and ultimately ended up just leaving it.

The reason I was willing to level it now was because we'd asked Rumina and Dias about its effectiveness, and both had told us that it'd get pretty annoying to deal with if leveled.

In fact, it was such a good skill that even Rumina thought it to be dangerous, and so, I'd actually really been looking forward to seeing just how effective it was capable of becoming.

And it really had lived up to its reputation, as I'd managed to drain away Goldalfa's mana bit by bit. The reason we'd called Urushi was because we wanted him to be able to help us land a few more hits, and therefore force Goldalfa to use Regeneration and drain his mana even more quickly.

Fran casted a dark-type elemental blade, and continued attacking her opponent as often as she could. She still wasn't able to inflict any significant damage on him, again, that didn't matter, as we were stealing more mana from him than his armour could passively recover.

Long story short, the name of the game was to make him run out of mana before finishing him off with a single blow.

「Huh? That's... strange...」

The A ranked adventurer realized his mana was draining more quickly than usual, but he didn't seem to have caught onto the fact it was because I was absorbing it. That said, he didn't panic. He kept his cool and switched to what he believed to be the best possible strategy.

「Nuooooooooooooooooo!」

He suddenly cast all manner of defense aside and raised his axe above his head in order to deliver a powerful, almost desperate seeming downwards swing. It was an attack that would totally mince Fran to pieces should it land, but it was far too obvious for her not to dodge.

But it seemed that he hadn't been aiming for her to begin with.

「Groundshaker!」

Instead, he'd been directed his aim towards the stage itself. A series of cracks expanded from where his axe landed and shot all the way through the arena.

The force of the impact caused the battlefield to shake. His technique appeared to be one that caused a local earthquake, and in doing so, prevented one's opponents from moving around. It looked to be about a magnitude 7 on the Japanese scale, or a 10-12 on the Mercalli scale, as it heavily restricted both Fran's and Urushi's actions.

「Mmph!」

「Woooff?」

『He was aiming for the stage itself!?!』

The axe that'd been embedded inside of the arena came flying into Fran's torso immediately after the ground began shaking. Goldalfa had suddenly started moving much more quickly than he had throughout the rest of the battle's duration, likely an effect caused by him combining his Super Fast Reflexes skill with a technique that emphasized speed over all else. He moved at such a speed that even I, who'd been speeding up my thoughts with space/time magic, had a hard time processing, so there was simply no way for Fran would be able to react to his assault while also dealing with the earthquake.

『Short Jump!』

I immediately teleported us away from him and casted a few spells on Fran.

「Gebuu....」

『Greater Heal! Greater Heal! Greater Heal!』

The attack was basically the opposite of the one we'd finished Colbert off with. That is, it completely gouged out Fran's stomach. Her innards had come flowing out from the wound together with her blood as she vomited both her vital fluid and her stomach acid simultaneously. I was honestly surprised she didn't just instantly die from the shock.

『Fran!』

「Still... okay...! Bfuh...」

Her legs seemed a bit unsteady, but she managed to stand up, spit out the blood she had in her mouth, and recover before the Cradle of Time activated.

「Oraaaahhh!」

『Shit, he's not letting up!』

Goldalfa didn't pull back because Fran had healed. In fact, it'd actually caused him to immediately begin chasing after her yet again.

(Now! My turn!)

Fran had just had a giant gaping hole torn in her stomach, but she wasn't feeling even the slightest bit discouraged. In fact, she was as far from backing down as could be. Taking the hit had only fueled her battlelust further.

[1] Literal is Varja Wall, but I localized it because I feel like Varja is much less understood here than it is over there.

202. The Phoenix's Armour

Chapter 202. The Phoenix's Armour

The Phoenix's Armour

Goldalfa once again smashed his axe into the ground after rushing up to us.

「Groundshaker!」

He attacked us the exact same way he had earlier. The slash that followed after his Groundshaker was undoubtedly fast, but the same couldn't be said for Groundshaker itself. Hence, I was able to react and equip Physical Damage Nullification before he came at us with the follow up.

「Nuuun!」

「Useless.」

「Impossible!」

Goldalfa wasn't the only one react with surprise. The audience had done the exact same, for his attack had seemed to stop immediately as it was about to land on Fran. Rather, it seemed to have been made to stop by some sort of invisible wall.

That, combined with the fact that Fran hadn't moved or even recoiled from Goldalfa's attack despite the disparity in strength, caused the scene to almost seem surreal.

Both the girl and wolf took advantage of the opening created and began assaulting him so we could once again drain his magical energy. The two large scale attacks he'd just performed had already eaten away at his supply. He no longer had enough to even last a minute.

「Cheyaaa!」

「Nuuuun!」

He tried retaliating with a few quick strikes of his own, but he wasn't capable of matching her speed, and so, he ended up running flat out of mana.

「Ugh! My mana's dry...!」

Running out of mana caused the effects of his Awakening skill to fade away alongside several skills and the incredible magical energy that bolstered his defenses. It had finally come time for us to finish him; we had to win before his armour managed to restore his mana.

『Short Jump!』

We teleported behind Goldalfa in an attempt to once again execute the attack we'd hit him with right when the battle began.

「Nuun!」

「Kuh!」

However, we weren't greeted by the exposed, unprotected back we'd been hoping for. Instead, our sights were focused on the battleaxe that came flying straight towards us the moment we moved.

The actual movement part of teleportation was instant, but there was a brief delay between when one disappeared and when one reappeared.

Though he'd lost his Super Fast Reflexes skill, he still managed to predict our actions and cope with them. I couldn't tell exactly why that was, but suspected it was either driven by his experience as a warrior, or more simply, his intuition as a Beastkin.

Either way, we ended up getting sent flying the moment we arrived at our destination. Fran managed to use me to block the strike, but we felt a powerful shock from it nonetheless.

Worst of all was that it confused me. I didn't know where we were supposed to aim next. I considered attempting his front, his left, and his right, but wasn't able to come to a decision. From there, I moved on to considering leaving Physical Damage Nullification on and just going for whatever, but again, I wasn't able to immediately make my decision. Fortunately for us, Fran wasn't nearly as wishy washy as me, and immediately figured out what she wanted to do.

(Master, up! Will use attack that can't be stopped even if noticed.)

『Got it.』

(Urushi. Stay, distract.)

(Woof!)

『Long Jump!』

I teleported us way up above the arena. Goldalfa immediately looked around in an attempt to find where Fran went, but didn't think to check the right up above him. The same went for both the audience and the caster, neither tried looking up.

「Wow! Fran seems to have suddenly vanished into thin air! Just what is going on!? Did she turn invisible, did she teleport somewhere, or did maybe even dive into the shadows!?!」

Little did the caster know, the correct answer was none of the above.

I kept myself afloat with Telekinesis as Fran stood atop the side of my blade and concentrated while manipulating several skills simultaneously.

「Ready.」

It took a few moments to get everything prepared.

『Aight.』

Fran leapt off me, grabbed me, and then began running straight down towards the arena.

She used Air Compression and Magic Thread Weaving to launch herself. She then transitioned into casting Sky Leap and Charge alongside a few wind-based spells in order to accelerate herself even further as she plunged straight towards the ground. She also readied herself to activate weight boost the moment before she landed to double her power while also cloaking my blade with both lightning and flame.

It was exactly the technique she'd used back when we fought Rynford — save for the fact that it was more potent.

This time, she'd started from higher up, and also boosted her speed even more through the application of Space/Time Magic. She'd also become much more skilled in the art of drawing her sword and attacking in a single motion thanks to Sword Lord Arts, and obtained a boost to what was basically every single one of her skills because of Vigour Mastery. As a result, the resulting slash was many times more powerful than it'd been back then.

「Brilliant Lightning Rush!」 [1]

She took things even further by activating the Innate Skill she'd only just learned a few days back, and in doing so, cloaked her body in lightning and accelerated herself even further.

Fran practically became a spear constructed solely of light as she descended upon Goldalfa like a meteorite.

「Haaaaaaaaah!」

「Where in the-」

A bright flash of light filled the arena as Fran hit Goldalfa so hard she caused a massive shockwave to run through the entire venue. With the attack came a thundering roar so loud it rocked my very core.

「Gggaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaahhhhhhhh!!」

Goldalfa let out a roar halfway between a scream and a battlecry as he was assaulted by the attack.

『Short Jump!』

I teleported us over to the edge of the arena immediately before Fran actually hit the ground.

The place where Goldalfa had been standing had become a giant crater with clouds of dust swirling around it. Looking at the aftermath really deepened my impression of the attack. It was absurdly powerful; it alone had managed to cut my durability in half. The dust clouds didn't remain for too long. They were soon blown away as a bunch of magical energy swelled up from inside the area.

What we saw left us just as shocked as Goldalfa and the audience had been when Fran had totally stopped the Rhinokin's attack.

『That's impossible! How the hell is he regenerating without any mana!?!』

We'd taken Goldalfa down to a knee. his right arm was flat out gone, and the parts of his right half that did remain had been totally crushed alongside his crimson armour. His body's fluids were spouting out from the gaps within the crushed metal protector. Likewise, his left arm had also been totally crushed, and his left foot obviously fractured. I was pretty sure we'd done a hell of a lot of damage to his internals as well.

But he didn't die. In fact, he'd begun healing at an incredible rate.

What he was going through could no longer be described as just High Speed Regeneration. It was much more akin to Instantaneous Regeneration. The exact same thing was happening to his armour. It too was regenerating and repairing itself at a similar pace. It only took him a few seconds to return to his prior state. It almost looked as if we'd never actually attacked him in the first place.

「Haa... Ha... I never expected you to be able to force my armour to save my life this early on in the battle...」

He stood himself back up as the words left his mouth.

「The armour I'm wearing is called the Phoenix's Armour. It allows its wearer to recover incredibly quickly.」

Yeah, I could kinda tell just by looking.

He literally healed himself up in an instant. His armour already made him hella tanky as is. Him getting the ability to instantly regenerate any injuries on top of all that practically made him a walking nightmare.

How many times could he use that shit anyways? I highly doubted it was something he could do in perpetuity, but I also highly doubted it was a one off thing either. It was something made by a God-tier Blacksmith. I couldn't even begin to imagine just how powerful it really was.

(Master! Again!)

『I don't think we'll be able to play the same card twice. I'm pretty sure he'd just counter.』

(...Got it.)

The reason we'd been avoiding just teleporting around all the time was because we were worried our opponents would figure out how they were supposed to deal with it after seeing it put to use.

Teleporting still seemed risky even if our opponents didn't know about it. Fran was able to react and deal with the Demon we fought back then despite his ability to lurk in the shadows, and he'd been much stronger than she was. It was possible for teleporting to end up just being a trap against more powerful foes because they'd end up figuring it out at first glance.

Besides, that whole falling thing we did really left an impression, so it definitely wasn't something that could catch someone off guard multiple times in quick succession.

That was important and all, but glancing at Goldalfa had led me to immediately shelve any further thoughts on the subject.

「Awakened?」

『Yeah. His mana's all the way back up to full.』

Everything we'd done to drain his magical energy had gone down the toilet. We basically ended up being put back in the exact same situation we'd started off at, but in worse condition.

I couldn't help but feel the urge to call his armour out on being a bullshit OP equip, not that I really had the right to.

(No choice. Will have to use that)

『Yeah... I guess so.』

Draining his mana again would be pointless, as his armour was sure to restore it. And so, we decided to change up our strategy.

There was a big of lag time between him getting injured and his Instantaneous Regeneration actually popping. In other words, we'd be able to take him down so long as we killed him before the skill actually activated. It was honestly a rather simple plan, but it was also really the only thing we could actually try.

『The only problem is that you're not really adjusted to it yet. Your body won't hold if you keep it up for too long, so try ending it asap.』

(Know already.)

『Keep in mind that I won't have Physical Damage Nullification up. You'll be moving way too quickly for me to be able to turn it on and off.』

(Planned that from start.)

Fran had totally resolved herself for what was to come, so I decided to do the same. The tournament was effectively a safe space. The Cradle of Time made it so we wouldn't die no matter what happened, and so, I figured there was no harm in playing a riskier card that we'd normally shy away from.

「Urushi. Support from shadows.」

「Woof!」

「Going now.」

This tournament was one we'd done everything we could to prepare for. Me, I'd ranked myself up by farming up Magic Stone Points.

But what about Fran then? What exactly did she do?

The answer to that question was a simple one.

「Awakening.」

She evolved.

[1] Someone help me come up with a better name for this. It's literal is [Flash Blossom Lightning Rush.] The Blossom can be petal or flower. It can also be Brilliant if you repeat it twice and turn it into an adjective as opposed to a verb.

203. Black Lightning

Chapter 203. Black Lightning

Black Lightning

「Awakening」

An incredible amount of magical energy swelled up within Fran's body the moment she muttered the word, after which her small frame began emitting jet black streaks of lighting.

Her magical energies ran rampant and kicked up a windstorm in her wake. Goldalfa stood within it, completely dumbfounded.

「Awak...ening...?」

「Nn.」

「A Black Catkin just... awakened...?」

Our opponent had forced our hand and made us pull out our trump card, one we'd only managed to obtain with Rumina's help.

In other words, Fran had accomplished her goal. She had finally evolved.

Fran's appearance hadn't really changed much. She didn't suddenly grow a coat of fur or have her skin change colours. She didn't magically turn into an adult or anything like that either. The few changes that did occur were a lot more minute.

The first change lay in the colour of her eyes, which ended up dying themselves gold. The second and more significant change came with her tail, which she had currently straightened out and pointed towards the sky like a lightning rod. If one were to pay extra close attention, they'd be able to notice that her tail was no longer a pure shade of black. It instead now had alternating black and ash-grey stripes throughout.

That was it. Honestly, the outward changes caused by her awakening could be said to appear rather plain in comparison to the others we'd seen thus far.

Most of her changes had instead been directed within, and boy, were those changes massive.

Her Agility and Magic stats had both risen by an entire 300. The wounds she'd suffered had healed, and she'd instantly recovered all her magical energy.

But that wasn't all.

The most terrifying change was the one that'd occurred to the skill she'd gained upon evolving.

「Brilliant Lightning Rush.」

Fran's Brilliant Lightning Rush was an even more powerful version of the Lightning Rush skill Rumina had showed us upon our first encounter.

It was already a powerful skill under normal circumstances, as it provided or bolstered the levels of the Strength Boost, Agility Boost, Super Fast Reflexes, Lightning Element Bestowal, Lightning Boost, Lightning Damage Nullification, and Lightning Magic skills.

To reiterate, using Awakening made this skill even more powerful, namely by doubling all its effects.

「Would look at that ladies and gentlemen!? Fran has awakened! It appears she's got the rarer type of awakening, the one that doesn't particularly change one's appearance, but you can really feel a sense of majesty from the black lightning radiating off her body!」

If Fran had just evolved, she would've been like Rumina. The lightning emanating off her body would've been blue and not black.

But it wasn't.

Fran hadn't evolved into a mere Black Tigerkin. She'd instead become a creature spoken of only in legends, a Black Heavenly Tigerkin.

「Apparently Black Catkin being unable to evolve is nothing but just a load of bogus!」

The caster's reaction was pretty much the same as most of the other humans present. He was surprised, but that was it. As far as he was concerned, there was much more interest to be in had in how much stronger Fran had gotten than the fact that she'd actually evolved.

It was a reaction that completely failed to capture the emotions of any and all of the Beastkin that happened to be present.

Goldalfa seemed to have totally forgotten that he was in the midst of a duel. His stance loosened, and he simply stood staring with his mouth gaping wide open. He was so shocked by what he'd just witnessed that he was unable to put any his thoughts into words.

Directing my gaze over to the VIP area allowed me to see the Beast Lord, who was supposed to be calmly sitting in his chair, leaning on the railings and staring a hole straight into the stadium. Roche, who'd been standing by beside him, was practically sharing Goldalfa's expression; he was staring at her completely dumbfounded.

「A Black Heavenly Tiger?」

Goldalfa's mind had finally started to move again, but he was still clearly shaken, as his voice was dry and raspy.

「To think that I would end up facing off against none other than one of the legendary tribe's members...」

His words were but mutters under his breath.

「But... how did I not notice it till just now...?」

(Go?)

『Do it!』

Fran took advantage of the fact that he was wide open and initiated an assault.

「She vanishe-ugghhh!」

「Shmph!」

「Guhhhh! W-What...!?!」

To Goldalfa, it looked as if Fran had flat out vanished, but in truth, all she'd done was dash up to him. The Black Lightning within and all around her pierced right through the God-tier blacksmith made armour he was wearing and began scorching his flesh.

Awakening had made Fran ridiculously powerful.

It had given her enough speed to circumvent Goldalfa's super fast reflexes and enough power to completely shatter his defenses.

「Gaaah! Gruhhhh!」

「Haaaaah!」

Fran dashed around him and continued delivering blow after blow.

From this, one could observe that the Brilliant Lightning Rush skill's power came not only from its sheer speed, but also its ability to allow incredibly sharp turns.

The maneuvers we were pulling off were difficult even at much lower speeds. The laws of physics would get in the way and disallow us from actualizing our ideas.

But the skill made it so that they didn't apply; engraving the core attributes of the lightning element into her body had allowed her to temporarily overcome them.

Our actions were much like those of Zefmate's. We assaulted our opponent while making use of our ability to move around at exceedingly high speeds.

That said, the actual resulting attacks couldn't really be compared to one another, as Fran far exceeded Zefmate in all three of power, speed, and turn rate.

Thinking about Zefmate made me realize something, something that seemed to explain why Blue Catkin hated Black Catkin as much as they did. It must've been because of this, because evolved Black Catkin could do everything evolved Blue Catkin could, but better.

「H-How incredible! I can't even tell what's going on! Fran's disappeared, and seemingly started attacking Goldalfa with a series of bands of black light! I can only tell he's getting hit because he keeps groaning in pain!」

It was as the caster commented. Each of Fran's movements was leaving a trail of black light in its wake. The sheer number of them almost made it seem like there was a giant dark dome around the rhinokin.

Loud metallic clangs rang throughout the arena as Fran smashed me into Goldalfa's Phoenix Armour over and over again. The damage we inflicted onto the armour was more or less completely nulled, as it regenerated at a rate far faster than we could damage it. However, that only applied to the armour, and not Goldalfa himself. His flesh wasn't able to recover quickly enough from our consecutive strikes; we were managing to stack up damage on him.

It was something that couldn't be helped, as the Black Lightning would course throughout his body each and every single time he tanked one of Fran's strikes.

「Ngaaaaahh!」

We managed to hurt him so badly in just the span of a few seconds that he ended up completely giving up on defense. Instead, he swung his axe at us before desperately launching shockwave in all directions. It seemed to be an action he'd done in hopes of hitting us so he could attempt to make a comeback.

But it was too slow. Fran dodged it with ease by simply lowering her stance to avoid the incoming axe, an action that served to evidence that she'd totally seem him through.

Likewise, she dealt with the shockwave with ease as well; all she needed to do to neutralize it was deploy a Perfect Barrier with her full power. The sheer amount of magical energy she put into the act caused the barrier to be unable to last for more than just an instant, but that was all she needed. She didn't have any issues timing it well enough to completely negate Goldalfa's attack.

Her relentless assault continued despite his struggles.

The short exchange of blows caused Goldalfa to realize that it was no longer possible for him to hit Fran, and so, he folded his arms and shrank the size of his frame as much as he could while making sure he protected his head. The stance almost seemed to resemble the kind one would take after accidentally ramming one's face into something on accident and recoiling in pain, but, it wasn't actually one that illustrated a will to surrender. In fact, it was something he'd done in order to win — he'd completely abandoned even the notion of attacking and instead focused all his resources on his defenses.

『Damn it, that's one of the Beast Lord's direct subordinates for you! He knows exactly what our weakness is!』

Brilliant Lightning Rush was an incredible skill, but as one could expect, it naturally came with a cost. It placed an abnormally large burden on Fran's body, and constantly ate away at both her health and mana. It didn't require as much compensation as something like Latent Potential Release, but again, it wasn't what I could call risk free.

Rumina had told us that all of the Ten Original Tribes in fact had their innate skills function in a similar manner. The power of the Divine Beast was far too great for a mere Beastkin to sustain and would lead to death if left unchecked, hence why the ability was instantiated in the form of a toggleable skill as opposed to simply granted permanently.

The Beast Lord had naturally awakened to one of the Ten Original Powers, and thus, there was no way Goldalfa, as one of his guards, would be able to go without knowing about its weaknesses. He knew that using the skill was effectively the same thing as slowly killing oneself, hence why he'd chosen to attempt to stall Fran out.

「Haaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaah!」

「Ngggh.....Ugghh!」

Goldalfa didn't have that much health left, but Fran had yet to show any sign of letting up.

Brilliant Lightning Rush was definitely a risky skill to use, and not something one could keep up for too long.

Or at least that's how things it would've been under normal circumstances.

Fran's case, our case, wasn't like any other. Fran's mana pool wasn't just limited by her own mana. She could draw from mine should she need it. I was also capable of healing her and topping her health off whenever.

As a result, we were able to sustain the skill for far longer than Goldalfa expected.

「How are you... still goingarrh!?!」

That said, it wasn't like we had any real extra breathing space. The rate at which Fran's HP was draining was steadily increasing. We'd never kept the skill going for any extended period of time, so we only now learned that its resource consumption would gradually increase with the duration for which we sustained it.

Goldalfa's HP dropped to less than 10% of its total value.

All we needed to finish him was just one last push, one that was rather difficult for us to pull off. Fran's HP had started dropping so quickly that I needed to heal her every couple seconds.

It was something that she herself had noticed as well.

(Master, will end now!)

It seemed that we could've actually just deactivated the skill and fought him normally from here on out. In fact, that was probably the better option to take if we just wanted to go for the win.

But Fran didn't.

She wanted to win as through the use of her power as a Black Heavenly Tigerkin in order to put her tribe's pride and sheer willpower on display.

That was simply a choice that she decided to make, a choice she'd long set in stone.

(Will hit with more powerful attack.)

『You sure? There really isn't enough room for that here.』

(No problem!)

『You really sure?』

(Nn!)

『Well, if you say so... I'll focus on defense.』

(Thanks.)

『Urushi, go hit him once real quick then run the hell away.』

(Woof!)

Urushi did exactly as we instructed and harassed Goldalfa a bit by suddenly jumping out of his shadows, hitting him once, and jumping back in before teleporting into the barrier that protected the tournament's spectators.

Fran immediately shouted the name of an incredibly powerful attack the moment she verified that he'd retreated to safety.

「Black Lightning Advent!」

A jet black thunderbolt as wide as a drum of liquid erupted from Fran's extended palm and swallowed Goldalfa whole before detonating into a massive electrical explosion.

Our eardrums nearly burst as the sound waves created by the attack assaulted them.

「Nn...!」

I protected Fran by activating Perfect barrier, but the blast was far too powerful for that alone to hold it back. The sheer resulting force sent Fran flying into the barrier that protected the audience. To it, her mass was about as insignificant as that of a single leaf. Dust assaulted our bodies as hundreds upon hundreds of pebbles flew at us faster than would bullets. A wave of heat then rammed its way into us, one so hot it would've turned Fran to ash had she been unprotected.

『Shit! We're eating this much recoil even though I put up a goddamn barrier!?!』

Countless bolts of lightning raged through the arena and writhed within it as would a swarm of dragons, an assault Fran herself only managed to survive due to her Lightning Damage Nullification skill. I'd protected myself with a barrier, so I managed to get away with just a minimal bit of damage.

(Went bit overboard.)

Whaddya mean a bit... Is what I would've liked to say had I been sure that our strike had managed to finish Goldalfa off.

The audience began to stir as the attack's after effects finally started to fade.

There was a massive crater where Goldalfa had been standing just moments ago. The stage itself had already gotten pretty messed up because of all the backs and forths the two fighters had experienced, but what Fran had just done was on a whole 'nother scale. She'd completely obliterated over 70% of the arena.

Goldalfa was at the crater's center, his body reduced to nothing but a mangled carcass. He was on both knees, his head hanging forward. His body didn't seem to twitch even in the slightest.

We couldn't see him all that well because the sheer amount of heat caused by Fran's attack had caused his surroundings to distort. The dirt around him had been raised to such a temperature that it'd even transformed into red-hot glass. The Rhinokin's prized Phoenix Armour was crumbling, with half of it already gone. It seemed to have been damaged so badly that it'd become unable to repair itself. All visible parts of his body had long been turned to charcoal. I was no longer able to see the thing that had formerly been Goldalfa as a entity that bore life.

「Got him?」

『Oh god damn it Fran! You're not supposed to say that, you're totally jinxing it right now!』

「Nn?」

Fortunately, my idiotic worries were needless. The pillars placed around the arena began to glow, and seemed to cause Goldalfa's remains to do the same.

The mangled corpse was returned to its former state after about ten seconds. His body was once again in perfect shape. It was like he'd never been wounded to begin with.

Wait, so... does that mean it's over...?

「And it looks like the Cradle of Time has activated, meaning Goldalfa has lost the round by meeting his demise! Ladies and gentlemen, our winner today is none other than Fran, The Magic Sword Girl!」

204. The Events that Took Place The Day Before the Tournament Began

Chapter 204. The Events that Took Place The Day Before the Tournament Began

The Events that Took Place The Day Before the Tournament Began

The Martial Arts Tournament was set to begin tomorrow.

Fran, Urushi, and I were doing the usual thing and honing our skills within the Eastern Dungeon.

『Hey Fran, I think it's about time you take a break.』

「Little longer.」

『You sure? You seem to be losing focus.』

Fran had pushed herself to fight for such an extended duration that she'd started to show signs of mental exhaustion. She'd started to accumulate a good bit of damage from both mistakes in and out of combat. In other words, she'd started getting worse at both noticing and disarming the traps she came across.

「...Little bit longer.」

In spite of all that, she ended up refusing. She simply bit down on her lips and narrowed her eyes as she scoured the area for another enemy to engage.

『Haaaahh... Fine. Just a little longer then.』

I was a bit concerned that she wouldn't be in her best possible condition for the prelims tomorrow if she pushed herself any further, but ended up complying regardless.

In a sense, being in top form was also exactly why she was pushing herself as hard as she was in the first place. Fran wanted to evolve before ultimately having to face off against the Beast Lord, but she wasn't showing any signs of doing so. Hence, she only ended up feeling the need to push herself even harder.

『Would you happen to have a moment?』

We suddenly heard Rumina's voice resound through our minds as we continued pushing ourselves onwards.

「Rumina?」

Hearing her voice just pop out of nowhere had left me a bit surprised, but I soon managed to calm down as she just seemed to be using something that resembled my telepathic abilities.

『I have a matter I wish to discuss with you, and would like you to pay me a visit if you do not mind it.』

「Got it.」

Though I was a bit curious as to why she went as far as to call for us, I ended up deciding to take her up on her offer immediately. Her timing was pretty good seeing as how Fran needed a break, and she was also kinda just a teleport away, so there wasn't really any inconvenience associated with us dropping by.

Rumina greeted us as we teleported into the room she'd made for us.

「I... welcome you...」

「Nn.」

『Well, you did tell us to drop by, so.』

「Indeed I did...」

Something about her seemed a bit off. She appeared to have less magical energy than usual, and kinda just gave off a bit of a frailer impression overall. It'd almost seemed like something bad had happened to her.

「Rumina, doing okay?」

「I apologize for worrying you. You need not mind me, I am simply feeling a tad exhausted.」

『You sure you're okay?』

「I am fine. More importantly, I would like to offer the two of you a trial. Have you any interest in it?」

『You said a trial?』

「A trial indeed. I cannot describe its details, but would like for you to partake in it. What say you?」

The fact that she couldn't tell us any details was kinda fishy, but I highly doubted that Rumina would try throwing us under a bus or luring us into a trap.

「Be warned, the trial will be an exceedingly dangerous one.」

「Got it.」

Fran didn't seem to doubt Rumina even in the slightest, as so she immediately nodded and acknowledged that she knew that she was going to be getting herself into something difficult should we accept.

I figured that there was practically no way Fran was going to choose to refuse Rumina's request given how close the two had become, but ended up deciding to quickly double check her intentions regardless.

『You want to take her up on this whole trial thing, Fran?』

「Of course.」

『You 100% sure? The fact that Rumina's going out of her way and saying its dangerous probably means it's really dangerous.』

「Don't care.」

It looked like Fran had already made up her mind and wasn't planning on changing it.

「I take it you wish to accept my trial then?」

「Nn!」

Rumina had us head over to the massive room in which she'd sparred with Fran.

Entering it caused us to catch sight of something that left us feeling completely overwhelmed.

『Is that supposed to be a magic circle?』

「Huge.」

The enormous magic circle filled basically what was the entire 100 meter wide room. It was created in such a way that its parts extended into a sort of radial pattern with its point of origin at the room's center. The independent pieces all came together at the edges to form a single massive design.

It wasn't like any of the other magic circles I'd seen to date. None of them were on this big a scale.

I couldn't even begin to fathom what this one was supposed to be used for.

「I shall now proceed to summon a Magic Beast. Demonstrate to me that you are capable of defeating it.」

Rumina's voice almost seemed to sound like it was coming over an intercom or PA System.

「Nn. Got it.」

So our trial was to defeat some sort of Magic Beast? Why that of all things? We'd been doing that for quite some time already. Was fighting the thing she was summoning going to benefit us in some particular manner...?

「Very well. Begin!」

The magic circle began shining as an incredible amount of magical energy suddenly started getting concentrated into the circle's centerpoint. Strong winds swirled around the room in response, winds powerful enough to make a complete mess of Fran's hair. She had no choice but to squint in order to observe the energy as it took on it lumped itself together.

A single magic beast revealed itself once the magical energy that formed it finally dimmed and vanished.

「Hah...hah...」

Controlling all that energy had caused Rumina to begin panting rather heavily.

「Rumina. Something wrong?」

「I... am fine... Mind me not...」

The fact that she didn't sound even the slightest bit fine served to evidence that the act of summoning whatever it was she wanted us to fight had taken one hell of a lot of magical energy.

What appeared before us was a humanoid creature with its entire body dyed jet black. The dark miasma enveloping its body made it difficult for me to make out its form, but I assumed it was something not too different from a Kobold given that its head and whatnot seemed to be covered in fur.

However, appraising it allowed me to determine that it was something so fiendish and powerful that a Kobold couldn't even begin to compare. It looked even more powerful than the pillbug we fought the other day. It didn't have too many skills, but, its stats were ridiculously high, as if to compensate.

Awakening

Description: Unknown

Huh... It apparently had the Awakening skill...?

「Defeat it... and absorb its magic stone...」

I knew it! This was something she'd summoned so she could help Fran evolve!

Still, summoning it had totally exhausted her. It seemed that not even a Dungeon Master could pull off something like this without having to really push themselves.

Fran seemed to understand that, as her expression had transformed and become more determined than it had ever been before.

「Master, let's go!」

『Let's do it!』

Fran immediately drew me and engaged the magic beast in close quarters combat.

「Gaaaaurouooooououuu!」

「Mmph!」

「Gagauuu!」

「Kuh!」

Holy crap was that thing fast. It moved so quickly it was able to avoid Fran's attacks with ease and even throw in a few counters. Moreover, it also basically instantly healed all the wounds we inflicted upon it.

「Gaaoooooruuuuu!」

「Mmph.」

『And now it's gone and awakened!』

The entire magic beast's body seemed to swell up in size. Most notable were its fangs and claws, both of which doubled in length. It'd gotten stronger stat-wise as well. Its agility in particular had totally skyrocketed so much that I'd actually lost the ability to keep up with it. Its hands almost seemed to disappear each and every single time they moved.

We were able to fight it because we had access to Sword Lord Arts, but, its obscenely high agility stat made engaging it extremely difficult. Its Presence Detection skill made it so we couldn't even hit it if we tried getting the jump on it by teleporting.

I figured we'd have an easier time hitting it if we just used magic, but, it had access to the Magic Resistance skill, so we wouldn't be able to deal any real damage to unless we hit it really hard. Knowing that, I tried hitting it with an Inferno Burst immediately after it avoided one of Fran's attacks.

「Gugyaa!」

Tsk.

I clicked my tongue. The attack worked, but it didn't work well enough. The magic beast had both a high health pool and a decent magic stat. Those two factors, when combined with its Magic Resistance, meant we wouldn't be able to finish it off in a single strike, which in turn meant that it would just end up regenerating.

「Troublesome.」

『I know right? It looks we won't be able to finish it off unless we kill it in a single blow.』

「Nn.」

We quickly devised a plan to deal with the situation, albeit a rather simple one. Urushi and I were to slow down the magic beast with surprise attacks and Telekinesis respectively while Fran went in for the kill.

The plan's execution went pretty well. Fran initiated by attempting one of her sword drawing techniques, which caused the magic beast to attempt to dodge, but Urushi latched onto its foot while I restrained it, and so, she ended up landing her strike.

It was a full forced, reckless blow. I figured there was no point in conserving my durability, as we needed to end the battle immediately if we actually wanted to win it. Thus, I threw in as many skills as I possibly could in an attempt to use my entire mana pool. We also activated a whole bunch of different elemental blades despite the fact that doing so was sure to damage me so badly I'd end up temporarily unusable. Specifically, Fran activated lightning, while I pitched in with both wind and fire.

「Haaah!」

『Let's do this!!!!』

「Gyaggyaaooooohhhh!」

The magic beast panicked and attempted to do everything it could to escape us.

But it was already far too late.

Fran's strike had already landed and seperated the Magic Beast's left and right halves. I'd felt its magic stone, which had been located within its heart, split into two cleanly cut pieces.

Our attack had drained the hell out of my durability. I had less than 20% remaining. Cracks ran down my blade as it slowly began to crumble. Still, it was worth it, especially since selling what was left of the creature we'd just killed was sure to earn us a pretty penny.

Both the considerations I just mentioned were honestly nothing but mere afterthoughts. I was instead much more focused on my skill page. That is, I was hurriedly looking through my memory in hopes of finding the skill I'd just obtained.

『Where the hell... Found it!』

The skill I'd been looking for and the skill I just found was Awakening.

『We did it Fran!』

「Nn...!」

『Should I swap it in right away?』

「Please.」

I equipped the skill, thereby allowing Fran to make use of it. I felt like I was soaring above the clouds, but did my best to stay calm so I could immediately inform her that the deed had been done.

『Should be done now. You feel anything?』

「Nn... Can use it.」

Her affirmation doubled as confirmation that she was now finally capable of evolving. Given that, I settled down and silently waited for her to do the deed.

「Fu... Hah... Nn! Awakening!」

She took a couple deep breaths before activating the skill and causing the amount of magical energy within her to skyrocket.

『Looks like it's working!』

「Woof!」

Black lightning started erupting from within her and rampaging through her surroundings. The storm of both electricity and wind that engulfed the room forced both Urushi and I to retreat from where she was while pondering whether or not she was actually okay.

『Hey Fran! You alright!?』

「Ruff ruff!」

She didn't respond even though we called out to her, which in turn led me to worry that she'd lost control of her abilities.

Fortunately, that wasn't actually the case. The raging energies around her eventually settled down to reveal her with both her tail and ears completely straightened out. A second look made me realize that her tail was actually a bit different how it normally was. It'd become striped, with alternating shades of its usual black and a slightly lighter, ash-grey shade. The difference between the two colours was so minute that I could only barely make it out because of the magical illumination that filled our surroundings.

「Gmph...」

Large teardrops began flowing down Fran's cheeks.

Her dearest wish had just been fulfilled.

I didn't need to ask to know that countless memories and emotions were swirling about within her.

I remained silent as I approached her and gently, telekinetically stroked her back.

She grabbed onto my handle and used me to support herself as she began to cry.

She eventually ended up collapsing forward and pressing her forehead against the flat of my blade. Feeling both her warmth and pulse almost made me want to join her in crying despite the fact that I was a sword.

In fact, I wasn't the only one that'd started feeling that way, as Urushi, who'd snuggled up against her, had started to tear up as well.

「Whimper.」

It took about 10 minutes for Fran to finally stop crying.

She rubbed her eyes, stood up, and showed a bit of a shy smile before rubbing Urushi's head, as if to hide the fact that she felt embarrassed.

「Sorry.」

『Don't worry about it. We know how much this means to you.』

「Thanks.」

『Alright, how about we check everything over real quick?』

「Nn!」

Fran sniffled one last time before tightening up her expression. She looked down her hands as she opened and closed them in order to feel out exactly what about her had changed.

『Well? How do you feel?』

「Nn... Overflowing with power.」

『Hmmm, well you don't look too different, so I guess I'd better check your sta-WHAT THE FUCK!?!』

Seeing Fran's stat page force me me into a state of shock.

Her agility and magic stats had both been boosted by 300. Her HP and Mana had both been completely topped off, and she'd even gained an innate skill by the name of Brilliant Lightning Rush, all seemingly because she'd used Awakening.

『Evolving sure does come with some pretty impressive looking effects. Wait a second...』

Glancing over Fran's stat page again had caused me to do a double take. I'd assumed that she'd turned into a Black Tigerkin because that was what Rumina was, but I was wrong.

『Hey Fran, you uh... kinda just became a Black Heavenly Tigerkin.』

The Black Heavenly Tigerkin were legendary Beastkin that were by no means weaker than the Golden Flame Lionkin that held the Beast Lord's throne.

『I wonder what all this is supposed to mean...』

「...」

『What do you think, Fran?』

「...」

『Fran...? Urushi...? Hello? Hellllllo...?』

「...」

Both my companions had suddenly gone dead silent.

Taking a second glance at them made me realize that they'd completely stopped moving too. They weren't even so much as twitching or anything like that at all. They were simply unmoving. It was almost like someone had stopped time, and that someone couldn't have possibly been me given that I hadn't used Space/Time magic at all.

「The hell's going on?」

Darkness came out of nowhere and swallowed my surroundings as I asked the question. I couldn't process what'd happened. It was almost like my sense of sight had been completely turned off.

T-The hell just happened? Are Fran and Urushi both still fine?

「Don't worry. Nothing's happened to them. I've just temporarily stopped time for everyone but you.」

『Huh? What?』

「You sure have gone and done it now... I never would've thought it was possible for you to allow her to evolve the way you did.」

『Huh?』

「You meeting her, that young Black Catkin girl, was nothing short of a miracle in and of itself already. I never expected the two of you to get this far.」

『Uhhh. So who exactly are you?』

「I'm one of the individuals governing over this world and its ways. I guess the most understandable way for me to explain my identity to you would be for me to name myself as Goddess of Chaos.」

205. The Goddess of Chaos

Chapter 205. The Goddess of Chaos

The Goddess of Chaos

I couldn't help but stare at the woman that'd called herself the Goddess of Chaos.

Her claim was one that was a little bit more than a little bit hard to believe. The Goddess of Chaos was supposed to be the goddess that gave rise to dungeons, and thus, I'd expected her to be someone that exuded an air of magnificence, dignity, and grandeur.

The woman in front of me, however, gave off what was more or less the exact opposite impression. To me, she looked like an absurdly beautiful woman with tanned skin and silvery hair. The only air she gave off was one of an adult woman's seductiveness; her outfit was composed of nothing more than just a few thin pieces of cloth.

However, she'd proven herself capable of stopping time for everyone but me, an act that should've been impossible for anything but a god. Realizing that caused my gut to promptly inform me that I'd gotten myself into something troublesome.

「Wow, troublesome? That's mean of you.」

『Huh?』

W-Wait, can she read my mind!?

「I can.」

『I-I'm so sorry!』

Aw fuck. I hope I didn't piss her off. Angering her seems like a really bad idea given how divine retribution is apparently actually a thing here.

I'm sorry! I swear I don't think of you as troublesome. In fact, I hold nothing but respect for you. I'm telling the truth here! Having the opportunity to meet someone as beautiful as yourself had totally moved me and thrown my thoughts into disarray!

「Kufufufufu. There's no point trying to flatter me. I can tell exactly what you're really feeling just by looking at your soul.」

『Awww shit. Uhh...』

「People like you are pretty rare. Most people have a bit more respect for the gods.」

『Oh come on. I do respect you! I swear I do!』

「I don't particularly mind how you feel about me. I'm not petty enough to be angered by anything that insignificant.」

『S-so does that mean you're not going give me divine retribution for being blasphemous or anything like that...?』

「Don't worry about it.」

Oh thank fucking god! I'd totally expected the gods to be unreasonable tyrants because of the punishment they'd given to the Black Cat Tribe.

「I do have a more dignified appearance. I purposefully only ever send a part of myself into the human realm and mold its form so that it appears like that of a human. It can't really be helped that I don't appear all that god-like as I am now. Likewise, I also attempt to speak the same language as those I descend upon. Speaking of which, I think this is probably the most casual conversation I've had with a mortal to date.」

The fact that she'd only sent a part of herself to see me reminded me of something I'd heard back when I still lived on the Earth. I think people used to say something along the lines of “seeing god's true form will make you lose both your sight and sanity.” That aside though, what was important was the fact that she'd only taken human form because she'd wanted to talk to me in particular.

「We'd never actually expected any faith from you in the first place, given that you were summoned from another world.」

『Huh? Wait, you guys knew that I was from another world?』

「Of course we did, but let's leave that aside for now and maybe come back to it some other time. There's something much more important I want to talk to you about.」

『I'm guessing you want to talk about Fran and how she's evolved?』

「You got it.」

Hmm... Well, a goddess literally just went out of her way to talk to me, so, I guess that pretty much confirms that the Black Cat Tribe really is suffering from some sort of divine retribution.

「Exactly. The Black Cat Tribe has committed a mortal sin, and thus, we've made it more difficult for them to evolve.」

『So you're here to talk about the method I used to make Fran evolve...?』

「Looks like you've gotten straight to the point. That's right. The method you used was one we'd never accounted for. It's outside all our predictions, and honestly speaking, quite problematic.」

I mean, I knew we kinda cheated the system, but I never would've thought what we did was bad enough to merit divine intervention. Wait, shit, does that mean Fran's g-

「Don't worry. I won't do anything to harm her, nor will I revert her to her original state.」

W-whew. Well, I guess that means we've at least managed to dodge the bullet — not that we were actually totally scot-free just yet.

「So, have you figured out why I came to see you in particular?」

『Uhhhh... Because I cheated the system?』

「Nope. That isn't the only issue I came to discuss with you.」

『Huh? Really?』

「I wouldn't have bothered descending if that was all there was to it.」

Wait, what? What exactly was the issue then?

「Naturally, that isn't to say that you cheating the system poses us no issues altogether, as it means that you're defying the very principles the world runs on.」

「Would it be easier for you to understand me if I called the world's principles the system on top of which it's based? Consider, for example, if the entire world was operating within the framework of something like a computer program.」

Oh, so there's like a big overarching system that everything else runs on? I guess that must be where the System Announcer comes from?

「Most beastkin typically learn the Awakening skill upon reaching their level cap. Using the skill allows them to awaken the power that lies within them and prompts them to evolve.」

I guess that means there's actually 5 stages involved in the evolution process? It looks kinda like: Hit level cap -> Unlock Awakening -> Use Awakening -> Draw out latent potential -> Evolve?

「The Black Cat Tribe has been cursed, and thus, as I'm sure you know, its members need to do more than just reach their maximum levels.」

「She managed to bypass the principles set, obtain the Awakening skill, and evolve. It seemed that she was a rather talented individual as well, as she'd acquired the skill for herself with just a single use of it. What concerns me is that the exact same thing may continue to happen going forward.」

『Oh, I get it. So what you're trying to say is that anyone could evolve so long as they just equipped me.』

「Yeah, and that's exactly the problem. There would be no point in the divine retribution if equipping you allowed any and all to bypass it, and that's simply not something I can overlook.」

The goddess stared right at me as she spoke.

Wait, doesn't that kinda maybe mean that I might just be neck deep in shit?

206. Of Sin and Retribution

Chapter 206. Of Sin and Retribution

Of Sin and Retribution

I returned the goddess' gaze as I felt a fit of nervousness wash over me, to which she responded by raising a pair of fingers and speaking another line.
[1]

「The Black Catkin are shackled, no, cursed, precisely because they'd incurred divine retribution. There are two manners in which this curse of theirs can be undone, each with their own unique conditions.」

I-I guess that must mean I'm not totally screwed? Whew! God damn, she had me shivering in my boots for a second there.

「The first of the two possibilities requires a single individual to slay either a single Evil Being ranked in at A or higher, or a thousand weaker ones. Fulfilling one of these two conditions releases that individual in particular from the curse, and allows them to evolve.」

Wait, is it really okay for me to know that? I could've sworn Rumina wasn't allowed to say anything about it. Hadn't the gods like totally gone out of their way to obscure the fact that Black Catkin could even evolve? Like I could've sworn they flat out deleted it from everyone's memory.

「Your wielder has already evolved. Rumina isn't restricted from discussing the topic with any other evolved Black Catkin, so she's most likely going to tell you once time unfreezes regardless. Given that, I decided that I might as well tell you right now since that was what we were talking about anyway.」

『O-Oh, I see.』

But like, Urushi and I were kinda both there too, and neither of us were Black Catkin, let alone evolved ones, so wouldn't Rumina ultimately not actually have to chance to tell Fran about the Black Cat Tribe's circumstances? It seemed that they wouldn't reach our ears even if the two ended up being able to discuss them amongst themselves too.

I mean, I'm not complaining or anything. I'm totally down for soaking up information because the goddess forgot she shouldn't tell me or decided to be loose lipped or something.

「It's fine. You're allowed to tell any familiars you summon whatever you want, so the dog doesn't count. And you're one of my kin, so you don't count either.」

Welp, she totally just read me like a book again. Wait. Did she just say what I thought she said? I kinda felt like I just happened to hear something that totally blew my mind.

『Did uh... you just say that I'm one of your kin?』

「Well, it would technically be more precise to say that I am one of the many individuals bound to you as kin.」

『C-Could you tell me a bit more about all that?』

「Nope, since we have to finish talking about evolution.」

Ugh... I mean I guess she's right, but god damn did she get me curious.

「The other possible scenario requires the Black Cat Tribe to defeat either a S ranked Evil Being, or one of the Evil God's kin without any assistance. Performing said feat would free not only the battle's participants, but the entire Black Cat Tribe from their curse. They would once again be regain their status as one of the Ten Original Tribes.」

Man, redeeming the whole race sounds kinda tough.

「It's only fair given the graveness of their sin.」

『So uh, what exactly did they do to deserve all this anyways?』

I'd only just realized that the goddess kept going on and on about grave and mortal sins, but had actually refrained from mentioning exactly what it was the Black Cat Tribe had done.

「One of the Black Cat Tribe's chiefs, or rather, one of the former Beast Lords, had undone the Evil God's seal and allowed his clan's members to absorb its power in order to bolster their combat prowess. It was a dangerous ploy, and one that had half succeeded.」

Wait, is absorbing the Evil God's power actually different from turning into an Evil Being?

「It's far worse than just that. A fair portion of the royal family's members evolved into what I can only call a half Evil God, half-beastkin being. Half of the Black Catkin had succeeded in absorbing the Evil God's power. However, many also became Evil Beings, lost control of themselves, and ended up being put down by their tribesman. We, the gods, couldn't stand the sight of the Evil God's powers being put the use in such a selfish manner. Thus, we eliminated the royal family and any other individuals that had obtained the Evil God's power before administering the survivors with a punishment, one that hindered their ability to evolve.」

Well uh... apparently they did something much worse than what I'd been expecting them to do. Like, using the Evil God's power to evolve into creatures that were effectively demi-gods clearly made it seem like they were picking fights with the actual gods. Like, I'm not really sure what else they'd expected to happen.

『Alright, I get that what they did was pretty serious.』

「You existing in your current state allows the Black Cat Tribe's members to evolve without first atoning for their sins.」

The goddess didn't glare me, but I kinda felt like she wasn't exactly what you could call happy with me given the tone of her voice.

「I understand that the Black Cat Tribe's members may consider evolution to be one of their greatest desires. That, however, fails to justify exploiting a loophole in the system and evolving without first making up for their mistakes. Continuing to circumvent their punishment is an act that can be regarded as yet another sin, one that would incur an even greater punishment.」

『An even greater punishment? Care to uh... elaborate?』

「Extinction.」

『T-That's kinda...』

「I was just talking in terms of what ifs. I want you to understand just how serious the topic at hand is.」

『A-Alright, I get it.』

My interactions with the goddess led me to the conclusion that the gods were both terrifying and a huge pain in the ass to deal with. Yeah uh, her going out of her way to talk to me like this definitely meant I'd gotten myself into some deep ass shit.

『So uh, what exactly should I do? I mean, I understand that I shouldn't use my powers to evolve anyone other than Fran, and I can swear I won't.』

「I know that you really do mean what you just said, but, that alone isn't enough. The fact stands that you're a magical item capable of granting your wielder the ability to use the the Awakening skill, an item I cannot possibly allow to exist.」

She can't allow me to exist? Does that mean she's going to...

「Calm down. I don't have any intention of doing anything as violent as eliminating you.」

『A-Alright!』

Whew! Holy shit, and I glad she's telling me that. She had me really worried there for a second. Man, that situation just there was probably the most dangerous one I'd ever been in.

「I'll fix everything right away.」

Snap

『Huh? What'd you just do...?』

The Goddess of Chaos snapped her fingers and caused my blade to momentarily begin shining. I could tell that she'd done something to me, but I wasn't too sure exactly what that something was.

「I've made it so you're bound to your wielder.」

『Bound?』

「Yup. I've made it so you can only have one wielder at once. No one else will be able to equip you until your current wielder dies. Anyone that forcibly does so anyway will receive retribution.」

『Whaddya mean by retribution?』

「Anyone that tries equipping you will be met with a form of punishment. Those that don't know of your circumstances will just be slightly shocked. Those that do know of your circumstances will likely lose their lives as compensation.」

That's hella terrifying, but it kinda didn't really matter anyways because I hadn't planned on letting anyone other than Fran equipping me to begin with. Hence, the end result was basically like me gaining a built in anti-theft device.

「I'll also be taking the Awakening skill away from you just in case, and making it impossible for you to obtain it going forward.」

I was a bit disappointed by the fact that I wouldn't get to use the skill myself at all, but, I didn't really mind because I didn't want to disobey the goddess, especially given how thorough she was being.

「Awakening only works on Beastkin to begin with, as it allows them to unleash the powers that lie dormant within them. There's no point in you using it to begin with.」

『Oh. Right.』

Welp, I guess there really isn't any point in me having the skill at all then.

「I'll also make it so Rumina won't be able to ever summon another Magic Beast capable of Awakening — not that she'd be able to for several hundred years anyway, given how much it's exhausted her.」

『Oh, so does that mean Rumina was only all frail and stuff because she had to summon that magic beast?』

「That's right. Rumina, as one of my kin, has been restricted in her ability to aid Black Catkin. She's unable to speak about the subject, but that isn't nearly all. I've also banned her from creating items capable of conferring the Awakening skill, and made it so that she'll destroy herself if she helps any Black Catkin fulfill their evolution conditions.」

『Huh?』

Wait, you serious!? Doesn't that mean Rumina's going to—

「Calm down. She's not dead, or will she die from what she's done.」

『Even though Fran's managed to evolve?』

「Yes, and though she provided assistance, it wasn't direct assistance. She didn't directly give the girl what she needed. She'd instead helped you help her. She's lost a great deal of her power as a result, but she won't die.」

Whew. That's good. Fran would've felt really bad if she'd learned that her evolving had caused Rumina's death.

「That said, I cannot allow the same thing to occur in the future, which is why I've now restricted her even further.」

Rumina seemed to have pushed herself quite a bit to make everything come together the way it did. I guess this also means that she wasn't kidding when she'd asked Fran if she'd be willing to kill her in order to evolve.

「It would be unfair of me to take a skill away from you without compensating you in any which way, so I'll switch your Awakening skill out for a different one.」

The goddess snapped her fingers once again.

I immediately looked at my stats because I was curious as to what had changed.

『Uhh... Evolution Concealment?』

「The skill does as its name suggests, and allows one to hide the fact that one has evolved, most notably from other beastkin.」

The Extra Skill I'd obtained seemed like a pretty damned good one. Having people find out about Fran's newfound evolution would probably kick up a huge fuss, so it looked like it'd be one we could put to use immediately.

There was, however, a bit of a problem.

『Err... I think I just lost 5 Self-Evolution Points.』

「Just saying, you caused a problem significant enough to necessitate my interference. It's only natural that I still do take something from you. Just be glad I did you a favour and decided to give you a new skill to replace the one I took away.」

『S-Sorry.』

Eh, you know what, the skill I got was worth it, so I guess I'll just call it even, especially since I doubted anything would come out of me bitching and complaining anyways.

The goddess nodded as if satisfied after verifying that I wasn't going to voice any more complaints. She then started floating into the air and growing transparent.

「My business here is done, so I'll be taking my leave.」

Realizing that the goddess was totally leaving caused me to immediately begin questioning her.

『Hey wait! There's still something I want to ask you! Just what the hell am I? You must know, right? Given how you said I'm one of your kin and all that?』

I couldn't help but ask her about myself seeing as how she was one of the first people to have a clear idea as to exactly what I was.

「Well... Telling you that isn't something I'm supposed to be responsible for, so I guess I'll just give you a hint. Go meet the god-tier blacksmith that resides in the Beastkin's Country.」

『You mean the one the Beast Lord rules?』

I recalled that Old Man Gallus had stated that all of the god-tier blacksmiths were MIA...

However, the goddess' words seemed to imply that his words hadn't necessarily been correct. Did that mean that the Beast Lord secretly had one serving him or something? Heading to the Beast Lord's country didn't exactly sound easy. It was on a different continent, and led by one of our enemies. There was no way I could go, especially not with Fran in tow seeing as how it'd put her in danger.

「The Blacksmith in question may be able to provide you with additional information, though, I cannot say for sure this will really be the case.」

『So not even you know?』

「I don't. Not even we, the gods, can predict the future.」

『Even though you're gods? Being able to see into the future totally seems like a god-like thing to do...』

「The fact remains that we can't. You, and many others seem to have made the mistake of assuming that gods are capable of determining one's fate and reading into what'll happen later down the road, but that isn't the case. Despite that, many believe in destiny. They think that the gods govern the precise ups and downs of their lives.」

You know, that is kinda true. Even I kinda ended up thinking that me meeting Fran was an act of fate.

「They think that the gods have all under their control, that the world follows a precise, predetermined blueprint.」

『Yeah, I get what you mean. I mean, a lot of people don't actually believe in something that exaggerated, but there are a good deal of people who believe in something kinda along those lines.』

「But you see, there wouldn't be a need for me to appear to you as I had if that were the case.」

『You've got a pretty good point, now that you mention it.』

「Destiny doesn't exist. Fate is nothing but a series of coincidences. What I mean is, you are responsible for what happens to you, regardless of whether that thing happens to be good or bad.」

I guess that means that me meeting Fran was just a coincidence?

「Exactly. You meeting her was just a coincidence. You two being capable of working together as well as you do is also a coincidence. Likewise, you meeting all the right people along the way was also a coincidence, one I would even call a miracle.」

For some odd reason, hearing the goddess' declaration kinda made me feel a bit embarrassed.

「I've already said quite a bit, but I'll throw in one last statement. I, as the goddess of Chaos, am expecting something great from the two of you.」

Her words made me kinda happy, an emotion I actually wasn't really sure whether or not it was okay for me to be feeling given the current circumstances.

「Fufufufu. That's a question I don't know the answer to.」

『Hey, wait up!』

「Farewell. I bid you a nice, healthy dose of chaos.」

The goddess disappeared after voicing one final, sinister-sounding line. I couldn't help but feel as if she'd totally just cursed me.

[1] Localized. What she actually does is raise a finger as she talks. This normally involves placing it near one's face, and in general is an action that's supposed to have a bit of cuteness to it. I couldn't figure out how to make this work in such a way that its meaning could be intuited by an English reader, so I said fuck it.

207. The Black Cat Tribe and the Goddess

Chapter 207. The Black Cat Tribe and the Goddess

The Black Cat Tribe and the Goddess

We headed back over to Rumina shortly after I finished talking to the Goddess.

「I am glad that you have both managed to evolve and remain in good health.」

I'd yet to switch in the Evolution Concealment skill I'd just gotten, so Rumina was immediately able to figure out that Fran had evolved.

「Nn. Thanks.」

「And it appears that your evolution came with quite the pleasant surprise...」

Rumina trailed off and remained silent for a few seconds as she gazed at Fran. Her emotions were clear from the look on her face. She was both pleased and shocked.

「I... I had failed to even fathom the possibility that you would become a Black Heavenly Tigerkin.」

Honestly, I, as a non-beastkin, didn't really understand just how much it meant for one to evolve into a Black Heavenly Tigerkin, and thus, I didn't feel the sense of impact that should've accompanied Fran's ascension even after coming to realize that Rumina had started casting the younger Black Catkin a meek, respectful gaze.

Thinking about it a bit more deeply caused me to realize that she'd basically become the stuff of legends, especially seeing as how even Rumina herself was just a regular Black Tigerkin.

『So what exactly does one need to do in order to evolve into a Black Heavenly Tigerkin in the first place?』

「Hmm... It fortunately appears that I have become capable of explaining Fran's circumstances to you given her evolution.」

Right, I remember the Goddess making mention of that.

「Black Catkin must fulfill three requirements in order to evolve into Black Heavenly Tigerkin. The first two are numerical, and relate to the agility and magic stats in particular. The third is the ability to use Lightning Magic.」

Equipping me allowed Fran to fulfill all necessary conditions, especially seeing as how my Skill Sharing ability made it so that my skills were treated as if they were her own.

「I never did suspect that you would fulfill all necessary conditions despite my awareness of Master's abilities. Rather, I did not expect the conditions to take the bonuses provided by his abilities into account. I believe that you, Fran, are the first Black Heavenly Tigerkin not to be of the royal bloodline.」

『You serious?』

「Indeed I am. I dare say that the two of you encountering one another was nothing short of a miracle.」

『That's what the Goddess said too.』

「You have heard the Goddess speak!? Does that mean you have met with her!?!」

I once again was left feeling a bit bewildered because of how Rumina ended up suddenly drawing closer to Fran with her face painted full of shock. But again, I managed to make a bit of sense out of the situation after thinking it through. Rumina was a Dungeon Master, and therefore, one of the Goddess of Chaos' kin. In other words, there was basically no reason for her not to be a devout believer.

「Not me. Only Master.」

「M-Master, could you please elaborate!？」

Though I was aware of her circumstances, I didn't really get why hearing about my conversation with the goddess had totally gotten the Black Tigerkin all fired up and excited.

Like, seriously, what the hell? I'd been expecting Rumina to resent the Goddess of Chaos given that she seemed to be responsible for the curse that'd been afflicting the Black Cat Tribe for the past 500 odd years. She'd administered a collective punishment that involved pretty much all the tribe's members despite the fact that many of them hadn't deserved to be held responsible. In fact, the decision seemed to have been one made and mandated by the former royal family.

I decided to ask Rumina for a bit of an explanation, which in turn made her switch to an expression that was much more difficult to read.

「I do admit to have entertained the thought on at least one occasion... However, one must consider that the gods differ greatly from us mortals.」

Some gods, like the God of Nature, were so fundamentally different from the races that they held no tolerance for their actions. As a result, the punishments and retributions delivered by gods like the God of Nature were often considered harsh and unjust.

I remember hearing mention of stuff like that back on Earth, and so, I honestly wasn't all that surprised by it. I'd heard many tales of people regarded the gods as unreasonable because the two parties weren't able to come to any sort of mutual understanding. It was only natural that different gods would have different standards, and that many of these standards would vary from the ones mortals would find reasonable.

「The Goddess of Chaos is one of the more understanding gods, as she shares many a similarity with the mortal races.」

The hell's that supposed to mean?

「It was none other than she that deprived the Black Catkin of their ability to evolve and wiped all memories of their evolutions.」

『Wasn't that just her oppressing you guys?』

「I believe it to be the opposite.」

Apparently, the Goddess of Chaos had done a lot for the Black Cat Tribe as a whole. Many of the other gods had demanded that the entire race be purged, but she'd managed to talk them down and negotiate. That is, she managed to get the other gods to agree to a compromise in that allowed them to survive in exchange for a difficult trial and the erasure of any and all memories relating to the Black Cat Tribe's former glory.

「The gods miscommunicated and misunderstood each other. They had only robbed the non-beastkin races of their memories. The few Black Catkin that had avoided the gods' retribution still knew of their evolutionary methods. Likewise, the same applied to all the other Beastkin races. Thus, the Black Cat Tribe found itself capable of passing on its knowledge through works of literature.」

「That was in fact a result of the actions perpetrated by the new Beast Lord and his subordinates, the Blue Catkin. They stole and erased all the literature and records they could while selling the Black Cat Tribe's members into slavery. They forbade the act of disclosing any information relating to the Black Cat Tribe's evolutionary methods and in doing so, prevented our tribe's newborn members from learning them. The passage of time amplified the effects of their bans and ultimately eliminated the very notion that we Black Catkin were capable of evolution.」

『Alright, I get that. I can totally see why you hate both the Beast Lord and the Blue Catkin, and that all makes sense to me, but, like, there's still one thing I don't get. How do you not resent the Gods for what they've done? Like, seriously. The Divine Punishment they threw at you guys is the whole reason you guys ended up turning into slaves for what was a whole 500 years.」

「Don't understand either.」

Fran agreed with me given that she'd just learned about everything that happened, but Rumina, who happened to know much more than us, didn't.

「Undoing the Evil God's seal and thereby endangering the entire world is an act that merits none other than our tribe's complete and utter destruction. If given the choice, I would prefer to describe the span of time that has elapsed as a mere 500 years as opposed to an entire 500 years.」

It wasn't until Rumina mentioned literally destroying the entire world that I realized the weight the Black Cat Tribe's sin, and a bit of further thought led me to realize that 500 years wasn't actually all that much here considering there were elves and whatnot.

「I would also venture to claim that we, as a tribe, deserved to lose access to the throne and descend into slavery. Our behaviour was once nothing short of tyrannical, as evidenced by our downfall. We would have been assisted by many a tribe had we been reasonable rulers and beloved by our people. I do pity our tribe's modern members, I lament the need for them to bear their ancestors' sins, but even so, I harbour only the slightest bit of resentment for the gods.」

She, unlike us, didn't really feel that the gods were in the wrong. In fact, she seemed to feel extremely grateful that the Goddess of Chaos had managed to prevent the other gods from driving the Black Cat Tribe to extinction.

「I believe that should function to answer your questions. Might you now be willing to elaborate on the Goddess' words?」

I figured that there wasn't really any point in being all secretive around Rumina, so I decided to just tell her everything I'd been told.

That said, half the stuff the Goddess told me was stuff she definitely already knew, so I kinda expected the conversation to end up revolving around evolution and the fact that the Goddess had jacked my Awakening skill.

『The weird part is that we'd kinda already defeated something that should've counted as an A ranked Evil Being in the past...』

There was no way Rynford wasn't at least an A ranked threat, and we were 100% sure we killed him. Fran not being able to evolve in spite of that didn't really make all that much sense.

「Was that act one you accomplished with the aid of any other individuals?」

「Yeah, we had a few other adventurers help us out.」

「I believe that is why. The condition allows only a single individual to evolve. Thus, the curse should only be undone in the case that one functions to defeat an A ranked Evil Being as an individual.」

In other words, anyone that wanted to evolve would have to clear the trial's conditions without any help.

Rumina suddenly bowed her head and apologized to Fran as I shifted topics and brought up the Black Cat Tribe's sins.

「I am sorry.」

「Nn?」

「I was once in a role akin to that of one of the royal family's advisors. Despite my position, I was unable to convince the royal family's members to cease their actions, but in doing so, incurred their displeasure. Thus, I was removed from my post. I was unable to regain my honor. I became an adventurer and then a Dungeon Master. Since then, I have simply lived, and nothing more.」

「Not your fault.」

「That is not true, not in the slightest! It should have been possible for me to convince them and change their minds!」

Rumina's failure was clearly bothering her, and had likely been on her mind for the entirety of the past 500 years. I could tell that she'd been blaming herself, that she thought it was her fault, and not the gods', that the Black Cat Tribe had been forced to suffer.

That would explain why she was so eager and willing to harm herself in order to help Fran evolve. She definitely had taken a liking to Fran, but that wasn't all. She'd also wanted to atone.

「I would... also like to apologize for putting you in danger's wake.」

Hearing me describe my conversation with the Goddess had caused her to issue yet another apology with her face paled. It seemed she was worried that we'd managed to incur the gods' wrath.

「Not your fault. No mistakes.」

「That is not true. My considerations were far too shallow.」

The look on her face was terrifyingly sincere.

「I mind not facing my own demise, but risking yours is a mistake that that my life alone would not suffice to correct.」

「Rumina, dying not allowed.」

Fran gazed at Rumina with a pained look on her face. Even just thinking about Rumina one day upping and vanishing had made her start feeling a sense of sorrow.

「There was nothing else I could have possibly done for you.」

「Don't need to do anything.」

「I...」

「Staying by my side, more than enough.」

Fran spoke in a soft but clear tone of voice as she latched onto Rumina, hugged her, and buried her face in her chest.

The older Black Catkin directed her gaze down at Fran with a bit of a troubled look on her face, but she ended up gently stroking her back regardless.

「I recall Kiara had once said those precise words.」

「Nn.」

「It is almost as if nothing has changed, despite the passage of over 50 years.」

Both parties ended up smiling awkwardly as soon as they'd calmed down. Neither seemed used to the roles they'd suddenly taken; Fran was unaccustomed to being doted on, whereas Rumina was unaccustomed to being fawned on.

Rumina was a bit tired, so she ended up taking a seat and leaning back into her chair after they separated.

『Oh yeah, Rumina, how are you feeling anyways?』

I recalled the Goddess saying something about how Rumina had exhausted herself or her energies or something. She'd probably been pushing herself real hard.

「It will not take long for I myself to recover. However, I will require a significant amount of time to recover the power that I had been storing up as this dungeon's master.」

The dungeon was going to end up being easier to deal with, but that wasn't actually really a problem at all given that Dias was doing a bunch on his end in order to make sure she didn't end up getting killed.

「I would be more concerned about yourselves than me. Fortunately, it appears that the skill the goddess bestowed to you should allow you to remain unhindered in your activities.」

『I'm pretty sure there's not really much for anyone to be worrying about on our end.』

「Master, am I correct in my understanding that the Goddess' restrictions were applied to you, but not Fran?」

『Yup, pretty much.』

「I believe that should in turn mean that Fran is allowed to share information that relates to the Black Cat Tribe's evolutionary methods.」

『Oh, you too?』

「Indeed.」

『You sure it's okay though? She kinda cheated the system a bit.』

Rumina's conclusion was one I'd come to as well, but I wasn't 100% sure whether or not she'd actually be allowed to talk about it.

「I highly doubt that the Goddess merely overlooked the possibility of Fran disclosing the information you were provided. Did she make any particular mention of actions you were disallowed from taking?」

「I cannot possibly claim that I am capable of understanding the gods' thoughts. However, I believe that you are permitted to speak of any fact they do not explicitly restrict you from conveying in situations akin to the one we have at hand. Your ability to discuss the topic with myself should serve as enough evidence to prove my hypothesis.」

I couldn't really tell whether or not we were able to discuss the topic because the system simply happened to work that way, or if it was instead because the Goddess of Chaos had decided to allow it out of goodwill, but either way, it seemed like we were allowed to convey a fact that had a good chance of plunging the world into chaos if we weren't careful about how we relayed it.

「It would be to your benefit to direct your attention away from the gods and instead towards other beastkin. It is likely that the Beast Lord and the Blue Catkin that serve him will make note of you should you spread your knowledge.」

Her conjecture seemed fairly plausible. We had to be careful with who we told. The most ideal situation would be for us to spread the info through an information network inaccessible to all but Black Catkin.

「There should be several within the Beastkin's Country. However, I highly doubt you will find anything more than a slum or village comprised solely of slaves.」

I really did want to go check out the Beastkin's Country, but I felt it was honestly way too dangerous for it to be worth visiting.

「Are you planning to visit it? I believe you did make mention of there being a God-tier Blacksmith.」

『Nah. It's not worth the risk.』

「But might learn more about Master.」

『Doesn't matter. There's only a chance the blacksmith'll be able to tell me anything about me. I can't really see taking that chance to be even remotely worth the amount of danger going there'll put you in.』

「But!」

『It's okay. Don't worry about it. We'll get our hands on more clues about my identity eventually, and I'm pretty sure there are better ways for us to tell other Black Catkin about what they need to do in order to evolve.』

「Nn...」

Again, I really did want to pay the place a visit, but it just wasn't worth it.

Or at least that was what I'd thought at the time. My opinion changed when we learned that the Beast Lord was in fact working to the Black Cat Tribe's benefit. That is, he was eliminating Blue Catkin groups and releasing any enslaved Black Catkin he came across.

One could almost say that he might as well have been raised by a Black Catkin.

We later went on to tell Rumina about what'd happened to Kiara.

It seemed she'd really been lamenting what she'd thought to be Kiara's fate, as hearing the news caused her to immediately break down into tears. She clung to Fran, who'd been patting her on the shoulder, and silently sobbed into the younger girl's perfectly flat chest.

Several minutes passed before she finally stood back up, her face red as a tomato.

「I apologize, I was simply overcome with emotion.」

『Well, least it seemed to be a positive emotion.』

「The information you provided me was truly the most wonderful news I have ever heard, and for that, I thank you.」

Rumina obviously wasn't over the fact that she'd failed to stop the Beast Lord 500 years prior, but she'd at least managed to get that whole Kiara thing off her shoulders. Thanks to that, she managed draw out a happy smile.

「Does the Beast Lord's alignment perhaps denote that you are now capable of disseminating information regarding the Black Cat Tribe's evolutionary methods?」

「Nn.」

The truth of the matter was that we'd actually long told Aurel what we'd learned. I hadn't actually been all that willing to tell him because I feared the gods and their wrath. Fran, however, wasn't able to help herself and ended up spilling the beans.

As a result, I'd basically spent the entire conversation worrying whether or not the Goddess of Chaos would suddenly show up and throw a shitstorm.

I valued Fran's safety over all else, but she didn't feel the same. She valued her tribe much more than her life, and so, I didn't end up being able to stop her.

Fortunately, the gods hadn't deemed our actions as ones befitting any sort of retribution and hadn't shown up.

In fact, the meeting had turned out to be a beneficial one, as Aurel had promised to help us spread the word by making use of the beastkin's information network. It looked like all this continent's beastkin would end up learning the truth if all went well.

「And I presume your newfound knowledge has changed your opinion of whether you wish to visit the Beastkin's Country?」

『Pretty much. All we have to do now is try figuring out whether or not the Beast Lord knows anything about the God-tier Blacksmith we're looking for.』

I was expecting him to know exactly who we were talking about, but you could never really be too sure given that God-tier Blacksmiths were more or less living legends. It was possible that the person we happened to be looking for had holed themselves up somewhere far away from society.

「It appears that you have no choice but to win the first three rounds through any means possible.」

「Leave to me. Will win and ask lots about Kiara and Black Cat Tribe. Will also get permission to visit Beastkin's Country.」

「Would you be willing to deliver to Kiara a souvenir on my behalf?」

「Leave to me.」

『Consider it done.』

It seemed we'd pretty much become dead set on heading over to the Beastkin's Country, with our only blocker being that we needed to win the third round.

I was pretty confident that the goal we'd set was one we'd be able to accomplish. We'd experimented quite a bit with Awakening over the course of the past few days, and in doing so, learned just how powerful a tool it could be.

A huge chunk of the data we'd collected was data that related to Fran's Brilliant Lightning Rush.

It had risks that Rumina had made sure to make us aware of, but its payoffs made it a ridiculously good skill nonetheless. It gave us such a huge boost to speed that it allowed us to compete with A rankers.

The Black Lightning that enveloped Fran's body was ridiculously powerful as well. The sheer amount of destruction it wrought was nothing short of absurd, it could bring a High Ogre to the verge of death with just a single tap. Moreover, it also possessed the ability to pierce through armour and anything else that functioned to a similar effect. Lightning was already an element that centered around the negation of one's defenses, as it would remain perfectly effective in the face of metals and other conductive materials. The Black Lightning took that concept a step further and allowed us to almost completely ignore the tough skin that some magic beasts tended to have. Both these bonuses were passive and applied to all Fran's attacks unless we made the conscious decision to negate them.

Using the ability would slowly eat away at Fran's health and mana, but the costs were, in my opinion, effectively insignificant. The firepower it brought was so immense that it rendered me unable to even imagine a foe capable of tanking her attacks head on.

Conferring with Rumina also allowed us to figure out which skills we'd be best off leveling.

「Will at least try to win third round.」

『But it goes without saying that our goal is of course...』

「Victory!」

『Hell yeah! Let's win this shit and then visit Kiara with our heads held hella high!』

「Nn!」

208. Vs Goldalfa — After

Chapter 208. Vs Goldalfa — After

Vs Goldalfa — After

We were called over to the VIP area in which the Beast Lord was situated shortly after we defeated Goldalfa. We could've actually just refused him, but Fran ended up consenting to the offer because she was offered food.

「There you are.」

「Nn. Wanted to see me?」

「Well yeah, I mean you're one of them legendary Black Heavenly Tigerkin, ain't ya? No way I wouldn't want to check you out after figuring out all that.」

The Beast Lord carefully observed Fran as he spoke, an action that ultimately led him to furrow his brow in confusion.

「Yeah, I don't get it, I'm not really seeing it... At first I thought it was just 'cause you were a bit too far away for me to really tell...」

「I feel the same. She seems just like any other Black Catkin to me.」

The Evolution Concealment skill seemed to be capable of doing one hell of a fine job, as neither Roche nor the Beast Lord could actually tell that Fran had evolved. Both were left in a state of confusion due to the discrepancy between their current impression of her and what they'd witnessed earlier.

「Mind me asking how the hell you've managed to cover it up like that?」

「Your Majesty! Asking a question like that is not only rude, but also a breach of her privacy!」

「O-Oh come on...」

The Beast Lord seemed extremely curious because he couldn't figure out exactly what the hell was going on. That said, I wasn't really planning to let him in the loop. I figured that telling him would probably end up causing us more trouble than it was worth further down the line and that it'd be better for us to refrain from doing so.

Fran, however, disagreed.

「Willing to tell.」

『W-Wait, Fran, hold up!』

(Got an idea.)

『Care to share?』

(Just leave to me.)

『You uh... sure?』

(No issues.)

Fran seemed to be insisting that she knew what she was doing, so I ended up yielding and allowing her to do whatever it was she'd thought up.

「But only under certain condition.」

「Oh? What kinda condition?」

「Looking for God-tier Blacksmith. Will tell if told blacksmith's location.」

Her idea was a pretty good one. The God-tier Blacksmith's location was something extremely valuable, and thus, most likely confidential. In other words, it was unlikely that the Beast Lord would be willing to tell it to Fran under normal circumstances even if he was looking out for the Black Cat Tribe and its members.

His personality seemed to indicate that the opposite was quite possible as well, but one could never really know for sure. Plus, having a bargaining chip was pretty much always better than not.

(Master, activate Principle of Falsehood.)

『Roger that.』

The best part about the idea Fran came up with was that it allowed us to gain at least some information regardless of whether or not the Beast Lord lied. All he needed to do was assent and we had ourselves some profit.

「Agree?」

「...I will leave this decision entirely up to you, Your Majesty.」

「Oh hell no, you're not getting out of this! You think about it too unless you want Royce on our asses for making another dumb decision.」

The Beast Lord ended up deciding to tell us what he knew after discussing it a bit with Roche.

「...Close in a bit.」

「Nn.」

The Beast Lord used his fingers to gesture at Fran in order to tell her to approach him, an act that clearly indicated that he not only knew about the blacksmith in question, but also wanted as few people to hear what he was going to say as possible.

「I'mma just flat out say that the Beastkin's Country's got one.」

He whispered right into Fran's ear. His lips were so close to her that even I started to feel a bit uncomfortable. I felt the urge to chop the filthy things off if they so much as touched Fran.

「Really?」

Fran responded to him as I entertained a rather violent thought.

「Really, but the dude you're looking for is a moody little bastard. He's real hard to deal with, and I can't really say whether or not he'd even be willing to see you.」 [1]

「Still okay as long as told location.」

「He's the type of guy that doesn't really hold much respect for authority. He basically doesn't even care that I'm a king. I'll still write you a letter so he knows I sent you, but just be warned that it might not really make a difference.」

「Really? Big favour.」

「Yeah, it's whatever. Now tell me that thing I've been curious about.」

「Nn. Got it.」

Hearing about the Evolution Concealment skill caused the Beast Lord to start brooding.

He and Roche had even started debating whether or not it was something that Black Heavenly Tigerkin would learn upon evolution.

(Master?)

『He was telling you the truth. He not only knows where the guy is, but also plans on introducing you to him.』

(Then will need to go to Beastkin's Country.)

『Sure seems like it.』

Fran went silent because she'd started conversing with me telepathically. The two other beastkin, however, took this as a sign that they'd accidentally left her out of the conversation because they were too focused on their own devices. Thus, Roche ended up apologizing.

「Sorry about that. We will be leaving it at that for now. Thank you once again for providing us with a valuable piece of information.」

「Nn.」

It seemed like there was a good chance they'd want to ask us for more details after the tourney came to an end.

「I would like you to have these, though not necessarily as an expression of gratitude.」

「Purpose?」

Roche handed Fran a pair of tickets.

「These tickets will allow you access to reserved seating. I believe you wish to watch the remaining matches, correct?」

「S'cause you've already made a name for yourself. Everyone'll probably recognize you immediately if you go sit with everyone else, and that'd just be a huge pain in the ass.」

「And that is why we would like for you to have those tickets. The reserved seats are located a fair distance away from the regular seats, and the individuals that have the rights to them are far more polite. Sitting over there will assist you in keeping out of trouble.」

「Thanks. Why two?」

「The other one's for that familiar of yours, the one that had Gold all distracted and shit.」

「His Majesty immediately declared that he wished for your wolf to be seated after seeing it. Obtaining the second ticket was quite the task.」

「Sorry.」

「Please, do not worry about it. My troubles were entirely the result of His Majesty's high-handedness.」

「Oh come on man, what the hell? You're making it look like it's all my fault.」

「How is it not? Oh well, I do not particularly mind as your actions did not result in any harm. You will, however, have to deal with Sir Solbard later on.」

「Yeah, yeah, I know already.」

Urushi's ticket had apparently belonged to a noble from the Beastkin's Country. Said noble had been visiting on his own as opposed to as a member of the Beast Lord's party. However, the Beast Lord had basically forced the man to sell his ticket regardless.

He'd made up for it by inviting the man over to the VIP section, a result the person in question was actually quite happy with given that he was basically handed a chance to build a better relationship with the Beast Lord.

「We had originally secured a single ticket as we had suspected that you would likely not want to remain in the VIP area.」

「Nn.」

The atmosphere in here was a bit stiff, and more importantly, Fran herself wasn't really able to relax. She'd yet to be able to let her guard down around the Beast Lord and his companions.

Fran got ready to leave the VIP area with a huge platter of the food she'd taken from it in tow right about when the noble Roche had mentioned approached it.

She'd offered to pay for what she was going to eat, but the Beast Lord ended up dismissing the notion and calling the platter a reward she'd earned given that she'd beat Goldalfa. And so, we ended up leisurely getting ourselves ready to watch the matches to come.

The reserved seating area was full of nobles and other people with a tonne of spare cash. A bunch of them spotted us immediately, but they didn't end up saying anything, quite possibly because they were afraid of us. Or rather, of Urushi.

He still seemed to be still feeling the rush he'd gotten from the super intense battle we'd just fought, as his face had a bit of a wilder look on it than usual. Honestly speaking, it was a bit terrifying to look at. I didn't really bother asking him to fix it because it kept people away, and all in all, ended up functioning as a convenience.

『So the next match still hasn't started yet?』

「Nn.」

「Woof.」

We'd kinda destroyed the arena. The staff had to repair it before the next match began.

I'd considered the possibility that they'd have like a reigning champion or something carry in a giant ass ring into the arena, but that wasn't what'd actually happened. They were instead fixing everything through the application of Earth Magic. To that end, the person responsible for the repairs was currently drawing some sort of magic circle.

It took about twenty minutes for them to create an entirely new arena and bring in the next pair of contestants.

Today's second match was between Amanda and Erza. I honestly wasn't sure which of the two we were supposed to be rooting for.

Their battle began before I was actually able to make up my mind.

Amanda began moving around the Arena and attacking with her whip while Erza stayed centered around the same area while waiting for a chance to throw a counterattack.

I couldn't help but enjoy spectating the two of them as they fought. One's whip was raging within the barrier's confines as would a dragon, while the other's mace was cleaving holes in the arena every single time it was swung. There was but only one issue...

「Ahhhhh...!」

「Iwwaaaaahhh!」

That one issue was the fact that the buff manwoman would moan each and every time he was struck with the whip. I couldn't help but begin debating whether or not Fran was actually old enough to be watching the two go at each other.

I felt like I most likely would've directed her attention elsewhere and disallowed her from watching if we weren't going to end up fighting the winner.

I expected the match to last quite a while given that Erza had both high defenses and the Pain Conversion skill, but I was wrong.

「Ahuuunnn!」

「It's over!」

「Ahhh... Haaaahhhnnnn!」

Amanda swung her whip in a downwards arc and sent Erza flying. He'd passed out by the time he landed, which made sense.

Not feeling pain was useful and all, but one would still eventually lose consciousness and control over one's body should one take way too much damage.

「I can't believe it! Erza, Ulmutt's Hero, was defeated with ease! Well, that's an A ranked adventurer for you! This round goes to Amanda of Hariti!」

I was surprised to hear the caster openly declare that as the city's hero. It seemed that Ulmutt's people were a lot more accepting than I'd been giving them credit for.

『Did you manage to catch that last attack of hers...?』

「Barely?」

『Yeah, same here.』

Amanda's whip moved so quickly that I hadn't even been able to fully keep track of it from afar. Fran and I were both starting to worry that we wouldn't be able to repel her attacks.

『Looks like our next match is going to be one hell of a tough one.』

「Nn!」

[1] Assuming male, but gender is not stated. Japanese can do that without it sounding out of place, awkward, or even really intentional.

209. Finally, Amanda

Chapter 209. Finally, Amanda

Finally, Amanda

Not much time had passed since Amanda and Erza finished up their duel.

The arena was still in the midst of being repaired, so the next match had yet to start. Fran didn't really have much to do, so she ended up munching on a bunch of skewers as she looked over the tournament's brackets.

「Next, Forrund versus Phillip.」

『I'm pretty sure Forrund'll end up winning.』

We'd seen both of them in combat before, and as a result, more or less ended up coming to the conclusion that Forrund was just as monstrously strong as Amanda.

『Let's hope Phillip manages to hold on and draw out a couple of Forrund's cards so we can figure out what he's got up his sleeve.』

「Nn. Wishing Phillip luck.」

Giving Phillip our blessings turned out to be completely pointless, as he'd ended up losing almost instantly.

Despite that, he was satisfied because he'd more or less fulfilled his goal by taking a few seconds to inform the audience of Barbra's plight and requesting their aid before the match began. Namely, his voice had reached all the nobles that'd finally decided to start spectating because it'd come time for the quarter finals.

The day's fourth and last match pit Royce, one of the Beast Lord's guards, against Fermus, the Dragon's Table's owner. Their battle ended up being far more intense than I'd initially been expecting.

Royce's strategy made heavy use of his ability to teleport both with and without his Dimensional Gate. He combined his ridiculous magic-based mobility with the natural agility that most Rabbitkin just happened to have in order to outmaneuver his foe while attacking with Earth-based spells. I couldn't help but feel a bit frustrated at the fact that he was clearly better at teleporting than I was. He would also make occasional use of Moonlight Magic in order to reflect his opponent's attacks. His ability to make it seem like he could do it without exerting much effort made him appear ridiculously difficult to deal with.

Royce's fighting style was incredibly impressive, but Fermus' completely trumped it in terms of how much it shocked me.

Looking at his status page told me he used threads and all that, but completely failed to inform me as to just how versatile he could be. I'd only been expecting him to be able to use about ten threads simultaneously, but I was way off the mark. His ability to manipulate magical energy freed him from the one per finger limit and made it so he could control over 100 at once.

Fermus' weapons would take on many forms as they chased Royce around the arena. They'd become swords, walls, and nets upon his command. He also had a bunch of his threads strewn around the arena. They were placed in such a way that they were capable of functioning kind of like alarm system, one that prevented him from losing track of Royce regardless of where the rabbitkin ended up teleporting.

It went without saying that Fermus was still taking a fair bit of damage. His threads were extremely powerful, but they weren't capable of stopping the massive rocks Royce would hurl his way. He'd also occasionally tank a few hits when Royce engaged him in close combat, as the rabbitkin was definitely the better of the two when it came to that particular aspect.

Despite that, Royce wasn't able to tilt the match in his favour. The arena was far too small. It prevented him from escaping Fermus' range, so he eventually ended up getting caught in and ripped apart by the older man's weapons.

「And the winner is Fermus, The Dragon Hunter! His strength has yet to fade despite retiring from adventuring! That's someone that's had their name in the records for three years in a row for you!」

Fermus bowed elegantly as he waved to the crowd, a set of actions that probably would've seemed conceited had he not looked nearly as accustomed to them.

『He sure seems strong.』

「Nn.」

『Hmmm... I'm not really all that sure how we're supposed to handle him given how little room there is inside the barrier.』

And with that, the quarter finals ended up coming to an end.

Tomorrow's two matches would be Fran vs Amanda and Forrund vs Fermus.

『Well, looks like we're going up against Amanda.』

My guess was that she probably wasn't going to be holding back given how she'd acted back when she sparred with Fran. If anything, she seemed more like the type of person to do the exact opposite and go all out in order to demonstrate her respect.

Man, I never would've thought that we'd have a chance to duel Amanda with both us and her going all out. She was the same rank as the foe we'd just defeated, but I honestly wasn't all that confident that we could actually beat her. To me, she was pretty much an avatar of strength, quite possibly because we'd been pretty weak back when we'd first met her.

「Will still win?」

『Yeah, I know. We can't let ourselves be stopped here if we actually want to win this whole damn tourney.』

「Nn!」

「Woof woof!」

The way Urushi barked almost made him seem like he wanted to make sure we hadn't forgotten about him.

「Urushi, do best too.」

All of the day's matches had ended, so many of the other spectators began leaving as we thought things through.

『We should probably leave too.』

「Nn. Will go visit Erza.」

『Right. Yeah, we should.』

He'd really helped us a whole bunch, so I figured we might as well pay him a visit and attempt to cheer him up seeing as how he'd ended up losing, and in a pretty showy way at that.

We headed over to his room in the sickbay after asking a nearby clerk about his whereabouts. There, we found him sleeping atop a bed, still unconscious.

I realized after we got a bit closer that his expression was actually a rather happy one.

「Ahhhhnnn... Mfhmmmmmm...」

He tossed and turned towards us and revealed that the expression on his face was in fact a lewd one.

「Ughhhnnnnnn... Kufufu...」

Bits of drool were dripping from the slovenly smile that decorated his face. I honestly couldn't tell whether or not he was actually feeling down.

『You doing okay there Fran? Not feeling disgusted or anything?』

「Why?」

『Uhhh, don't worry 'bout it. All that matters is that you're feeling fine.』

「What do? Wake up?」

『Well, he seems like he's fine from an emotional standpoint, so we could kinda just leave him be.』

「Got it.」

And so, we ended up doing exactly that. We left Erza as is and made our way home.

The night came and went; the semi-finals quickly came upon us.

「Get ready people, cause the semi-finals are about to begin! Today's first match is going to be one of the rarer ones, a duel between women!」

Fran was greeted by a series of cheers louder than the usual ones as she stepped onto the stage.

「This match's winner will have the chance to move onto the finals. The loser'll instead have to compete for third place!」

We were already all buffed up, and Fran was even in her awakened state. She could maintain the state for about an hour so long as she didn't cast Brilliant Lightning Rush, so there wasn't any issue with having her use the skill prior to the match's start.

「In one corner we have the C ranked adventurer that's taken the tournament by storm and even managed to take down an A ranker with her absurd skills! I present to you Fran, The Magic Sword Girl! Actually, scratch that. From here on out, let's call her Fran, the Black Lightning Princess!」

Oh shit, the Black Lightning Princess? Now that's one hell of an awesome nickname. Good job caster dude!

「Her opponent will be an A ranker that's done nothing but put on a show of overwhelming strength time and time again, a woman whose beauty has put her well ahead of Hundred Blade Forrund in terms of popularity. Ladies and Gentlemen, please welcome one of our country's mightiest and most famous, Amanda of Hariti!」

As one could expect, more people cheered for Amanda than they did for Fran. The only reason that we had ended with more cheers than Goldalfa last round was because most people would prefer choosing cute girls over beast-like men.

The innate beauty that came with Amanda's half-elf blood was not something to be underestimated. It'd even caused a decent portion of the women in the crowd had even begun referring to her as their "elder sister" as they cheered her on. [2]

「Hey Fran. I never thought we would end up having to face off against each other like this.」

「Feeling same way.」

「I won't be holding back!」

「Nn!」

Both fighters flashed each other fearless smiles as they drew their weapons and readied themselves for battle. Though their smiles appeared rather sweet, they were in fact attempting to intimidate each other. Under the surface, the two had already long devolved into nothing but a pair of carnivorous beasts.

[1] Imperial wrath is a term associated with dragons because Dragons are often considered to be super high tier beings in asian mythology. Interestingly enough, this term is translated as "outrage" in Pokemon. Definitely one of their better translations.

210. Side: Amanda

Chapter 210. Side: Amanda

Side: Amanda

Watching Fran fight Goldalfa left me in a state of shock. She had become far stronger than I had imagined.

Fran had always been both strong and cute. That, I knew from the moment we first met. I had also known that she would eventually grow if given enough time.

I knew that she would one day surpass me, but I had always thought that day was one that wouldn't come for another 10 years.

I had predicted that she would lose her quarter-final match, but she didn't. She defeated Goldalfa, a foe that I would have had to struggle against.

Her rate of growth was so high it could only be deemed abnormal. It was likely one brought about by her desire to evolve, and made possible by Master, her mysterious sword. I had no doubt that it was he that guided her along.

Speaking of which, it seemed that Master had also grown considerably more powerful. He had performed several surprising feats as Fran dueled Goldalfa, feats that simply could not possibly be attributed to Fran herself. Specifically, I believed it was likely that he was responsible for using the instances in which the Fran had seemingly used Space Time Magic and Lightning Magic chantlessly in rapid succession. Likewise, I also assumed that he was the catalyst that had allowed her to evolve, to do what was considered unthinkable for the Black Cat Tribe's members.

I was unable to tell exactly which abilities could be attributed to Fran, and which could be attributed to Master, but I did know that they would make for a difficult opponent with their powers combined.

They were not to be underestimated, even in the slightest.

The most surprising part of the battle was when they used Physical Damage Nullification. I was only able to recognize the skill because I had once experienced fighting against a foe that happened to have it. Their ability to stop Goldalfa's axe head on and block his powerful shockwave-based attacks with nothing but an outstretched arm served to evidence that they either had the skill or one in its vein.

Physical Damage Nullification was powerful and difficult to deal with, but it still did have its flaws. Its high mana consumption meant I could eventually break through her defenses so long as I continued to attack.

「That girl has quite the strength to her. Is she perhaps some sort of adventurer?」

「I highly doubt that conjecture of yours. She appears to be a Beastkin, and is therefore most likely associated with the Beastkin's Country.」

「I really would prefer if she was to affiliate herself with us given her strength.」

「Well, I shan't be allowing to steal a march on me.」

「She has quite the number of applications if you take her beauty into consideration.」

「Uhyohyo, I would like to take her under my own wing as well.」

The nobles in my vicinity did as they inevitably would have, and began to make note of her. Fran's tender age had led them to believe that she was prone to listen to their commands regardless of what they were.

「I would love for her to join the ranks of my imperial guests.」

「She would make a perfect guard for my daughter.」

I felt the urge to administer a tad bit of discipline, but stopped as I heard several more legitimate ideas arise. I was unable to determine which course of action would be better, and instead ended up once again pondering about her growth.

I had been acquainted with Fran for a long time. We met far before we encountered one another in Alessa. In fact, I was first introduced to her over ten years ago.

But in truth, our relationship was far more deeply rooted than even that.

I had long been acquainted with her parents. They were alumni from one of the orphanages I ran. Her parents' names were Kinan and Framia. I still remembered looking after the two of them in their youth.

They grew up, left the orphanage after getting into an argument with me, and took up adventuring.

We had said our goodbyes on the wrong foot, so I was glad they decided to visit.

It had all been my fault in the first place. Adventuring had not struck me as their forte. The only fate I could imagine befalling them was death, so I denied their dreams. I told them that they would be unable to evolve even if they tried. My criticisms had been too remorseless, and because of that, I failed in preventing the two from taking off.

I had failed in communicating to them. There was likely a better way for me to go about giving them advice. That was why I was really happy that they purposefully sought me out and had me meet their newborn daughter.

They told me that her name was Fran. Both her name, age, and species matched that of the young adventurer I met in Alessa.

But even so, I was unable to discern her identity when I first heard of her. The reason for that was because I had caught wind of both Kinan's and Framia's deaths. Though there was never any word of Fran's fate, I assumed she had followed in their footsteps.

Meeting her and seeing her face, however, changed everything. She looked just like Framia had in her childhood, and so, I put two and two together.

I wanted to immediately let her know that I was acquainted with her parents. I wanted to take her under my care, but that decision was one I hesitated to make. She had already proved herself to be an accomplished adventurer, and more importantly, I had already proven unable to protect her parents and prevent them from meeting their demises.

After a bit of consideration, I decided not to mention the bonds we shared, and instead thought of a different method by which I could offer her protection. That was why I forced my way into her quest and sparred with her, so I could do my utmost to ensure her safety. I was certain that Fran would one day become an adventurer important enough to leave her name in history.

What I was worried about was that she would one day overestimate herself and have the rug swept out from right under her feet.

I wanted to teach her that thinking of oneself as the pinnacle of strength was foolhardy, that there was always someone or something stronger than oneself. I wanted to show her what it was like to face off against a foe far mightier than herself.

To that end, I spent several months immersed in bettering myself. In doing so, I raised the level of my Whip Techniques skill for the first time in around 10 years. I was only 50 years old, so I was still young, but the combination of my elven blood and a more relaxed lifestyle had caused my skill levels to plateau. However, many of them once again began to grow as I trained with a goal in mind.

My actions once again allowed me to affirm that goals were important, and that they encouraged achieving results.

I finally obtained the Celestial Whipmaster class I had always wanted, all so I could defeat Fran.

Fran and I faced each other the next day.

She wore a wonderful smile as she readied herself for battle. She was neither afraid of me nor nervous. I could tell that she had directed her entire focus on victory and nothing more.

I knew that I was going to have to push myself if I wanted to win. Yesterday's observations had led me to understand that Fran had already not only surpassed me in terms of speed, but also had enough firepower to slay me in but a single blow.

That was simply how much strength her evolution had provided her.

And it was also the precise reason for which I had to win. I had to more than just win. I had to overwhelm her and prove to her that she should refrain from letting her guard down, and I had to be ready to make any and all sacrifices necessary to make that possible.

Fran and Master unleashed several spells the moment the match began.

The precise combination was one of wind and lightning. It seemed that the former was used to prevent me from using my whip, and the latter to paralyze me.

It was clear that they were using their heads, but the spells they had casted were far too weak to stop me in my tracks. I fought back by concentrating and releasing a mass of magical energy in order to execute my fastest and most powerful technique, one that completely blew their spells away.

「Call of the End — Vaisravana's Downfall!」

My whip raged through the stadium at a speed not even I could perceive.

It blew Fran's magic away and began assaulting her.

My assault proved that Fran had the Physical Damage Nullification skill. Each of the attacks assailing her were powerful enough to turn a High Ogre into mincemeat, but she was not taking any sort of visible damage whatsoever.

Still, I continued flaying my whip. I could tell my attacks were draining Fran's mana. I had to press on until she ran out.

My divine whip technique's high power was both its greatest strength and weakness. My whip would be destroyed if I kept up the barrage for far too long.

The whip I was currently using was one I had for many years, and one I had come to love, but I continued to press on regardless. There was no point in worrying about my weapon lasting me through to the final round. My true purpose was to win this match. Instilling a sense of humility in Fran was the one thing that really mattered.

「Here she comes.」

Fran vanished. I knew she had teleported through the use of Space/Time Magic, and because I knew, I was able to react to her attack.

I moved as quickly as I could and got away from my prior position. Fran appeared where I had been moments before, her face full of surprise.

Still, she didn't give up.

She combined her skills and spells in order to accelerate at a rate far outside my expectations, an act that in and of itself, was exactly what I expected from her.

「Haaaahhh!」

Fran put me in a bad spot. She not only activated my Spirit's Grace skill, but had also forced me in her preferred range. Her black lightning cloaked blade flew right at me once again. It was an attack I highly doubted I was capable of dodging.

211. Vs Amanda — Finale

Chapter 211. Vs Amanda — Finale

Vs Amanda — Finale

Both Fran and Amanda began giving off an aura of battlelust as they stared each other down.

I appraised Amanda and reaffirmed that she was a versatile fighter capable of adapting to any sort of situation. She totally trumped us in terms of how experienced she was, but our weapon-related skills were at a higher level than hers, so it wasn't like we were at a complete disadvantage. I was confident we'd be able to use our Sword Lord Arts to find an opening we could make use of.

Amanda had gone through a few changes. Her class had switched from Stormfighter to Celestial Whipmaster, and her whip-related skills were now a bit higher leveled than they were before. She had also gotten her hands on an interesting looking innate skill.

I couldn't help but feel like she'd gone out of her way to switch classes and better herself just so she could improve her chances at winning the tournament.

Heavenly Whip Techniques: Increases the speed of one's whip techniques in exchange for increased resource expenditure.

I couldn't really tell just how fast her new class and its accompanying skill made her. But either way, it seemed like an extremely powerful one given the way its name was phrased. However, its increased resource consumption implied that it couldn't be used multiple times in rapid succession, which in turn meant it would leave her with openings we could use against her.

「Match start!」

The caster responded to the two combatants pulling out their weapons by signaling for them to continue.

We immediately fired off several different spells the moment the match began.

「Hexagonal Tornado!」

『Thunder Chain!』

『Tornado Lance!』

We used two kinds of spells, with each playing its own unique function. Our lightning based spells were used to stun Amanda herself; we wanted to afflict her with paralysis so we could restrict her movements. The wind-based spells, on the other hand, were meant to restrict her whip and make it more difficult for her to react to our movements.

Rumina had explained to us that the Black Heavenly Tigerkin was in fact a specialized race, one that was best able to demonstrate its prowess in battle by casting Lightning Magic mid combat. Learning that caused me immediately choose to max the skill out, which in turn allowed me to get my hands on the Lightning enhancement skill as a bit of an added bonus.

One of the more spamable and easier to use skills we'd gotten our hands on was Thunderbolt. It was quick to cast, and would continue to zap any it hit even after its initial shock. You could actually say it was basically an upgraded version of Stun Bolt. The other skill we'd cast, Thunder Chain, was a skill with relatively low firepower, but served to provide decent function by restraining its target it with chains of lightning.

Amanda's unique skill, Spirit's Grace, was effectively one of the best defensive mechanisms one could possibly have. It would automatically activate and completely negate a single attack should it land. Hence, I didn't expect or even hope for the attacks we'd launched at Amanda to win the match for us. I was more so hoping that the spells would be able to pop her passive. We needed to break past her absolute defenses if we wanted to get anywhere at all.

The only other reason we'd fired the spells at her was because we wanted to slow her down and buy us some time. Our goal was to stall long enough for us to activate Brilliant Lightning Flash. Stalling and burning through both time and our limited resources was just a dumb waste of time. There was no point to it. Attempting to end the match as soon as possible was the better choice to make. Fran was much more agile than Amanda, so I was 100% sure that we'd have the advantage in close quarters combat.

Whips were weapons that had the tendency to focus on repeated hits, but Amanda's style in particular was one that focused more on single, powerful strikes. We decided to take advantage of that and immediately return fire after soaking up one of her hits. To that end, I had Physical Damage Nullification slotted in and ready to go.

Fran began concentrating her magical energy immediately after unleashing her first spell.

『Alright Fran, let's go!』

「Nn! Brilliant...」

「Call of the End — Vaisravana's Downfall!」

Amanda chanted a slew of power filled words the moment the smaller girl activated her innate skill.

「Lightning Rush!」

The spells we fired were totally blown away immediately as Amanda activated her skill. We were suddenly exposed to attacks on all sides. The whip came at us nonstop, shredded our surroundings, and turned them to dust. It was like we'd suddenly been engulfed in powerful windstorm.

「Mmph!」

『Tsk!』

The vicious strikes came at us so quickly that I couldn't even keep track of them after using Space/Time Magic and speeding up my ability to perceive. Physical Damage Nullification kept popping non-stop. Every single attack that landed was rather high damage, so our mana ended up draining really quickly.

Dodging Amanda's attack was simply out of the question. There wasn't enough space for us to get out of its range; her skill filled the entire barrier. Moreover, each swing of her whip unleashed a number of powerful but invisible shockwaves, ones that assaulted us as would the fangs of a serpent. To be more exact, the shockwaves were in fact sonic booms created by the whip breaking the sound barrier. I couldn't even begin to imagine exactly how quickly the whip was actually moving. All I knew was that it was being propelled by magical energy.

Brilliant Lightning Rush had restored our mana, but a huge chunk of it had already once again been drained away.

(Master, teleport!)

『Short Jump!』

Fran commanded me to warp us the moment she concluded that teleporting would consume fewer resources than sitting around and soaking up Amanda's attacks.

We were supposed to have teleported right behind Amanda, but she had moved over to the stage's other side before we rematerialized.

Our ability to teleport had already long been exposed. We'd used it a whole bunch, so I wasn't surprised that Amanda knew about it. Given that, it was to no surprise that she was able to use the bit of lag time before when we vanished and when we reappeared to avoid us so long as she was able to read our movements.

「Burniaaaaa!」

The exchange had caused Fran to realize that her opponent was far too powerful for her to take down if she relied on teleportation alone, so she instead used a flame spell to accelerate herself in the older woman's direction. We had to get a hit in if we wanted to pop her passive. Shooting black lightning at her probably wouldn't cut it given how far apart we were, so we honestly had very little other choice but to charge at her

「Haaaah!」

Fran charged straight through the windstorm caused by Amanda's whip and attacked her. The half-elf didn't seem to have expected Fran to suddenly pick up so much speed, as she wasn't able to dodge the incoming slash.

We finally reached her. The strike was repelled, but we at least managed to pop her passive.

Fran took the chance presented to her, twisted my blade, and immediately followed up with a second strike.

Here we go!

Amanda's eyes opened wide in shock as I flew straight towards her.

『Haaaaaaaahhhh!』

But our slash never reached her.

Amanda's continued attacks had caused our mana to basically run dry.

『Gaaahh!』

We no longer had enough to activate Physical Damage Nullification. Likewise, we also lacked the mana to create barriers.

Half my blade turned to dust and crumbled as Fran and I were both sent flying into the barrier set up to protect the audience.

「Grfhhh!」

I almost instinctively began regenerating my blade, but immediately stopped as I realized that Fran needed my attention.

A warm liquid, Fran's blood, flowed down my blade. Its source was Fran, or more specifically, the wounds that covered her from head to toe.

『Heal!』

Shit!

I needed to tend to her right away. There was still a chance for us to pull something off so long as Fran managed to steer clear of instantly dying.

My hopes remained unanswered; Fran's body was enveloped in light as the Cradle of Time activated and restored her to her prior state.

「It's already over! The match only lasted a total of 10 seconds! What the hell just happened!? I could've sworn I saw something blow away the spells Fran had fired, but that was it! Everything that happened after was just way too quick for me to make out!」

I was confident that we would've won if we'd just managed to land that one hit, but unfortunately, we weren't. Amanda's whip had both far swifter and more powerful than I'd been expecting it to be.

「But you can still tell just how intense their duel was from the state the stadium's in! They only fought for 10 seconds, but the entire stage's been totally destroyed! You can't even tell what shape it started off with anymore!」

The caster's words were spot on. Over half the stage had been shredded to bits. Even the few parts that remained were barely recognizable given how busted up they were. Amanda's technique, the ability that'd caused all this destruction, was truly one to be feared.

「...Lost?」

『Unfortunately.』

Fran rose to her feet as she picked me up. The fact that she was unable to really fight back or accomplish much had made it so she was still in a bit of a state of confusion.

「Already?」

『Already.』

Amanda ran up to Fran as the smaller girl stared out into space.

「Are you okay Fran!?!」

The half-elf seemed to be completely out of breath. Using just that one move had totally exhausted her and eaten through half her mana pool. She eventually managed to recover her breath, but as one could expect, her mana showed no signs of rejuvenating.

Despite that, she remained completely unconcerned with her own state of well being. She didn't bother to check how she was doing, as she was instead patting Fran all over while asking her if she was hurt in any which way.

Amanda really loved children. Killing Fran once the way she did had really pained her, as evidenced by the look on her face.

She wasn't able to calm down until after Fran demonstrated that she was alright by working through a few morning exercise-like motions.

「You've grown quite strong, Fran! You really had me feeling the pressure even though you've yet to catch up to me.」

「Nn.」

「However, it seems that the same can't be said for my whip.」

The move Amanda used had been so powerful that it'd caused her whip to end up getting torn accross its midsection. We weren't just talking about any other whip either. Amanda's whip was one becoming of her rank and power.

Thinking about it, it was kinda a given. I'm pretty sure my durability would plummet if Fran ended up using Amanda's technique. Every single one of those strikes of hers had enough power to totally wreck the arena, after all.

To me, her whip looked like it was flat out beyond repair. She had thought so much of Fran's strength that she'd been willing destroy her weapon in order to pull out a win.

「I saw your semifinal match. You've already surpassed me in how well you handle your weapon. You're also really fast, and you can deal an incredible amount of damage with each hit. I didn't think that it would be a good idea for me to fight you using conventional means.」

It seemed like watching just that one battle had allowed Amanda to see right through us.

「I also noticed that you had either Physical Damage Nullification or something similar to it.」

「That's...」

「Don't worry, I'm not going to force you to tell me what it is. What I wanted to say is that my realization allowed me to understand why you had fought Colbert the way you had, and that I knew the ability weakness. Physical Damage Nullification is incredible, but it consumes a lot of magical energy. Using it non-stop will eventually run your mana dry.」

Amanda had literally figured out everything we had. She had us dancing in the palm of her hand from the very start; she'd long known that all she needed to do was kite us while waiting for us to run out of mana.

Shit!

Well, I guess it couldn't really be helped. I shouldn't have expected anything else from an experienced A ranker like her.

「Total loss...」

「It's okay Fran... Chin up, alright?」

「Didn't train enough.」

「Fran...」

Amanda started to get a bit flustered as she watched Fran squeeze my handle with a downcast gaze. She seemed to have misunderstood Fran's actions as one's meant to express her disappointment.

But she was wrong.

Fran wasn't nearly that soft.

「Will definitely win next round and take third place!」

There was no denying that Fran was feeling a bit vexed that she'd lost, but she'd already moved. In fact, she'd already started reflecting on the mistakes she'd made so she could win the next battle.

Fran was positive, she always looked ahead as opposed to lamenting over the past. In that sense, one could say that her personality made her rather suited for combat.

That wasn't all there was to it either. Fran had also, in a way, derived a sort of pleasure from the duel she'd just experienced. Though she didn't think of Amanda as her master or teacher, she did at least think of her as a veritable, experienced adventurer. She was glad to know that Amanda was still stronger than her, and that she still had a cliff to surmount. And honestly, I kind of felt the same. It was nice to know that we hadn't made a mistake in viewing Amanda as a sort of target, as an incredibly strong entity we someday wanted to overcome.

「Do your best!」

「Amanda too. Win.」

「Okay! It's a promise!」

Though we'd suffered quite a bit of mental exhaustion, we decided to do the usual and watch the day's second match regardless so we could learn a bit more about whoever we'd end up fighting for third place. Unlike usual, however, we ended up finding ourselves inside of a gaudy looking private room that overlooked the arena.

It was something the tournament's managers chose to provide for us the moment we asked if there were still any seats available. Amanda had wanted to join us, but she'd been dragged off to a meeting for the sake of the final round that she'd soon be participating in.

Both Fran and I waited excitedly for the match to begin, as it was going to be one between two strong championship contenders.

Forrund and Fermus both were rather popular, but it seemed that Forrund had a bit of an advantage in that regard because he was still in active duty.

Their match, unlike ours, actually ended up dragging on for a decent chunk of time.

Fermus evaded Forrund's strikes by dodging the blades that flew at him, whereas Forrund nulled Fermus' threads by shredding them to pieces.

It looked like Fermus had the advantage, and that he had control over the fight's momentum, but he wasn't able to bring the battle to a close.

The sword user ended up turning everything around at what seemed like the 11th hour by suddenly summoning 100 different magic swords simultaneously. He independently controlled each and every single blade and had them chase Fermus down, an action that ultimately forced the retired adventurer to yield.

『Looks like we're going to be up against Fermus.』

A wave of relief washed through me, not because I felt that we would have a better chance against Fermus, but because I was worried about Forrund's ability to copy any magic sword he touched. Specifically, I was kinda terrified of finding out what would happen if he ended up duping me.

『Our next match is going to be another tough one.』

「Powerful threads.」

『Yeah. Alright, how about we make use of all the stuff we learned today so we can win tomorrow's match?』

「Nn!」

[0] Minor update to the way this class' name is phrased. The term "divine," was confusing given "Divine X Arts/Techniques," so I rephrased it to make sure it wasn't as confusing. The literal is Godly, so I used Celestial which can mean the same thing, but sounds better in a game-like fantasy setting.

[1] I don't actually know what the fuck this is. It's supposed to be a "Sky Ring," or "Heaven Ring," or something. Apparently Erza had an armour named after it, and they TL'd it as Heaven's Wheel in her case, so I'mma just use that. Googling it in Japanese didn't help either, cause it just gave me ferris wheels because the kanji is just 1 character off from how you write ferris wheel in traditional Chinese...

212. Vs Fermus — The Battle Begins

Chapter 212. Vs Fermus — The Battle Begins

Vs Fermus — The Battle Begins

「Good morning Ladies and Gentlemen, and welcome the Martial Arts Tournament's final set of events. The weather's looking great today folks, it's a perfect day to finally buckle up and watch this year's last two matches. The first we'll have today will be a showdown for third place!」

It seemed that today would be the last time we heard the caster and his commentary. Realizing that almost caused me to feel a sense of solitude, the same kind you'd feel as a festival you enjoyed came to a close.

(Master. Feeling off?)

『Nah, it's just that it hadn't really struck me that today's the tourney's last day.』

(Will play all cards.)

『Yeah, that we will.』

(Nn!)

Fran was unlike me in the sense that she didn't feel even the slightest bit of lament. She was too busy being totally pumped. The young black catgirl honestly appeared to be thinking of nothing but the duel she was about to engage in.

Seeing her like that made me feel that she was extremely reliable.

「Entering from the west, we have a C ranked adventurer that's used this tournament to make a name for herself! Fran, the Black Lightning Princess! Don't be fooled by her, folks, 'cause she packs one hell of a punch! Her fangs are so sharp that they've even allowed her to take down an A ranker!

Let's hope we once again get to see her unleash that daunting black lightning of hers onto the field!」 [1]

We heard our last welcoming roar as we entered the ring. I figured that most of the audience members present were here to see the finals, but they ended up cheering Fran on regardless.

「Mmph. Here.」

『Unfortunately, he looks like he's in great condition today.』

Fermus walked towards the stage with a relaxed smile decorating his face. He didn't seem even the slightest bit nervous. It was something I really should've seen coming given that he'd once won three of these things in a row.

(Not unfortunate.)

『Well, all's good if that's how you feel, I guess.』

Fran, unlike me, wished to see him in perfect form. Her nature as a battle maniac made it so she would've actually ended up being rather disappointed if he wasn't.

「And from the east, Fermus, the Dragon Hunter! They say he's retired, but, to me, it doesn't look like his strength's faded even in the slightest! He unfortunately lost the final round, but is definitely still going strong!」

Fermus' gear was just as light as usual. He didn't seem to be wearing anything more than just a white shirt and a pair of black slacks if you looked at him from afar. The dandy looking older man had a bit of a rough but professional air to him, like a butler that'd taken off his jacket and was ready to brawl. That said, his attire was actually made up of parts he'd gotten from dragons and whatnot. Looking at him more closely would allow one to tell that he was basically wearing scalemail.

「Hey, long time no see.」

「Nn.」

「Would you get mad if I told you that I never expected to have to compete with you for third place?」

「Same thought.」

「I guess the feeling is mutual then.」

I'd been expecting to fight Royce, but Fermus had proven himself the stronger of the two. I had to admit, Fermus' thread based techniques were a real threat. We didn't know how they worked, nor what he could even really do with them. Guessing at his tactics was way out of the scope of our abilities. Worst of all was that he was way more experienced than us.

Our stats were higher than his, so if we were to lose, it would definitely be due to our lack of knowledge or experience.

Fighting Amanda had proven that we weren't good enough at coming up with functional tactics, as she'd managed to completely dismantle our less than sane strategy of whipping out our trump card right off the bat.

「This match'll be one to look forward to! A young adventurer in the middle of growing stronger will be pitted against an experienced A ranker. Which of the two will come up on top!?!」

「No, it'll be me.」

Fran took a stance, which soon prompted Fermus to do the same. He looked empty handed, but I knew there was no way that was actually the case. His position was undoubtedly one from which he could deploy and manipulate his string-like weapons.

His threads had a huge number of elemental affinities attached to them. I wasn't really sure how they functioned, but if I had to guess, I'd assume that each individual thread could have its own element. Likewise, each individual thread seemed to have a different value for its attack and magical conductivity.

「It looks like they're ready! Without further ado, let the battle for third place... begin!」

We created a barrier and fired off several offensive spells the moment the caster signaled for us to start.

『Gale Hazard.』

『Blaze Wave.』

『Acid Venom.』

Immediately spamming spells wasn't something that had worked on Amanda, but I figured the tactic could still be effective against someone like Fermus.

All four of our spells were targeting Fremus' threads. We wanted the lightning-based spell to run through his threads and shock him, the fire-based spell to burn his threads down, the poison-based spell to melt them, and the wind-based spell to simply blow them away and prevent him from using them for offense.

And it worked. Our spells were able to null the first wave of attacks he'd thrown at us as the match began.

Despite that, we hadn't actually gotten any hits in, as his threads had suddenly pulsed with magical energy and dispersed our spells. The density of the mana that fluxed through his weapons was so high that I didn't even need to look to understand exactly what had happened.

It didn't seem like we'd be able to put too much pressure on him with magic alone.

『Looks like we'll have to engage him in close combat.』

「Nn.」

Under normal circumstances, we would've held the advantage at a range. We could have simply continued bombarding him with magic from a couple hundred meters away until we forced him to yield. The arena, however, was far too small to allow for the aforementioned tactic. The barrier made it so we were always in reach of his threads and the ever-changing attacks he could use them to launch from any which direction.

That was why we decided to fight him up close, where it'd be a bit harder for him to manipulate his threads to his will.

We made use of the lesson Amanda had taught us and avoided using Physical Damage Nullification because we understood that Fermus was the type to deliver quick hits in rapid succession.

(First, approach.)

『Yup.』

「Brilliant Lightning Rush!」

Fran accelerated towards Fermus. He reacted by creating a wall with his threads, but was ultimately unable to stop us.

(Master! Executing plan!)

『Got it! Dimension Shift!』

『Short Jump!』

I teleported us, and this time, made the explicit assumption that we would be completely seen through. The reason I was willing to make such a move was because I'd eliminated the risk associated with it through the use of Dimension Shift, a spell that took a few seconds to activate, but could prevent all sorts of different attacks. It was more than enough to shield us from getting hit the moment we reappeared.

And that was in fact exactly what happened — a series of threads assaulted us from four different directions the moment we finished teleporting.

The application of our contingency caused them to pass right through us without doing any sort of damage.

「Hmph! I knew it. You really can use Space/Time Magic after all.」

「Haaaaahhh!」

Fran tried raising me above her head and crashing my blade into Fermus' body, but wasn't able to. He had already figured out our goal, and so, he created a barrier with his threads and stopped me in my tracks

Each individual thread was rather weak, but he was able to strengthen them and turn them into a shield by channeling magical energy through them and using a couple dozen in conjunction.

We couldn't take advantage of our higher weapon skill level because we still had absolutely no idea what Fermus' threads could do. There was just no way we could see through his techniques or predict his actions without further knowledge of his style.

『But that's fine! 'Cause we're not done just yet!』

We didn't need to have me come into contact with Fermus' flesh for us to damage him. The black lightning that enveloped Fran's body would shock whatever she attacked.

In other words, attacking Fermus' threads would cause them to be struck by lightning. The electrical energy would conduct its way through his threads and ultimately damage him.

Or at least, that's what should've happened.

「That won't work.」

「Kuh!」

The black lightning did begin coursing through Fermus' threads, but it began petering out and losing its power as it moved, only to disappear completely before reaching him. He had managed to use his threads' sheer volume to disperse all the electrical energy before it reached him.

Fran continued attacking Fermus while parrying the threads he countered her with, but to no avail. None of her lightning reached him; it all dispersed and flowed into either the ground or the air instead.

He was easily handling our technique with a method we'd never imagined possible.

『Dimension Shift.』

『Short Jump.』

『Multiple Doppelganger Synthesis!』

I teleported us again, but this time, also threw in a few doppelgangers to distract him while we did. It was kinda obvious that Fermus would manage to defeat the doppelgangers in an instant, but I didn't care. What mattered was that the doppelgangers were more than just illusions. Their physical forms forced Fermus to invest time in actually dealing with them.

Watching my doppelgangers die was something that used to make me cringe, but I'd gradually gotten used to and grown completely desensitized to it over time because of all the practice we had in using them.

「Nn?」

『Huh?』

None of the three doppelgangers I spawned had taken on the form I'd been expecting them to have.

They didn't have the form I had when I was still human, but instead, happened to possess my current form. Appearance wise, they were basically perfect replicas of me; it was impossible to tell us apart at a glance.

Fortunately, they still did their jobs; Fermus' eyes ended up getting pulled to the newly formed blades.

I was really curious as to why my doppelgangers had suddenly all turned into swords, but ended up shelving the thought for the time being. I needed to concentrate on the battle.

『Go!』

I telekinetically propelled my doppelgangers towards the dragon hunter. I hadn't planned on them actually damaging him, so I'd only put just enough force in to cause them to move towards him at the same speed they would have been at had they been free falling.

None of the replicas really had much durability, so he destroyed them in an instant. But again, they served their purpose.

We were really quite fortunate that Fermus had just fought and lost to Forrund. The experience he gained from the battle was still fresh in his mind, so he ended up paying much more attention to the doppelgangers than was actually necessary. We'd basically slipped his mind as a result.

「Haaaaah!」

「What!?!」

We took advantage of the opening and attacked him. Though Fermus managed to avoid a direct hit, he still did end up bleeding. It was a pretty good outcome considering that I'd activated Magic Poison Fang and laced the attack with venom.

The old dragon hunter had a skill that made him resistant to abnormal status conditions, but I didn't care. My goal was once again not dealing him any direct damage, but instead detracting from his ability to focus. There was no way manipulating that many threads didn't require an incredible amount of concentration.

Fran continued rushing him down and attacking. Shallow wounds began appearing all over him as she did.

His threads were powerful and difficult to deal with, but we were still capable of defeating him so long as we stuck cl-

『Fran, watch out!』

「Mmph!」

A piece of thread rose from beneath Fran's feet and attempted to both trap and attack her.

Fermus had lured us to one of the traps he'd prepared upon figuring out that we wanted to engage him in close combat.

I'd only barely noticed it in time for Fran to avoid a direct hit from it because of my Trap Detection skill. It was extremely difficult to pick up because of how high leveled Fermus' Trap Creation skill was. It was the type that activated if we touched one of many specific threads.

We needed to watch out and be more careful of being baited going forward.

He took the opportunity caused by us recoiling from the trap to retreat and widen the gap between us.

Holy shit! Dealing with him and his god damn threads was a huge pain in the ass!

[1] Here, the author specifically denotes that Fran's title is, in Japanese, pronounced "Kokuraiki."

[2] I literally translated the second halves of these skills for now because I'm not sure what they're supposed to do. I'll update them accordingly once the author reveals their properties.

213. A Dragon Hunter's Essence

Chapter 213. A Dragon Hunter's Essence

A Dragon Hunter's Essence

Fermus was giving us a lot of trouble. He had managed to ward off both our physical and magical attacks, and even made us pull out the doppelganger card. It'd caught him off guard the first time, but I wasn't expecting it to work again.

To make matters worse, we'd just discovered that Fermus was capable of creating traps with his threads mid combat. It looked like we were going to have to somehow make his threads less difficult to deal with if we wanted to be able to come out on top.

「Inferno Burst.」

『Inferno Burst!』

『Inferno Burst!』

『Inferno Burst!』

We chose to cast several fire-based spells in an attempt to burn through Fermus' threads and disable them. The four massive pillars of flames merged into a single, larger blast as they closed in on and assaulted the dragon hunter. The act of concentrating several weaker spells into a single, more powerful attack was a technique I'd actually ripped from the System Announcer; I was emulating what she had done back when we fought the lich. My imitation was still far from perfect, but it was still effective enough to merit going out of my way to attempt it.

We accounted for the fact that Fermus would attempt to dampen the flames by whipping his threads against them. We didn't, however, account for him choosing to follow up the action by diving through the encroaching magical firestorm with his right arm extended.

I couldn't comprehend his actions. I knew that he'd managed to reduce the attack's power, but that didn't change the fact that we'd thrown a total of four flame spells at him. Much to my surprise, he wasn't swallowed up by the attacks. The flames had instead dispersed as they came into contact with his fist.

Looking more closely caused me to realize that he'd actually used his threads to create a layer of protection, one that kinda resembled a glove or gauntlet. The combination of his decently high leveled Flame Resistance skill and his flame-resistant threads more or less made him impervious to our attacks.

「You are aware that they call me a dragon hunter, right? I've got what you could call perfect countermeasures to dragonbreath and anything that resembles it.」

Fermus' words caused me to realize that flames we just attacked him with kinda did resemble the breath-based attacks that dragons seemed to like launching. Fermus was obviously used to fighting scaly bastards, so our spells hadn't actually ended up meaning jack shit to him.

Fire didn't seem like it would work, so we switched gears and decided to attack him with a couple wind-based spells instead.

「Wind Cutter.」

『Tornado Lance.』

『Gale Hazard.』

『Hexagonal Tornado.』

Fermus once again managed to remain unharmed, this time, by weaving his threads into a web-like net that ultimately caused the spells to change their trajectories.

It took seeing him remain unharmed for me to realize that I'd made a mistake and once again launched an attack that resembled the kind a dragon would. Some dragons could create sudden gusts of wind by flapping their wings, and others could breathe out breaths based in wind as opposed to fire.

The dragon hunter's resistance to wind and fire effectively served to cripple our offenses. The only other two types of magic we had at a high enough level to damage someone as strong as him were lightning and space/time.

『Let's try hitting him with some space/time stuff first.』

Attacking with space/time magic would've sounded like a good idea if not for the fact that the element didn't actually have that many offensive spells. The only one that we could really make use of was the one called Dimensional Sword.

Given that, we decided to teleport several times in succession to close in on him before unleashing that exact spell.

Dimension Sword was a nifty little technique with its fair share of perks. It could pierce through any sort of defense and attack only its intended target. That said, it wasn't a particularly good offensive ability because its strengths came with counterbalancing weaknesses. It didn't do much damage, and was extremely difficult to use because of the way its targeting worked. That is, using it would allow one to identify a small preset zone in which it would actually function; the spell would completely fail to do anything at all if its target moved out of its area of effect by the time it activated.

Fermus was the type that seemed to sit still and intercept incoming attacks as opposed to straight up avoiding them, so I'd been fairly certain that we'd be able to hit him with it.

「I've seen that spell before. I know how it works.」

「Tsk!」

Unfortunately, that didn't end up being the case. Fermus' experience allowed him to identify our tactic and immediately react with a dodge.

『Digdug!』

「I've already accounted for something like that too.」

I tried digging a hole right under him in order to impede his ability to move, but he'd perfectly negated the action by spreading a net of threads underneath him and standing on top of it.

「And now, it's my turn.」

「Kuh! Threads in the way.」

The threads that Fermus had set up above the stage all started to warp. They twisted together and became thin spears that came flying at us from all sides.

It was an attack that was extremely problematic to deal with. There were so many sharp edges assaulting us that I didn't think we'd actually be able to keep track of them all. And that was bad, extremely bad. Fermus had laced the threads with his magical energy, so any that did actually end up hitting us would be powerful enough to sever a limb or two.

Fortunately, we managed to prevent the attacks from landing by deploying a barrier, but that didn't change the fact that we had to stay as on guard as we possibly could.

『This isn't working Fran. He hasn't been losing any threads. It looks like he can make as many as he wants so long as he has the mana for it. We need to shift gears. The longer we let this drag on, the bigger a disadvantage we'll have.』

(Nn! Got it!)

We'd already cut through, burned down, and flat out destroyed a large number of Fermus' threads, but the volume he had on hand didn't actually seem to be decreasing in any which way. I assumed that he was either using his Magic Thread Creation skill, or just abusing one of his weapons' properties. Either way, the result was the same in the sense that targeting his threads wasn't working. If anything, it seemed that our actions had only caused them to proliferate, as he could still control the ones we severed. The total number of threads within the barrier's confines had actually increased, and as a result, his attacks had started becoming more varied in nature and form.

(Master, will use lightning magic.)

『Roger that!』

I knew that Fermus could disperse our lightning based spells if he manipulated his threads to do so, but that didn't necessarily mean that they were actually ineffective. There had to be a limit to the amount of electrical energy he could handle at once. There was a chance we'd be able to totally end him if we bombarded him with spells that contained way more power than a mere Thunderbolt or two.

Black Lightning Advent was most likely capable of completely shattering his defenses, but I didn't want to resort to it just yet. Using the skill would cause Fran to lose her awakened status, so I kinda wanted to hold onto it just in case. Moreover was the fact that it didn't actually cover that much of an area. Most of Black Lightning Advent's power was focused on its target, and its target alone.

The current circumstances seemed to indicate that we would be better off using attacks that covered a larger area.

『Thor's Hammer!』

I cast one of the spells we'd gotten the moment Lightning Magic had hit level 8. It, Thor's Hammer, was a technique that had both high power and a decent size to it. It wasn't big enough for it to be called a true AOE spell, but it at least served the purposes we needed it to given how small the arena was.

A massive magic circle spawned on top of the arena. From it descended a single, ultra thick thunderbolt. It was so powerful that it almost seemed to contain all the destructive force that one associated with the god of lightning and his mallet.

Fran was resistant to lightning, and I could just use Dimension Shift whenever, so Fermus should've been the only one to have taken any sort of damage.

But again, as hard as it was for me to believe, he didn't.

The high leveled lightning based spell had dispersed upon touching the thin layer of thread he'd erected to counter it.

「My defenses can even block a thunder dragon's attacks. Don't expect to break it that easily.」

It seemed that Fermus was even capable of easily negating lightning based attacks. He'd compared our strike to a thunder dragon's, but honestly, to me, that pretty much meant nothing at all. I'd never seen any thunder dragons nor heard anything of how powerful they tended to be.

「Thousand Thread Tsunami!」

Fermus' threads almost seemed to form a massive tidal wave as they surged towards us.

There were many ways we could've gone about dealing with the attack. I immediately considered destroying it with either might or magic, but Fran had other ideas in mind.

(Go through!)

『Sure thing! Dimension Gate!』

Fermus was surprised to see us move right past his wall of thread without paying it any mind. He immediately reacted by attempting to put a bit of distance between us, but it was already too late.

「Haaah!」

Fran had already gotten right next to him and cut a gaping hole in his torso.

「Mmph?」

『He subbed his body out for a fake!』

Stuff spilled from the dragon hunter's open wound. I'd been expecting the stuff to be his blood and guts, but, it'd actually just been a series of strings.

The thing that we'd finally reached and cut down had been nothing but a puppet made of thread. He'd used the moment the tsunami had blocked our line of sight to create a puppet. He'd also used some sort of magic to disguise it and make it look almost exactly like him. I couldn't help but be impressed by much he'd done in so little time.

We immediately cut the threads that assaulted us and searched for Fermus' presence — only to find that he was right behind us.

We heard a whooshing sound as a few threads extended from Fermus' hands and began moving to wrap themselves around Fran's neck. There weren't that many of them, but they were sharp enough to do more than just lop her head clean off.

「Haah!」

Fran quickly ducked and avoided the vice before it decapitated her before switching to a reverse grip and thrusting me straight under her right armpit and stabbing at the man to her rear.

「Woah!」

We caught him off guard, but he somehow managed to dodge the attack regardless by twisting his body to the side. He then followed through with the rotational movement and thrust the underside of his fist as he completed a full spin and once again sent a series of threads in Fran's direction.

「Raaah!」

Fran cut them down and once again attacked Fermus, this time with a stab.

However, she still simply couldn't hit him. His threads surged up from beneath her feet and bound them in order to momentarily stop her in her tracks. She probably would've lost her feet to the attack had our barrier not been up. The catgirl forcefully thrust me forward regardless, he narrowly managed to avoid my blade by bending backwards and moving under it as would someone doing the limbo.

It was a perfect dodge, but also an act that exposed him to damage. Fran twisted me around and immediately cleaved at his now open backside.

The moment he got hit, his body had started doing things that I could only gauge as physically impossible. I was sure that he hadn't put any power into his limbs or anything like that, but he somehow just started moving off to the right. The acceleration was sudden, and almost seemed to come out of nowhere.

I had to take a second look to realize that he'd wrapped several threads around his own body and used them to drag it off to the side.

『It looks like we've finally got a confirmed hit in.』

「Nn!」

We hadn't managed to bisect him in a single strike, but we'd at least worked our way through to his internal organs. It was a bit unfortunate that his threads had managed to disperse the lightning-based Elemental Blade we had active, but we'd still manage to hurt him nonetheless.

「Gargh... Hundred Thread Tourniquet.」

『Holy shit, just how versatile are those god damn threads of his...?』

Fermus wrapped a series of threads along his bleeding midsection. Luckily, he didn't seem capable of pulling off what a certain individual from H*nter x Hunt*r could in the sense that couldn't repair his nerves by attaching them with threads, but, he was at least capable of closing his wound and stopping any bleeding.

Annoyingly enough, Fermus' skills prevented him from feeling pain, which in turn meant that his wound wouldn't really affect his ability to do battle given that it'd stopped bleeding. To make matters even worse, he was currently equipped with a Bracelet of HP Recovery as opposed to the Ring of Poison Nullification he was wearing yesterday, so he would eventually heal if we gave him enough time to do so.

Landing a hit had also increased Fermus' awareness of the dangers of engaging us in close combat. Because of that, he'd retreated further than he usually did, and had started concentrating his magical energy into his fingertips.

「You're really quite skilled. It seems I'll have to rely on a tactic that deals a lesser degree of damage from afar. Ten Thousand Thread Technique—Cardinal Spirit Assault!」

All of Fermus' threads simultaneously began moving to attack us. Each was imbued with one of the cardinal elements of water, fire, wind, and earth.

Not even the strongest of the threads could output more damage than a low tier spell, but, the sheer number of them combined with the limited space we had to move through made it so we couldn't actually avoid taking damage.

「Kuah!」

『Heal!』

『Heal!』

『Short Jump!』

We somehow managed to prevent ourselves from really getting caught in his attack by roasting and cutting at the incoming threads while also throwing the occasional heal and teleport into the mix. The issue, however, was that our mana was slowly starting to drain itself dry

However, the same could in fact be said for Fermus. The sheer scale of his attack both drained his stamina and mana.

In fact, it seemed like we would be able to outsustain him if we cancelled Brilliant Lightning Rush and stalled him out by constantly healing up.

Or so I thought. Something ended up happening before I could even bother pitching the plan to Fran.

「Argh!」

『Shit! Greater Heal!』

「Something... attacking!」

『G-Greater Heal!』

Deep gashes had suddenly appeared in Fran's legs. I healed them, but her arms ended up getting lopped off before she actually fully recovered.

I couldn't figure out what was going on. The barrier I had up didn't react to the attack. Fermus's attacks somehow seemed to be passing right through our defenses.

『Dimension Shift!』

I cast a spell that should've allowed us a moment to recuperate.

「Mmph!」

『Heal!』

But, for some odd reason, it failed to do its job. A cut appeared on Fran's cheek nonetheless. Fermus was clearly somehow circumventing both our barriers and Dimension Shift.

I turned up all my detection based skills in an attempt to figure out what was hitting us. Doing so allowed me to detect that some of his threads were actually passing through both our defenses and the others as they assaulted us. Their properties seemed rather similar to those of my Dimensional Sword spell.

That was when it finally clicked. He was making use of the Space/Time element that came with the Monarch Whale's Beard War Threads he had equipped.

「No point in barrier.」

『Good point.』

It was literally impossible for us to constantly identify and actively avoid all the space/time element threads when we were being assaulted by so many other similar-looking threads. Likewise, there was no point in us trying to buy time through the use of Dimension Shift.

I'd noticed that he hadn't attacked us immediately after we'd teleported, and from that, recognized that it was possible that he couldn't create the threads at a moment's notice. However, I couldn't say I was 100% sure that was actually the case.

I really had no idea whether or not he could. As a result, I couldn't actually figure out if we'd ultimately be swallowed up by his threads the moment we teleported, I didn't the time to brood about it any longer.

It was time to act.

(Master, using trump card!)

『Alright, go for it! We'll have to gamble on it working if we want to win!』

214. White and Black Lightning

Chapter 214. White and Black Lightning

White and Black Lightning

Fermus' attacks had grown to be much more intense, but our Sword Lord Arts and detection-related skills allowed us to prevent ourselves from getting done in. They made it so we could somehow manage to dodge everything that came at us as we focused on concentrating our mana.

There was no point in continuing with the strategy we'd been employing thus far; maintaining the status quo wouldn't be to our benefit. The dragon hunter was more than capable of defending against any of our weaker attacks by simply deploying a barrier made of string.

Every single thread he had was worth mention, as most had good magical conductivity stats. He could bolster both their durability and power even further through the acts of twisting them together and forming larger, more compact masses of thread. It was a near universal tactic that allowed him to deal with every single one of the attacks we'd thrown at him and more with ease.

In other words, we had no choice but to attack him with something that would overcome his defenses with pure power, and pure power alone.

『Let's do this!』

(Master, fully prepared?)

『Don't worry about all the stuff on my end. You just do you.』

(Then, starting.)

『Go for it!』

I let loose all the magical energy I'd been compounding and poured it into a single spell.

『Haaaaaah! Kanna Kamui!』 [1]

The attack I unleashed was one so difficult to control it rendered me unable to do anything else for its duration. It took me using Parallel Processing and concentrating as hard as I could just to keep myself from losing control of it.

I couldn't help but think that the difficulty that came with using Kanna Kamui was in fact justified given that it was the strongest lightning spell, the one we'd learned when the Lightning Magic skill finally hit level 10.

It was a spell that the humans and individuals belonging to other, similar races could obtain should they train up their Lightning Magic skill. That said, I felt like it was something they would unlikely be able to put to practical use. Kanna Kamui simply ate too much mana and required too much processing power for that to be possible. Those that did manage to somehow gather enough magical energy to cast it would likely burn out their neurons the moment they tried.

A roar, a feral but majestic warcry, resounded through the battlefield as a dragon-shaped bolt of white lightning descended from the sky and crashed into the arena.

「Gaaah! Is that really...!?」

Fermus' voice was tinged with a bit of panic. His prided barrier of threads was unable to hold against our attack and had started to char and give off an electrostatic discharge.

I was a bit surprised that the dragon hunter's defenses were able to hold, even for just a moment.

「Black Lightning Advent!」

But in the end, it didn't matter. Kanna Kamui had done its job; it'd torn its way through Fermus' barrier and made him vulnerable. He no longer had any means to ward off it or the black lightning that Fran immediately assaulted him with afterwards.

「Ugraaaaahhhhhh!!!!」

The black and white lightning-based attacks melded together as they swallowed him whole. We were blown away by the resulting shockwave much in the same manner we had been back when we used the attack on Goldalfa. Fran ended up vomiting out blood because her back had smashed into the barrier set to protect the audience.

「Gaah!」

『Long Jump!』

I somehow managed to regain enough focus to teleport and relocate us up in the air above the arena.

「Ugh... Heal!」

『You alright?』

「Some...how...」

Black Lightning Advent wasn't exactly what you could normally use in an area as small as the tourney's arena, so we ended up damaging ourselves quite a bit.

We tried looking down as we let ourselves freefall, but we weren't able to gather any sort of meaningful intel. The barrier's insides were filled with flashes of white and black as the two types of lightning raged through it.

(Close call.)

『Yeah... We might've ended up killing ourselves before we killed Fermus if we ended up staying inside.』

We'd actually considered hitting Goldalfa with the combination we'd just subjected Fermus to, but ended up setting the idea aside after deducing that it was way too suicidal a tactic to consider. There simply wasn't enough space in the barrier for us to get away from our own attacks unscathed.

Seeing Urushi retreat all the way out of the barrier when we fought Goldalfa had actually inspired me to do the same, so I checked the rules, and confirmed that we wouldn't be disqualified for being out of bounds so long as our feet didn't touch the ground outside the arena.

Escaping from the barrier actually allowed us to use it as a shield.

Or so I thought.

「Master, look!」

『Holy shit! You have to be kidding me, is it gunna blow...!?』

The barrier had started to swell up. Bolts of electrical energy had started leaking out from its interior. It looked like things were about to start going south.

(Master, any ideas?)

『Uhh... actually yeah! I think I got something! Dimension Gate!』

I opened a distortion in space time with one end in the barrier, and the other end out. The electrical energies within the barrier immediately began flowing through the newfound exit with an incredible force.

But not even that was enough to stop the barrier from swelling up even further. It kinda seemed like the rate at which it was swelling had decreased, but I wasn't too sure because it was still growing larger, and at a similar pace to boot.

And then, it happened.

The sound of an explosion nearly ruptured our eardrums as the barrier burst.

A sudden windstorm assaulted the audience and pushed every single one of its members into their seats.

「Kyaaah!」

「Hiiii!」

「O-Oh god, someone help me!」

It was a veritable pandemonium of screams and cries.

Fortunately, the barrier's top was what had broken first, so all the lightning had ended up getting discharged towards the sky as opposed to crashing into the audience and wounding its members. Likewise, most of the swirling winds had also shot themselves directly upwards, so the audience had only been hit by the residual energy that followed. That said, it still contained enough force to send a child soaring through the skies.

I later learned that the lightning had ended up taking the form of a tree made out of light as it was ejected from the arena, one that reached all the way up to the heavens themselves.

The barrier repaired itself after a few seconds passed.

Fortunately, it didn't look like the rubble that'd been ejected together with the lightning had done any major damage.

『Whew, that coulda turned out pretty poorly.』

「Nn. Reflecting.」

She and I were both aware we kinda forgot the circumstances and went a bit overboard.

『How about we focus on how we're going to land for now?』

「Master, thoughts?」

『I'm almost out of mana. Though, I still do have enough to soften our landing with telekinesis.』

「Good enough.」

By almost out, I meant that I didn't have anything more than just a sliver remaining. I didn't have enough to allow us a slow landing. It simply wasn't an option. The same went for Fran as well. She'd already dispelled her awakened status because she didn't have the mana to maintain it any longer.

I scrounged up everything I had and managed to dampen the force of the impact just enough for Fran to land atop the newly reformed barrier that enshrouded the arena.

「Whew.」

『I wonder how Fermus is doing.』

He can't be alive after all that, can he?

The stage had been completely obliterated. Not a trace of it remained. Most of the dirt that filled the place had been outright deleted.

All we had beneath us was a single, massive crater with its deepest part 20 meters below what used to be ground level.

The arena looked much like the arena in Dr*gon Ball had after Tien blew it up with his Tri-Beam.

「Oh my god ladies and gentlemen, would you look at that! How the hell do I even begin to describe what just happened!? Folks, what we just saw was something that I'm not even sure could've possibly been done by human hands. I've been doing this for a long time, but, never before have I ever seen the barrier get destroyed by the combatants fighting inside of it!」 [2]

The audience was stunned, but the caster managed to calm its members down by doing her job and describing the situation.

「What a grueling sight to behold! Can you believe that its perpetrator is only a mere 12 years of age!?!」

We'd given the audience a bit of a shock. Some people were crying. Others were completely spaced out. There was even a group that'd started attempting to escape the colosseum. Regardless of exactly what it was they were doing, it was clear that most people were panicking.

Hearing the caster describe the situation in the same manner she always would caused them to regain their bearings.

「And if you look at the crater's center, you'll see Fermus being revived by the Cradle of Time! That lightning strike was so powerful that not even the dragon hunter could withstand it! The scramble for third place is now officially over, with the victor being the Black Lightning Princess!」

A huge cheer emerged from the crowd as the caster declared Fran's victory.

I couldn't help but question how the spectators were as calm and willing to cheer for us as they were considering that a fair number of them had seemed to have thought that Fran had just brought them to death's door — not that I was complaining. If anything, I was glad they didn't end up being terrified of us. It seemed most of them had even ended up enjoying what we'd done as they would have a thrilling roller coaster.

『Let's head back down, I guess.』

「Nn. Urushi.」

「Woof!」

Urushi responded to Fran's summon almost immediately. He hadn't really had any chances to help out or even join in during the match, so he was totally pumped and motivated to at least be of use as a means of transport. Fran got on top of him and had him carry her off the barrier.

Seeing Fran straddle and ride the giant flying wolf made the crowd's cheers grow even louder. The support bolstered Urushi's mood and caused him to decide to do a full circle around the arena, which in turn prompted the audience to cheer with even more vigour.

I had to admit, the scene of him parading around with everyone cheering did have a bit of a picturesque feel to it.

『You know, Fran, it might actually be a good idea for you to wave to the audience and whatnot.』

「Nn? Like this?」

Her actions caused the crowd to once again let loose an incredibly loud cheer. Her departure from the stage almost seemed to resemble an idol's.

「Woo! Fran!」

「Damn! That's the Black Lightning Princess for you!」

「Please be my little sister!」

The reception she got really was quite similar to the type idols would get. If I had to pinpoint a reason, I'd say it was probably because of how cute she was. That said, I wasn't about to let her become anyone's little sister.

Wait a second. How the hell are we supposed to get off the stage if there... isn't a stage? I mean, I knew we were kinda the people responsible for blowing it up in the first place, but like, still, what do?

[1] No, not the girl from Maidragon. It's a reference to Ainu mythology. Kanna Kamui is the God of Lightning, and I believe the #1 god. I'm not too well versed in Ainu mythology myself, so this is literally me reading Japanese wikipedia and giving you a tl;dr.

[2] Caster was revealed to (probably) be a girl based on how she talks at this point in time.

215. The Tournament Draws to a Close

Chapter 215. The Tournament Draws to a Close

The Tournament Draws to a Close

The day's second match wasn't able to start even after the first ended. It was originally scheduled to begin about an hour afterwards, but it couldn't. The massive, gaping hole we'd created ended up ruling that option out in its entirety. The necessary repairs simply couldn't be completed in time.

「Looks like the finals will be starting soon.」

「Mmph.」

「Are you still eating?」

「Mmmphrrnnph」

「Yeah, yeah, I get it. You can eat as much as you want.」

The Beast Lord had once again summoned us to the VIP room, which turned out to be real convenient seeing as how we'd planned on checking in with him anyways. He seemed to have caught onto the fact that Fran was a foodie, as the room was filled with all sorts of extravagant dishes laid out much in the same manner as they would be at a buffet.

She, being who she was, had naturally ended up falling victim to their appeal. That is, she did as the Beast Lord wished and decided on watching the finals together with him and his associates — which, in and of itself, wasn't really a bad thing. Their invitation was actually one that took Fran's convenience into account. She'd become extremely popular, especially amongst her fellow beastkin.

I was almost certain that there wasn't a beastkin present in the arena that wouldn't want to talk to her, especially seeing as how she'd finished all her matches and raked in the third place prize. They'd been rather patient and calm up until now, but it didn't seem like they could hold themselves back much longer. Some had even began to seem to want to stalk her.

People, as a whole, had the tendency to be rather stupid regardless of where or when. From that understanding came the assumption that she would most likely be approached by one or more nobles that wished to use their positions in order to extort her.

In other words, staying in the Beast Lord's vicinity benefited us because it would likely prevent any less morally sound individuals from acting out of line.

The Beast Lord had taken a decent liking to Fran, but that didn't necessarily mean he was free of ulterior motives. She, as an evolved Black Catkin, was definitely someone that could be of use to him. Thus, his invitation had likely been extended because he didn't want any other noble stealing a march on him and doing something that would cause Fran to feel ill will towards the Beastkin's Country or its residents.

Of course, not all the benefits the Beast Lord could derive from having her around were longer termed ones. Seeing him with her would likely lead onlookers to view him in a more favourable light.

Being the world's one and only evolved Black Catkin was something that, by nature, granted Fran an incredible amount of attention.

I wasn't actually sure whether or not Fran knew just how much attention she would be getting, but she was at least roughly aware of the consequences of revealing her identity. The reason I could say that with certainty was because Fran had wanted to use the tournament as a means of becoming famous in hopes of bettering the world's treatment of the Black Catkin race.

That was why she'd purposefully awakened under public scrutiny. She was more than willing to draw attention to herself so long as she managed to bring benefit to her tribesmen.

We'd been a bit worried that nations and nobles would end up eyeing her, but acquainting ourselves with the Beast Lord had at least mitigated that concern to an extent.

「Here. Take this.」

「Nn. Thanks.」

「No problem.」

For some odd reason, Goldalfa was going out of his way to provide Fran with all the service she could possibly ask for.

He'd even headed down to the kitchen and asked for both more of Fran's favourite dish and raw meat for Urushi.

Asking him why he was acting so subserviently had caused him to respond with several interesting notes. The first was that he respected Fran, both as a warrior that'd defeated him in battle, and as member of one of the Ten Original Tribes. The other was that her personality was almost identical to his master's; he was more than just used to being ordered around by Kiara. The combination of the aforementioned factors made it so he was in fact unable to refuse any of Fran's orders or requests.

「Oi, look. They're about to start.」

「Nn.」

We watched closely as both Amanda and Forrund took to the stage.

Both contestants were extremely popular, and as a result, the cheers that resounded for them turned out to be so loud they caused the entire colosseum to shake in the same manner it would have had it been hit by an earthquake.

The roars were so loud that they pierced through the VIP room's soundproof walls and caused everyone inside to cover their ears. It was cute when Fran did it, but, the same couldn't be said for the Beast Lord and his companions. Seeing them cover their cover their ears in a childish manner left a pretty bad taste in my mouth.

「Entering from the west, we have Amanda of Hariti! The rumours say that the semi-final round had made her weapon unusable! Just how will she handle today's match!?!」

Amanda didn't manage to get her whip repaired in time. The one she had with her today was a decently powerful magic item, but several grades poorer nonetheless.

「And against her will be Hundred Blade Forrund, a powerful adventurer said to be on the brink of becoming an S rank!」

The two A ranked adventurers exchanged a few words as they stared each other down.

Unfortunately, the crowd made it so we couldn't hear them despite the massive screen-like thing magnifying their voices.

Either way, the match ended up beginning.

Their duel was a fierce one.

Amanda immediately distanced herself from Forrund and began bombarding him with both storm-based spells and her whip.

The stage, which the staff had gone out of their way to painstakingly repair, ended up getting torn to pieces in the blink of an eye. Much to my surprise, Amanda ended up using the resulting rubble to boost her attack's power by sucking it into her storms.

Forrund, on the other hand, did his best to close in on Amanda while spawning and throwing magic swords. He was capable of being extremely effective in long ranged combat, but he wasn't able to outdo Amanda, who happened to specialize in it.

The first major event happened about ten minutes in. Amanda suddenly started to throw out more powerful attacks in an attempt to bring the match to a close, seemingly because her whip had started to run out of durability.

She knew she would eventually lose if she didn't do something.

「Secret Art — Skanda's Demise!」

This time, however, she attacked not with the storm she'd sent at us, but instead with a single, godspeed blow.

I didn't even actually see her strike him. The only reason I knew she did was because his Forrund's arm had gone flying.

Her looking rather vexed in spite of that made it clear that she'd been aiming for his head, and that he'd somehow managed to dodge.

The whipmaster's weapon immediately began to crumble, a result likely in part brought about by the fact that it was a backup weapon and, relatively speaking, an inferior good.

Because she lost her weapon, Amanda also ultimately ended up losing the battle.

「And the winner, the one man that triumphed over all his peers, is Hundred Blade Forrund!」

Fran regarded Forrund with a serious look on her face as the caster named him the tournament's victor.

『He sure is strong.』

(Nn! But will surpass one day. Both Amanda and Forrund.)

『That we will.』

Likewise, the Beast Lord was also starring Forrund down. His eyes, however, expressed a much different emotion. It was almost like he was a predator observing its prey.

「So Forrund won? Man... I really would like to give sparring him a go.」

「Please ensure you stay calm and rational, Your Majesty.」

「Make sure you don't suddenly jump at and attack him, alright, Lord Rig?」

「Well yeah, no shit! Just what the hell do you guys take me for?」

「I guess the best way to describe it would be to call you a combat enthusiast.」

「I'd say a battle maniac.」

「Oh come on...」

It seemed not even the seemingly ever arrogant Beast Lord was a match for Royce and Roche combined. Getting called out by both had caused him to shut up.

「It'll soon be time for the awards ceremony. You should probably get ready, Fran.」

Royce reminded us of something that'd totally slipped my mind. Fran had managed to rank herself in at third place, so she wouldn't be able to skip the ceremony.

The tourney had actually contained three different types of contests. The first was the restrictionless one one that we participated in. The second only allowed those at or under level 20, and the third was open to parties between three and five people strong.

Both the other two types had already ended. The type we participated in was the one that tended to house the greatest number of, and the most skilled participants, so it ended up dragging on the longest. That said, all the awards ceremonies were set to take place at the same time.

That was nice and all, but I had a pretty major concern with the whole scenario. I didn't actually know how I was supposed to get Fran, who really hated boring ceremonies, to actually sit still and behave herself throughout the whole goddamn thing.

216. The Beast Lord's Predecessor

Chapter 216. The Beast Lord's Predecessor

The Beast Lord's Predecessor

Participating in the tourney had provided us with a large number of benefits and gains, the most significant of which being Fran's evolution. I was pretty sure that we would've probably still just been grasping at straws had we not come to Ulmutt.

Our stay in the city had also allowed us to learn what Black Catkin needed to do to evolve, both as individuals, and as a race. Those two pieces of knowledge were, in Fran's opinion, probably two of the most important bits of intel we'd learned to date.

Another important thing to note was that we'd been able to face off against a series of incredibly powerful opponents. Us losing to Amanda had caused us a bit of frustration, but we ultimately ended up accepting it and moving on. We both understood that it was important for us to learn from the loss, and thus, we'd used it, and our other battles, to come to a better understanding of our strengths and weakness. We'd even gone as far as deriving a few new strategies we could use in combat.

Honestly, the only reason we were able to learn so much was because we'd understood that there was a safety net, and that neither we nor our opponents would die regardless of how the battle ended.

The connections we built with the Beast Lord allowed us to hear of the Black Cat Tribe's current state. That too was a pretty significant gain considering it took a load off Fran's mind.

Last but not least was the fact Fran had gotten a really cool sounding nickname.

『Oh god damn it Fran! At least try to stay awake!』

「Mmph... Still... awake...」

『Just hold on a little bit longer alright? Especially cause it's finally your turn.』

「Nn...」

『How 'bout this? I'll give you some sort of reward if you make it all the way through the ceremony without falling asleep.』

「Nn. Type of curry I haven't tried.」

『Alright, sure. I'll make you something, so just think about it, hang tight, and don't fall asleep.』

「Uhhmm... Is there a Black Catkin named Fran present? If so, its your turn now, so please step up onto the stage.」

『Let's go, they're calling you up.』

「Nn.」

Ulmutt's feudal lord, a man we were seeing for the first time, awarded Fran with a medal of honour as she got up onto the stage.

Apparently the guy wasn't actually responsible for anything, and kinda just sat there and existed. His approach to governing Ulmutt was a rather hands off one; Dias was the person really running the city and managing its inner workings.

The medal we were given had both Ulmutt's crest and the number 3 carved into it. Apparently, that wasn't all we would be getting, a prize of 100k Golde would be delivered to us later on.

「You fought splendidly.」

「Nn.」

Fran replied in her usual manner, but ended up using her Court Etiquette skill to deliver a tasteful bow. Though the combination of the two didn't actually end up seeming all that polite, it did lead to a series of loud cheers and huge round of applause.

The only reason she'd even bothered bowing in the first place was because I incessantly reminded her that she needed to make sure she was being polite. I didn't want people to suddenly start keeping tabs on us because we hadn't good manners.

And so, three hours flew right by.

We'd slated ourselves to visit the Beast Lord again after the ceremony came to an end. Hence we found ourselves in front of the city's most expensive inn alongside a large number of other beastkin.

Our destination was the room, or rather, the floor, that he'd rented out.

I listened to the other beastkin speak as we moved through the crowd.

Most of the crowd's members were nobles that served under the Beast Lord or their associates. They had apparently come because they'd realized that the Beast Lord was in a good mood. Despite that, he wasn't actually willing to see any of them. He'd shut them out because he hadn't wanted to deal with them, he thought it too much of a pain in the ass and ultimately not worth his time.

Surprisingly, the crowds members hadn't been infuriated by his actions. It seemed that most had actually expected him to act the way he did, as apparently, his current attitude wasn't one that deviated at all from what he considered the norm. A large portion of the crowd had still decided to visit in spite of their expectations because they figured that a chance was a chance, and that they didn't really have anything to lose by standing around and double checking his intentions. The rest seemed to think that it was improper for them ignore the king that ruled over their homeland regardless of what sort of attitude he planned to take.

The fact that all the individuals present were beastkin also meant that they all knew exactly who Fran was. As a result, she ended up garnering a whole ton of attention.

A few of the nobles seemed to have wanted to call out to Fran, but they were momentarily dissuaded the moment Urushi, who was currently at his regular size, turned his glare towards them. We used the impact to slip through the crowd and make our way over to the inn.

I had the sneaking suspicion that he wouldn't actually agree to see us, but it turned out I was way off the mark. He'd specifically instructed the inn's staff to let Fran see him, so she got past security without any issue.

「Well, I didn't expect to see you so soon.」

「Tell about Kiara.」

「Yeah, yeah, I get it. Sit yourself down and I'll talk.」

「Nn.」

Fran perked up her ears and got ready to listen to the Beast Lord as she enjoyed the tea Roche made for her.

「It would probably make more sense for me to tell you about my old man, the Beast Lord I overthrew, before telling you 'bout anything else.」

「Got it.」

The Beast Lord's predecessor was a man that went by the name Vairsas Narasimha. He was a weak man that harboured much more doubt than trust. He would always be paranoid that everyone was out to get him. His vassals were terrified, not of him, but rather, of the fact that he was king. He was extremely weak for a Golden Flame Lionkin, and only barely managed to obtain the evolution by leeching his predecessors. That, in and of itself, wasn't too much of a problem. He wasn't the only Beast Lord to have ever been in such a circumstance, but, unlike his predecessors, he had no talent for war; he wasn't suited to the act of commanding an army. The sheer extent of his weakness caused him to develop a sort of inferiority complex. Said complex led Vairsas to be terrified of those that possessed greater power than him. And thus, he soon began to ostracize and purge any that caught his eye.

His ridiculous, idiotic antics had caused his country to fall into a weakened state, one that lasted until Rigdis overthrew him.

Vairsas' weakness led him to set his eyes on the Black Cat Tribe. He hadn't minded the tribe at all prior to his ascension to the throne, but, learning the secrets the royal family retained caused him to change his views.

He immediately ordered the Blue Cat Tribe to redouble their efforts in enslaving the Black Cat Tribe's members while also ordering them to keep an eye on any Black Catkin living outside his country's borders. Of course, the reason that he issued the order was because he was paranoid. He was afraid that a Black Catkin would one day evolve and dethrone him.

「My old man was so pathetic that he wasn't able to do anything beyond just ordering the enslavement the Black Cat Tribe.」

Vairsas could've easily issued a royal decree that demanded the Black Cat Tribe be driven to extinction. It's what would've made the most sense.

But he didn't.

He was too cowardly.

The former Beast Lord was afraid that eliminating the Black Cat Tribe would incur the Gods' wrath. He didn't know whether or not his actions would ultimately be forgiven. Moreover, he was worried that the any Black Catkin that slipped through his fingers would vow to take revenge. His many concerns plagued him and prevented him from so much as even thinking the option through.

「Not that I'm saying that's a bad thing. It's the only reason Grandma Kiara's still alive and kickin'.」

He'd told his subordinates to bring Kiara to him upon hearing of her through the Blue Cat Tribe.

Rigdis' father hesitated, he wasn't able to convince himself to execute her, and thus, he'd thought up a few reasons to keep her around.

The first was to make an example out of her. He wanted to demonstrate to the Black Cat Tribe's members that it was impossible for them to disobey him regardless of how strong they ended up getting.

The second was to demonstrate the extent of the royal family's noble dignity. He wanted to show off the fact that he could make a powerful Black Catkin obey him.

That was why Kiara had been working in the palace on the day it was attacked and nearly overrun.

「My old man used her tribesmen as hostages and forced her to become his slave.」

She was assigned to trash duty, and thus, she ultimately ended up meeting Rigdis, Royce, and Goldalfa.

Kiara's spirit had never broken despite the many years of slave labour she'd been forced to endure. In fact, she'd vouched that working as a slave was something that required way less effort than diving into dungeons, and as a result, she'd never actually suffered so long as one disregarded the horrible stench she had to endure on a daily basis.

The Black Cat Tribe as a whole had seemed to have grown accustomed to slavery, as they were more resistant to suffering than any of the other tribes.

「Meeting the old lady made us question our beliefs. We no longer understood why all the other tribes looked down on the Black Cat Tribe, nor why their members always got turned into slaves.」

The Beast Lord and his companions had been made to recognize Kiara's strength. She was so overwhelmingly powerful that she completely blew their notions of the Black Cat Tribe's inferiority out of the water.

For that reason, the Beast Lord ended up doing research, research that led him to discover the sin the Black Catkin had committed in the past, and the reason that things were currently how they were.

He came to believe that the way they were being treated was unjust, that there was no point in persecuting them any further because they'd already been punished by the Gods. He even started believing that it was his duty as a member of the royal family to aid them in their quest for atonement.

Rigdis realized that his predecessor had only made everything worse. The fact that they'd gone as far as destroying documents pertaining to Black Catkin evolutions had left him baffled.

As a result, not even the royal family knew exactly what a Black Catkin had to do in order to evolve. That, in part, was why he promised Fran that he'd spread the methodology all around his country if she was willing to share it.

「I guess you could say I was just a bit disgusted by how my old man was handling things. That's why I trained myself up as per Grandma Kiara's instructions, made myself even stronger through adventuring, got supporters, beat his ass, and took his throne for myself.」

Rigdis would probably never admit it regardless of how we questioned him, but it seemed to me that the whole reason he'd gone as far as soiling his reputation by murdering his father was because he wanted to do something for Kiara and her tribesmen.

「Thanks.」

Fran understood his sentiments as well, and for that reason, she even ended up bowing in gratitude.

「Yeah, yeah, knock that off already. I only did what I did to satisfy my own ego. Having you thank me is just making me feel awkward and shit.」

「Nn. Got it.」

Fran acknowledged his words with her own, but never did end up budging. She instead simply continued to maintain a respectful bow.

217. A Discussion About the Future

Chapter 217. A Discussion About the Future

A Discussion About the Future

「Heya Fran. Congrats on winning third.」

「Mmph.」

「Kukuku. I'm guessing you realized I didn't quite mean that as just a compliment?」

Dias began congratulating Fran in a teasing tone the moment we entered his room. It was painfully obvious that he'd totally seen through her and knew exactly how she felt.

「...Because lost to Amanda.」

「You know, a normal C ranker would be more than just bragging if they managed to get themselves all the way up to third place.」

The Guildmaster's shit-eating grin failed to fade as he shrugged. He was only saying what he was because he knew Fran wasn't the type to suddenly start boasting about how well she did.

He did have a point though. Common sense dictated that a C ranker beating out an A ranker wasn't something that could normally be accomplished. It was such a miraculous feat that pulling through with it justified getting full of oneself.

「Also can't beat Beast Lord.」

「Well, his case is a bit special. Not even I would be able to so much as lift a finger against him.」

「Will win someday.」

「The fact that you're saying that like you seriously mean it is somewhat terrifying.」

The thing was that Fran really did seriously mean what she said. She wanted to grow strong enough to one day beat the Beast Lord down.

That said, she'd have to first get strong enough to beat down Amanda and Forrund before even considering putting up a fight against an S ranker.

「To be honest, I tried getting you promoted again, but my request didn't get approved.」

「Even though just became C ranker?」

『Aren't you pushing for things to happen a bit too quickly?』

「I mean, you guys did actually manage to take down an A ranker. You're way more capable than the average C ranker should be when it comes to your ability to fight.」

『Yeah, I guess you're right. But if that's the case, why didn't it end up working out?』

Dias' mention of our strength in battle clearly meant that we weren't meeting at least one requirement that didn't relate to it.

「There are actually quite a few problems according to the other guildmasters.」

「Other Guildmasters?」

「Yeah, I used a magic item to speak with a few of them.」

The biggest problem was apparently Fran's age.

「There were a good number of them going on and on about how there wasn't any precedent for what I was trying to do. I hate dealing with people like them. I'm actually planning on weeding them all out in due time.」

『Yeah uh, you have fun with that.』

Dias mentioned something that I figured it'd probably be best for us to stay out of.

「Some people also claimed that you couldn't really judge just how good someone was at adventuring based on their performance in a controlled environment like a tournament.」

「Understood.」

I had to admit, the second argument Dias presented to us was a solid one. The tourney had rules and restrictions in place. It didn't really serve to prove the full extent of one's skill, nor did it even come close to emulating the many types of situations you'd find yourself in while out adventuring.

One's caliber as an adventurer needed to be measured through more than just one's ability to fight. You also had to take into account one's knowledge of magic and magic beasts, one's ability to detect and disarm traps, one's ability to stay calm, and one's ability to think outside the box.

Of course, combat prowess was indeed still the most valuable of the aforementioned skills, so labeling someone that'd beaten an A ranker a B ranker honestly shouldn't have been a problem.

「Then there's also the speed at which you're rising through the ranks. They're worried people'll start complaining because it'd look like you were getting preferential treatment or something.」

The third point was yet another one I couldn't argue against. Fran had only managed to rank herself all the way up to C because Dias had basically pulled out the nepotism card.

「Another issue they brought up was your lack of experience as a leader.」

「Want explanation.」

「B ranked adventurers are expected to act as commander in times of crisis. They're supposed to lead other adventurers should they ever find themselves in a situation involving magic beast stampedes, disaster-tier events, or onslaughts made by more powerful magic beasts, just to name a few.」

『Yeah, that doesn't exactly sound like something Fran could pull off.』

「Nn. Can't. Too bothersome.」

「That's what I thought, hence why it was one of the few points I acknowledged as reasonable.」

Fran's personality more or less made it flat out impossible for her to do anything along the lines of commanding an army.

「The last point made against your case was that you didn't quite seem to have the right sort of temperament considering that B rankers have to deal with the requests the guild gets from the nobility.」

「Really?」

「Kinda, yeah. Under normal circumstances, adventurers can pick and choose the requests they feel like taking. Some requests come from highly influential locals, others, from royalty. Requests like those are ones we can't refuse, and so, we assign them to adventurers we know are competent and likely to complete them.」

A rankers were powerful, but few in number, so they were typically kept on hold in case of an emergency. Hence, the requests were instead handed off to B rankers.

The B rankers in question would undoubtedly have to deal with the individuals that'd first made the request. There was a chance that the noble or whatever would end up getting pissed the hell off if the adventurer sent to them didn't have the right sort of temperament or attitude.

「Though, that didn't really seem to come off as an issue to me based on how you acted at the awards ceremony.」

In other words, it was something Fran's Court Etiquette could compensate for. I admitted that the way she talked could likely lead to people thinking she was rude, but that wasn't really much of an issue so long as she relied on the more taciturn side of her personality.

「I think that's everything that was said. Sorry, but you'll still stuck at C rank.」

「Nn. Don't mind.」

『It's not really something that could be helped.』

Becoming a B ranker at only 12 years old would essentially label her an exception amongst exceptions, so there being pushback only made sense. I personally didn't think there was anything wrong with slowly working our way through requests and building up a reputation before finally ranking up, as we could use the events that accompanied them in order to train ourselves up and make ourselves even stronger.

「To be honest, the only reason I tried having your rank raised in the first place was because I felt like I owed you a favour」

「Owed favour?」

「It's because you're the only reason I now know what ended up happening to Kiara.」

「Really?」

「Really. You're the reason the Beast Lord and I were able to talk the way we did, especially seeing as how I can't help but still bear a grudge against him and his line.」

Dias bowed deeply in order to demonstrate the extent of his gratitude.

「Thank you, Fran. I really appreciate what you've done for me, for us.」

Dias was so thankful he completely dropped his usual playful attitude and spoke in a serious tone.

「I'm glad to have finally fulfilled the pact I made with Rumina. It feels like there's been a huge load taken off my back.」

Hearing him mention Rumina reminded me of her circumstances. I was a bit concerned that she'd be subjugated now that she'd fulfilled her purpose.

『Speaking of which, what's going to end up happening to the dungeon?』

「Well, Rumina's lost a lot of her power. The number of monsters within her dungeon has decreased drastically, so we'll probably need to lower the dungeons' ranks by 1 letter grade each.」

『I see.』

「Sorry.」

Fran's evolution had a direct, negative effect on Ulmutt's economy, as the city essentially revolved around the dungeon it contained.

Dias probably shouldn't have been too happy with us, but surprisingly, he wasn't actually angry. He ended up lightly shaking his head as he smiled.

「The truth of the matter is that Rumina had always thought there was a chance that leading a Black Catkin to evolve would also cause her to lose her life. Having the two dungeons drop a rank each isn't really anything to note if you compare it to what could've ended up happening.」

『Yeah, but the fact stands that you guys won't be able to get as many materials or magic stones as you used to.』

「I can't say that won't happen, but, the dungeons are actually even more suited to training newer adventurers in their current state. They'll come en masse, so we'll be able to compensate for our loss of income through increased trade.」

The depth of Dias' thoughts served to prove that he really was deserving of his position despite his usual attitude. I was glad that we wouldn't really be damaging Ulmutt's economy.

「Oh, right. I've also got a request here with your name on it.」

『You're talking about the one you said you'd give us after we ranked up to C, right?』

「Right. I know you and the Beast Lord are no longer on terrible terms with each other, but I'd already informed several other branches that I was going to be issuing a designated request ahead of time, so I can't be taking it back now.」

『What'll we need to do?』

「I was thinking of giving you one that'd send you over to the Beastkin's Country. You should be able to bypass all those troublesome immigration processes if you're heading over at the guild's request. Likewise, the branches we have over there should also offer you their support once you arrive.」

「What to do after arrival?」

「I'd like you to locate a missing adventurer that one day just upped and vanished. None of the people looking for her have been able to come in direct contact with her, so they'd like for someone to confirm that she's still safe.」

So he wants us to look for Kiara? Man, talk about turning a personal problem into official business.

「Nnnn...」

『Sounds good to me. What say you, Fran?』

「Want to go to auction.」

『You mean the one that's going to take place in the capital? I mean, I'd like to go there too, but it's not like we absolutely have to. I'd say we should prioritize heading over to the Beastkin's Country for now.』

(Can maybe get good magic stones at auction.)

『Yeah, but that's a maybe, not anything guaranteed. The same could be said for the Beastkin's country anyways. Don't worry too much about me, and just go.』

「But...」

「Is something the matter?」

「Want to go to auction in June.」

「Oh, that? You've still got a whole month before that happens. You should be able to go to the Beastkin's Country and come back within 3 odd weeks.」

『Looks like we can make both.』

「Nn. Then will go.」

Fran nodded happily, a clear indication that she'd actually really wanted to go to the Beastkin's Country from the start.

218. A Gathering of Those That Wish to Gather Around Us

Chapter 218. A Gathering of Those That Wish to Gather Around Us

A Gathering of Those That Wish to Gather Around Us

A group of strange looking individuals approached Fran the moment she stepped outside the Adventurer's Guild.

All four of them wore grey robes that covered them from head to toe and obscured their faces from view. In their hands were staves made from the wood of a sort of old, knotted tree. They looked like mages, more specifically, the type you'd often see described in fairytales.

Their appearance fit the stereotype so well that I almost wanted to label them as cosplayers even though magic did exist and whatnot. The highly synchronized and nearly mechanical way they conducted themselves made them really seem out of place, and almost even suspicious.

Appraising them allowed me to confirm that they were indeed mages, but, none of them were actually all that powerful. The best among them was a water mage with associated magic leveled up to 7.

「What?」

Though they looked really suspicious, they didn't actually seem hostile, or wanting to harm us in any which way. As a result, I wasn't really able to figure out what they were after or how we were supposed to react to their presence.

The four of them split into two smaller groups, with one moving to the right, and the other to the left. They then raised their staves to the sky, as if to create a corridor.

A fifth individual walked through the newly created path. Unlike the other four, he was dressed up in a fancy looking, gold embroidered, purple robe. His staff was decorated with jewels, and clearly much more expensive.

Another difference between the man and the four other individuals that accompanied him was that his face was visible. His bright blue hair complimented his good looks, but, I still couldn't help but feel that he was kinda suspicious. A part of me almost wanted to say that it was precisely his handsome face that made him suspicious.

「I have been awaiting your advent, Milady.」

「Nn? Who?」

「My name is Grakma, chief of the Ulmuttian branch of the Aiwass Magician's Guild.」

Grakma's actions were so elegant that they almost seemed to have been pulled straight out of some sort of painting.

The Magician's Guild was something we'd heard of many times in the past, but we hadn't bothered involving ourselves with them or their members. Wait, Grakma said he was the Ulmutt branch's chief, right? Wouldn't that also make him one of the country's best mages? I highly doubted that to actually be the case. Grakma was basically the Magician's Guild's Guildmaster equivalent, but he really didn't match up.

He wasn't that weak, but he was in no way a match for Dias or Klimut.

Grakma was only level 20. He had the stats of your average D ranked adventurer, and wasn't even that skilled in magic. His best skills were Flame Magic, Storm Magic, and Lightning Magic with their levels at 3, 1, and 2 respectively. He basically didn't have any other skills to note. One could tell from looking at his stats that he'd fully specialized himself in the magical arts.

My biggest question, however, came not from his stats, but from his attitude. Why the hell was he referring to Fran as "Milady?"

「Your battles were nothing short of magnificent!」

「Okay.」

「The sight of you casting incredible spells, one after the other, has done naught but move me to tears!」

I guess that kinda made sense given that he was a mage. To him, it must've looked like Fran was constantly using high-tier spells nonstop. I'd been the one to cast Kanna Kamui, so he must've interpreted that as her using it without so much as even a chant.

「Milady, I cannot but label you as an Archmage!」

「Nn? Not mage.」

I figured that “Archmage,” was probably a title, but it made me think of classes anyways. I felt like Fran had probably unlocked a good few classes, and that it wouldn't be too bad an idea for us to go check.

Grakma missed the response Fran and muttered under her breath, and as a result, ended up continuing on as if nothing had happened. He pulled out a small box from his chest pocket, opened it, and showed its contents to Fran as he took a knee.

The four mages that accompanied him seemed to take his actions as a sort of cue, as they lowered their staves so that they were instead pointed forwards before moving as if to surround us.

It almost seemed like they were trying to initiate some sort of bizarre ritual. I knew that wasn't the case because they didn't actually end up giving off any sort of magical energy, but what seemed off still did seem off nonetheless, so I readied myself to use Telekinesis to send them flying the moment they tried anything.

「Please take this.」

「This?」

「It is a medal that serves to present the greatest prestige that the Aiwass Magician's Guild, has to offer. Please, Milady, I beseech you take it.」

「Prestige?」

The guild's chief continued pushing the box towards us despite the fact that we had no idea exactly what taking it entailed.

(Master?)

『Hmm... I'm not really sure what to do either.』

It didn't feel like any of the five mages present were casting or getting ready to cast any sort of spell, so I kinda felt that there wouldn't be any issue with us just taking the medal they were presenting to us.

「Please do accept it. It shall serve to evidence your ability as an Archmage.」

They weren't lying, and they didn't seem to be our enemies, but I couldn't bring myself to trust them regardless.

『They seem really suspicious, so let's not for now. This is kinda sudden, I'd like to look into the Magician's Guild a bit more before actually accepting.』

「Nn. Don't need.」

「W-Why not!?!」

「Seems suspicious.」

「Milady, that simply cannot b-」

「Okay, how about we cut this off here for now?」

「W-Who dares interfere!?!」

Someone placed themselves between Fran and Grakma right as I started considering whether or not we should use force to make him stop bothering us.

「You Aiwass people never do change, do you?」

「Fermus?」

「Hey Fran, haven't seen you since yesterday.」

The person that'd inserted themselves between Fran and the annoying mage was none other than the former A ranked thread user we'd just fought yesterday, Fermus.

「What are you doing!? Leave at once, adventurer! We are currently in the midst of an important ritual!」

「I know. The whole reason I interfered was to prevent you from completing said ridiculous ritual.」

「And what exactly do you mean by that?」

「Don't mind them. What they've done here today is in fact nothing out of the ordinary.」

It seemed my suspicions had been spot on. The reason the other four mages had seemed to be getting ready to perform some sort of ritual was because that was exactly what they'd been up to. Specifically, they'd been getting ready to perform a ritual that would indoctrinate Fran into their organisation.

Fran would've been become one of their members had she accepted the medal she was offered.

「They won't use magic to bind you in any which way, but I can say for certain that they would have continued to bother you going forward had you joined their ranks.」

In other words, it was basically a scam. They planned to claim that we'd become one of their members through the act of going through with the ritual so long as we accepted the medal regardless of whether or not we knew what accepting it entailed.

「Even though being tricked?」

Their actions didn't really seem to make sense. It seemed like there was a good chance of their actions pissing off the people they indoctrinated. Though that, in and of itself, wasn't really too much of a problem, it could turn into one should they attempt to scam a more powerful, reputable mage. It seemed like a series of actions that could very quickly and easily damage their reputation.

「Their awareness of their actions is precisely what makes them as repulsive as they are. The trick they just used on you is one they only ever attempt to use on talented children. They probably thought it would work on you because they assumed you were as naive as you are young..」

They were clearly aware and making use of the fact that the average child wouldn't attempt to deal with the situation by force.

In other words, they forced children into their organisation by flattering them and then using the fact that they'd completed a ritual as a sort of foot in the door in order to get them to do their bidding.

「There are many Magician's Guilds out there, but none are as terrible and infamous as the Aiwass. Their methods are almost as shady as their goal, world domination. They may as well be an underground organisation, and likely wanted to recruit you after seeing the extent of your strength.」

「Understood.」

「Please make sure you stay prudent, Fran. You'll be getting all sorts of attention from here on out.」

「Nn. Thanks.」

「We should probably deal with these idiots one way or another. How do you think we should go about it?」

「B-By “these idiots,” are you perhaps referring to us!? You dare despite being an adventurer, a simple minded brute willing to immediately resort to violence!?!」

Though I did admit that there were a good number of adventurers that acted like that, I felt like he was stereotyping us. It didn't take anything more than just looking at Fermus to recognize the fact that he was civilized. Saying that he was an idiot just because he was an adventurer was flat out unreasonable.

「What? So you think there's something wrong with me calling someone that attempts to force his ideals onto others without considering the consequences an idiot?」

「Haaah!? How dar-」

I apologized to Fermus in my heart. His efforts were appreciated, but ultimately in vain as Fran was kinda the type of adventurer that tended to immediately resort to violence. That applied all the more to people that tried to mess with her. She simply couldn't stand them.

The catgirl's straight kick knocked Grakma onto his back.

「Ugrahhhh...」

Fran hadn't put too much force into the attack. She'd purposefully held back because she'd only been intending on knocking him over.

However, it caused him to collapse and start rolling back and forth, disheveling his clothes in the process.

『Wow, he's weak.』

「Nn.」

Fran's eyes widened in shock, an act I hadn't actually seen in quite some time. She'd been planning on showing him hell, but he'd kinda already fallen over after just a single tap. Honestly, I almost wanted to say it was a bit of a letdown.

「W-What are you doing, Milady!?!」

「Whyever would you perform such a savage act!?!」

「Bit pissed off.」

「T-That fails to justify your actions, Milady!」

Fran liked being an adventurer. She also really like many of her peers, namely people like Amanda and Erza. She would've attacked the man regardless of Fermus' claims and his relation thereto.

「Shit! Let's bounc... wait, what!?!」

「I can't move!」

「Fuck!」

「You won't be able to get away. You're far too weak to escape my threads and their bindings.」

Fermus' strings sure did seem handy. He was able to use them to fully restrain all five of the magicians. They were all rendered incapable of movement.

「When?」

「Threads were a type of weapon initially developed for use in espionage. They're much more effective in ambushes than they are in head on conflict.」

「Understood.」

Thinking about it, Fermus was right. His weapon wasn't one suited to combat in an arena. He was much more powerful in something as tight in terms of space as a dungeon. He'd be able to easily kite with traps and whatnot. I could totally see us getting totally screwed over because we happened to stumble into a huge mass of threads in a tight corridor.

「Though, I doubt I would be able to defeat you even if the circumstances were tilted in my favour.」

「Why?」

「The incredibly powerful attack you finished me off with isn't one I'd be able to defend against.」

The issue with what he suggested was that the combination we'd used wasn't one we'd always be able to use. As a result, we were left unsatisfied. We wanted to get strong enough to be able to beat him by rushing him head on.

「Right, so back to what we were saying. What do you think we should do with them?」

「Not sure?」

「My suggestion would be for us to leave them to the Adventurer's Guild.」

「Good idea?」

「I think so. I don't see why the guild wouldn't move to defend an adventurer as powerful as yourself from another organisation.」

I mean, I guess we could, especially seeing as how Fermus was recommending it. I was kinda tempted to head over to the guild and start showing their members their places, but we didn't have the time for that.

「Then will leave to guild.」

「I guess we should take them inside then.」

「Wait bit first.」

「Are you going to do something to them?」

「Nn. Administering punishment.」

And so, Fran ended up slogging each of the men in the gut before dragging them inside the guild.

Much to my surprise, Dias was glad to hear what'd happened. I knew he was going to be able to deal with the situation without much issue, but I hadn't expected him to be literally jumping for joy.

「This is just perfect! They've picked a fight with us, and in doing so, given us more than just an excuse to completely wipe them out!」

Dias glanced at his subordinates, a signal that caused them to approach before taking the mages we'd caught away.

219. Another Group Approaches

Chapter 219. Another Group Approaches

Another Group Approaches

「Fermus. Thanks.」

「It's no problem. I only decided to help because I just so happened to have something similar happen to me in the past.」

「Similar? Also almost tricked by Magician's Guild?」

「Not exactly, but I did have my fair share of unpleasant experiences because I garnered too much attention.」

Apparently Fermus, like us, had stood out ever since he was young. Namely, he'd managed to win one of Ulmutt's tournaments in his youth.

As a result, he was approached by magicians, mercenaries, nobles, merchants, and underground organisations. The individuals and groups that tried to solicit him would often refuse to back off even if he denied them, and sometimes even attempt to resort to force.

「I'm sure the same will happen to you.」

「How to deal with?」

「My approach was just to flee. I wandered from place to place in order to keep them from somehow making me go along with their demands.」

The dragon hunter's coping method was honestly a pretty good one. There was no way the people that wanted to solicit him would be able to keep up, especially if he was careful about covering his tracks.

「Though, I ultimately ended up having Dias solve my problems for me.」

「Dias?」

「Yeah. The two of us had always gotten along, in part because we're in the same age range. He'd already become guildmaster back then, so I just had him agree to call me his aide so I could use his name and reputation to deny the people that approached me.」

Dias' position as Guildmaster made it so the very mention of his name was enough to cause most lesser nobles to back off. Having Dias' support made Fermus' life much easier.

「It seems to me that you've drawn even more attention than I had, so you may end up having to deal with some really difficult people. I'm confident you'll be able to crush all the greedy criminal syndicates that come after you, but, the same can't be said for the nobility. Dealing with them the wrong way could potentially lead to something that ultimately devolves into an international dispute.」

The last little bit Fermus tagged on came off as personal, and as a result, was highly convincing.

「First hand experience?」

「Hahaha. Yeah, I happened to get into a little bit of a fight with a noble from another country and ultimately ended up leaving my name in their records.」

「Just because refusal?」

「Well... he was acting in a bit too demanding a manner for my taste, so I ended up “interacting” with him and about 50 of his subordinates...」

「Killed?」

「No, no, I just made it so they needed to see a doctor immediately. The issue came from the fact that the person in question happened to be related to royalty.」

Yeah, I could see why that'd end up pissing off an entire country. There was no way they could just let something like that happen and not react unless they wanted to lose face.

「Dealt with how?」

「Oh, you know, nothing special. All I did was subdue and capture everyone that went after me before finally having a face to face meeting with the country's king, albeit one scheduled in the middle of the night.」

So I'm guessing that means he threatened him? I mean, I get he's strong, but like, that doesn't exactly sound like something he, or anyone for that matter, could get away with.

「Honestly, it was something only made possible because the country was a weak and uninfluential one. Even their most powerful citizens were weaker than me. There's no way I could possibly pull off a stunt like that if faced with a country like the Kingdom of Kranzel.」

「I see.」

「So the thing I was actually trying to say is that the best thing you could possibly do is fall back on the Adventurer's Guild and people like Amanda, who you know you can trust, if you happen to run into any trouble.」

「Nn. Why Amanda?」

「Oh, I'm guessing you must not know then. Many of the children that grow up in Amanda's orphanages end up becoming outstanding adventurers. They say she would be able to amass an army powerful enough to wipe a small country off the map so long as made use of her connections.」

What the hell!?

Amanda's connections were way more impressive than we'd been expecting them to be.

「Amanda, amazing.」

「She's got an incredible backing, and is a force to be reckoned with even if she doesn't bother venturing onto the battlefield herself. She's the whole reason the Reidosians haven't picked a fight with Kranzel.」

I had no way of knowing how Amanda ran the orphanages she had set up all over the place, or what she taught those that attended them. However, I was still able to see why it would be reasonable for the children that she raised to look up to her and her choice of career. My assumption was that she probably offered at least a bit of training, because that being true would in turn make everything click. Her instruction likely led the children she supported to develop solid foundations, which in turn ultimately allowed them to grow into outstanding adventurers.

「Though, I think you'll be fine regardless, especially seeing as how the Beastkin's Country has your back.」

「Beastkin's country has back?」

「Wait, you weren't working for them?」

「No.」

「I noticed that you'd watched the finals together with the Beast Lord, so I'd assumed that you were in his employ... If that's not the case, then I guess he's probably just taken a sort of liking to you.」

「Really?」

「Really. I think the reason he was willing to appear in public with you is because he wanted to keep other countries from investing you in their interests.」

「My beastkin acquaintances have told me that most of the other beastkin have a rather favourable impression of you. They also seem to think that they could potentially deepen their bond with the Beast Lord if they demonstrate that they can get along with you. The way I see it, you've more or less already become one of the Beastkin country's associates.」

He was right. With the way things were going, I wouldn't actually be too surprised if we ultimately ended up siding with the Beastkin's Country. We'd basically committed ourselves to visiting because the Beast Lord had made it so he owed Fran a favour. He'd also made himself seem like someone we could interact with going forward.

It was almost like the Beast Lord had orchestrated everything so that Fran would be more inclined to pay his country a visit. That said, I felt like he himself wasn't actually capable of constructing such a meticulous plan. It was instead likely derived from advice given to him by Royce or Roche.

That said, the relationship we currently shared with the Beast Lord was more so like one that focused around the act of give and take, in which we exchanged mutual benefits.

「Whoops. I got a bit too caught up in conversing with you. I need to go.」

「Thanks.」

「Do stop by my store some time if you ever decide to check in on Barbra. I've started doing research on a recipe that involves the use of curry.」

「High expectations.」

「Great. I'll make sure I fulfill them.」

Fermus gave one last bow before making an exit.

『You know, I'd really rather not keep running into people like the mages we just met.』

「Nn.」

I almost felt like I jinxed it, as someone once again called out us right about where we reached the place we met Grakma and his goons.

「Hey, you, girl. Hold on.」

「Nn?」

「Yes, I'm talking to you.」

A party of four approached us, with a man dressed like a swordsman taking up the lead. His appearance immediately caused all the adventurers around us to react and start muttering to each other.

「Dude, check that out. It's Celldio.」

「Why's he here?」

「Tsk. Even just seeing his face pisses me the hell off.」

「Here I was thinking today was going to be a good day. Well, there goes that.」

The mood almost seemed to instantly plummet as he showed his face. It seemed he was the type of guy most other adventurers disliked.

His appearance itself wasn't what seemed to have repulsed them, as he'd dressed himself up neatly and looked exactly as you'd expect a knight.

He was decently strong, but not anything too outstanding. His party members were the same. They were all at least level 30, and had fairly decent stats. They had a pretty good balance going too, with a swordsman, a shield-bearer, a mage, and a rogue. That said, Celldio, the guy that seemed like the party's leader, really didn't seem worthy of his A ranked title. He was weaker than both Jean and Colbert, who were still both B rankers, so there wasn't even really any point in comparing him to someone like Amanda. I mean, had a pretty versatile build, but still...

Celldio spoke in a pompous sounding voice as I looked and thought over his stats.

「You.」

His voice was completely devoid of amicability. It really didn't take him saying more than just a single word for me to understand why none of the other adventurers liked him. Dude was definitely a total douchebag, and the type that looked down on other people to boot.

Both his skills and titles seemed to reference the fact that he was the type you wouldn't want your daughter to hang around. That, combined with his good looking face, and the fact that he was a viscount, immediately made me not want him associating with Fran in any which way.

『This dude looks like he's both a noble and a scumbag. It'd probably be best for you to just ignore him and move on.』

(Got it.)

We planned to slip right past him and casually wander off, but we failed.

「Hey! Wait!」

The skirt chaser moved himself in Fran's way before continuing to call out to her in an arrogant manner. Looking at him up close made me realize he wasn't just a good looking guy, but rather, an incredibly good looking guy. As a result, I started to hate on him even more.

「You're Fran, right? The Black Lightning Princess?」

He clearly only called out to her because he knew exactly who she was.

「C ranker. Fran.」

「Good, then I have the right person. I don't really think I need to bother introducing myself, but I will anyway. I'm Celldio Lesspas, A ranked adventurer.」

「Nn? Never heard of.」

「What? You can't possibly be serious, can you?」

「Nn.」

「Huh. You really don't do your research, do you?」

Wow, what a cunt. The dude immediately assumed that we didn't do enough research just because we didn't know who he was. His clear overconfidence only made me hate him all the more.

I began wondering what he wanted. There was no way he would go out of his way to call out to Fran and name himself if he didn't have something in mind.

Chances were, he probably either wanted to invite them to his party or ask her to do something. Either way, I didn't really feel like what came out of his mouth would end up being anything decent.

「Need what?」

「Give me your magic sword.」

220. Celldio

Chapter 220. Celldio

Celldio

「Need What?」

「Give me your magic sword.」

Uh, what? Like, actually, what? Is this son of a bitch seriously trying to extort Fran in the middle of town with everyone around us watching?

「Nn? No. Why?」

「Because I'm an A ranked adventurer.」

「Meaning?」

「Look, you know just how amazing that sword is, right? You should know that giving it to someone like me is basically the same thing as doing the whole world a favour.」

「Don't understand.」

「Yeah, yeah, now stop being so selfish and fork it over.」

「Nn?」

The fact that he was ragging on about the world while attempting to blatantly extort us caused Fran to freeze and stare straight at him. Fran probably would've already cut the dude in half if he was trying to bullshit us, but we could tell that he actually thought what he said. The dude was so full of himself that he actually thought he was doing a good deed.

「So she's going to be his next victim? Man, must suck to be her.」

「Then go stop him!」

「Hell no dude, are you insane!? Celldio's fucked up in the head, but his skills are the real deal. Wait, why's he in Ulmutt anyway?」

「I'm pretty sure it was because Forrund left him out in the streets half dead when the two met in Barbra.」

「Right, makes sense. But man, I really didn't expect to have to look at that ugly mug of his after making the journey all the way over.」

「Oh yeah, and don't forget, the girl he's trying to mess with right now is the Black Lightning Princess. I'm pretty sure things aren't gunna go the way they usually do.」

It seemed that what Celldio was doing right now was nothing out of the norm for him. As a result, many of the adventurers in our vicinity began giving Fran looks of pity.

「I'll pay you as much as you want. I'll give you so much cash you'll be able to retire. I'm sure adventuring isn't the type of business a little girl like you wants to be a part of. And as for me? I'll be making good use of that sword of yours.」

The swordsman thumped himself on the chest as he spoke, almost as if to say that she could leave all her adventuring to him.

「I'm sure that's what your sword wants too.」

「Not possible.」

「You say that, but me? I know. I know how swords feel. I can understand them. That sword doesn't think it's something a little girl should be wielding. Come on, why are you hesitating? I'm giving you a chance to stop adventuring, a chance to turn yourself back into just another girl.」

「Already satisfied. Mind own business.」

「Oh man, you sure are ignorant. Let me guess, you just don't want to give the sword to someone else because you're feeling sentimental? I mean, I'll acknowledge that it's got quite some value to it, but, you're not thinking.

What a sad life you must've led not to be able to consider all the benefit that giving your sword to me will bring you. I guess that must mean I'll need to punish you a bit to make you understand. I know you see a whip right now, but don't you fret. I'm only going to whip you out of love.」

What bugged me the most about all this was that Celldio had yet to speak a single lie. The Principle of Falsehood had judged everything single last thing he'd said to be what he believed to be the truth.

The lunatic thought that I wanted him to use me, that giving me to him would benefit the world as a whole, and that whipping a young girl for the sake of discipline was an act of love.

I couldn't help but feel disgusted to the point that I wanted to vomit despite not even having a stomach to begin with. He was a fucking creep. He didn't really come off as either mad or eccentric. You couldn't really discern him from any other, less fucked up person from a glance. But still, something about him was just... off. I'd much rather a goblin use me than him. He disgusted me so much that I felt like physiologically repulsed.

『God, he's grossing me out so much I think I'm getting goosebumps.』

Bloodlust was starting to well up from within Fran each and every single time Celldio opened his mouth. It seemed she'd finally gotten over the initial shock and realized that he wanted to take me from her.

(How to kill?)

『Uhhh, let's try not to jump the gun just yet.』

Murdering the retard and his group was honestly a simple task. They were far weaker than we were. The only thing that really caused me to stop Fran was the fact that he was a viscount. I really wasn't feeling like dealing with the aftermath that'd result from making that choice.

I considered retreating, but wrote it off because I felt like it wouldn't actually bring the incident to an end. Celldio would probably continue to pursue and bother us. As a result, I couldn't really figure out what to do.

「Now how about handing it over? I can hand you even more money if this isn't enough, but it should be. It's an amount that'll let a commoner like you get by for a few years.」

The amount he'd prepared was 500k Golde.

A mere 500k Golde.

My mind almost blanked. I actually couldn't understand what he was thinking.

Did he really not understand how much I was worth? The amount he was paying wouldn't be enough to fetch him any half decent magic sword, let alone me.

His offer was so ridiculous it caused Fran to go silent out of a mix of surprise and anger. Celldio seemed to have interpreted said silence as the fact that she didn't think his offer was high enough, which in turn prompted him to reply in a sour manner.

「So you don't think that's enough...? You do know that obsessing over money turns your life into nothing more than a boring mess, right?」

He was saying something that you'd expect one reasonable adult to tell another, but, was taking advantage of the saying and warping it in a way that made it serve his purposes.

「Okay, how about this then? I'll make you one of my concubines.」

『What? W-What the fuck did this son of a bitch just say!?!』

「I mean, your face could do with a few improvements, but oh well. The honour that comes with such a position should make it worth it, right? I come from a line of marquis, so you'll be guaranteed a good life, even as just a concubine. That kind of reward makes this whole trade more than just worth it for a beastkin like you, am I right?」

『.....』

「So, how about it? You'll get be my concubine, and you'll basically be given infinite money. Sounds good, right?」

Celldio had no doubt that he was doing Fran a favour. He was, without a doubt, expecting her to thank him because he thought that he'd just given her basically the “best conditions ever.”

Ahahahahahahahahaha.

So this skirt chasing pedophile wants to not only take me away from Fran, but also turn her into one of his concubines?

Thankfully, Fran herself didn't understand what the man was proposing, and ultimately ended up staring at him with a blank gaze. She probably would've more than just exploded in anger had she actually known what he was talking about.

(Master?)

『.....』

(Master? Something wrong?)

『I think I just might've come up with a pretty good idea.』

「Nn?」

『Alright, repeat after me.』

(Got it.)

Fran began relaying my words to Celldio.

「Nn. This sword chooses wielder. Can't be used by unqualified. If unqualified tries to use, will die.」

「Hahaha! No worries there. I'm special, one of the chosen.」

「Will burn scammers, poison thieves, kill villains.」

We'd told him quite a bit, so I was hoping he'd back off. I was willing to call it a day after castrating and almost killing him if he was willing to stop.

「Fmph. Just hand it over already.」

「Yeah, hurry it up.」

「You're being rude. Our lord is busy, and doesn't have the time for this.」

The rogue-like guy grinned after Celldio's two other companions encouraged Fran to hand me over.

「Milord, I think it might be better to just take the sword from her even if you have to do it through force. It seems like she's unable to see reason.」

The fact that the viscount listened to the rogue's words and stepped up while acting all stuck up and shit made me feel like he was manipulating the the stupid skirt chasing pedophile.

「That's true. She'll soon come to thank me even if she doesn't right away.」

He drew his weapon and begin to emit an aura of bloodlust, as if to demonstrate to Fran what fate would have in store for her should she not hand me over.

I was sure Celldio's group had watched Fran's matches, so I didn't quite understand why they thought they'd be able to pry me from her through the use of force. It seemed that they were either full of themselves or assumed she wouldn't hurt Celldio because he was a noble.

「Hurry up and hand it over.」

「Really sure?」

「Of course I'm sure I want it! Now hand me the sword, girl!」

It seemed he wanted to take me from Fran regardless of the fact that we'd warned him he might die.

Well, I guess that means his life is forfeit. I couldn't really make Fran out to be a liar, and was kinda pissed off to begin with anyways. This was basically the perfect opportunity for me to address both of those two problems at once.

The adventurers standing nearby could act as witnesses to testify that Fran had indeed warned Celldio, and that it was his own fault he died.

『Feel free to hand me to him whenever.』

「Got it. Won't be responsible for result.」

「That's fine. You giving me the sword is all that matters.」

And so, Fran handed me to Celldio. Him touching me caused me to feel a wave of disgust wash through my body, but I forced myself to bear with it for the time being.

It seemed that him holding me wasn't causing the Goddess' penalty to activate. It probably only would once he actually equipped me. That was good to know, as it meant we could at least allow other people to hold me so long as they didn't actually try to use me as their weapon, which in turn meant we could have blacksmiths handle me and whatnot.

He would've automatically equipped me if he holstered me or tried to use me, but, as of right now, he was just holding me, so the Goddess' divine retribution wouldn't actually activate unless he consciously tried equipping me. That was how it worked back when I first met Fran, she wasn't able to actually become my wielder until she went out of her way to think about it.

I sensed a bit of magical energy flow from Celldio to me. He was attempting to use his Weapon Control skill before actually equipping me.

However, he wasn't able to get past my Control Nullification skill and ultimately failed. I was planning to steal the skill if I started to feel him taking control of me, but luckily, I didn't actually have to.

All the magical energy he poured into me ended up dispersing.

「Huh? Why isn't it...」

Celldio understood that he hadn't managed to take control of me, but he didn't manage to arrive at the conclusion that his skill had flat out failed, and so, he tried a bit harder to get the skill to work. I was perfectly fine with him not actually ending up equipping me. I kinda wanted to see him get smited, but I'd also kinda been wanting to be the one to do it anyways.

The first thing I did was cast Elemental Blade, specifically with the flame element. Naturally, I'd made use of the Sorcery skill in order to pump as much magical energy in as I possibly could.

「Woah! This thing's starting to burn up.」

Heh, serves you right you son of a bitch! Guess who shouldn't have assumed his Weapon Control skill would actually work?

Celldio's face twisted into a frown as a result of the sudden influx of heat.

「W-What!? Why won't this sword obey me? I'm supposed to be one of the chosen!?!」

MUDA MUDA MUDA MUDA MUDA! [1]

The fact that he thought he was special was making me laugh. His mental age was something to be scoffed at.

「W-What the fuck!? I can't let go!」

I held Celldio's hands down with Telekinesis in order to prevent him from escaping my wrath. I concentrated all the force I would've used to catapult myself on his arms in order to hold them in position, so there was no way he was going to escape even after considering that he was an A ranked adventurer.

「Gaah!」

He couldn't let go of me even though his skin was starting to burn off. I started to harass him all the more as he began panicking. Namely, I changed the shape of my guard and hilt and stabbed both into his hand while also using the Magic Poison Fang skill.

「Gaarhhh!」

His face turned a deep shade of blue as the poison began circulating through his veins. Appraising him allowed me to confirm that his state has changed to "badly poisoned." Poison hadn't actually worked on any of the people we'd been fighting lately, so I was glad it finally found a chance to shine.

「M-My Connosieur skill didn't tell me about any of this!」

Connisuer was like appraisal, but it only worked on items.

That explained why he was willing to take the bet. He'd seen my the fake stat page I had, and come to the conclusion that I didn't actually have the features Fran had described.

「Milord!」

The mage cast both Heal and Antidote on Celldio.

「Guaaaahh!? Anna, hurry up and fix me!」

「My magic isn't working...! Karam, potions!」

「A-Alright!」

Karam, the rogue, tried using several healing potions to restore Celldio, but his actions were futile. I was still giving off heat and continuing to poison him. All the damage he healed off would immediately be reapplied.

The mix of flame and poison forced Celldio to recall the words Fran had spoke to him earlier.

「Get away! Arggg! why can't I let go of this sword!? Why!?!」

Namely, Celldio remembered the word death. A wave of panic washed over him and dyed his screams in fear.

But it didn't matter. This was what he got for trying to make Fran his concubine.

The viscount had thought his own actions to be just, but, truth be told, he'd been doing nothing but extorting people and robbing them. He was a criminal that committed the acts time and time again. There was a good chance he'd also made use of his family's influence in order to abduct otherwise unwilling women.

I knew that he might also be a victim, one deceived by his companions. He was an elixir addict, meaning someone might've made him lose his mind from overdosing on drugs, but I didn't care. I didn't care what reasons he had, nor whether or not he himself had suffered.

I had no intentions of forgiving him regardless.

「Gaaaaahhhh!」

221. The Goddess' Retribution

Chapter 221. The Goddess' Retribution

The Goddess' Retribution

「Gaaaaaahh!」

Celldio's face twisted in agony. His fingers had been burnt to point where they'd blackened, and his hand was filled with holes because I'd covered my handle in poison tipped spikes.

Despite that, my rage had yet to abate. He hadn't suffered nearly enough to make up for the fact that he tried to make Fran one of his concubines.

They might've even taken her away by force if she was still as weak as when we'd only just met.

Imagining him forcing himself on her made me more than mad enough to tear him to bits.

I once again changed my form so I could better damage him.

「Hggiiiiiihghh!」

I made the thorns coming out of my grip grow and squirm around like a living creature as they snaked up his arm. I made sure to half retract the thorns as they moved before jabbing them into him over and over again.

「Aarrghghghghgh!」

The pain caused him to lose control of his body as it began to spasm. His party members tried to heal him, but they weren't actually able to help.

Much to my surprise, Celldio's servants were actually serious about trying to save him. It went without saying that they tried to avoid touching me, but they weren't particularly adamant about it.

Either way, I felt a sense of gratification as I watched him drip with tears, snot, and other body fluids.

I'd really wanted to figure out the exact sort of punishment the Goddess would administer, but the viscount wasn't really showing any signs of actually wanting to equip me. I was getting a bit sick of letting him hold me, so I started contemplating whether or not I should just use my Telekinetic Catapult to finish him off.

「Shit... Shit...!」

『How about trying to equip it?』

I decided to give it one last shot and started coercing him with telepathy. I was expecting him to either go along with what I said or write the thoughts I conveyed to him off as a figment of his imagination.

Naturally, I was going to promptly cut him down if he chose to do the latter.

「Haa...Haahh... That's right! I haven't actually tried equipping this damned thing!」

Perfect.

「Arrrrghhhhhhhhhhh!」

Celldio let loose a howl of pure pain that sent shivers down the spines of the people around us the moment he tried to equip me. It was the kind that echoed through to the very depths of one's soul.

The sight of him turning his eyes towards the heavens as he continued to scream was so odd that it caused both his servants and the adventurers around us to freeze in place.

The scene persisted for several seconds before the person that caused it finally broke the silence.

「P-Please no! Please forgive me! Argghghgahghgahh!」

Streams of blood erupted from Celldio's eyes, ears, and mouth the moment after he let loose one last scream.

And then he fell. His knees buckled as they gave way and caused his body to collapse.

「...」

The thud of him falling flat on his face was the last sound to precede a silence so heavy it could only be described as painful.

「Nn. Unqualified.」

The only individual that remained capable of movement was Fran. She walked over to Celldio's corpse, wiped off my handle, and picked me up.

Only then did the crowd finally come back to life. The people around us began to scream in panic. I couldn't blame them. Celldio was someone no one liked, and he also wasn't actually all that strong, but he'd been an A ranked adventurer nonetheless. In other words, the people around us had processed the sight as that of an A ranker meeting an instant death.

I had to say, the Goddess' retribution differed quite a bit from what I'd been expecting. My guess had been that she'd strike him with a lightning bolt that came out of the blue seeing as how the punishment that befell people who didn't know I was bound was supposedly something along the lines of an electric shock. The sight of Celldio's death seemed to illustrate that the death-related punishment did something to the insides of the target's head.

「H-H-H-How dare you!? How dare you murder Milord!?!」

「Ignored advice given. Killed self.」

「W-What kind of excuse is that!? If you knew that would happen, then why didn't you insist that he stop!?!」

The man that approached Fran was the one that'd been carrying the shield. He looked like a knight, and honestly, probably was. If I had to guess, I'd say that he likely served Celldio's parents.

「Burnt, poisoned, died. Clearly scammer, thief, villain.」

「Y-You dare!? Your words equate to you insulting his household's, a marquis', honour!」

「Only speaking truth.」

「You little shit!」

The shield-bearing knight lowered a hand to his sword as if to indicate that he wanted to fight us. However, he was stopped before he could draw it.

「That's enough. Everyone here has clearly seen that it was the viscount's fault and not the girl's. I will have to step in and take you on if you wish to fault her any further.」

「A-Are you blind, Colbert!? Master Celldio was both an A ranked adventurer and a viscount!

Her actions clearly functioned as treason against both the state and the adventurer's guild.」

「Well, I don't quite know what you saw, but I only witnessed a swindler get what he deserved after attempting to extort her out of her weapon.」

「W-Whatever are yo-」

「Are you really still going to keep that facade up even after running all the way to Ulmutt with your tail between your legs? I'd even go as far as to say that it was likely you lot that egged the viscount on in the first place.」

「Enough of your preaching! You can't deny that girl murdered Milord!」

「That simply is not true. He died because he was afflicted by the sword's curse. She warned him of it, and he ignored it, so all the fault lies with him, and he only got what he deserved. Are you incapable of comprehending the incredible number of people that served to witness the events that just unfolded?」

All the adventurers around us immediately began glaring at Celldio's party members. They didn't seem to be willing to back off, so they returned it and caused the situation to devolve into a staring contest.

A heavy mood began to propagate throughout the area.

「You lot sure are kicking up a fuss. Did something happen?」

Dias spoke as he exited the guild. It seemed that the all the commotion had caused enough noise for it to reach his ears.

The first to respond to Dias' question was the shield-bearing knight.

「G-Guildmaster! Milord was killed by their hands. Adminster capital punishment immediately!」

「Huh, quite a mouth you've got for a B ranker. Tell me, are you trying to give me orders?」

「W-What...!? Are you kidding me!? You want to refuse!? This is a murder case, one that involves the death of one of Marquis Ashtonah's potential successors! Obeying my orders should be nothing short of your duty, adventurer!」

Nobles were normally considered to be of a higher class than the guild's staff members, so it seemed the knight had expected Dias to comply.

But he didn't. The old guildmaster instead responded with a scornful laugh.

「While I didn't bear witness to the event, I was filled in on exactly what had happened. Let me ask you something. Who's fault do you think all this is? I'd really like you to mull that statement over, digest it, and shut up. Did your parents not tell you that all thieves start out as liars?」

「Y-You... you're calling me a liar?」

「Yup. Though, I guess a bit of investigation is indeed in order seeing as how I didn't see the event first hand.」

Celldio's followers seemed to interpret Dias' words as a chance, as they immediately began appealing to him and attempting to convince him that Fran tricked Celldio in order to murder him.

I did trust Dias, but, I didn't feel like I could say for sure that he wouldn't take the marquis' household's side. He was a guildmaster, a member of a larger organisation that ultimately did have to make that sort of decision from time to time. To that end, I steeled myself for combat while awaiting his response.

「I'll have to do a bit more investigating in order to figure out the truth. Colbert, Forrund, could the two of you take them down to the dungeon for the time being?」

「Sure.」

「Consider it done.」

Forrund suddenly appeared behind Celldio's party and caused all three remaining individuals to widen their eyes in fear. It seemed that whatever he did to them had left them with some pretty deep mental scars.

「Make sure you strip them of their equipment, handcuff them, and gag them. Be as strict as you need to, keeping in mind that they're both witnesses and suspects for a viscount's murder.」

「W-What!? You have to be kidding me! Stop this, stop this immediately!」

「Why're you letting that brat free!? You should at least do the same to her!」

「Yeah, this isn't fair!」

「Don't worry, she's under arrest as well. However, I'll be taking her up to my office as opposed to the dungeon because I'll be seeing her first.」

Dias had linked arms with Fran. She didn't bother resisting, and instead, simply spoke a line in her usual tone of voice.

「Oh no. Getting caught.」

「See? I have her detained.」

Celldio's party members once again began kicking up a fuss the moment they saw that happen, but they weren't really able to influence Dias in any which way.

「T-This is unreasonable! How could you treat us like t-」

「Unreasonable? Didn't I just tell you you're being detained as both witnesses and suspects? Why would it be reasonable for me to let either of those two types of individuals out of my grasp?」

「Damned commoner! You dare act in this manner just because you've managed to get yourself a half-decent position!? You'll regret this! I'll make sure of it!」

「T-That's right! The marquis will get you for this!」

「You'll pay for this!」

Forrund took the three away as they continued to shout.

「He thinks he's going to make me pay? Hah, funny. I don't know why he even thinks he'll be getting out of that dungeon alive.」

Dias muttered something incredibly sinister under his breath before turning back to Fran and smiling in his usual manner while pulling on her arm.

「Okay, how about you give me a quick rundown of everything that just happened?」

「Got it.」

「Oh yeah, and you don't really have to worry much about anything seeing as how everyone here happened to witness what just happened, right?」

The adventurers around us immediately responded to Dias calling out to them.

「Hell yeah. We know what's up.」

「I dunno about you, but watching Celldio die just made my day.」

「Don't worry, I'll testify that it was them and not you!」

Their many responses almost seemed to resemble the cheers we'd been showered with back at the arena.

「Hahaha, it looks like you're just popular as your nickname suggests. Though, that should come as no surprise given how people always love a strong, young, good-looking female adventurer. You know, I would probably be overthrown if I had you locked up with Celldio's party members.」

222. Celldio's Backstory

Chapter 222. Celldio's Backstory

Celldio's Backstory

The guild's staff members retrieved Celldio's corpse as his servants were escorted to the guild's dungeon.

We, on the other hand, accompanied Dias so we could tell him exactly what had happened.

One of the female employees brought us a cup of tea as we arrived at the guildmaster's office.

「Oh man! Someone's finally gone and done it! You have no idea how badly I wanted this to happen.」

Dias let go of Fran's arm the moment he closed the door behind him and immediately both bowed and began singing her praise.

「Thank you very much!」

「Very happy?」

「Celldio's group was a tumour that Kranzel's Adventurer's Guild needed removed. I really can't thank you enough helping us get rid of them.」

The fact that Dias went as far as calling Celldio a tumour really served to evidence just how much the viscount was disliked.

「Did you appraise him?」

『I did.』

「Then I'm guessing you must've thought he was rather weak for an A ranker?」

Dias' speculation had hit the nail on the head. I was convinced that there was no way Celldio was anything more than a B ranker in terms of strength.

I'd thought that he'd made it all the way up for a reason opposite the one for which Fran was denied a promotion. In other words, I'd assumed that he'd been classified as an A ranker because of a series of outstanding accomplishments or something similar.

But apparently that wasn't the case.

「A ranked adventurers are effectively heroes. Strength is a requirement that can't be forgone or ignored, though you're right in assuming that one also needs a series of achievements in order to qualify.」

What Dias meant was that it wasn't possible for someone weak to become an A ranker regardless the deeds they had to their name, a fact that seemed to contradict the reality presented by Celldio's status.

「Despite our strict requirements, the lunatic you just dealt with still managed to get himself deemed an A ranker. Can you guess why?」

『What you've said so far seems to insinuate that A rankers have to undergo some sort of combat trial. I don't really see how he could've possibly managed to worm his way past it.』

「You see, there are actually four requirements one needs to fulfill in order to be recognized as an A ranked adventurer. The first is strength, the second is having significant accomplishments, the third is for the person to have done enough for the guild, and the fourth is to be acknowledged by at least 15 different guildmasters.」

The requirements were strict, with the last seeming almost borderline impossible.

「Or at least that is how it would work under normal circumstances. Unfortunately, skills happen to make him capable of circumventing our prerequisites.」

「Skills?」

「Let me rephrase. How many female guildmasters do you think this country happens to have?」

His question kicked my brain into gear and allowed me to figure out what he was getting at.

『I'm guessing you're talking about the skills he had that worked against the opposite sex? I'm assuming that ladykiller title he's got probably helped in some way too.』

「That's right. He sank his fangs into seven different female guildmasters.」

The “Leaves Good Impressions on the Opposite Sex” skill seemed to be one that brought about goodwill, whereas the “Opposite Sex Attraction” skill functioned as a sort of charm.

His ladykiller title made it so that any women that happened to have even the slightest bit of a good impression of him would instantly be smitten.

「He was able to win them over with even the slightest mention of love.」

『And that's how he got himself promoted all the way up?』

「It was more like they tried offering him. One of his supporters was a lady 40 years his senior, one with quite a bit of influence.」

Gross...

Wait, how'd he pull off the whole A rank thing with only seven backers?

「The rest he bribed, pressured using his parents' influence, and made promises to. He used all sorts of methods in order to achieve his goal.」

「Guild still holding up?」

『That sounds pretty concerning to me.』

「Sorry. Guildmasters are people too. We're imperfect, and some of us are just flat out scum.」

『Yeah, I know what you're trying to get at.』

The politicians and police officers back on Earth weren't exactly guilt free either. A guildmaster failing to fulfill its duty seemed to be something along the same lines as that.

「Fortunately, I can say that I've put in a lot of work and made it so that all but three of the guildmasters that approved Celldio have been deprived of their positions.」

『Wait, he's still an A rank despite the fact that most of his supporters have been replaced?』

「Unfortunately, not even us guildmasters are capable of doing too much to A rankers. Individuals recognized as A ranked adventurers are given increased liberties alongside a right to give voice to their own opinions. We have to keep in mind that rescinding a promotion we granted is an act that would put a stain on the guild's honour.」

That seemed quite troublesome given that a good number of guildmasters seemed to be obsessed with precedents.

「I've been keeping an eye on Celldio's group ever since he was first granted his rank in hopes of finding an incident that would allow me to derank him. Unfortunately, there never was one.」

『But doesn't he extort people on a regular basis?』

「His actions are technically classified as legal. He goes overboard, but he does still pay as opposed to just running away with his golde. To make matters worse, none of his targets ever end up trying to prosecute him.」

『Huh? Really? Why wouldn't they? Doesn't he jack their weapons?』

「You only think that way because you're the exact type he doesn't want to mess with. You're strong, you've got quite a bit of influence, and you've got just the right attitude one needs to deal with him. Most C rankers would immediately yield if they found themselves confronting an A ranker that comes from a family headed by a marquis, especially if the A ranker in question happens to have a pretty bad reputation.」

That did kinda make sense. Losing one's weapon is far better than losing one's life, after all.

「Though, the most annoying and difficult to deal with part about that viscount was the fact that he had too many screws loose.」

「Loose screws?」

『How exactly does that make him difficult to deal with?』

「Some magic items have the ability to detect crime. The problem is that they function off the thoughts of the people they're used on, so they won't respond if their targets think they're in the legal right.」

In other words, items that could've normally detected crimes didn't work on Celldio because he didn't think he was doing anything wrong.

『Wait, but didn't one of his titles say he was an elixir addict?』

The way it was worded kinda made him seem like some sort of druggie.

「Elixirs are often used in medical treatments, so ingesting them on a regular basis is in fact not a sin in and of itself. Some dumber nobles also consider ingesting elixirs to be a regular pastime. They don't think of it as a crime or sin.」

That meant that catching Celldio for his addiction would also entail doing the same to every other noble that happened to be in the same boat. It seemed like something that wouldn't go smoothly, and could potentially worsen the guild's relationships with the country's nobles. Going through with the idea was, all in all, a huge pain in the ass.

「Elixir?」

「Elixirs are terrifying drugs that provide powerful feelings of exhilaration to those who drink them, with the only recompense being a bit of brain damage. It's often used by nobles and individuals that reside within royal palaces in order to turn people in power into easily manipulable puppets.」

「That's why messed up in head?」

「I think so. Celldio was still capable of speaking and thinking, but he seemed to have lost the ability to reason. His symptoms make it seem like he was made to drink a very specific amount of the drug on a regular basis.」

『Now that you mention it, it did kinda feel like his party members were manipulating him.』

「Masterminds, servants?」

「Hmm... that's hard to say. If it were up to me, I'd say the blame likely lies with the marquis himself.」

『You sure? Wouldn't the marquis actually end up losing face if Celldio causing trouble? The public would probably end up accusing the marquis of drugging him if they found out why he lost his mind, right?』

Plus, manipulating one's own son didn't quite seem like anything that would ultimately prove beneficial.

「I'd say that the marquis' choice was actually a good one for the sole reason that Celldio had once been genuine scum. I think he's guilty of about 10 different cases of assault, rape and robbery alone. He covered them all up, either through the use of his household's power, or the authority that belonged to the female guildmaster he had wrapped around his finger at the time. And as for any that accused to oppose him?」

Dias took his thumb and dragged it across his neck.

『Wait, are you saying he'd have them assassinated?』

「Exactly. His father is a marquis, so it's only natural for him to be familiar with darker dealings, hence why he's better off in his current state. The only drawback is that anyone that talks to him can tell that he's a lunatic.」

So I guess that means the marquis drugged his son to more or less make it seem like he had reformed?

「There's that, but you can't forget that having an A ranked adventurer as a puppet is something that comes with an incredible large number of benefits. Nobles normally aren't supposed to be able to issue orders to the adventurer's guild, but Celldio's father could do exactly that through him. As a result, the marquis had effectively bolstered his own forces to unfathomable heights.」

It seemed that many adventurers were willing to abide by an A ranker's will even if they happened to dislike the A ranker in question.

『Alright, I'm following so far, but why was drugging Celldio a necessary part of all this? Couldn't the marquis have just ordered him around instead?』

「He seemed to have come to the conclusion that Celldio, as he had been in the past, was far too stupid to actually become an A ranker. There's also the fact that Celldio probably wouldn't have obeyed his father after ranking up even if he had somehow managed to do it on his own. To the marquis, drugging his son was the quicker, simpler solution.」

Hearing Dias' explanation made me almost want to immediately exclaim that the marquis' heart was black as coal. Getting involved with the nobility appeared to be something we wanted to avoid by all means.

「Marquis Ashtonah had probably never viewed Celldio as anything more than a disposable pawn to begin with given that he was an illegitimate child. Keeping Celldio around was detrimental if anything, given how his very presence would be more than enough to start a power struggle.」

I was able to understand Dias' explanation, but I couldn't quite accept it as something I found reasonable. That, of course, wasn't to say that I didn't have any questions.

『So why did his subordinates encourage him to extort people? Wouldn't it be a better idea to just have him kept in check given all the shit they had to go through to make him an A ranker?』

Celldio's reputation probably would've been much better had he not started stepping out of line. He probably would've had much more influence over the guild too.

「That's something I've been wondering as well. The rumour is that they've been looking for Godblades. The Weapon Control skill he had made him rather well suited for doing exactly that.」

『So you think they've been going around extorting people in hopes of potentially coming across a Godblade?』

「Again, I don't really know the answer to that myself. All I can say for certain is that they do have some sort of reason.」

One of the guild's employees knocked on the door right as Dias finished speaking. The employee's timing was pretty decent, so he immediately replied by telling them they could enter.

「Guildmaster, could I direct your attention to something?」

「What?」

「We've managed to retrieve several items from within Celldio's Dimensional Ring.」

The employee presented a small vial of liquid alongside what appeared to be some sort of document.

「The bottle contains elixir as evidenced by its contents not shaking about as the container moves around. This document, on the other hand.... seems to be a list of Godblades?」

The information pertaining to Godblades caught my interest, so I had Fran reposition herself so that I could peak at it. It contained a list of names as well as several drawings and descriptions that could potentially allow one to better recognize the blades in question.

The exact items listed differed slightly from the ones we saw on the document Rumina had showed us.

Was the one we were looking at now more up to date or something?

「I'm surprised you managed to open his item box. Something like this would normally come with a sort of security measure.」

「We were immediately told how to open the box after Erza began his interrogations.」

「So which one spilled the beans, exactly?」

「The rogue.」

「Makes sense. Bad boys are Erza's type, after all.」

Oh god. Oh my god. Erza, what the hell did you do to that poor man!? I kinda wanted to ask, but I also really didn't want to know. The way the staff member was acting clearly demonstrated that it was, at the very least, a method outside the norm.

「Heya Fran!」

Erza showed up the moment I swore never to piss him off. Seeing him caused me to immediately force myself to forget the fact that he seemed to be basking in some sort of afterglow.

「Good work, Erza. Have you learned anything?」

「Mhm. I've got quite the bit of intel for you. I managed to squeeze a whole lot of info out of him after thoroughly exhausting him. It seemed they didn't think that the sword's curse would work because they thought Celldio's Weapon Control skill would let him circumvent it.」

It seemed that was why they egged him on instead of stopping him.

「Oh, and they didn't really say this explicitly, but, it seems they're working under Marquis Ashtonah's orders.」

「Did you happen to find out why they wanted to deprive Fran of her weapon?」

「Mhm. Totally.」

「Want to know.」

「It's a weally stupid reason. They were really rotten on the inside, but A ranked adventurers nonetheless. They had a lot of information the guild normally kept secret from the public, so the marquis had ordered them to go looking for Godblades. But they ran into a pretty big problem, one they sowed for themselves. Funny enough, Celldio ended up a bit too broken and immediately got fixated on every magic sword he came across. They weren't actually able to control him.」

I couldn't help but agree with Erza. The fact that Celldio's lack of sanity had caused him to obsess over regular magic swords after being ordered to find Godblades was kinda funny in a pathetic sort of way.

223. A Godblade's Might

Chapter 223. A Godblade's Might

A Godblade's Might

Dias began to speak after seeing Erza off so he could continue interrogating Celldio's subordinates.

「It looks like we'll be able to use what we just learned to force Marquis Ashtonah into a bit of a hard spot.」

「Why?」

One of his illegitimate children had gotten themselves involved in some sort of scandal. I mean, that mattered and all, but it wasn't really anything that delivered a major blow to his reputation. I couldn't see how it the event could make a high-standing noble suffer any significant consequences.

As far as I was concerned, this whole incident was Celldio's own fault to begin with. He was a druggie, one that extorted the common folk and ultimately killed himself by attempting to wield a cursed sword. Again, his actions were scandalous, but lacked impact. They weren't significant enough to mean much of anything at all to anyone with a marquis' social standing. This was only emphasized all the more by the fact that the guild was apparently already aware of the illegitimate methods Celldio had used to make himself an A ranker in the first place.

「The reason stems from his interest in and pursuit of Godblades. Godblades are so overwhelmingly powerful that they're able to repel entire armies. He would be suspected of treason if word of his intents got out.」

「I see.」

『But weren't there already rumours about Celldio searching for Godblades to begin with?』

「There were, but his position differs greatly from his father's, as one is an adventurer, and the other an aristocrat. It's perfectly acceptable for adventurers to seek out Godblades. In fact, you may as well go ahead and call the act natural. Wielding a weapon that powerful can be considered a sort of universal desire those in our trade happen to share.」

I felt like we were starting to get into technicalities, but I did still understand what Dias was trying to get at. He was more or less saying that Celldio's actions weren't considered suspicious unless his father was also factored into the equation.

『Oh yeah, you mind showing me that list again?』

「Sure.」

The list contained many names, but failed to mention Alpha, Berserk, Ignis, Gaia or Diablo.

Apparently the reason they hadn't been noted was because their locations were known; there was no point in having Celldio look for them.

The only one whose location we knew was Diablo, the Demon Lord's Blade. It was somewhere in the kingdom of Fyrias, the place Prince Flut and Princess Satia, the twins we sailed with, hailed from. We didn't actually know what the sword was capable of, but we were at least aware that it was able to allow their small kingdom to fight off the major military power known as Reidos.

Dias told us where the other four were.

The most surprising two were Ignis, the Brilliant Flameblade, and Gaia, the Earth's Edge, as both were owned by S ranked adventurers. The guildmaster explained to us that their wielders were already extremely powerful on their own, and that the Godblades had only boosted their power levels further. The combination of their abilities and their weapons caused them to go far beyond anything anyone could possibly expect from a mere A ranker.

Ignis' wielder was known as a hero, and apparently was currently engaged in the act of fighting against the evil forces found on the Goldishian continent.

By contrast, Gaia's wielder kinda just did his own thing. He wandered from place to place, and would only show up once every few months in order to sell materials, namely ones he harvested from the high ranked magic beasts he happened to come across on his journeys. Apparently he was last spotted in Chrom, the continent in which the Beastkin's country was located, just earlier this year.

Alpha and Berserk were located in Brohdinn, a continent to the north. The two most powerful kingdoms in Brohdinn each owned one of the two blades. Unsurprisingly, the two aforementioned countries were at each other's necks, but the Godblades kept them in check and prevented them from engaging in any large scale conflict. It'd been several hundred years since they last descended into total war, reason being that they were clearly aware that any conflict that involved two opposing Godblades would cause enormous damage to both parties.

Their knowledge wasn't derived from common sense or logical thought, but instead, first hand experience. The Godblades' wielders had caused over 100,000 deaths when they engaged each other in combat about 300 years prior. The forest in which they fought had been reduced to a mere wasteland, and remained as such to this day.

『That honestly sounds pretty damn terrifying. Where sort of abilities do those two weapons happen to have?』

「Alpha's actually pretty famous, as it grants its wielder the Half-Deify skill.」

「Skill effect?」

「I guess the best way to put it would be to say that it causes its wielder to ascend.」

「Ascend?」

『Iunno about you, but that doesn't really sound particularly useful or intimidating to me.』

Dias' description was a bit lacking, it didn't allow me to form a decent mental representation of the ability.

「Well, the Half-Deify skill basically raises all the caster's stats and skill levels while also enhancing their body for better performance.」

『Ehhh... It still doesn't really sound all that impressive.』

「Doesn't seem strong.」

「I do agree that Alpha's skill sounds somewhat plain but it's actually said to be the most powerful Godblade. Half-Deify raises its Alpha's wielder's stats by a factor of 10. It also allows said wielder to see through every single form of stealth, gaze at things thousands of miles away, and hear every last conversation that happens within an entire country's confines. Moreover, it immediately maxes all of its wielder's skills. Does it sound a bit more impressive if I put it like that?」

Okay, yeah. The sword sounded like something that more or less hyper-boosted its wielder while also drawing out their latent potential. I don't know why I expected anything else from a Godblade.

「They say that a single slash from Alpha's wielder can tear through a hundred soldiers, a second can fell a rampart, and a third can tear down an entire mountain.」

『That kinda sounds like bullshit, but I'm a bit tempted to believe it given that Alpha's a Godblade.』

「The most terrifying part about Alpha is that it can keep its wielder in an enhanced state for over half a day. Those that face it are left helpless, all they can do is hope they wake up to find that they were only having a nightmare.」

Wait, it can let its wielder maintain that ridiculously powerful form for over half a day? Holy shit, that's enough time to raze several major cities, or perhaps maybe even an entire country.

Berserk, the Godblade pitted against Alpha, was just as terrifyingly powerful.

「Berserk's effects are quite similar to Alpha's. It enhances its user's body, raises its user's stats, and levels up its user's skills. Moreover, the enhancements it grants are actually even greater than the ones Alpha grants.」

『Wait, are you sure? Why would Alpha be the better Godblade if Berserk's got a better buff?』

「Berserk is technically stronger from a numerical standpoint, but it can't be considered the best Godblade because it comes with a dreadful side effect. Its user is deprived of their ability to discern friend from foe and is forced into a homicidal rampage. To make matters worse, it kills its wielder as its effect ends.」

『That sounds pretty nasty, but it seems like it could end up being pretty effective if you just threw its wielder into enemy lines.』

Using the blade sounded inhumane, but also quite efficient.

「Unfortunately, that doesn't really work. What do you think happens once Berserk's wielder annihilates all the enemies in its vicinity?」

『Iunno, nothing? I'm assuming you could just retrieve the Godblade and call it a day.』

「How exactly are you supposed to retrieve it? Its wielder will attack you if you approach it.」

『I mean, you could just wait for the sword's effect to fade. It shouldn't be too hard to retrieve once the wielder dies.』

「You're right, but who's to say that the blade's original owner will be the first to arrive on site?」

Dias had a pretty good point. It was possible for one's enemies to get to the blade first.

「And that's not all. Like Alpha, Berserk's effects also remain for the better half of a day. That's a long time. There's been a case in which its wielder ended up making his way back to his own country and razing a large city after demolishing the enemy's capital. It really isn't something you can use on the fly. It always causes heavy losses on both sides. That said, it's the perfect card to use if you find that yourself without any other option.」

In a way, you could say Berserk was like a nuke. You couldn't really use it without worrying the consequences potentially coming back and biting you in the ass.

「And I'm guessing that's why the country that has Alpha hasn't managed to slowly push the country they're up against into some sort of corner?」

Based on what Dias told us, there wasn't really any point in attempting to go after any of the Godblades whose locations were known, as they were all possessed by either S rankers or countries. It didn't seem like it would be possible to buy or steal them from either of the two types of entities mentioned.

『And I'm guessing that's why Celldio was supposed to be looking for Godblades without obvious location markers on them?』

「Exactly. So back on track, there isn't a country out there that doesn't want to be in possession of a Godblade, so there must be a whole slew of information available. That said, I'm surprised the marquis managed to gather as much as he did.」

Dias made yet another valid point. Cellio had been provided with a good bit of information regarding the Godblades' appearances and abilities.

The Warmount Blade — Chariot

Charriot's form resembles that of a conductor's baton. It is capable of creating golems of all shapes and sizes and manipulating them thereafter. The golems tend to be made of metal and are capable of both flight and emitting beams of light. It was demonstrated to be capable of simultaneously creating 1000 small golems about 15cm in height each. These golems were able to annihilate over a fleet of ships 100 strong in an instant as per the battle of Gallelia. It was last spotted somewhere on the continent of Kapul.

The Blade of Wisdom — Cherubim

This Godblade has already been destroyed, but its vestiges should be collected if deemed possible. There are no confirmed details regarding its abilities. Investigating the blade through the use of skills has led to the conclusion that it was a sword with an angel engraved onto it. It was likely to have been destroyed in the Kingdom of Kranzel.

The Seeker's Godblade — Explorer

Explorer is shaped like a monocle. One investigation has led to the conclusion that has the ability to perceive the happenings of an entire continent, but there are no confirmed details regarding its precise workings. It was last seen on the continent of Jirbard.

The Blade of Imprisonment — Hell

No confirmed details. The only mention of it is in a 500 year old document that described it being used in Chrom. The location in which it was said to be used is now a barren wasteland in which it is impossible for any sort of organism to thrive. Its abilities are said to relate to the manipulation of poison.

The Raging Dragonblade — Lindwurm

The only confirmed detail is that it is shaped like a sword.

The Moonbeam Blade — Moonlight

Apparently grants its user the ability to repel any and all attacks.

The only really detailed description was the one about Chariot, but even then, it failed to mention any sort of pinpointed location.

「How interesting. Not even I knew much of what was written here. I'm surprised they're actually even trying to retrieve Cherubim. I presume the marquis' goal must be to conduct some sort of research...」

『Do you think it's possible for them to actually learn anything?』

「I can't draw any conclusions, but I can say that I doubt they'd bother doing something that wouldn't provide them any benefit. Either way, the marquis keeping his activities a secret raises several major red flags.」

His actions weren't technically illegal, but there was no doubt that he would be suspected of treason if he started doing research on weapons and kept it a secret from the state.

「Would you mind letting me hang onto this? It'll serve as a good piece of evidence.」

「Nn. Don't mind.」

「Thanks.」

I'd already memorized everything that had been written on the sheet anyways.

224. How to Travel to the Beastkin's Country

Chapter 224. How to Travel to the Beastkin's Country

How to Travel to the Beastkin's Country

「I really have to say though, you sure do seem to attract trouble. You've already hooked in two different big shots in a single day. To be fair, it should be something you saw coming. You've garnered a lot of attention, and caught a lot of eyes. We as the guild are rather thankful that you're ultimately helping us out, but I'm guessing you don't feel the same.」

『Yeah, we kinda would've preferred not to get involved with any of those people at all.』

「Hahahaha, yeah, that's what I thought. Too bad for you, I can guarantee that it's going to keep happening.」

「How to make stop?」

「I'm glad you're willing to ask for my advice instead of beating around the bush or thinking you'll just somehow find your way out of every situation. You remember how I told you to go to the Beastkin's Country? My personal advice would be to hurry on your way. Our country's idiots won't be able to do anything to you if you're gone.」

『That sounds great and all, but I'm not really sure it'll be that easy for us to just hop over to another continent.』

We probably needed both a ship and a visa if we wanted to make our way over.

「Don't worry about the visa, the guild has you covered on that front. Anyone that has a designated request can use their card as both an entry and exit permit.」

Wow, guild cards are a lot more convenient than I thought.

「There'll be a office at the border. The inspector there will have a magic item, and should let you pass so long as you show him your guild card.」

「Thanks.」

『I guess that means that finding ourselves a ship is all we'll have to worry about.』

「That part will be a bit more difficult. Barbra will probably be your best bet, but I don't think they have any ocean liners in service.」

『Huh, that's weird. How do people normally get over to the Beastkin's country then?』

「Most adventurers tend to have merchants hire them as escorts.」

『Sounds about right.』

The problem with that was Fran's appearance. I highly doubted anyone would be all that willing to hire her as a guard given that she looked the way she did. If I had to hire an escort, and my options were a kid and a big burly man, I'd definitely choose the latter.

We'd managed to get ourselves an escort mission when going from Dharz to Barbra, but that was only because we'd known Prince Flut, Princess Satia, and Salrut. In other words, we had only managed to hitch ourselves a ride because we had the power of nepotism at hand. We no longer had the connections nec—oh wait.

『We could try asking the guys at the Luciel Conglomerate.』

「...Who?」

『Yeah, I'm not really surprised you've already forgotten them.』

I myself had almost forgotten about them as well. Fran was no good at remembering names, so her having forgotten them was honestly a given.

『You remember how we had to ride a ship in order to get from Dharz to Barbra? The conglomerate is the company that owned the ship, remember? We even got a coin from the captain, one with some sort sort of crest on it.』

「Nn...? Got coin?」

『Yeah, we totally did.』

The conglomerate was one of Barbra's biggest corporations, so there was a pretty good chance they'd have a ship or two heading for Chrom.

「I don't think you'll have any trouble finding yourself an escort job. Merchants are known for their vast information networks, their many connections let them spread and catch wind of information faster than anyone and everyone else. I'm sure Barbra's merchants have already caught wind of your accomplishments.」

「Then will have easy time finding ship to escort?」

「I think it'll even be safe to say that they'll be fighting for your attention. That said, it'd probably be best for you to take advantage of that connection, than go out of your way to find a ship to the Beastkin's Country that may or may not actually exist.」

「Nn?」

『Yeah, good point.』

Fran hadn't seemed to have realized it, but me, I'd already long thought about what Dias was currently suggesting. The connection he was referring to was the one we shared with the Beast Lord.

I hadn't immediately suggested asking him for help because I wasn't sure if it was the best idea.

There were several reasons I thought that to be the case, with the first being that it kind of felt like we were relying on him more than we should've been. I didn't want to be any more in his debt than we already were.

The second was that the Beast Lord probably wasn't planning on heading back to his country immediately. He was a king, one that would probably be met with a warm reception regardless of where he went. Dealing with the people that welcomed him was effectively a part of his job. His personality kinda made it so he wasn't really all that receptive, but Royce and his other companions always seemed to be working to prevent him from acting entirely on his selfish whims. In other words, he probably wouldn't be heading back to his own country for quite some time.

I felt we'd be able to reach our destination much more quickly if we found a ship that'd take us straight there.

Dias, however, was inclined to disagree.

「Your first reason may as well be moot. You're going to need to ask him a favour anyway, seeing as how you'll need to pay Kiara a visit.」

『True.』

「The same goes for your other point, I doubt he'd make many stops on his way back.」

『Why's that?』

「The Beast Lord's party barely made any stops on the way here. They always made a big show of having the Beast Lord move around in his carriage whenever they entered a town, but they spent the rest of their time as would a normal party of adventurers.」

Their actions made a fair bit of sense to me, as functioning the way they did definitely allowed them to move at a rapid pace. The only issue was that I wasn't really sure we would be able to keep up with an S ranked party.

That wasn't the only concern it raised either. There was a chance they'd find out about me if we travelled with them. Beastkin had good intuition, and high ranking adventurers were sharp. The combination of the two traits made me feel like they would definitely catch on if we stayed with them for an extended period of time.

「Well uh... good luck. I don't really know what else to say to you about that.」

『Yeah, I figured as much.』

That said, I wasn't really sure whether the Beast Lord would even be willing to let us travel with him in the first place. There was a chance he would just show us to a ship and have us head out without him if we were lucky.

「Will go ask Beast Lord.」

『Yeah, no harm in just asking, I guess.』

「Tell him and his buddies I said hi.」

「Nn.」

225. Route Secured

Chapter 225. Route Secured

Route Secured

We headed over to the inn the Beast Lord was staying at despite the fact that the sun had already started to set. We really wanted to get this over with and out of the way as soon as possible.

The reason I felt that way was because the Beast Lord struck me as an impatient person. There was a good chance he would just randomly up and leave because he no longer had any business in Ulmutt.

Our biggest blocker was that there was a chance we wouldn't actually be allowed to see him given how late it was. We could always just sneak in, but that wasn't really too great of an idea given he was currently staying at a super high class inn that typically housed royalty and whatnot.

Fortunately, my worries ended up being needless. The inn's staff let us in the moment they heard Fran's name because the Beast Lord had apparently told them to act upon her requests with the highest possible priority.

「Oh, hey Fran. What's up?」

The Beast Lord raised a hand to give us a friendly greeting as we entered his room. The impression he was currently giving off was drastically different from his usual one. He was acting in the same manner as would any other easy-going man in his 30's.

「Did you need me for something?」

「Nn. Looking for ship to visit Beastkin's Country.」

「You're planning to head over right away? That's perfect, you can just hitch a ride with us 'cause we're planning to head back soon anyway.」

Well uh, that happened.

I honestly wasn't expecting him to immediately give us the green light. Allowing a stranger to join a group that included an incognito king really didn't sound like that great of an idea. Royce seemed to share my opinion, as he immediately joined in on the conversation and voiced a complaint —

「Lord Rig, I believe you have may forgotten to complete one of the tasks on our agenda. You are a royal, and as such, it would be rude for you not to pay the King of Kranzel your respects after visiting his country.」

— Or so I thought. Turned out the reason he was interjecting wasn't because he didn't want Fran to accompany them, but rather, because they had more shit to do before actually leaving.

「Ugh, do I really have to?」

「Of course.」

Royce's point was valid, the Beast Lord clearly had yet to fulfill all his duties as a king. We'd been planning on heading over to Kranzel's royal capital as well, but only because we wanted to take part in the auction. I didn't think it'd be realistic for us to follow him all the way to the royal capital before actually leaving the country, though it did seem like they'd probably hire us as guards if we asked them to.

「Fine, but then how are we supposed to accompany her back?」

「There is no need for us to personally escort her. She's an adventurer, one strong enough to defeat Gold. She'll be able to handle herself.」

「Eh, yeah, I guess you're right.」

「Besides, all she asked for was for us to help her find a ship.」

「Huh, really?」

「Geez. I know that she's about the same age as the princess, and that you've got quite the interest in her, but do pay more attention.」

「Princess?」

「He's talking about my daughter. She's 15 this year, and I really can't help but see a bit of her in you.」

It seemed that the only reason the Beast Lord treated Fran as kindly as he did was because she reminded him of his own daughter.

「That said, I really would love for her to visit our country. I am sure our Master would be delighted to meet her.」

「Right?」

「We would also be able to put her to good use.」

Shit! He just said that right to Fran's face! I was shocked at first, but a bit of further consideration led me to believe that Royce had said what he had on purpose. He wanted Fran to know that he would be using her for politics' sake if she decided to visit.

Royce was one of the Beast Lord's aides, and clearly highly competent. He wasn't about to let Fran, a Black Catkin that'd actually managed to evolve, slip right through his fingers. He knew and wanted to take advantage of the fact that revealing her to his country's people would cause their attitudes to make unprecedented swings and changes.

「Will run away if gets too bad.」

「Hahahahaha! They'd probably need to send someone at least as strong as me after you if you actually got serious about wanting to escape our grasp.」

「That's fine. We are not requesting that you become one of Lord Rig's vassals, after all. Personally, I was considering that we could just... help each other out. All we need is for you to demonstrate that you and Lord Rig get along.」

Yeah, that doesn't really sound too bad at all.

「To that end, I will be giving you this.」

「This?」

The thing Royce handed Fran seemed to resemble a thin sheet of metal with some sort of crest engraved on it.

「The item I just gave you is an identification card bearing both Lord Rig's name and my own. Many of our country's merchants frequently travel between Barbra and our motherland. The card I just gave you should allow you to board any one of them with ease.」

「Really?」

「Really. Just look for a ship with our crest engraved on it, and you should be good to go.」

It seemed we somehow managed to get ourselves into what we considered the ideal situation. We were pretty much set.

Apparently, Barbra had a boat set sail for the Beastkin's country about once every three days. The ones we were looking for, the ones with the country's crest with a crown mounted on top, worked directly under government supervision. Showing them the crest we were given would cause them to not only let us on board, but also treat us as they would a guest of honour.

In other words, they'd given us something much more convenient than what we'd been expecting.

「To be frank, I doubt the crest we've given you is even necessary. Most of our country's merchants have already likely learned both of your name and your appearance. I can all but guarantee that they would allow you to board so long as you just asked.」

That was true and all, but having something that was actually 100% guaranteed was much better than something that was just highly likely.

I was completely satisfied with the whole boat ordeal now, so the only other thing we really wanted to know was the info they promised us about the god-tier blacksmith.

「Question. God-tier blacksmith, located where?」

「That's something that shouldn't be too hard to figure out after you get there.」

「We have already issued an order for you to be given a letter of introduction upon your arrival. Unfortunately, that is all we can do. There is no guarantee that the smith will be willing to see you even with the letter.」

「Oh yeah. Try telling that smith to actually handle our shit if she ends up taking a liking to you.」 [1]

It seemed the god-tier blacksmith had a rather free spirit seeing as how she was willing to turn down even the king's requests.

I couldn't really make any guarantees, but personally, I was willing to put in a good word or two for the Beast Lord and his buddies if the blacksmith really did end up liking us, so I didn't see any issue in accepting their request.

「Nn.」

「Alright, good luck with everything.」

「Our master is currently residing within the palace. You should be able to find her with ease so long as you make your way towards our capital.」

「Got it.」

226. Old Man Gallus' Whereabouts

Chapter 226. Old Man Gallus' Whereabouts

Old Man Gallus' Whereabouts

Royce had given us his ID, so we were pretty much set to leave for the Beastkin's Country whenever. Given that, I decided to mull over whether or not we had anything to do before actually setting out.

『Oh yeah, we should probably go check in with Old Man Gallus.』

I remember the other blacksmith telling us that he'd be back by the time the tourney started, so I figured he was probably already in town. The blacksmith in question had even promised to tell us when Gallus finally arrived, but he'd never actually contacted us at all.

There was a pretty good chance that he'd purposefully avoided doing so because he didn't want to bother us because we were busy with the tourney. Given that, I figured we may as well pay his smithy a visit.

「Blacksmith?」

『Yeah, I was thinking we could go check to see whether or not Gallus made it back.』

The sun had only just set, so it seemed to me that it was fine to assume that they'd yet to go to bed. That said, it seemed a bit wrong to visit at this late an hour, so I had us pick up a little something to make seeing us worth their time.

Specifically, we went into a bar that happened to be on the way and bought a bottle of the strongest drink they had. It seemed like the best possible thing we could get seeing as how dwarves and liquor went hand in hand. I was a bit worried that they'd refuse to sell it to us given Fran's age, but apparently that wasn't actually the case. In fact, it was the exact opposite. The bartender had even given Fran a discount in exchange for a handshake because he'd recognized her on sight.

And so, we paid Zadoh, one of Gallus' blacksmith buddies, a visit with booze in hand. [1]

「Hey there. Grats on third place.」

「Nn. Thanks.」

It turned out that Zadoh had actually watched the tourney.

Our gift seemed to delight him. Apparently, it was some pretty damn high quality stuff.

We asked him about Gallus, but unfortunately Zadoh could only say that the old craftsman had yet to show up in Ulmutt.

「I think Gallus is the only one that hasn't returned. As far as I know, all the other people that went to help are already back.」

「Only Gallus not back?」

「Yeah. He's probably stuck up in Barbra doing something only he's capable of.」

「Okay.」

「Though, it's a bit weird for him not to at least send word of the delay seeing how he said he'd return by the time the tourney started.」

We were on our way back over to Barbra anyways, so we could probably just look for him again after heading over. I definitely did want to at least greet him before we headed off to the Beastkin's Country, as there was no way for us to know when we'd next see him if we just upped and left without checking in first.

There wasn't really much else for us to ask. We turned around and decided to head home, but Zadoh stopped us before we made our way out the door.

「R-Right, so I wanted to ask you about that sword of yours...」

The blacksmith's gaze was set on me, and seemed to carry the same emotions it had when he first feasted his eyes on Fran's Black Cat Set.

Zadoh was a skilled craftsman, so it really didn't take him much to figure out that I was some sort of magic sword. He'd probably been curious about me to begin with. Him watching the tourney probably hadn't helped either given how the caster kept going on and on about the fact that I was Fran's namesake.

「C-Could I see it for a sec? I promise I won't take too long.」

(Master?)

『Sure, I don't mind if he promises to keep it short. Make sure you warn him not to equip me though, cause, y'know.』

「Got it. Here.」

「Thanks a bunch.」

「Don't equip. Will die from curse.」

「Huh?」

「Cursed. Only I can equip without dying.」

Zadoh had started moving his hands in my direction, but stopped the moment he heard Fran's warning. His face reflected a clear sense of terror.

I couldn't really blame him. You wouldn't normally want to touch a sword that could potentially kill you if you tried equipping it. It was kinda like how people didn't really like touching poison, even if it was the type that only took effect if you drank it.

Not to brag, but, there was no way Zadoh wasn't aware of the fact that I wasn't just your everyday magic sword. As a result, Fran's warning came off as all the more real.

「W-Would just touching it cause any problems?」

「None.」

「A-Alright, good to hear.」

The blacksmith had to have been rather curious seeing as how he was the one that asked to see me. Given that, he ended up actually did end up picking me up after seemingly steeling his resolve.

A switch almost seemed to flip within him the moment he did. He cast aside all his nervousness and immediately began to act as one would expect of a professional blacksmith. That is, he began carefully looking over both my guard and blade.

「Hmmm... I can feel an incredible amount of magical power coming from within your sword. Whoever made its blade did it with meticulous care. It seems to be made out of a pretty interesting metal too.」

Zadoh began muttering as he looked me over.

「Would it be okay for me to ask about this magic sword's source?」

「Source?」

「Yeah. Do you know who made it, or where you found it maybe?」

Zadoh's questions were more or less the exact ones you'd expect from a pro. That said, I couldn't actually answer them. I didn't know who made me, and I didn't really think it was a good idea to tell him I came from the Maookami Plains.

「Not really.」

I mulled over it a bit, but ended up asking Fran to play it safe.

「That's too bad... Either way, it looks to me like this thing might actually be made out of an orichalcum alloy.」

「Orichalcum? Blade made of it?」

「Honestly, I can't say. It's not made out of something I'm familiar with, which is why I was thinking that was why orichalcum sounded like it'd be a likely contender. Hold on a second.」

Zadoh walked over to one of his smithy's corners and retrieved a slightly worn book as he spoke.

「This here is something I just happened to get my hands on during the tourney. It contains notes on blacksmiths from the past.」

The tourney would cause merchants to swarm to Ulmutt, which in turn apparently made it fairly easy to find yourself a lucky bargain or two.

「The thing's apparently written by the apprentice of a god-tier blacksmith's apprentice. It talks about the different types of metals god-tier blacksmiths have used in the past, and makes particular mention of one called orichalcum. I don't actually know what exactly orichalcum is, but the book says it's the only kind of metal that can survive a god-tier blacksmith's forging process.」

Huh, so something like that actually existed? I was a bit intrigued by the concept of being made of orichalcum, but it didn't seem quite right.

Orichalcum was, based on what Zadoh said, apparently a sort of ridiculously durable legendary metal. The reason I didn't think I was made of it was exactly that, it was durable and I wasn't. My blade broke literally all the time. The only reason I looked to be in perfect condition right now was because I could regenerate.

「To be honest, that guess was just a shot in the dark. There's lots of metals I don't know much about, and there's no doubt that this sword of yours could be made out of any one or combination of them. I only thought that orichalcum was a possibility because the sword seems to give off a sort of dignity. In fact, it almost seems to bear a presence of its own. It's possible my feelings come from the fact that it's some sort of top-class magic item.」

Dignity? Damn man, you be saying some good shit right there. Am I just so majestic he can't help but notice me? Hell yeah! I mean, I guess that does make decent sense. I may not be a godblade, but there really was a fair chance that I was made by some god-tier blacksmith.

Zadoh finished checking me over, handed me back to Fran, and bid us farewell.

It didn't take long for us to arrive back at the inn thereafter.

The sun had already set, but there were a few things we had to do before going to bed. Namely, Fran had yet to bathe or eat.

And that wasn't it either. There was something I wanted to check, something I'd been putting off.

『Well, here goes.』

「Nn.」

The thing in question was checking the effects of my Doppelganger Synthesis skill.

I casted the skill expecting to create a couple cloth-covered humans, but was instead greeted by a series of blades.

『Yeah, looks like I spawned swords again.』

「Nn. Many Masters.」

Doppelganger Synthesis seemed to have started spawning swords instead of humans for some odd reason.

I tried casting the skill several times, only to learn that it was indeed possible for me to create human doppelgangers, but only if I focused on it. Likewise, it was possible for me to create both swords and humans simultaneously, a discovery that allowed us to usher in a whole new wave of strategies.

That said, the skill didn't seem to be working the exact way I expected. For some odd reason, the human-shaped doppelgangers I created didn't seem quite right. They looked like me, but they also kinda didn't. Something just seemed... off.

It wasn't anything too disorienting though, so I ended up just writing it off as a consequence of me becoming capable of creating sword-shaped doppelgangers.

The reason I was willing to write it off almost right away was because frankly, I don't really care about having a human form. I'd already long made up my mind and decided I would live out the rest of my life as a sword. All that mattered to me was that my human-shaped doppelgangers didn't suffer any sort of performance loss.

『Alright. We talked to everyone we needed to talk to, and we've got pretty much everything ready. You think it's about time?』

「Nn. Time to go to Beastkin's Country.」

[1] I s2g his name was Zerld before. I even double checked it... Maybe this is a different blacksmith buddy?

227. Goodbye Ulmutt

Chapter 227. Goodbye Ulmutt

Goodbye Ulmutt

Today was the day we planned to leave Ulmutt.

The first thing we did after getting out of bed and finishing up our morning routine was paying Rumina a visit so we could say our goodbyes.

「The time I spent with you was both eventful and enjoyable.」

「Later.」

「Farewell. Do enjoy yourselves in the Beastkin's Country.」

「Nn...」

「I believe it is quite sunny today. It appears to be the perfect time to depart, and to that end, I do hope that your expression will brighten to match the weather.」

The two weren't going to part for good or anything, but it seemed like Fran couldn't help but feel a bit sad regardless.

「Thank you for informing me of Kiara's whereabouts. I would have never located her if not for your efforts. I understand that this is not my first time making the statement, but I would like to reiterate it in order to express my gratitude.」

「Also grateful. For evolution.」

『What she said. Helping us out seemed to have ended up weakening you quite a bit. You sacrificed a lot for us, we really do owe you a ton.』

「It appears that our feelings are mutual. As that is the case, I see no harm in calling off our debts to one another.」

Rumina smiled cheerfully as she spoke, but Fran ended up frowning in response.

「Please don't make that face, Fran. I can assure you that our paths will cross again. It would ease my heart to see you depart this place with a smile.」

「Nn...」

「It appears that you really cannot go without being spoiled.」

Rumina got up out of her seat, approached the younger black catkin and gave her a full on hug. Fran responded to it burying her face in Rumina's chest and returning the embrace.

They stuck together for a while, but Rumina eventually dislodged Fran by tapping her on the back.

The younger girl's face had a pretty rare look on it in the sense that it was tinted with a slight shade of red. She'd clearly felt a bit embarrassed.

「Sorry.」

「Fuhaha. 'Twas rather adorable of you. Feel free to return to my side if you ever feel yourself tinged with loneliness. I will be willing to provide you as many hugs as you wish for.」

「Nn.」

All the uneasiness had left Fran's face. Rumina had fulfilled a duty I normally would've been responsible for in a way I could never have possibly managed. I felt kinda conflicted in the sense that I both admired her ability to do so, and was frustrated that I couldn't do anything at all for Fran.

「Time to go.」

「Indeed it is. Stay safe, and enjoy your journey.」

And so, Rumina saw us out the dungeon with a smile.

Fran ended up opening her mouth and speaking one last time right as we began to teleport.

「Bye bye.」

It almost seemed to be something she hadn't intentionally said, something that had just so happened to leak out.

『We'll definitely pay her a visit sometime in the future.』

「Nn.」

『And we'll definitely make sure we grow enough to give her a bit of a shock.』

「Nn!」

We arrived at Ulmutt's gate about an hour later, only to find ourselves surrounded by a decently sized group of people.

「Do come back Fran! I'll welcome you with open arms anytime!」

Erza was the first person to call out to us; he immediately leapt at and glomped Fran as he began to cry. She ended up letting out a “mmrph” sound as he pulled her into his thick, burly chest, but she didn't end up really minding his actions even though snot had begun dribbling from his nose. In fact, she'd even ended up patting him on the back in order to soothe him.

「Sniffles... Thanks Fran.」

「Nn.」

「I have a parting gift I'd like to give you.」

Erza handed Fran a basket with ten liquid filled bottles within.

「Potions?」

「I made you some beauty cream. It'll keep your skin soft and smooth so long as you apply a bit of it before going to bed. You're really strong Fran, and cool too, but make sure you never lose sight of being as cute a girl as you can be, mkay?」

「Nn?」

Erza's advice was pretty solid, and I really appreciate the sentiments that drove him. Fran was pretty damned adorable, even to start with. Unfortunately, she was stuck with me as her guardian, so she didn't normally end up making use of her beauty due to a lack of exposure to both makeup and fashion.

The 10 bottles we were given would last us a pretty good while, so I was going to have Fran start using them from today onwards.

「Smear on skin?」

「Mhm. All you have to is put a dot of it on your palm and then massage it into your skin.」

「Why?」

「Listen here girl. I know you might not see why you'd bother as of right now, but just do it. I promise you you'll understand once you grow up and fall in love.」

「Nn? Okay...?」

Fran nodded, but her expression belied the fact that she had absolutely no idea what was going on.

Huh, right, Fran will fall in love one day, won't sh- wait a second.

Dude, Erza, Fran's still only 12...

Isn't it like, a little bit kinda maybe too early for her to fall in love?

I could say for sure that Fran would end up being pretty damned popular with the guys if Erza's beauty cream worked to enhance her looks the way I was thinking it would. There was no doubt in my mind that all sorts of dudes would flock to her like bees to honey.

A part of me couldn't help but worry that some of the aforementioned men would end up being so good looking that they'd make Fran fall in love with them at first sight. I knew that I'd be able to cut those individuals down without hesitation if they ended up being scumbags on the inside, but I couldn't say the same for people that ended up being just as good inside as they were outside. I couldn't help but wonder what I would end up doing if I actually judged their personalities to be amicable enough to be worth Fran's affections. Would I be able to entrust her to them?

My immediate reaction was a big no. Fran needed someone strong enough to protect her, someone capable of besting her in combat even with me equipped. I absolutely refused to approve of them unless they were both at least that strong, fairly financially stable, fully willing to commit to a monogamous relationship, and capable of fulfilling every single last one of her wishes.

「H-Hey Fran, are okay? That amazing cursed sword of yours just started shaking all on its own.」

(Master?)

Shit, that was close. I seemed to have momentarily lost control of myself, as I'd started unconsciously casting telekinesis.

『I-It's nothing. You should probably thank Erza.』

I didn't really have to concern myself with the thought for the time being, as romantic love seemed to be something Fran wouldn't experience for quite some time. There was no point to not accepting Erza's gift, there was no real harm in Fran getting even cuter than she was already.

「Nn. No problem. Thanks.」

「I'll make you more when you run out, so stop by when you do!」

「Got it.」

The next two people to call out to us, Dias and Aurel, came as a pair.

「Heya. Looks like you picked a pretty good day to set off. The weather's looking great.」

「Take care of yourself out there.」

They bowed to Fran and thanked her for the whole Kiara fiasco. I was expecting them to hand us letters, but they didn't end up doing so.

「We still remember her as vividly as we would have had we seen each other just yesterday, but the opposite may not necessarily hold true.」

「To her, we were just another pair of unreliable adventurers. There's a good chance she's long forgotten about us.」

To me, their situation almost sounded a bit depressing, but they didn't seem to mind. The looks on their faces suggested that they thought of it as only natural, and hence, they weren't planning to send her any letters.

「We would like you to mention us, but that's it. All you really have to say is that some of the adventurers that she used to know miss her.」

「Nn. Got it.」

The next group Fran was approached by consisted of Amanda, Forrund, Fermus, and Colbert. The half-elf, who was at the group's front, greeted Fran with a hug.

「It looks like we're going to have to say our goodbyes again, Fran. I'm really going to miss you...」

Amanda cried much in the same manner as Erza, minus the snot. Her beauty and grace made her much girlier than- Okay no, I'd better just stop there and write Erza off as an exception of sorts.

「Farewell.」

Forrund was short and to the point, just as he'd been back in Barbra. In a sense, one could say that he bore a slight resemblance to Fran.

Honestly, I hadn't even expected him to come see us off.

「Is that not a bit too blunt of you, Forrund?」

Colbert's tone clearly conveyed that he was taken aback by Forrund's greeting.

「Sorry Fran, Forrund always acts like that, so please do not think ill of him.」

「No problem.」

「Hahaha, I do have to say, the two of you are quite similar with regards to your mannerisms. Forrund tends to like strong adventurers, he is here today because of the favourable impression you left on him.」

「Yeah.」

「Nn.」

「One day.」

「Got it.」

「I have the feeling that putting the two of you together might not be the best idea.」

Colbert shuddered, and for a good reason at that.

The two were conversing in a manner that no one but them could understand. Despite that, they seemed to be communicating losslessly.

「Was Barbra your next destination, Fran?」

「Nn.」

「In that case, I'd like for you to have this. It's a pass that'll get you a free meal at my restaurant. Please do stop by.」

Oh nice. That's a pretty damned good present. Fran really seemed to have enjoyed the stuff she ate at The Dragon's Table.

「Thanks.」

「I am going to be training myself from the ground up again, so I will not lose the next time we fight.」

Colbert declared that he wished to duel Fran again in the future, which prompted her to immediately respond as any other battle maniac would.

「Bring it on.」

Amanda finally released Fran after we did a good chunk of conversing.

「I'm going to be going to the Beastkin's Country too.」

Thinking back, Amanda had actually said something similar when we left Alessa. Unfortunately for her, that simply wasn't something she was permitted to do.

「Not happening.」

「I highly doubt that you will be allowed to do so.」

「It definitely won't happen.」

All three of the men accompanying her shot down Amanda's idea the moment she voiced it. She went on to state that she at least wanted to accompany us back to Barbra, but she had duties to attend to in Alessa, and as such, her three companions ended up dragging her away.

「See you later Fran!」

The last group to approach was the Beast Lord's.

「Make sure you get along with my daughter if you happen to run into her. She's a bit of a tomboy, but a good girl anyways.」

I was fine with the idea of having Fran make friends with the Beast Lord's daughter, but his phrasing had me worried. He of all people had called her a tomboy, so I couldn't help but suspect her to be on the wilder side.

We spoke to Royce, Goldalfa, and Roche in that order, before finally moving on to Zefmate, who immediately offered Fran a handshake.

「It seems I caused you a lot of trouble.」

「Nn.」

「I'm going to be one of the Beast Lord's attendants from now on. I'm planning to train by his side, and grow much stronger. I swear I'll at least force you to make use of the abilities you obtained from evolving the next time we duel.」

Zefmate seemed to have a lot of potential. Training by the Beast Lord's side would definitely serve to turn him into a powerful foe to face.

「Both my tribe and I plan to start over. We'll show you that we can change for the better.」

「High expectations.」

「That's good. I'll make sure I uphold them.」

Zefmate was one of the Blue Cat Tribe's most influential members. I was sure that, going forward, his work would reduce the number of Blue Catkin involved in the slave trade.

Fran firmly grasped the Blue Leopardkin's hand and shook it for quite the extended duration, a demonstration of her trust in his success.

「Leaving now.」

「See ya.」

「Nn.」

Fran leapt atop Urushi's back after letting go of Zefmate's hand.

「Urushi.」

「Woof!」

She got ready to go, but made sure to give the group that'd come to say their goodbyes one last wave before actually leaving.

「Later?」

「Baaiii!」

「See you soon!」

Urushi began to run, with Erza's and Amanda's particularly loud voices trailing in the wind behind him, as we once again set off on a journey.

228. Kanna Kamui

Chapter 228. Kanna Kamui

Kanna Kamui

『I know I say this literally every single time we go anywhere at all, but Ulmutt was a pretty decent place.』

「Nn.」

「Woof.」

To us, the city had become a fairly important landmark. It was there that we met Rumina, who in turn helped Fran evolve through a method that you couldn't really call anything but miraculous. Us meeting Rumina was already one hell of a coincidence in and of itself. There were many fine details that led up to the encounter. There was a pretty good chance that we never would've met had the circumstances been even the slightest bit different.

Rumina was one of the first Black Catkin Fran had met since she lost her parents, but that wasn't all. To Fran, she'd effectively become a mother figure, one that'd shown an incredible amount of warmth and affection. The bond the two shared drove Fran, it made her want to work even harder to improve her clan's social standing. Rumina was the only reason Fran had finally shown her less mature side. She would've probably never acted in a manner befitting her age if not for the older Black Catkin.

One of Ulmutt's key attractions, the yearly Martial Arts Tournament, had taught us a lot about matchups, tactics, and even how we could best make use of our strengths. We reaffirmed that victory wasn't entirely based on what was written on one's stat page, and that we should never get too full of ourselves because there was always someone stronger than us. We both knew that there was simply no way we could beat either Forrond or Amanda in a battle to the death. We were too lacking in more or less every single aspect.

But that was fine.

It was precisely our recognition of that weakness of ours that drove us to reach even greater heights.

「Nn. Will participate next year too.」

『Sounds good. And next time, we'll make sure we win first place.』

「Nn!」

「Woof!」

The time we spent in Ulmutt had also allowed us to build a connection with the Beast Lord and several other Beastkin. In doing so, we learned of a possible resolution to the problem of Blue and Black Catkin relations, and that the Blue Cat Tribe had effectively lost its standing.

There was hope that the Blue Cat Tribe could change going forward. We weren't about to let the Beast Lord and Zefmate be the only two to handle the situation, we'd also put some thought into how we could potentially help them out. The best way we'd come up with so far seemed like it would be taking out any Blue Catkin slave traders we happened upon.

Last time, it took us about four days to move between Barbra and Ulmutt. We now knew the path, so I'd thought that heading back would've been a much faster process.

I'd been pretty much spot on at first, as we managed to cover about 70% of the distance in two days, but unfortunately, we ended up running into something we couldn't really just overlook.

「O-Oh god, please help me!」

「Hiiiiiiiiii!!」

「Rooooooooarr!」

That is, we saw a swarm of lesser wyverns chasing a group of three men that looked to be merchants. In our eyes, lesser wyverns were actually quite weak, as we could take them down with ease, but to the merchants, the beasts were monstrous foes they'd never be able to overcome.

Seeing the wyverns caused me to recall the time I fought one to the death back when I was just transported over to the Maoookami Plains. The memory was by no means a good one, but for some odd reason, remembering it filled me with a sense of nostalgia nonetheless. Unlike me, however, the merchants weren't pit up against just a single enemy. There were a whole 10 chasing after them.

「Urushi.」

「Woof.」

Urushi kicked off at top speed in response to Fran's command. It only took him a brief moment to reach the merchants.

「H-Hiiiiii!」

「Damn it! Why!? First flying lizards, and now even magic wolves!?!」

「Shit! We're so dead!」

Our sudden appearance had caused the merchants to end up slowing down. The energy drained from their legs as they gave up on their lives.

「Not enemy.」

「Huh? Wait, what? A kid?」

They didn't notice Fran, who'd been riding on Urushi's back, until after she called out to them.

「I-Is that wolf yours?」

「Wait! Aren't you the Black Lightning Princess!?!」

「Nn.」

The three merchants once again bumped up their speed. Learning Fran's identity had shown them a ray of hope. They seemed to be pretty lively, a trait I couldn't really say I disliked. After all, being lively was much better than breaking down and screaming nonstop.

「Need help?」

「Yes please!」

「Definitely!」

「T-Thanks!」

I doubted saving them would net us any rewards, but we decided to help regardless because ditching them would probably weigh on our consciences.

「Will take materials.」

「Sounds good!」

「We'll even throw in a bit of an extra reward!」

「Though it probably won't amount to anything much...!」

「Shut up, idiot!」

「If we die because she leaves, it'll be all your fault!」

「You say that, but she's a high ranked adventurer! What the hell are we supposed to do if we can't pay her fee after she helps us?」

「W-Well... I guess you're right. I can't deny that I don't have enough to pay a high ranking adventurer on hand...」

The merchants began to bicker as they ran for their lives, possibly because they felt relieved that they might yet be able to avoid their demise. A part of me suspected that they were trying to make us feel sorry for them, but I didn't really mind either way.

We'd been willing to help them out for free, but I wasn't about to turn down any sort of reward. If anything, it would be better for us to demand one. There was a good chance that we'd be swarmed by the masses if word got out that we were willing to help the weak for free.

My only problem with this whole setup was that I didn't actually know what would've been considered fair payment, so I just told Fran to say something random that seemed to suit the situation.

「Will worry about reward later. Will ask for money equivalent to value of life.」

「Huh? Tha—」

「Move away, or will get hit.」

Fran and Urushi leapt at the lesser wyverns without really minding the merchants. They only managed to get out of the way in time because I buffed up their legs with a support spell.

「Hold o—」

「Wait u—!」

The merchants seemed to be panicking in response to Fran's offer.

Thinking about it a bit led me to realize the implications our words had carried.

A C rank adventurer had basically told them to pay whatever they thought their lives were worth. They probably felt like we would end up spreading rumours about how cheap they were if they didn't give us an amount that ended up satisfying us and that we'd basically put their reputations as merchants on the line. It would've been much better for us to just ask them to pay whatever the market price was.

Either way, I decided to shelve the thought and just focus on the lesser wyverns for the time being.

Though they were objectively on the weaker side, the wyverns were still wild magic beasts. They immediately realized that Fran and Urushi were threats, and as such, chose to surround the pair instead of chasing the merchants down.

They stopped moving after they arranged themselves in a circle, as if they'd realized that they would die regardless of whether they advanced or retreated.

「Master」

『What's up?』

「Want to test.」

『What do you have in mind?』

「Kanna Kamui.」

『Hmmm... Yeah, I think I see where you're coming from.』

We'd only ever applied the spell in confined spaces, namely Rumina's dungeon and the tourney's enclosed battleground. We'd never used it in a larger, more open environment.

There wasn't any real reason for us not to try it out.

『Alright. I'll get the spell ready. You make sure the merchants actually manage to evacuate.』

「Nn.」

Kanna Kamui was extremely difficult to control. I was actually able to make better use of the spell than Fran.

My Accelerated Thought, Parallel Processing, and Sorcerer skills rendered my Kanna Kamui able to cause twice as much destruction as her's.

Moreover, using it would give her a pretty bad headache. Her first cast of the spell had even caused blood to start dripping from her nose. It was obvious that it heavily burdened its user's brain. It was so bad, in fact, that I wanted to avoid letting Fran use it if possible. I couldn't help but suspect that every single cast would just flat out reduce one's lifespan.

I built up a bunch of magical energy as Fran and Urushi intimidated the Wyverns and prevented them from escaping.

『Everything's ready on my end.』

「Nn. Merchants moved.」

『Kanna Kamui!』

A thick, white lightning bolt began rained down upon the lesser wyverns the moment after I voiced the spell's name. The open area around us served to demonstrate the full extent of its destructive power.

Low, rumbling roars followed the brilliant white flashes as they tore through our surroundings. It was almost like an angry God had descended upon the area for the sole sake of going on a violent rampage.

Both Fran and Urushi had already expected to be assaulted by a series of incredibly loud sounds, so they'd covered their ears in anticipation. The merchants, however, had not, so they ended up screaming and pressing their hands against them.

Crap. We'd told them to retreat, but it looked like they were still relatively nearby. It looked like we were going to have to heal them up a bit later on in hopes that they'd forgive us.

「Nn?」

「Woof?」

『Uh... It looks like I might've gone a bit overboard.』

I'd been expecting our thunderbolts to just leave the lesser wyverns charred, but it seemed that they ended up doing so much damage they caused them to just flat out evaporate.

The spell had created a 15 meter wide crater, and heavily damaged the forested area around it.

Everything within a 50 meter radius of the crater had been totally messed up by Kanna Kamui's impact. There were no longer any trees our immediate vicinity. The ones that lay a bit closer to the 50 meter mark were still present, but they'd fallen over, and some were even still on fire.

『Yeah uhh... we should probably avoid using Kanna Kamui unless we have to.』

The spell would probably end up annihilating any companions we happened to have. In fact, I was pretty sure the merchants only still existed as of right now because we'd told them to retreat ahead of time.

They'd been sent rolling because of the shockwave, but, at least they were still alive, right?

『Well, so much for gathering materials and magic stones.』

「Wasted.」

「Woof.」

Urushi seemed rather disappointed that the attack had destroyed all the wyvern meat.

『Oh well, I guess that's that.』

「Nn.」

229. The Rumoured Black Lightning Princess

Chapter 229. The Rumoured Black Lightning Princess

The Rumoured Black Lightning Princess

「Still okay?」

We turned over to the merchants after eliminating the lesser wyverns that'd been chasing them, but they weren't capable of providing us any sort of immediate response. Instead, they simply trembled on the spot as they stared off into the distance.

They didn't seem capable of averting their gazes from the destruction we'd just caused. Honestly, I couldn't really blame them. I'd gone a bit too far.

「Uh... so...」

「It looks like... we made it...」

「So about that reward...」

The merchants' faces paled. I couldn't really blame them. What they just bore witness to was something prone to leaving the average person in a state of shock, and the price we named clearly hadn't helped. There was a fair chance they'd interpreted our offer as a sort of threat instead.

「The three of us have about 50k Golde on us in total.」

At first, I thought that they had quite a decent bit of cash on hand, but then I realized that it was pretty much the norm given that they were merchants. Furthermore, their tones seemed to imply that they didn't think it was nearly enough to pay for Fran's services.

「Good enough.」

「Huh? Really? Are you sure?」

「Nn. Because caught in attack.」

We ended up using the fact that they'd ended up inside the surge of winds that followed Kanna Kamui as an excuse to lessen the cost despite the fact that we'd healed them afterwards.

「T-Thank you very much!」

「Y-You really saved us.」

「We would've died without your help.」

They were grateful even though we ended up taking all the cash they had on hand, which seemed to imply that the market price for our services was much higher than just that.

We parted with the merchants and headed on our way. We knew that they were heading in the same direction as us, so we ended up killing all the magic beasts we ran into along the way and clearing a path for them. That said, it was more so something we did just because we felt like it as opposed to something we chose to do in the spirit of service.

It didn't take too long for us to experience a second interruption after dealing with the first, as we came across a group of people large enough to be considered a roadblock. The group seemed to have come from Barbra's direction, and were heading in Ulmutt's. I had a bit of a hard time identifying them, as they were a bit too organised-looking for adventurers, and too lightly equipped for knights.

Most of the seemed to be on edge, and some even had their weapons drawn.

Though I called them a roadblock, they weren't actually in our way. We could easily just pass them by so long as that was what we wanted. I was fairly inclined to choose that exact option because I didn't really want to get us involved in anything too troublesome.

「Take detour?」

『Nah, let's not. They might end up misunderstanding our intentions if we do.』

The reason I said that was because they seemed to be able to see us. There was a chance they'd assume we chose to run away from them if we took a sudden turn. That said, I didn't really know the group's purpose, and there was a pretty good chance that they hadn't any good intentions.

『Make sure you're ready to fight at any given moment if need be.』

「Nn.」

「Woof.」

Urushi lifted off the gas and slowed down as he approached the group. Seeing him close in caused the group to immediately ready their weapons.

A few of the weapons that'd been drawn were bows, but fortunately, we didn't suffer any attacks regardless. As far as I could tell, their actions were driven by two separate reasons. The first was that they were able to sense that we weren't giving off any bloodlust. The second was that they'd managed to retain their composure being rather weak as individuals. Most of them were about as strong as the average E ranker. The man leading the group seemed a bit stronger than the rest of its members. He seemed like he was a D ranker, but only just barely made the cut.

Most of the group's members were focused on Urushi, many hadn't even noticed Fran. But again, I couldn't really blame them. A massive, hulking magic beast had basically just ran straight at them, after all.

Neither Fran nor I thought of Urushi as anything more than just a cute pet, but that didn't really go for anyone that didn't know him.

『Hey Fran, it'd probably be better for you to get off Urushi and walk for a bit.』

「Nn. Got it.」

『As for you, Urushi, you should probably dive into her shadow.』

「Woof.」

The act of Urushi shrinking himself down and entering Fran's shadow caused a few of the group's members to let out a few shouts of surprise. Fran didn't really pay their reaction much mind, as she kept moving towards them regardless.

I got myself ready to teleport us out at a moment's notice. My plan was to move us up into the sky so we could wipe them out with magic if they turned out to be hostile.

Fran started from about the 50 meter mark and approached at a rather brisk pace. The group wasn't able to react until she reached the five meter mark. Only then did the man that stood at the group's front finally call out to her.

「W-Who the hell are you!?!」

「Nn?」

「What the hell was with that wolf just now? And why the hell didn't you greet us at all!?!」

「Hi. Bye.」

「Wait, wait! Hold on kid!」

I'd kinda been expecting to be able to just ignore the group and move on, but I wasn't really sure if that was the best course of action given that we had no idea as to who they were.

「How about fixing that attitude of yours? Don't you know that we're the Dimuyr Mercenaries?」

Oh god damn it. Are all mercenaries like this or something? Why did they think we'd know them?

The man immediately started throwing questions at Fran without pause. He asked who she was, where Urushi went, and if something had happened a bit further down the road.

He seemed to slowly grow more and more irritated over time because he didn't like Fran's attitude. His voice gradually got louder and louder as a result.

(Master, ideas?)

『Hmmm... It'd probably be best for us to just leave after ignoring him some more.』

Or so I thought. We couldn't actually put my plan into action because a second group, the rear guard, caught up with the first right as we began to move. They clearly belonged to the same organisation and much to our annoyance, ended up in our way.

I began building up my magical energy as I watched the situation unfold.

「What the hell are you doing?」

「Nothing special pops, er, Division Leader. I'm just interrogating someone that seems suspicious.」

「Interrogating? Why the hell would you do that? We're being paid to wipe out a group of lesser wyverns, not interrogate someone. Did you run into a scout for a band of thieves or something? 」

It seemed that the person leading the rear guard had a higher position than the guy that'd first addressed us. He also seemed to be the first guy's father seeing as how he'd called him pops.

「Well, no, but...」

「Then why the hell are you bothering!? Stop fooling around and wasting time!」

「O-Oh come on! Just give me a second! I was about to start intimidating her into spilling the beans, so I'll get it done real quick!」

Well, well, well, what do we have here? He wanted to intimidate Fran? Did I hear that right? I guess that means we should beat the crap out of the guy that called out to us before using the rest of his mercenary band for target practice.

The division leader seemed to immediately catch onto the fact that Fran and I were itching for a fight.

He pushed his son and subordinates aside so he could get a better look at her. His face paled the moment he did. He immediately reacted by turning towards his son and smacking him in the face.

「Gaahh! W-What the hell was that for, pops!?!」

「God damn it! You're an idiot! I can't believe you're so goddamn stupid!」

「Rghghh! Arghghh!」

The boss guy hit his son over and over until the younger mercenary lost consciousness. None of the other mercenaries seemed to understand the cause of their leader's sudden outburst, and as a result, ended up staring in surprise.

Likewise, we also ended up staring because we didn't really get what was going on. My only guess was that he'd somehow mistaken Fran for some sort of influential noble.

「I-I'm terribly sorry! My subordinate was acting without the band's permission, I swear that we had no intention of making an enemy out of you. Please forgive us.」

It seemed the division leader really had mistaken us for someone else, as he ended up kneeling and begging for us to spare him.

「What the hell are you lot doing!? Lower your heads and get on your knees right this instant! I'll have anyone that disobeys fired on the spot!」

The order was a bit of a ridiculous one, but it contained within it a sense of authority that forced the mercenaries to obey.

「Again, I'm terribly sorry for my subordinates' attitudes. Please, Black Lightning Princess, forgive their rudeness.」

It turned out that he hadn't actually mistaken us for anyone else. He knew who Fran was and that messing with her would spell his end.

「W-Wait, that's the rumoured Black Lightning Princess?」

「I heard she doesn't show any mercy to anyone that shows her any hostility...」

「Yeah, and she even erases all the people that disobey her...」

The mercenaries began to gossip as they as they caught wind of Fran's identity, but a single glare from their commander ended up silencing them.

「Nn. Can go now?」

「Of course!」

「Then leaving.」

「Have a safe trip!」

Surprisingly, the mercenary commander ended up giving us his blessings as he saw us off. They hadn't caused us any harm, so I didn't actually see any reason for us to retaliate. That said, I was really curious as to why they were that afraid of us. I really wanted to learn more about the rumours people were spreading about us.

The rest of our trip went rather smoothly, we reached Barbra without experiencing any further interruptions.

『Well, we're here. I guess we should go visit all our acquaintances and check in on Old Man Gallus.』

「Nn.」

230. Back to Barbra

Chapter 230. Back to Barbra

Back to Barbra

『Man, we're finally back in Barbra? It sure has been a while since we were last here.』

「Nn.」

Only a month had passed since we left the city, and it honestly hadn't changed all that much while we were away. The only real difference was that most of the stuff that'd been busted up by the Evil Beings had been fixed. The city's current state made the whole thing feel like it wasn't such a big deal after all. That said, I still couldn't help but feel that we'd been away from it for quite some time.

『Let's start off by visiting everyone we know.』

「Nn.」

The first place we visited was the Chef's Guild because it happened to be the closest. Unfortunately, the person we'd set out to visit, the old judge guy, was nowhere to be found.

We tried to leave the moment we learned that he wasn't there, but one of the receptionists stopped us before we did.

「Um, excuse me, but could I have a bit of your time?」

「Nn?」

「The truth is that both you and your master have qualified for a rank up, so I was just wondering if you wouldn't mind me giving you more up to date guild cards.」

I didn't recall the fact that we were a part of the Chef's Guild until the receptionist reminded us. I'd totally forgotten that we had to sign up in order to participate in the cooking contest.

And that was exactly why I didn't understand why we were getting our chef rank's raised. The only thing we did was participate in the contest, but they would've ranked us up before we left if that was why this was happening.

「Why?」

「The curry recipe that the two of you are responsible for has become incredibly popular. Curry's rate of growth is so explosive that it'll likely soon spread throughout the entire country.」

I was rather pleased to hear the receptionist's words. Fran would probably end up rejoicing if curry got so popular she could buy it regardless of where she was.

「Your contribution to the development of both our country's economy and culture have earned you both the right to silver guild cards.」

Fran pulled out both our cards and had them traded for a pair with silver borders that the guild had already prepared for us ahead of time.

The cards issued by the Chef's Guild were quite different from the ones the Adventurer's Guild issued in the sense that they weren't magically enchanted in any which way. Comparing the two was like comparing analog to digital.

「That card serves to demonstrate that you have our backing in all the business-related endeavors you pursue within the city.」

「Nn. Got it.」

We didn't really need their support, but hey, why not, right...?

「Please keep in mind that your rank can go down over time if you don't renew your card before it expires, or if you don't accomplish anything significant for an extended period of time.」

I wasn't really all that interested before, but got sucked in when the receptionist told us we had to actively do stuff to keep our rank. We'd already raised it, so just letting it dropped seemed kinda wasteful.

(Master, what now?)

『Hmmm... I guess we should probably give them some sort of recipe.』

Their interest in curry seemed to indicate that they would probably appreciate us giving them any sort of exotic recipe. Hmmm...

『Got any ideas, Fran?』

Handing over one of Fran's favourites seemed like it was probably the best choice. I came from another world, so I doubted my taste palate was the best to go by.

(Nn... Katsudon?)

『Yeah, I guess that does sound like a pretty decent idea.』

Fried foods and recipes that made use of eggs were both few and far inbetween. Likewise, soy sauce was also really considered to be a bit of an unusual spice. The combination of the aforementioned three factors made katsudon an incredibly rare dish. I'd never seen anything that bore even the slightest resemblance to it here in Barbra.

And so, we ended up handing the guild a copy of my katsudon recipe. We made sure to record how one made the katsu part of katsudon, as well as any of the recipe's optional seasonings and finer details in order to make it easier for the recipe to spread.

Fran filled in all necessary documents and handed them over to the receptionist.

「Wow. This... is amazing. It looks like a genuine innovation and even describes how the recipe can be expanded upon. Should I file this recipe under both your name and your master's?」

「Nn. Please.」

「Okay, feel free to consider this recipe accepted. We'll make it public soon. It looks really promising, so I expect it to spread the same way curry did.」

「Really?」

「Of course. Your curry recipe has made you quite well known. I'm sure many chefs will ask for the recipe the moment they hear that you two are its progenitors, I don't doubt that it'll spread through Barbra like wildfire.」

The katsudon recipe's prospects sounded pretty good. I hoped that one of Barbra's chefs would end up being creative enough to combine our two dishes and create katsu-curry.

With that done and out of the way, we left the Chef's Guild. The receptionist saw us out with a big smile on her face the whole way through.

『Hmm... what now? That took quite a bit more time than I was expecting.』

「Orphanage?」

『That's not a bad idea. We might as well stop by and check it out.』

We knew that Amanda had done something, but we never did end up personally visiting the place after her intervention.

Fran, Urushi, and I all ended up stiffening up the moment we finally laid eyes on the orphanage. The change it'd undergone was just that incredible.

The exterior used to be all messed up; one could tell the place was in tatters from a glance. It'd since been repaired, but that wasn't all. The wall surrounding the orphanage had been repainted, and the garden now featured a massive flowerbed.

「Look, it's Urushi!」

「The adventurer girl is here!」

Fortunately, the children themselves hadn't actually changed. They were wearing better clothes, and no longer looked even the slightest bit shabby, but that was pretty much it. Well, that's Amanda for you, I guess.

It seemed that the orphans all still remembered Fran and Urushi, as they immediately gathered around her with smiles on their faces.

「Oh, hey Fran!」

「Io.」

Io came out from the orphanage and greeted us upon noticing that the children were stirring up a fuss. I still remembered her both because she was kind to children and really good at cooking.

「Thank you so much for all you've done for us. The orphanage is finally in much better hands, and the children are smiling much more than they were before.」

The skilled chef bowed her head to us even though we didn't really think we'd done much of anything at all. Amanda was the one that saved the orphanage, not us.

「Amanda told us that you were the only reason she knew that the orphanage was in trouble, and that you had asked her to help it.」

「Only did that. Nothing more.」

「Don't be silly. There's also the matter of the curry recipe you published. The children just love it. They can't get enough of it even though I've started making it once a week.」

「The curry you make is really tasty, Ms. Io!」

「It's super yummy!」

Io was already capable of making an incredibly delicious soup without access to anything more than vegetables of the lowest grade. I was really curious as to what she was now capable of making given that Amanda had provided her access to higher quality ingredients.

Apparently tomorrow was this week's curry day. We ended up asking Io to make a bit extra for Fran and Urushi because I wanted to see her take on the dish.

「Bye. Will stop by tomorrow.」

「We'll be waiting!」

「See ya!」

「Bye Urushi!」

I took a moment to consider what to do next. Checking out the Luciel Conglomerate seemed to be one of the few remaining choices. All our other acquaintances were adventurers, which in turn meant they were likely still in Ulmutt.

That, however, didn't mean we were out of options.

『Alright, whaddya say we go looking for the old man?』

「Nn. Sounds good.」

231. Regus, The Information Broker

Chapter 231. Regus, The Information Broker

Regus, The Information Broker

We started walking around so we could look for Old Man Gallus.

I started thinking about who we needed to talk to in order to find him. The Adventurer's Guild was always an option given that adventurers were always on the lookout for skilled blacksmiths. There was a pretty good chance someone would know something about where he was.

Likewise, the Blacksmiths' Guild also seemed like a fairly decent choice. He probably would've stopped by at least fairly recently if he was still at work in Barbra.

『Let's head for the Adventurer's Guild first, I guess.』

「Got it.」

To Fran, the Adventurer's Guild was more or less her home base. She'd met with Gamud, the guildmaster, in person before, and had even become rather famous because of how far she got in Ulmutt's tournament. There was simply no way the Adventurer's Guild would end up turning request for information away for no reason. Speaking of which, the Adventurer's Guild's information network likely outshined the Blacksmiths' Guild's. There really wasn't any reason to choose the latter of our two options over the former. Given all that, we ended up turning our heels towards the Adventurer's Guild.

For some odd reason, both Fran and Urushi ended up fidgeting and restlessly casting their gazes all over as we moved along.

Their restlessness seemed to indicate that they were sensing something.

『Is something the matter?』

「Curry's scent.」

I totally forgot that Barbra was in the midst of a curry boom until after Fran and Urushi inadvertently reminded me of it. There were several street stalls in our vicinity. It only made sense for at least one of them to be serving the dish given its popularity.

Fran somehow managed to narrow down the exact stall in question and casually approached it. She did it so naturally it almost seemed instinctual.

A part of me couldn't help but suspect that she would probably fall for any traps that involved luring one's prey in with curry, even if we were in the midst of exploring a dungeon.

「'W'lcome!」

「This, what?」

「Aye, that'd be mah curry n'dles. We makes it based off curry.」

I was pleasantly surprised that someone had already come up with the idea of using curry to create a noddle-based dish. It looked to me like their recipe involved putting the noodles and curry together in one big pot and then cooking it all at once. The result seemed pretty good appearance wise, but I figured the noodles would end up being overcooked and soggy. Still, I couldn't really claim that I was disinterested. The same seemed to go for Fran, as she bought two portions of the stuff, one for herself, and one for Urushi.

「Urushi, here.」

「Woof!」

Both my companions immediately slurped down their entire bowls. They seemed perfectly content with the flavour.

『How was it?』

「Tasty.」

「Woof woof!」

『Were the noodles not too soggy?』

「Nn.」

It seemed that the chef had managed to come up with something to keep the noddles nice and firm. I asked Fran about it a bit later on, and we managed to conclude that the noodles were the kind that didn't really get soggy unless you left them for way too long. They probably contained something along the lines of konjac or cellophane.

The dish was interesting, and I was really impressed by the chef's ingenuity. He'd raised the bar; I was starting to expect a lot more out of other people's curry dishes.

Fran continued to visit stall after stall as she made her way over to the guild.

Barbra's Adventurer's Guild was lively; it contained an incredible number of adventurers.

A fair portion of them seemed to move their gazes in Fran's direction the moment she entered. They threw her glances, as if they weren't all that willing to stare. Their eyes seemed filled with doubt and suspicion, but she didn't mind them and instead just marched right over to the counter.

「Got question.」

「Please feel free to ask away.」

The receptionist's professionalism impressed me. She treated Fran courteously and politely despite not knowing her identity.

「Looking for someone.」

「So you want to issue a search request? I can introduce you to an adventurer that specializes in that sort of field if you'd like. Would you mind negotiating with the person in question directly?」

I liked the receptionist's suggestion. The person in question could probably do a pretty damned good job if the guild considered them a contact reputable enough to recommend.

「Works. Can meet person soon?」

「Of course. He's right there, after all.」

The receptionist directed her gaze towards a nearby adventurer, a middle-aged man with a scout-type class. His combat-based stats were rather low, but that was only because he specialized in the gathering of information. He had a bunch of detection-based skills, stealth-based skills, and negotiation-based skills.

「Hey, I heard you're looking for someone?」

「Nn.」

「I'm what a lot of people like calling a small fry because I pretty much only do jobs that don't need me to leave the city. That said, I can make up for it because I know pretty much everything that goes on here in Barbra, so I should be able to point you in the right direction. Anyway, I probably rambled off a bit too long, why don't we get down to business?」

Our newfound acquaintance introduced himself as Regus. He seemed to run his operations within the guild, as he had us sit down with him in one of its corners as he spoke. His attitude was an easygoing one, and he didn't really seem to be looking down on Fran either, which was nice.

「So, who exactly were you looking for again?」

「Gallus. Blacksmith.」

「Oh? You're looking for the ever so famous blacksmith, are you?」

「Know him? Want to know current whereabouts.」

Things were looking up. It seemed that we'd be able to find Old Man Gallus so long as we paid up.

「Will pay intel fee.」

「Don't bother. I won't be charging you.」

「Nn? Why?」

「Well, you see, the thing is I don't really know all that much about where he is right now. I do have a bit of info for you, but it's nothing substantial enough to warrant me charging you for it. Besides, networking with the Black Lightning Princess is worth way more to me than a bit of chump change.」

Regus' words demonstrated that he'd acted the way he did precisely because he knew who Fran was. I didn't really care either way, as we ended up getting the information we needed.

「The last I heard of him was about 10 days ago. He was still in Barbra, and I think he did some maintenance on the Guildmaster's weapon.」

There wasn't any more information on him. Regus himself was of the opinion that Gallus had likely left the city.

「But didn't see in Ulmutt.」

「Have you not been in touch at all?」

「Nn.」

「Hmmm... I can think up several possibilities if that's the case.」

The first possibility Regus brought up was that Gallus had gotten into some sort of trouble on his way over to Ulmutt. The old man could've been attacked by either magic beasts or thieves.

「But I doubt that to be it. The tourney's made it so the roads are more populated than usual. There's been more patrols checking the route too, so there probably would've been a few witness reports if that was what'd happened.」

Gallus was decently proficient with both Hammer Arts and Fire Magic, so I doubted he'd be delayed by any sort of minor conflict.

The second possibility was that he'd been involved in an incident that took place within Barbra, one that happened before he managed to leave. He was an incredibly skilled blacksmith; there was a chance he'd been kidnapped by a slave merchant or criminal organisation that wanted to make use of his skills.

Though both the first and second possibilities insinuated he was in some sort of trouble, that in and of itself was an assumption that may or may not have been correct. Gallus could've just accepted a job that required him to remain off the radar. The old man had the tendency to only do things he wanted to, but that didn't mean he was actually safe from royals or other highly influential nobles. He could've been dragged off by one because they wanted him to do some top-secret task.

Furthermore, there was always the off chance that he'd simply forgotten to keep in touch because he got a bit too engrossed in his work. He had a true craftsmen's temperament, so that was always a possibility we had to consider.

There was simply no way for us to figure out exactly what had happened.

「Would you mind giving me a day to do some investigating?」

「Thanks. Any task for me?」

「I don't really think anything too showy would work to our benefit...
Hmm... wait, you know Barbra's guildmaster, right?」

「Nn.」

「Alright. It'd probably be best for you to see if you can get any information out of both the guildmaster and the Blacksmiths' guild. Don't worry about investigating and figuring out if they're trying to hide anything. Just talk to them as you normally would.」

「Got it.」

Alright, I guess that means we're visiting Gamud.

232. The Rumours

232. The Rumours

Regus had told us quite a bit for free. That said, we were asking him to do a good bit of work, so we were naturally planning to reward him for any of the services he was going to provide going forward.

The price was set at 30k Golde regardless of what he managed to find. It was apparently a bit higher than the market price, but he promised to do his best to give us a decent bang for our buck. With that decided, we went our separate ways.

『Let's go talk to Gamud.』

「Nn.」

The receptionist immediately sprang into action when we showed her our guild card and asked to see the guildmaster.

Her actions apparently weren't driven by our rank, but rather, because she'd recognized Fran as the Black Lightning Princess. It seemed information about her had already been disseminated to the guild's associates.

She ended up getting a secretary-like person to guide us up to the guild's second floor and into the guildmaster's room.

「Hey, long time no see. I heard you got quite a bit done in Ulmutt.」

「Nn.」

There, we found Gamud, the Barbra branch's guildmaster, and a former A ranked adventurer known as the Dragonfeller.

He'd fought alongside Forrund, Amanda, Colbert, and everyone else during the Evil Being incident. The sight of him using a warhammer the size of his body to send Rynford flying had left a pretty deep impression on me, possibly in part because he'd totally saved our asses back then.

「I probably would've spectated myself if I wasn't stuck here cleaning up after the incident.」

「Can't be helped.」

「Riiiiight? Man, I would've loved to see you take Fermus on. Those threads of his are one huge pain in the ass to deal with.」

Fermus and Gamud were both A ranked adventurers that'd made Barbra their home base, so they were probably more than just acquainted with one another. There was a pretty decent chance they'd worked together on at least one occasion some time in the past. Their nicknames were rather similar, so I suspected that they'd probably been a part of the same party.

Asking him prompted him to explain that my suspicions were on point. They'd both been a part of an incredibly famous A ranked party known as The Dragonslayers. Their names were so well known that they'd practically become the stuff of legends. Normally, I would've just wrote off the last bit he mentioned as a casual brag, but he was an A ranker, so I was actually kinda tempted to just take what he said at face value.

「So whaddya need? I'm pretty sure you didn't stop by just 'cause you wanted to see me.」

Fortunately for us, Gamud wasn't too interested in pleasantries, he cut straight to the point and asked us about our business. We responded in kind and told him we were looking for Gallus.

「I see. So you're looking for Gallus...」

「Current location?」

「Sorry, but I dunno. All I know is that he ran a maint on one of my weapons 'bout 10 days ago, so he was still in Barbra at least till then.」

「I think he said something or another 'bout going to Ulmutt, but he never mentioned when he was leaving.」

「Okay.」

Gallus had apparently informed Gamud of his destination, but that was all the guildmaster knew. I immediately jumped to the conclusion that we weren't going to get any more info out of him, so I told Fran that it was probably time to leave.

「Oh yeah, didja happen to really not like mercs or somethin?」

But the guildmaster stopped us by asking Fran a question right as she started to get out of her chair.

「Nn?」

「Well... it's just that I've been hearing some odd rumours.」

「What kind?」

「Oh, y'know, just that the Black Lightning Princess hates mercenaries, that she kills all the mercs that antagonize her, that she'll crush any mercs she happens to hate, and that she'll start casting spells at any mercs she happens to see without warning.」

Huh? Why the hell would anyone think that?

「At least that's what I've been hearing from all the mercs that make this town their base. They're scared shitless of you.」

Did he just straight up ask all the mercs he knew whether or not they thought we hated them or something?

「No relation to mercenaries.」

「Oh, that so?」

「Just, will crush all enemies.」

「A-Ah... I getcha.」

「Nn.」

Thinking back, I realized that we'd gotten ourselves involved with and viciously attacked a pretty large number of mercenaries. In fact, the first group to fuck with us, the adventurers we met in Alessa, had been a group of ex-mercs.

There was also that run in we had with Blue Pride back in Ulmutt. It was technically the Beast Lord that took them out, but that probably wasn't how it seemed to the average onlooker. Most people probably would've suspected that Fran had done something.

That explained why the Dimuyr guys we met on our way to Barbra were so terrified of us.

To them, Fran was overwhelmingly powerful. She was more than capable of wiping them out in an instant. That alone would've been perfectly fine, but combining it with the supposed fact that she hated mercenaries made it so it was only natural for them to be terrified of her.

「You mind if I relay that bit of info to the mercs?」

「Do it.」

「Oh yeah, I've also got a request I'd like you to complete. 」

「Request?」

「You're the perfect person for it seeing as how you can go head to head 'gainst an A ranker.」

It sounded like he wanted to us to do something along the lines of taking out a powerful magic beast. I didn't see any problem with taking on a request, but I really didn't want to do anything that'd take up too much of our time.

Luckily for us, that wasn't really what he'd had in mind in the first place.

「Y'see, there's these guys I just so happen to have my eyes on. I'd like you to spar them and show them that there's always someone stronger out there.」

「Can't do yourself?」

「Forrund and I have been looking after them since they were just kids, so they think it's only natural for them to lose if they've gotta fight me or 'im. We've beat them up so many times that it doesn't make 'em feel frustrated anymore.」

Gamud's argument made sense to me. People kinda expected to lose against their masters and whatnot.

「You mind handling it tomorrow morning? It shouldn't take too long.」

「Don't mind.」

「Hell yeah. I'll wrangle the brats in so you can do your thing. They're older than you, but i'm sure you can give 'em a good smack and make 'em learn some modesty. Gahahaha!」

「Nn.」

Fran worked out the details of when and where with Gamud before finally making her way back out the Adventurers' Guild's front door.

233. @ The Dragon's Table

Chapter 233. @ The Dragon's Table

@ The Dragon's Table

『I guess our next destination is probably going to be the Blacksmiths' Guild.』

「Nn.」

We made sure to ask for its location before actually leaving the Adventurer's Guild, so we knew exactly where we were going. Our destination was fairly close to the port. It seemed to be built there in order to facilitate easy access to the ore and coal that'd often get shipped in via the sea.

Though the Blacksmith's Guild was supposed to be our next destination, we still did plan to make a stop on our way.

『Okay, let's go find ourselves a place to buy some booze.』

「Nn. Liquor store?」

『Yeah, either that or a bar that lets you straight up buy whatever.』

Gamud told us that it'd probably be best for us to bring a gift or two after we told him of our next destination. Many of the Blacksmiths' Guild's members, its guildmaster included, were dwarves, which meant they would appreciate a good drink or two.

Hearing that tempted me to look for some really high quality booze, the kind that would knock their socks right off.

『Here's to hoping we come accross a decent bar on our way over.』

「Fermus' store?」

『Right. I do remember The Dragon's Table being somewhere in that direction now that you mention it.』

There seemed like there was a decent chance we'd be able to get some booze from The Dragon's Table. The place was a restaurant, so it was sure to have some. Moreover, the owner had personally given Fran a coupon. I figured that alone would almost guarantee the staff there at least hearing us out.

And so, we decided to stop by Fermus' store.

「Urushi, shadow.」

「Woooooof?」

『Sorry, but no. The place isn't really big enough for you, and I'm not even sure they allow pets to begin with.』

「Whimper...」

I really didn't think we would be able to bring Urushi in with us. To that end, I figured that it'd probably be best for us to feed him stuff he likes a bit later on in order to cheer him up.

「Welcome. Would you happen to be looking for a table for one?」

「Nn.」

「This way please.」

「Thanks.」

「Unfortunately, the owner is currently out, so we won't be able to provide our usual selections.」

The menu the waitress handed us only had five different items listed on it. It was a sharp cut down from the 30 or so I remember seeing last time we visited.

Fermus' apprentice was temporarily filling the former A ranker's shoes because he was currently out of town. It seemed that the Dragon Hunter had only permitted him to create the five dishes currently listed because he didn't believe the rest of his apprentice's stuff was of a high enough quality to serve to his customers.

The restaurant's renowned Dragon Bone Soup was still being sold, but apparently it was something that'd been prepared by Fermus ahead of time.

「Then want everything.」

「Huh? Did you just say everything?」

「Nn. Everything.」

「Are you really sure you'd like everything? Our servings are quite large.」

「Not problem. Already ate before.」

「O-Okay. In that case, I'll have everything coming right up.」

「Thanks.」

Fran handed the coupon we'd gotten from Fermus to the waitress. For some odd reason, she seemed extremely shocked; her eyes had snapped wide open.

「D-Did you maybe...」

「Got from Fermus.」

「So it really is a VIP coupon, a token indicating that we'll have to treat you with utmost care!? I knew it!」

The waitress' declaration caused her feelings of surprise to make their way over in my direction. I hadn't thought of the thing Fermus had given us as anything more than just another coupon for discounts or something.

「O-O-Oh geez! What do I do!? The owner's out. The only person here capable of making food is an idiot whose skills don't even come close to matching the owner's! Oh no, oh no, oh no! I can't let the customer down, else risk the owner scolding me later on!」

She went full blown panic mode, and even started to insult Fermus' apprentice. I kind of pitied her and as a result, didn't really want to take advantage of her given the current situation, but I couldn't help myself. She'd basically handed us an opportunity on a silver platter.

「Special treatment, no need.」

「There's no way I could just treat you as I would any other customer, especially when the food we have now isn't as good as it could be!」

「Then want alcohol. Best in store.」

「Alcohol? Consider it done! Please just give me one moment to get it!」

Though she ran off and grabbed us the booze we wanted, she seemed to have totally forgotten about the fact that we'd also ordered food. Normally, that would be something that'd totally piss a customer off, which in our case meant tattling to Fermus. That said, I decided to reserve our judgement until after she returned. There wasn't really any reason for us to get mad so long as she brought out something of a decently high quality.

It took about five minutes for the waitress to finally make her way back over to us. She didn't seem to be letting the fact that she was clearly out of breath bother her, as she immediately presented an expensive looking wooden box the moment she returned.

「This wine is the finest we have. It comes from a region known throughout Kranzel as one of its finest producers of alcoholic beverages. This bottle in particular has been magically preserved for about 120 years, so it's some of the best stuff you could possibly get!」

The receptionist ended up bringing us something way beyond my expectations.

「To be honest, it isn't something that we would normally be willing to serve our customers...」

「I borrowed one of the bottles that the owner keeps in his personal collection of rare wines.」

It sounded like taking the wine would probably anger Fermus. I was totally fine with him getting angry at the waitress, but I really didn't want him directing his rage in our direction. Given that, we convinced the waitress to return Fermus' prized collectable to its usual spot and have her give us the best stuff they actually had for sale.

We ended up getting five bottles of a type of booze that cost us 1k Golde a pop. The price seemed to about just right for something we were going to use as a gift for someone we'd never met before.

「Are you sure you're fine with just that? The owner's got a much better selection down in his wine cellar.」

「Good enough. More important, hungry.」

「Ohhhh nooo! I-I-I'm so sorry I forgot! I'll have your food prepared immediately!」

It seemed the waitress finally realized that she'd forgotten to take Fran's order this whole time. She ended up bending her waist forwards and bowing with all the force of a thousand prostrations before running off to the kitchen in order to report the order.

『Is it just me, or do you think we stressed her out a bit too much?』

「Nn.」

The waitress had seemed so be panicking so hard that she even worried Fran. Admittedly, I couldn't really think of it as a bad thing because we'd managed to get a good couple bottles of booze out of the ordeal, and for a decently cheap price at that.

Fran burned straight through everything she was given, and even ended up ordering a bit of tea so she could relax after having eaten. The chef took that as a sign and paid us a visit as Fran leisurely enjoyed her post-meal break.

「H-How was the meal?」

「Not good as Fermus.」

「I-I see... Could you point out the parts that bothered you?」

He took out a notepad and immediately started to write stuff in it. The waitress had labeled him as an idiot, but to me, he felt more like someone that was obsessed with cooking than anything else. [1]

I considered telling Fran to be a bit less direct, but ended up deciding otherwise because telling it to him straight was more likely to benefit him.

Fran ended up being the one giving out pointers because I myself hadn't eaten. That said, it wasn't like Fran's advice was lacking in any which way. She would happily eat basically anything because that was what the time she'd spent as a slave had trained her to do, but that didn't mean she wasn't capable of judging how good something tasted.

The only real difference was that her scale was a bit skewed. If a normal person were to rate something on a scale from one to five, the labels they'd use would probably be: bad, kinda bad, not bad, good, and very good. Fran's labels, on the other hand, would probably read something more along the lines of: inedible, not bad, good, very good, great.

Fran's cooking skill was flat out maxed out, and as a result, her tastebuds were incredibly sensitive. She used this sensitivity of hers to describe the chef's deficiencies in detail.

She spent a long time giving her critique; the sun had started to set by the time we finally left.

Good luck apprentice dude. Live strong, don't give up!

[1] Joke is lost in translation. In the raw, Master specifies that he views Fermus' apprentice as a "cooking idiot" as opposed to a normal idiot. Calling someone an X idiot normally implies that they're rather well versed in X, and that they're completely and utterly obsessed with it.

234. The Blacksmiths' Guild

Chapter 234. The Blacksmiths' Guild

The Blacksmiths' Guild

We arrived at the Blacksmiths' Guild about 20 minutes after leaving The Dragon's Table

Gamud had only told us its general location, but honestly, that was all we needed to locate it because it stood out from all the other buildings in its vicinity. It looked kinda of like a massive workshop. Smoke actively billowed out its chimney. The plot of land the building sat on was huge and all the people entering and leaving it were stern-looking men.

Though there was basically no way it wasn't the Blacksmiths' Guild, a part of me hoped I was wrong. I really wanted to know what else it possibly could've been.

I tried imagining all the different possibilities, but my train of thought was cut short as we approached. I happened to see a crest with a pair of crossed hammers on it mounted on the building's door plate, which clearly denoted that the place was indeed the Blacksmiths' Guild we'd been looking for.

A wave of pressure hit me the moment we entered the building. The foyer's ceiling was incredibly low. It was almost like the place had been constructed specifically to intimidate those that entered it. I felt like I'd entered a workplace meant solely for hardboiled men.

「Hmm? You have some business here?」

The Blacksmiths' Guild's receptionist was nothing like the type we'd typically had back at the Adventurers' Guild. The buff dwarf that worked at the desk didn't bother smiling. He instead spoke in a low voice and threw Fran a sharp glare, almost as if to threaten her.

「Looking for person.」

「Then you've come to the wrong place. Go talk to the Adventurers' Guild instead.」

His cold response almost made him seem like a bartender that'd just rejected someone asking for milk.

「Looking for blacksmith. Gallus.」

「I don't know who you're talking about. You satisfied yet, girly?」

「No. Need more informed person. Here, gift.」

「Oh?」

The receptionist's tone changed the moment he laid hands on the booze we'd brought. Welp, that's a dwarf for you.

「That's a mighty fi-tsk.」

He began reaching towards the bottle of wine Fran had placed atop the counter, but she took it away right before he reached it. The act caused the dwarf to glare at her in a begrudging manner, but she didn't mind him, and instead just chucked it back into her Dimensional Storage.

「Get person. Close to Gallus or know location.」

「...Wait here a bit.」

The dwarven receptionist left his desk and headed deeper inside the building. It took him about 10 minutes to finally return to his desk.

「Follow me.」

「Nn.」

It seemed that he'd found just the guy, as he finally began leading us through the guild. We ended up going underground and passing through a series of large doors only to end up finding ourselves inside a rather small room. Despite its size, it managed to come off as a luxurious office that clearly belonged to someone important given how gaudy the furniture was. However, it was dark. No direct light managed to reach any of the room's four corners. The room's owner was only capable of operating within it because he was a dwarf.

「I've brought her over, boss.」

「Good work.」

Apparently, we'd been brought straight to the guild's top dog even though we hadn't told the receptionist who we were. I couldn't pinpoint the exact reason he ended up doing so, but I felt that it was likely either because we'd mentioned Gallus, shown him the booze we'd brought with us, or a combination of both.

Regardless, we ended up giving him a bottle of wine as he left.

「You sure?」

「Still have more.」

「Great. I'll be happy to take it off your hands then.」

Surprisingly, the receptionist ended up flashing us a big smile. I knew that he was a dwarf and all, but god damn!

「Is that wine I see?」

「Nn. Gift.」

「I guess that means I'll have to take this seriously, not that I wouldn't have to begin with. I'd rather not risk incurring the Black Lightning Princess' wrath, after all.」

It turned out that the Blacksmiths' Guild's boss had already heard of Fran. He'd never actually met Fran and only knew that the Black Lightning Princess was a female Black Catkin, but he still managed to pinpoint the fact that she was the person that everyone was talking about. I wasn't really surprised. It wasn't really that difficult to deduce Fran's identity.

There were two main reasons figuring out who Fran was had become such a simple task. The first and foremost was because she had become a hot topic as of late. Barbra's people were already aware that she was in town, so they'd started to actively talk about her. The second was that Fran was strong. There weren't many strong Black Catkin, and a single good look at her was more than enough for any skilled individual to figure out that she was a cut above the rest. Putting two and two together immediately allowed one to conclude that Fran was indeed the rumoured Black Lightning Princess.

We promptly asked the Blacksmiths' Guild's boss for Gallus' location, to which he responded by making a bit of a murky expression. His reaction didn't seem quite positive, but it at least served to evidence that he knew who Gallus was.

「Does your name happen to be Fran?」

「Didn't know?」

「Nope. The only thing we knew you by was your alias.」

「Nn. Named Fran.」

「Then, am I right in assuming you used to be called the Magic Sword Girl?」

「Nn.」

I was a bit confused as to why he bothered confirming Fran's old name and nickname.

「I see... To be honest, not even I know exactly where Gallus has gone.」

(Master?)

『He's telling the truth.』

Not even the Blacksmiths' Guild's boss knew where we could find Gallus.

「I do at least have a bit of information. I don't mind telling you, but only if you swear not to tell a soul. It's highly confidential.」

「Nn. Won't tell.」

「Top secret request?」

「Not even I know exactly what it entails. All I know was that it was something an influential noble personally asked him to do, and that he was against it. That's it.」

It looked like not even Gallus was capable of turning down important nobles. If he did, the noble in question would probably end up causing trouble both for him and the Blacksmiths' Guild as a whole.

「Basically means abducted?」

「He definitely was being forced to do something against his will, but it isn't really as bad as you're making it out to be. They at least put in an official request.」

「Oh.」

The Blacksmiths' Guild's boss wasn't lying, which meant the reason we hadn't been able to find Gallus was because he got forced into doing something he couldn't anyone about.

「Truth is, he actually left you a letter, told me to give it to Fran, the Magic Sword Girl. I'd actually made a few arrangements so you'd be brought straight to me if you ever showed up, but...」

Fran's new nickname, the Black Lightning Princess, had become much more widespread than her last. Gallus himself never suspected that she'd suddenly gain a new alias, and naturally, didn't know what that new alias could've been, so his letter was still addressed to the Magic Sword Girl.

The old name had just flat out poofed; it'd gone so quickly that I almost missed it; hearing it again filled me with a sense of nostalgia.

「Here it is. I haven't looked at it myself, so I've no idea what he's written.」

「Nn.」

It seemed that he was once again telling the truth.

「Oh yeah, do me a favour and don't read it here. I'd be put in a bad spot if it makes mention of the request he's gotten from the state. I'd rather not get any more involved in than I already am.」

Apparently, even just carrying the letter was already something the Blacksmiths' Guild's boss considered to rather risky.

「Okay.」

And so, we took the letter, handed over the booze we brought, and went on our way.

We had no way of knowing the letter's contents, so we ended up deciding that it'd be best for us to find a place without anyone around before actually opening it up.

『We're going to have spend the night in town, so we might as well just rent a room somewhere and read it there.』

「Nn. Got it.」

Fran and I ended up deciding on a place right by the Adventurer's Guild seeing as how we were going to have to head over to it the next day anyways.

「Nn. Nice room.」

『Goes to show you get what you pay for.』

The room was priced at 15k a night, mostly because we'd picked the best room with a bath we could find.

Though Fran herself had said that she'd be fine with a cheap room, I insisted otherwise, admittedly mostly for vanity's sake. Fran had gotten a really awesome nickname. I really wanted to let her act in a manner that befitted it.

235. Gallus' Whereabouts

Chapter 235. Gallus' Whereabouts

Gallus' Whereabouts

We got ready to open Gallus' letter after we settled down.

『Alrighty, let's give it a look.』

「Nn.」

『Wait, don't be so rough with it. Try opening it with a bit more care.』

Fran ripped the letter open and undid the seal to reveal the piece of paper within.

It clearly had Gallus' signature on it, but the writing seemed kinda messy. It was almost he'd rushed to finish writing the letter.

The letter started off by describing his predicament. It said that an important noble had ordered him to complete a request with utmost secrecy, hence why he wasn't able to contact us through any other means. It then continued on as follows.

I can't tell you exactly where I've gone. All I can really say is that I'll probably be somewhere in the capital by the time you read this letter. I won't be able to see you for the time being, but I'd like for us to meet up once the royal auction starts. They sell all sorts of equipment there. I'm sure they'll have something that catches your eye, so I encourage you to come. Oh, and I'm planning to make you a new sheath, one I hope will be to your liking. I'll be waiting for you in the capital.

Gallus.

So he's in the capital? That sure does sound pretty convenient seeing as how we were planning to head over eventually anyways.

『Welp, so much for finding him Barbra.』

「Nn. More reasons to go to capital now.」

『Yeah. True that.』

We headed to the Adventurers' Guild the next day. Our goal was of course to trade notes with Regus. We'd already gained a rough understanding of where Gallus currently was, but we were still hoping he could provide a bit more info.

「Kept waiting?」

「Nah, I also only just got here. I've got a good few bits of info for you.」

Alrighty. Here's to hoping it isn't redundant.

「I got us a room upstairs. We should probably head over before I tell you any more.」

「Got it.」

Regus' proposal was promising, as it more or less implied that the info he had for us couldn't be said within the public's earshot. To that end, we moved upstairs and sat ourselves accross from him.

「Silence.」

「You really live up to your reputation, Black Lightning Princess. Your wind magic seems to be top notch.」

Fran used silence to prevent any sound from leaking into our surroundings so we could speak without having to worry about being overheard.

「I'm going to be honest, I couldn't pinpoint Gallus' location.」

「Nn. Can't be helped.」

He then went on to describe what we already knew. That is, he told us Gallus had accepted a request from someone associated with the government, and that he'd left Barbra in secret.

「Based on your reaction, I'd say you probably knew all that already. I guess that means I'll have to move on to something you probably don't know.」

「Nn.」

「The person that contacted Gallus was apparently working under Marquis Ashtonah. I can't say for sure whether the Ashtonah's issued the request at the country's request or if they just decided to issue it themselves, but I'm more inclined to say its the former.」

「Ashtonah? Heard of somewhere.」

『That's the household Celldio was from.』

(Godblade wanting noble?)

『That's the one.』

The Ashtonah household's employee had attempted to act in absolute secrecy, but he wasn't able to slip through Regus' information network unnoticed. His identity was evidenced both by the small accessory he wore with the family's crest embedded in it and his use of one of the Ashtonah household's villas.

Of course, the person that'd gotten in touch with Gallus wasn't the only individual Regus had taken note of. Many of the marquis' retainers had entered the city immediately after the Rynford incident. They tried sneaking around, but ended up standing out as a result.

「Oh yeah, take this next bit with a grain of salt. The source I got it from isn't too reliable, but apparently, a carriage departed from the Ashtonah villa the very same day Gallus was rumoured to have left the city.」

「Rode carriage?」

「Most likely, yeah.」

I couldn't help but have a fairly bad impression of the Ashtonahs. First, they ordered their son to search for Godblades, and now, they've even taken Gallus.

「Gallus unharmed?」

「He should be fine from what I hear. They're after his skills, so they're more likely treating him well than not.」

Regus had a pretty solid point. They couldn't really hurt him or put him in too bad a mood unless they didn't mind lowering the efficiency of his work. Likewise, they couldn't brainwash him because there was a chance he'd forget a lot of the things that made him as skilled as he was.

They couldn't really threaten him either, because that wouldn't necessarily lead to him listening to them. The Ashtonahs needed to provide optimal conditions if they wanted him to do what they considered a perfect job.

「More importantly, Gallus is considered the Kingdom of Kranzel's Honourary Blacksmith. That's a title only the king can give, which means he's been recognized by the royal family. Anyone that forces him into anything will probably be tried for treason.」

「Silencing him, possible?」

「I doubt it. Gallus is important, so important in fact that the state would probably launch an all out investigation if he goes missing for too long. You can never know whether or not you can hide something you've done for good, even if you think you've perfectly covered up all your tracks. It's just not a risk worth the Marquis' time, especially seeing as how he'd lose everything the moment anyone figures out what he did.」

I saw Regus' point, but in my eyes, nobles had the tendency to be stupid enough to take risks like that.

「You don't need to worry. Gallus is said to be the the closest thing you'll ever find to a god-tier blacksmith. His services are worth a ridiculous amount. They won't do anything that'll cause them to risk losing him.」

Again, Regus had a point. It seemed that we'd gotten the wrong idea, and that there'd been no reason for us to think that he'd been forcibly dragged off. Thinking about it, while Gallus' letter had made it seem like he'd been forced into something he hadn't wanted, it didn't make it seem like he'd been subjected to any sort of violence.

Him telling us to meet him at the auction could've just been interpreted as him just not knowing where he'd actually be until it then. He basically was telling us that we'd be able to get him touch with him there. That was all it was.

「That's all I know about Gallus, but I do have a bit more information for you. Specifically, it's about Marquis Ashtonah and his household.」

「Explain?」

「Apparently one of his subordinates caused some sort of incident. As a result, his secondary residence, which lies here in Barbra, will soon be subject to a government inspection.」

It seemed that the whole Celldio incident really had caused the country to start suspecting the Marquis. Did that mean that the request they issued Gallus was in some way connected to the incident?

There was no way for us to discern whether or not that was actually the case because we lacked too much information to do so.

「He also dispatched a group of knights to the Maoookami Plains, but they weren't able to reach it. Only a few made it back, most were wiped out in the Forest of Exhaustion.」

「Maoookami plains? Forest of Exhaustion? Why?」

「Sorry, but I wasn't able to dig that deep. I do, however, know that he hired a group of adventurers to try investigating the exact same area after his knights failed him.」

It seemed that the Marquis was really fixated on the idea of having the Maookami Plains scoped out. The plains housed B ranked magic beasts, so I had a hard time believing that he actually found anyone capable of doing the job.

「The adventurers that accepted his request were rather low ranked, so they weren't able to bring about the results he wanted.」

Apparently the Marquis didn't want the whole thing to blow up, so they didn't make it out to be a big deal or ask for a designated request.

「And I think that's everything I managed to find. Sorry, I couldn't get you any big reveals.」

「Valuable intel.」

He'd not only verified that Gallus was safe, but also told us quite a bit about the Ashtonah family's affairs. We definitely got a good bit of value out of his services.

We paid Regus the 30k Golde we owed him and bid our farewells.

『Well, so much for locating Old Man Gallus.』

「Nn...」

『Though, he said he'd get in touch if we went to the auction, so I guess we might as well just wait till it happens.』

「Got it.」

Alright. Time to go fulfill Gamud's request, I guess.

236. The Spar Request

Chapter 236. The Spar Request

The Spar Request

『It looks like it's time to do the thing Gamud asked us to do. Why don't we head on over?』

「Nn.」

『So we're going to be fighting some young adventurers...?』

「Ready to do best.」

『I uh... am pretty sure that isn't what he wanted you to do.』

「Nn?」

If anything, we should be more focused on holding back just enough. There was a good chance Fran would destroy the adventurers' hopes and dreams if she beat them too badly. I knew that Gamud thought well of the group and all, but I highly doubted they'd were Fran's match. The Guildmaster seemed to be aware of that the nature of his request was to beat them down. Still, I doubted they would be that weak. There wouldn't be any reason for Gamud to ask Fran in particular to spar them if they wouldn't at least be able to put up a fight.

Then again, that might not be the case. Gamud had never proven himself not to be the type of educator that'd throw a chick off a cliff and tell it to fly, just to help it develop a sense of height. Either way, there wasn't much of a point in sitting around and brooding. We'd be able to figure it out when we saw them.

With that in mind, we left the room Regus had grabbed and headed back downstairs. I figured there probably wouldn't be any issue with us just skipping straight over to the guildmaster's room, but I felt like that violated the Adventurers' Guild's pipeline. To that end, I had Fran report in by speaking with one of the guild's many receptionists.

「Gamud here?」

Though, she kinda ended up skipping the whole reporting part given that she just straight up asked for Gamud.

「Good morning Fran. We've been awaiting your arrival. Please follow me.」

The lady that'd responded to Fran's query led us not to Gamud's office, but instead to a different room in the back. The room in question seemed like an armoury, as it was crammed full with all sorts of equipment.

Awaiting us in said room was the guildmaster, all suited up and ready to go.

「I'm glad you made it!」

「Nn. Why armoured? Joining in spar?」

Fran's voice was clearly filled with anticipation. Unfortunately for her though, he ended up denying her query by shaking his head in rejection.

「Nah. I'm just going to act as the ref. The armour I'm wearing is supposed to be a contingency, y'know, just in case I happen to get hit. I won't be taking part at all myself.」

「Oh.」

At first, Fran reacted with disappointment, but she soon recalled that she'd be going up against a group of adventurers so she managed give a bit of a motivated nod.

「Mmph.」

『Don't smash them too hard, okay?』

「Nn. Will do best.」

Uhh... that's not what I meant...

Fran squeezed down on both her hands in order to express just how motivated she was. It became clear to me that I could no longer do anything for the adventurers she was about to fight but pray for them to have more fortune in their next lives.

「Are you ready?」

「Anytime.」

「Then let's go. I'm pretty sure the brats are currently using our facilities for training's sake.」

Gamud led us to an indoor training ground with a diameter of about 30 meters. Its walls looked pretty thick, you probably wouldn't be able to damage anything outside the room from within unless you really wanted to.

「Gather round, brats!」

「Good morning!」

「'Sup.」

「Heya!」

I'd only been expecting two or three people, but there turned out to be nine. Their personalities varied greatly. The participants included everything from lazy-looking hoodlums to the super uptight kind that had their backs straight with enthusiasm.

Appraising them allowed me to find out that they were much stronger than I'd been initially expecting. The two strongest two were D rank worthy. One was a level 27 Phantom Swordsman, and the other, a level 26 Flame mage. The rest averaged in at about level 22. Even the weakest, a scout, had managed to make it all the way up to level 20.

「Today's training is going to be sparring.」

The adventurers immediately began to talk amongst themselves the moment Gamud filled them in on what was going on. It seemed the reason for this was more so because they just happened to be a group liked to chat as opposed to anything else.

「Again?」

「Can we fight Forrund instead? I'd like that more.」

「Yeah, I know right? Mr. Gamud's pretty bad at holding back.」

「Oh god dammit! Shut up!」

Gamud's shouted immediately brought silence back to the training ground.

「Alright. Why don't you introduce yourself?」

「Nn. Fran.」

Every single one of the adventurers' gazes shot to Fran as she introduced herself before shifting over to one of the group's shielders.

I didn't understand why they'd bothered until after I appraised him.

Only then did I learn that he, Red, had access to level 7 Appraisal. In other words, they'd looked at him because they themselves weren't capable of gauging Fran's strength. They were had to rely on him to fill them in because they were still too green to guestimate her skill level at a glance.

Unfortunately for them, it was in vain. Fran's real stats were covered up and hidden away. He wouldn't be able to pick up anything more than just the random bullshit we decided it her stat card out with.

Red ended up shrugging his shoulders and making an expression that almost made it seem like he was making fun of Fran. The gesture seemed to be an expression of the fact that the spar they would soon engage in wasn't anything worth noting.

His message led his peers to relax. If I were to guess, I'd say that they probably assumed that they had to fight Fran because she was going to join them.

「She's going to be taking all of you guys on today.」

「...Are you sure?」

One of the group's members responded to Gamud in a questioning tone.

「I am. No need to hold back. Be as rough as you'd like. Are you ready, Fran?」

「Nn.」

Gamud's words led everyone in the group save for the really serious-looking one to start grinning. They appeared to have assumed that Gamud's instructions had been directed at them and not Fran. Chances were, they were thinking that Gamud wanted them to beat Fran up a bit in order to show her that she still had a ways to go.

「Gawts it.」

I had to say, Gamud was a bit of a dick. He'd purposefully made his words easy to misunderstand so that it'd be easier for Fran to shatter their pride.

That said, I did have to admit that most of the adventurers Gamud had gathered were indeed fairly talented. They were only as stuck up as they deserved to be. Still, having Fran kick them down a notch was to their benefit.

「First up'll be Dewfo.」

「You seriously want me to go first?」

「What, did you not want to?」

「Well, I wouldn't say that...」

The first person Gamud had ordered to fight was the highest leveled one, the Phantom Swordsman.

Fran glanced at the guildmaster to double check his intentions, to which he replied with a smile and a wink. Seeing him bat an eyelash filled me with a sense of revulsion, but I still managed to get the message. He wanted us to immediately blow the group right off their feet.

『Don't go too hard on him, you hear?』

(Nn. Won't make unfixable with Greater Heal.)

『Oh god damn it! That's not what I meant!』

Personally, I'd been a bit more on the Middle Heal side of things myself. But unfortunately for Dewfo, Fran had already drawn me and happily started walking towards the battleground's center.

237. The Sparring Begins

Chapter 237. The Sparring Begins

The Sparring Begins

Dewfo, the young but decently leveled Phantom Swordsman, slowly dragged his feet towards the arena. His face relayed an obvious sense of discontent. One could easily tell that he felt that this whole thing was just a waste of time. He didn't understand why he, the strongest of the bunch, had to waste his time fighting a weak little girl.

The guildmaster disregarded his emotions and instead positioned himself between Fran and Dewfo as would any other referee.

「Oh and you're going to have to spar Fran at least twice.」

「Maybe if she lasts that long.」

「Well, how about we just say it depends on how well you guys can handle her?」

Dewfo's only response was to lightly shrug his shoulders.

「I've already got someone to heal anyone that gets hurt, so hurry up and start.」

「Fine, fine. I get it.」

The person Gamud had called in was honestly one I could only possibly describe as someone's aunt. She basically looked like the average middle aged villager. Like, seriously. She was even wearing the overly plain clothes you'd normally expect a villager to have. She pretty much embodied the concept of "Villager A."

Despite that, she was still a capable healer. Appraising her allowed me to realize that there was a stark difference between her appearance and her capabilities. She was quite strong. In fact, she was stronger than all the adventurers Gamud had asked us to fight.

My eyes were immediately drawn to her level 3 Recovery Magic skill, a clear indication that she was even capable of using Greater Heal.

「Hi, I'm Beth. I used to be a B ranked adventurer, but then retired and got married, so I'm just a housewife now.」

「You say that, but you do still take on the odd request every once in a while.」

「Only 'cause their rewards catch your eye, no doubt.」

「Well, I do have to work hard for those rewards, you know? They really help with our household finances, since my husband's income isn't what you'd call the highest. Ahahaha」

A part of me almost wanted to say that the woman's appearance served as the perfect disguise with which she could camouflage her abilities.

Fran caught onto the fact that she would be able to inflict a good bit of damage without having to worry too much. Her eyes had almost begun gleaming as a result.

「Take your places and bow as per the routine.」 [1]

「Dewfo.」

「Fran.」

「And begin!」

Both fighters took their stances and raised their weapons as Gamud began the match.

Neither budged as they stared each other down. It was as if both fighters wanted to let the other take make the first move. Their actions were the same, but their reasons completely different. Fran had started off by observing her opponent and deducing the extent of his strength. The conclusion she derived was that Dewfo was much weaker than her and that the battle would end the moment she engaged. Hence, she was allowing him to make the first move.

Dewfo, on the other hand, had placed his trust in the result of Red's appraisal. He was allowing Fran the first move because he thought she was much weaker than him. His state page made him look experienced enough to be able to gauge the strength of an opponent that lay right before his eyes, but he wasn't able to judge Fran regardless. It seemed that his judgement was being clouded because he never so much as even considered the possibility that the young black catkin girl he was facing off against was stronger than him.

Seeing him made me once again affirm that getting and maintaining the wrong impression of one's opponent was a fatal flaw.

「What? Something wrong? Are you not going to attack?」 「Okay to?」

Fran's question was directed towards Gamud, but Dewfo answered because he'd interpreted otherwise.

「It's normally good manners to let the weaker person seize the initiative at times like these.」

His words almost made me break out into laughter.

「Nn?」

『Nah, it's nothing.』

「Okay.」

「The hell are you mumbling around for? Hurry up and come at me so we can get this over with. I need to get back to work, and I don't have all day.」

「But letting weaker attack?」

「Huh?」

「Weaker first. You first.」

Fran's words ended up provoking Dewfo even though she did nothing but state the truth. They pierced right through him and delivered a blow to his pride.

「The hell, brat? You trying to put on airs or something?」

「Put on airs? Is what?」

「It means getting all full of yourself, you damned brat! It's clear that you're doing exactly that, seeing as how you're claiming you're stronger than me!」

「But obvious truth.」

「Why you little...」

It seemed to me that Dewfo was a bit immature. He started acting like a brat the moment he saw Red dismiss Fran's abilities. Thinking about it though, it did make sense. Dewfo was older than Fran, but he was still only 22 years old. He was still technically on the much younger side.

Gamud and Forrund had trained up his abilities, so he was a lot stronger than most of the other adventurers his age, but he probably hadn't really seen the world or faced any sort of real crisis. He was still lacking the experiences he needed to really grow up.

That was likely one of the reasons for which Gamud had asked Fran to knock him down a notch in the first place.

「Oi, hurry it up and just attack her already.」

「Right? Arguing with a her isn't any less disgraceful than not letting her make the first move, so hurry it up!」

「Just show the girl her place already, damn it!」

All the other adventurers began urging Dewfo on. None of them seemed to think that the strongest amongst them would end up losing in personal combat, at least not to Fran.

「Shut the hell up! Why wouldn't I rescind the first move to someone weaker than me!?!」

Despite that, he refused to budge. He simply wouldn't initiate.

『Well, it doesn't look like he'll move until we do, so we might as well just attack.』

(Nn. Got it.)

Fran brandished me and made a declaration before finally initiating.

「Will attack now. Defend.」

「Haah? Let me guess, the one thing you're good at is bluffing.」

「Now.」

「Argh!?!」

As his guard was down, Dewfo wasn't able to respond to Fran's attack at all. One moment, she was standing across from him, the next, she was in his face. A sharp pain shot through his right leg as he fell over.

「Graaaagghhhh!」

『Hmmm... Do you think that might've been a bit too much for a first strike?』

Fran's charge had been a rather slow one. She had purposefully held back in order to make Dewfo take her seriously, but things didn't seem work out the way she intended.

(Hope others take seriously now.)

『Yeah, true. They probably will.』

We'd basically made an example out of Dewfo and used him to inform the other adventurers that they'd end up getting totally smashed unless they took Fran seriously.

(Also rematch.)

『Right. He'll probably take you more seriously next time he has to fight you.』

「Rashid, you're next.」

「Huh? Huuuuh!?!」

「Hurry it up!」

「Y-Yessir!」

Gamud shouted and egged the next sacrifice up onto the stage. The person in question was one of the guys that'd been insulting Dewfo just a few moments prior.

「Named Fran.」

「I-I'm Rashid. W-Wait! Hold on a second!」

Rashid had yet to fully process exactly what'd just happened, but Gamud clearly didn't care, as he immediately signaled for the next match to start.

「Begin!」

「Nn.」

「Gyaaaahh!」

Rashid was forced to retire nearly as quickly as Leopaldon. His right arm was blown off the moment he raised his spear and pointed it in Fran's direction.

Only then did the adventurers truly register that Fran wasn't just some random girl. And so, they once again began to tense up as their companion's screams filled the arena.

[1] This is how they do martial arts spars. The two fighters will face each other and more often than not introduce themselves before beginning. In some MA stuff, you say your school(style), etc, during this part of the match.

238. A Scolding From Gamud

Chapter 238. A Scolding From Gamud

A Scolding From Gamud

「Next, Naria.」

「Huah!？」

The third person Gamud picked was the female archer that had joined Rashid in making fun of Dewfo. We used the time she spent approaching to glance over at the man we'd defeated in a matter of moments.

「Oh my, what a beautiful looking cut.」

「God damn, that hurts.」

「Come on, stop struggling. Get a grip already. Aren't you supposed to be a man?」

「Gyaaaah! Stop hitting me damn it...!」

「And now you're just exaggerating. Geez.」

The impression I got from the villager auntie made me feel like she was the type to tell the adventurers that their wounds would heal so long as they just spat on them or something, but that wasn't actually the case. She was doing her job properly and fixing them up with Greater Heal.

Rashid's arm was honestly a pretty terrible sight. Blood was flowing out of it nonstop. The villager auntie, however, remained unphased. She simply did her job and treated the wound with a smile. Her actions truly served to evidence that, despite her appearance, she really did have the heart of a former B ranked adventurer.

Naria turned her head towards Red, as if to ask him to verify the results of his appraisal, to which he responded by shaking his head from left to right.

His expression demonstrated clear surprise. He simply didn't understand why Fran's abilities differ so greatly from what was written on her stat page.

「Named Fran.」

「Uhm...」

「Her name's Naria. Begin!」

「Wait! Shit!」

Despite being confused, Naria managed to leap backwards the moment the match began. It seemed that witnessing Fran demolish both Dewfo and Rashid had been enough to at least push her to action. She raised her bow and attempted to aim it in the Black Lightning Princess' direction, but her attack was flat out rejected before it could even be unleashed.

The distance between the two fighters had already been completely erased.

「Dammit! She's so fast! Gyaah!」

Naria, like Rashid, lost in an instant. She too lost her right arm in a single, momentary engagement.

Next up was a larger man that went by the name Miguel. Unlike his colleagues, he was wearing a rather earnest expression. He was probably the first of the bunch to really take fighting Fran seriously.

He too gazed at Red for verification, but, the appraiser was no longer capable of providing anything more than just a pale-faced nod.

「The name's Miguel.」

「Nn. Fran.」

「And begin!」

「Haaah!」

Though Miguel came at Fran more seriously than the rest of his buddies, his attack still seemed to be lacking in sincerity. He had clearly recognized that Fran had something that prevented Red from seeing her real stats, but he must've still held back because he judged Fran based on the way she looked. To that end, his attack almost seemed to be lacking in power.

It seemed to me that giving both Red and Miguel a good shock was probably what we needed to do to get rid of the adventurers' hesitation.

「Nn!」

「Impossible!」

To that end, Fran raised me and challenged the blow Miguel had delivered with his greatsword head on. She locked blades with her opponent and held me in place without budging regardless of how hard he pushed.

She began pushing back after a brief pause, sending both him flying through the air. He wasn't able to resist her. All he could do was get knocked on his ass.

Neither Miguel nor Red could believe their eyes. They hadn't thought that it'd be possible for her to block the attack head on, let alone overpower Miguel and push him back given the stats that showed up on her page.

Of course, that wasn't all. There was still much more to come.

「Stun bolt.」

「Guaah!」

「That's impossible!」

Seeing Fran cast Lightning Magic caused Red to let loose a surprised shout. The skill didn't show up on Fran's stat page, so, as far as he knew, there was no way it was possible for her to cast it.

「Hah!」

「Garrgghh....」

Fran kicked Miguel; she smashed her leg into his face and sent his paralyzed body tumbling several meters back.

And that was that. Miguel stopped moving altogether. He didn't even twitch. Red, however, rose to his feet. He was stunned, but still managed to squeeze out a question out of his now-dry throat.

「How...?」

「What's the matter, Red?」

Gamud's response came in much clearer a tone than Red's. The situation seemed to have developed the exact way he'd wanted it to.

「T-Tell me, Mr. Gamud. Just who the hell is this brat!?!」

「I'm not sure how you want me to answer.」

「M-My Appraisal skill looks like it's acting up. It's telling me that her level's low, that she can't use magic, and that she's got no strength at all. How the hell is she that strong!?!」

Seeing Red express his confusion caused Gamud to break out into a grin.

「So you don't know who she is?」

「Why would I!?!」

「She's a Black Catkin girl that can cast lightning magic, and one that's strong enough to instantly beat down Dewfo, Rashid, Naria, and Miguel. Do you really have no idea who she is? What about the rest of you? You got any clues at all?」

Silence.

The only response Gamud got was silence. He'd given them a pretty big hint, so I'd been expecting at least one of them to guess that Fran was the Black Lightning Princess, but it never happened. None of them were capable of answering his question at all.

Realizing that led Gamud to heave a heavy sigh.

「Haah... This is why you guys are still stuck where you are.」

「You guys started getting cocky the moment you amassed even the slightest bit of strength. You never gather intelligence anymore, and just leave your success up to fate or chance. You rely too much on Appraisal, you don't have the ability to judge just how strong someone is without it. And worst of all, you can't even get yourselves ready for battle even when there's a clear starting signal.」

Gamud immediately began pointing out the flaws shared by the adventurers he'd taken under his wing. The whole reason that he'd bothered with having us join him today was so he could leave a dent in the group's pride, so one could say that it was this precise moment that served as the whole session's climax.

He reintroduced Fran to the adventurers, who's silent expressions betrayed nothing but a sort of awkward displeasure.

「Fran is better known by the nickname, The Black Lightning Princess. She's a C ranker that participated in this year's tourney and won herself a spot on the podium by taking down several A rankers.」

Though Fran's nicknamed failed to ring any bells, the group appeared rather surprised nonetheless. The reason for this seemed to be that they knew just how difficult getting onto the podium was.

「And yes, I'm talking about the exact tournament that you all got kicked from a few years ago. I know for a fact that not a single one of you even made it past the preliminaries.」

「Ehhh!？」

「You have to be kidding me!」

「Right, I do remember hearing a few rumours about something like that happening.」

「Yeah, but isn't she a Black Catkin?」

「I can't believe the lot of you. You would've been able to recognize her immediately if you just gathered intel by talking to a few local merchants.」

The exasperated tone in which Gamud complained led the adventurers to hang their heads in shame. They knew that he was right. They'd gotten themselves totally wrecked because they hadn't bothered keeping up to date on recent events.

「And again, don't rely on Appraisal. Some skills will allow people to either disguise their stats or totally the Appraisal skill its functionality altogether.」

「Fine...」

「Never forget, the world is vast. There's always someone stronger than you somewhere out there. If you're not on...」

Gamud continued to ramble on and on. He didn't stop until the healer lady started to yawn out of sheer boredom.

Personally, I'd found his lecture fairly useful. Most of the stuff he said was obvious, but even the most obvious facts were often overlooked unless they were put into words and clearly expressed. Their current wasn't one that we were unlikely to ever find ourselves in, after all.

The battles we fought in Ulmutt's arena had taught us caution. The lecture covered similar topics, but more so seemed to be centered around the basics of adventuring.

「Whew. Sorry for making you wait.」

「Nn. Fine.」

「I've covered most of what I wanted to cover, but could you keep sparring with them? They could use the experience, especially against someone as strong as you.」

「No problem.」

Fran fearlessly grinned.

The adventurers she was pit against had lost the ability to laugh and jeer the way they had when they were first introduced to her. Their expressions had instead been warped in fear. To them, it must've seemed like they'd been thrown right into the jaws of a beast.

239. Three Versus One

Chapter 239. Three Versus One

Three Versus One

We decided to continue sparring with the adventurers Gamud took under his wing after he finished lecturing them.

However, that didn't go too well. Their moods had hit rock bottom not only because they'd just been scolded, but also because they'd realized that they were no match for Fran.

They weren't able to draw out the full extent of their abilities as a result, so she ended up totally crushing them with one hit each even though she was holding back. It took less than five minutes for her to go through a full cycle.

「You guys are pathetic... Is that really all you've got?」

「Kuh...」

「We're... terribly... sorry!」

Gamud spoke a line to provoke the adventurers into taking action, but they didn't take the bait. Instead, they simply responded with a series of despondent frowns and grimaces.

They knew that they were far too lacking in both strength and experience to beat Fran. That, combined with the fact that she was just a kid, had caused their confidence levels to hit rock bottom.

We'd been hired because Gamud had wanted us to knock the group down a few pegs. Unfortunately, he seemed to have overestimated them, as they'd ended up totally breaking down instead.

Fran threw a quick glance in the guildmaster's direction, as if to ask whether or not there was any point in continuing. We obviously didn't want to overstress Gamud's disciples. There was a chance that pushing them harder would lead to them either retiring or completely losing all motivation to improve whatsoever.

「Stop?」

She quietly whispered the question to him, as if to prevent anyone else from hearing it.

「Nah, keep going. The only ones that'll break from what you're doing now are the lost causes that never would've made it too far to begin with. They would've either ended up retiring after some sort of slip up or losing their lives in the field.」

Techniques can be honed, and skills can be learned. Dispositions, however, are innate. To be frank, Adventuring isn't the type of career that anyone could pick up and just do. Some people will be better suited to it than others, and that's that.

It was much better to realize that during a training session than out in the field where one's life was at stake. And it was for that reason that I couldn't help but think of Gamud's methods as kind. The adventurers he'd taken under his wing were fairly talented. It was only a matter of time before they'd set out for a dungeon or haunt. It'd be far too late for an adventurer to find out that they'd made the wrong career choice in the midst of an expedition.

「Let's get on with the second round. Dewfo, Naria, Miguel, you're up.」

「...Fine.」

「Oh no...」

「Sure...」

Dewfo and Miguel assented reluctantly as Naria squealed in terror.

「This next battle will be a 3v1. I take it you have no complaints?」

「Nn.」

Though her opponents seemed full of complaints, Fran herself seemed all for it as evidenced by the clear way she'd nodded in response.

「Oh, and how about this? We'll ban Fran from retaliating for a good bit. All you guys need to do for it to count as your win is hit her once.」

I wasn't too happy about Gamud deciding the rules without consulting us, but I ended up dismissing the thought because it'd only ended up serving to pump Fran up all the more. The restrictions seemed to appeal to Fran's more childish side, as they made the spar almost seem more like a sort of game.

Likewise, the adventurers had finally started to show a bit of drive. The three seemed to think that they would be able to land a solid, damaging hit on Fran under the current circumstances, and thus, the three of them engaged in a quick meeting to discuss their plan of attack.

「It looks like you're ready. Good. Begin!」

「Oryaaah!」

The first to attack was Miguel. He charged Fran and attacked with a swing of his greatsword. We immediately realized that the strike was a decoy given its unrefined nature.

Surely enough, Dewfo ended up closing in on us from behind as Miguel closed the gap. Honestly, he wasn't too bad at sneaking around, but it wasn't enough to deceive us. Naria launched an arrow at us right before Dewfo attacked, almost as if to cover for the holes in Miguel's assault.

Her shot was precise, and really served to prove that she was actually quite skilled with the bow. It flew under Miguel's armpit and by his face as he unleashed his strike. Honestly, it was an impressive sneak attack that would've caught any less skilled opponent off guard.

Dewfo's attack was timed in such a way that it arrived at about the exact same time as Naria's arrow. They were working together quite seamlessly, as one would expect from a group whose members partied up on a regular basis.

The Phantom Swordsman's blade seemed to have a sort of skill applied to it, as it seemed to distort in the same way distant objects would on a hot summer day. It seemed that the skill's purpose was to make it more difficult to figure out the precise manner in which his sword was being manipulated, which in turn meant that it gave him a bit of an edge in close quarters combat.

Though Fran's three opponents had coordinated quite well, their attacks had failed to land or even surprise her. The Black Lightning Princess was both capable of detecting presences and detecting movement in the air around her. Thus, she caught the arrow with her bare hands and perfectly dodged both incoming blades. She then leapt out of their newly formed encirclement with ease, an act that caused all three of her foes' faces to twist in frustration.

To be fair, I couldn't really blame them. Fran had dodged their perfectly planned and seemingly unavoidable attack with a brilliant display of agility. The surprise they felt was only natural.

Still, they continued to attack. They kept trying to hit Fran with combos until Gamud finally gave her permission to retaliate, at which point in time she knocked all three out with a series of kicks. Her victory was accompanied by a wave of silence. None of the adventurers that we'd yet to face managed to respond. They all seemed to feel that they wouldn't be able to so much as scratch her regardless of what they did. That, however, didn't mean that they gave up. The spars still happened. Our second 3v1 went pretty much the same way as the first, but the third ended up being a bit more interesting.

Our opponents ended up being Wanda, the flame mage whose level just barely fell short of Dewfo's, Red, the shielder with appraisal, and Liddick, a spear user. Their demeanors were quite different from one another's. Red looked like he'd totally started panicking, Wanda seemed surprisingly confident, whereas Liddick seemed to be going into this whole thing with a serious, professional attitude. To me, he seemed like the most earnest of the nine fledgelings Gamud had taken under his wing.

One of the things that struck me as the most curious was the source of Wanda's confidence. She hadn't been all that motivated as far as the 1v1 went, so I figured it was probably because she assumed that she, as a mage, would be able to shine much more brightly in a group. Thinking about it, I could kinda see where she was coming from. Though Fran had demonstrated her ability to avoid physical strikes with ease, she hadn't really shown off any of the countermeasures she had for spells.

Her two party members were clearly of the same opinion, as they focused their strategies around leading Fran around in such a way that she'd be easier for Wanda to aim at. Fran noticed, but she took the bait anyways. She moved right into Wanda's line of fire.

「Flare Blast!」

She went all out. The spell she casted was one with enough power to critically injure a C ranker. It could even produce injuries too severe for Greater Heal to fully restore. The nasty grin that decorated her face demonstrated that it was an intentional choice. The attack wasn't as powerful as it was because she had accidentally forgotten to hold back out of desperation, but rather, one she'd launched in order to pay Fran back for all the frustration she'd caused her. It looked like she still needed a bit of discipline and refinement as far as her personality went, but that wasn't something we bothered concerning ourselves with. Educating her was Gamud's job, not ours. All we'd been hired to do was smash what was left of her pride to bits.

「Flare Blast.」

Fran shot off the exact same spell. Her flames collided with Wanda's and resulted in an explosion that perfectly neutralized both attacks.

「That's impossible! Flare Blast!」

「Flare Blast.」

「How...!? Fire Javelin!」

「Fire Javelin.」

「How!? Why!? What!? That's impossible!」

Two magical attacks perfectly cancelling each other out wasn't something that could be considered normal under any circumstance, even if the two in question happened to be instances of the exact same spell. You needed to angle the attacks so they hit each other just the right way while also having a short enough chant speed and enough precise control over one's mana to match the original attack's power before it actually hit. In other words, it was an advanced trick that would typically be considered impractical.

Of course, Fran was hella strong and all that, but any other decently skilled mage would've been able to pull off the exact same feat. The problem lay with Wanda herself. Her chants were long, and she completely failed to hide any traces of her magical energies. The only skill she really had was flame magic. In other words, she was suffering because she relied too much on being a backliner. She was far too used to fighting in an environment crafted for her by her allies.

Wanda ended up falling onto her knees the moment she realized just how far ahead of her Fran really was. She'd completely lost the will to fight.

And so, before long, Fran ended up kicking the third group through the air. We'd assumed that our 12th match would also serve as our last, but Gamud had other ideas in store. He wanted us to take on all nine of his disciples at once. He clearly wanted to make sure we thoroughly broke their spirits.

Fran didn't have any reason to refuse, so she ended up going along with it. The rules were the same as they'd been for the 3v1. Fran wasn't allowed to attack right off the bat, and it would be considered her loss so long as she was hit even just once.

They didn't end up managing to match her. She led them around for about 10 minutes before finally showing them a glimpse of what she could really do by wiping them all out in one go.

Specifically, she'd ended them with a fire spell with a large area of effect. Gamud had ended up getting hit too, but he almost seemed to enjoy it as he would a cool breeze. We'd purposefully held back, so it didn't really do that much damage. In fact, I was pretty sure that even the nine we were up against could've withstood it so long as they just grit their teeth and endured instead of screaming and letting themselves get blown away.

240. The Sparring Ends

Chapter 240. The Sparring Ends

The Sparring Ends

「Those were some pretty decent matches. Thanks.」

「Nn.」

「That should fix their attitude problems. Now all I have to do is hope they can pull themselves together.」

Gamud heaved a heavy sigh as he looked over the nine adventurers we'd just knocked out. Honestly, their skills weren't all that bad. They'd probably be able to grow much stronger so long as they gained a bit more mental fortitude.

「And these idiots thought they'd be good enough to make their way all the way to a haunt's deepest depths. Can you believe it?」

「Haunt? Crystal Cage?」

「That's the one. You been there before?」

「Nn. Went to midsection.」

「So even you only went that far?」

The place Fran was referring to as the Crystal Cage was the one place we'd gone in search of meat for the cooking contest's sake. It was also the place in which we first saw Forrund. I still remember it quite well because we witnessed him totally wreck a thunderbird, a B ranked magic beast. Admittedly, the only reason I still remembered seeing him do that was because it'd freaked me out a bit.

「Want to go to depths? Not midsection?」

「Yeah. Anyone can visit the midsection whenever, but you aren't supposed to go there or into any of the even deeper areas without getting permission first. There isn't anyone keeping watch, so the rule isn't enforced, but it's still important. I mean, it was only made in the first place 'cause it was supposed to protect people and keep 'em away. Most of the people who break the rule end up dead.」

The Crystal Cage was a bit of a weird place in the sense that there was a pretty big disparity in the ranks of the magic beasts you could find there. It only made sense for the guild to tell adventurers to stay the hell out of places they weren't strong enough to be in.

「The risk isn't the only thing that goes up as you head deeper into the haunt. The rewards you reap do too. That's why people tend to break the rule and go deeper than they should.」

Successfully defeating the magic beasts within the haunt's deeper parts would net good rewards. Likewise, going deeper would also increase your chances of finding rare materials and herbs.

「Apparently, these brats have successfully hunted magic beasts in the midsection a couple times already.」

That sounded right to me. They did seem just about strong enough to pull it off.

「They were lucky enough not run into anything particularly nasty, so they managed to get out safe and sound. It's why they started going on and on about wanting permission to visit the depths. The depths are a bit difference 'cause they're blocked off by a magic barrier. You can't enter or leave unless you're given permission ahead of time.」

「Oh.」

「The reason they want to go to the depths is 'cause there's a place you can mine some pretty decent ores around there. They want to make use them so they can get themselves some new equipment.」

「Don't want to fight?」

「Yeah. They seem to be confident they'll be fine so long as they run away from everything that attacks them.」

Gamud's disciples were cocky, but they understood that there was no way they'd be able to defeat a B ranked magic beast. That said, I wasn't all that sure they'd be able to get away from one either. The thunderbird we saw was really fast. I felt that there was a chance even we would have trouble getting away from one unless we teleported around. There was also a good chance they'd be intercepted by other magic beasts as they ran. Letting them go was effectively the same thing as letting them march to their deaths.

That was probably precisely why Gamud had asked us to shatter their pride. He wanted to stop them before they did something really stupid.

「Thunderbird. Can't run.」

「They probably wouldn't be able to get away from a flock of storm eagles either.」

「Also darkness wolves. Like Urushi.」

「Oh yeah, that reminds me. You had a darkness wolf for a familiar, didn't you? Whatever happened to it?」

「Sleeping in shadow.」

Urushi didn't show any interest in the spars because he knew he wouldn't be able to participate. As a result, he ended up sleeping in Fran's shadow all morning.

「Right... Actually, that gives me a bit of an idea...」

Gamud had his nine disciplines line up side by side after they regained consciousness.

「Well? You finally understand how weak you all are now?」

They turned their gazes downwards in response to the guildmaster's question. It didn't seem like they'd been too willing to accept their own deficiencies. Rather, they'd instead painted Fran as some sort of incredibly talented genius and came to the conclusion that it was only natural for her to be better than them. In other words, Gamud had failed to achieve his goal, an issue that he himself had also come to realize.

「...Alright, we're going to be doing just one more spar.」

「Ugh...」

「Again...?」

「Oh come on! Give me a break already!」

「Shut yer traps and listen goddamit! This last battle'll be different from all the others. Fran, if you could.」

「Nn. Urushi, out.」

「Woof!」

Urushi rose out of Fran's shadow before going from his dog-like form to his usual larger one. It was quite the intimidating act to watch.

「This is Urushi, Fran's familiar. He's a C ranked darkness wolf, the kind you're prone to running into around the Crystal Cage's midsection.」

Gamud's words amounted to nothing but total dog shit. The only part of it that was true was that darkness wolves were C ranked threats. Urushi, however, was different. He not only had a unique skill, but had also gotten a lot stronger because he'd trained with us. It honestly wouldn't be a stretch to say he was pretty much on the verge of being a B ranked threat instead. He was much stronger than any of the magic beasts one would find in the Crystal Cage's midsection.

Red, however, didn't know that. Hence, he ended up informing his comrades that Gamud was indeed telling the truth because his Appraisal skill had told him that Urushi was indeed a darkness wolf.

「I'll let you guys enter the Crystal Cage's depths if you can prove to me that you can escape from Urushi.」

「Really!?!」

「You have my word, and as a man, I'm rather inclined to keep it.」

The current circumstance was the conclusion Gamud had come to after discussing his idea with us. The rules were as follows: the adventurers were to gather in the training ground's center while Urushi stood by near one the wall opposite the entrance. If at least five adventurers managed to escape him, then they would be considered the victors. However, they would lose in the case that Urushi managed to take down that same number.

Not everyone needed to escape because Gamud had determined that they only needed five members to be able to make it back to the haunt's entrance in one piece.

Hearing the conditions laid out for them caused the adventurers' expressions to brighten. They seemed to think that the conditions were in their favour, and that they'd finally have permission to explore the Crystal Cage's depths.

They quickly agreed, and so, they they joined Urushi in a game of tag.

「Run!」

「Uryaaah!」

「It's all up to you!」

The faster adventurers immediately darted towards the gate while Miguel, the greatsword user, and three others attempted to engage Urushi in combat in order to pin him down.

In other words, their plan had been to abandon four of their members right off the bat. Most notable of the bunch that'd been left behind was Wanda, who'd let loose a Fire Arrow in Urushi's direction.

For a moment, it almost seemed like they'd won. The escapees had made almost made it to the gate, and Urushi hadn't budged. But that all changed when he finally decided to move. He disregarded almost all the attacks that came at him; they bounced right off his fur without inflicting even the slightest bit of harm. The only one he bothered responding to was the Fire Arrow, which he swatted out of the air with a paw before breaking into a howl.

「Awoooooo!」

Fear appeared all over the adventurers' faces. Their limbs froze in place, as if they'd been petrified. Urushi's howl was an application of the Howl, Fear, and Darkness Magic skills. The combination of the three abilities gave his cry the effect of terrifying any lower leveled foes.

「Woof.」

The next thing the wolf did was use Shadow Slip to teleport while the party of nine was still frozen in a mix of fear and awe. His destination was obviously the door; he sealed off their escape.

He hit the five closest adventurers with his paws and dark spells as lightly as he could in order to send them flying back towards the room's center.

His foes failed to realize that he'd been holding back, and as a result, interpreted his weakened attacks as a sign that he didn't have much offensive ability. Hence, they decided to work together and attack him all at once. They chose defeating him over yielding.

「Shit!」

「One more time!」

They continued pressing on in an attempt to beat him down, but to no avail. All their physical attacks bounced off their fur. Likewise, their spells didn't end up having any effect either. He tore right through them with his fangs. They were able to put a little bit of damage on him from time to time, but he would heal it all off with Regeneration before he took any more.

But again, they didn't let up. They knew they had to get him away from the door, so they ended up coming up with a strategy. That is, they once again split into the same two groups as before, with Miguel's once again functioning as a decoy. Their intentions were obvious, and Urushi knew that he would eventually win so long as he just sat still by the doorway. Still, he decided to take the bait. He understood that the group wouldn't get much out of training with him unless he played along.

Dewfo's group took the opportunity to move towards the exit while avoiding Miguel's. They'd even stuffed their ears with cloth this time around so Urushi wouldn't be able to catch them twice with the same trick. Their faces were decorated with triumphant smiles. They thought they'd finally won.

All they needed to do was step out the door while Urushi beat down Miguel.

But they failed.

They failed to grasp the extent of Urushi's abilities.

「Growl!」

The wolf's Darkness Magic allowed him to knock all four decoys out in an instant; they hadn't even been able to buy the escaping party a full second. Though Dewfo's group was very clearly intimidated by the ease with which Urushi had defeated their allies, they didn't falter. Victory was right before their eyes.

Too bad for them, it simply wasn't meant to be.

Urushi spun around and immediately chased down the party on the verge of escape. He zoomed right past them and once again blocked off the room's exit.

「T-That's ridiculous...!」

「Why is it so fast!?!」

All five remaining adventurers realized that there was no way they could actually outrun Urushi, so they tried to take him down with one last desperate struggle — to no avail.

The first and second were hit by Urushi's front paws. One ended up crashed into a wall after flying a full 10 meters. The other was knocked onto the ground. He tackled the third, swatted the fourth with his tail, and used Darkness Magic to half-kill Dewfo, the fifth and final adventurer.

Less than 30 seconds had passed since he overtook them, but they'd already all been rendered incapable of combat. There was no doubt that they would've died had this not been just a spar.

「And the winner is Urushi!」

「Awwooooooooo!」

Urushi let loose a spirited howl. It'd been a while since he'd been allowed to get a bit rowdy, so he was quite content with what'd just happened.

「And that's it for today. 'Course this time, I actually mean it.」

The adventurers managed to regain their consciousnesses, but they seemed quite exhausted. Urushi was a magic beast, so losing to him had felt much more impactful, as it made them feel like they actually could've lost their lives.

We did all we could. The only other thing we could possibly do was hope that Gamud's disciples actually ended up learning the lesson their instructor had wanted to teach them.

241. In Search of A Ship

Chapter 241. In Search of A Ship

In Search of A Ship

Gamud led Fran back up to his office in order to give his disciples a bit of time to cool down.

「Thanks for today, you were a great help. Sorry it ended up taking so long.」

「Not problem. Also learned.」

「Did you really?」

「Nn. Thank you very much.」

Fran bowed to Gamud in an expression of gratitude.

At a glance, it seemed that Gamud had only made the request because he wanted us to beat down his disciples in order to curb the extent of their arrogance, but it was actually more than just that. He wanted Fran to learn a similar lesson. It was as if he was indirectly telling her that he didn't want to see her get conceited. He wanted to make sure she was aware that there were stronger fighters out there, and that she would die if she didn't remain aware of her own limits.

She picked up on his intentions even though I hadn't mentioned them to her, hence why she chose to respectfully thank him.

「I dunno why you're thanking me. You were the one that helped me out, after all.」

The guildmaster turned his face away from her out of embarrassment, an act that essentially verified his intentions.

「Nn. Still wanted to thank.」

「...You're still young. You've got plenty of time to grow, so don't push yourself too hard, you hear?」

「Got it.」

Fran thanked Gamud one last time and accepted the request's payout before finally turning heel and leaving the Adventurers' Guild.

『Alright. It's finally time for us to find ourselves a ship.』

「Nn. Search immediately.」

「Woof!」

『You two sure seem pumped. Something happen?』

「Tonight, curry. Io.」

「Woof.」

「Can't be late. No matter what.」

「Ruff.」

Fran and Urushi looked at each other and nodded in perfect sync. It was almost as if their appetites had somehow allowed them to communicate while forgoing the need for words altogether.

They were motivated for all the wrong reasons, but I didn't really mind so long as their attitudes would help us find a ship sooner rather than later. That said, I didn't want us boarding anything too sketchy. We could always come back tomorrow if we didn't manage to find anything decent by dinnertime.

「To harbour.」

『I hope we'll actually be able to find something with the Beastkin Country's crest on it.』

Finding one would make things more convenient because the Beast Lord had given us that one thing, but honestly, it didn't matter too much. It seemed that Fran, or rather, the Black Lightning Princess, had become famous enough even in Barbra for us to get ourselves an escort job with ease.

I was more so concerned as to whether or not there would be any ships headed towards our destinations in the first place, and how big they were if they did actually exist.

Personally, I was hoping to board a larger ship, preferably something on the scale of an ocean liner. I wasn't really all that confident in a smaller ship's ability to make it all the way over to another continent.

While size was important, it wasn't the only thing we had to take into consideration. We also had to consider the crew's attitude. The Black Cat Tribe was apparently no longer being looked down upon by the country itself, but that didn't necessarily mean that all its citizens felt the same way. There wasn't really much of a point in boarding a ship whose crew consisted mainly of people that discriminated against Fran and her people. The captain's attitude was of particular importance, as it would dictate the manner in which his crew operated.

「Nom nom. That ship?」

「Nom. Woof. Nom.」

Fran and Urushi were both fully aware that they were going to have curry for dinner tonight, but they still ended up choosing to chow down on a couple curry flavoured skewers as they looked around for a ship.

「Look.」

『Did you happen to see a really nice looking ship or something?』

「That. Looks tasty.」

『Oh. That's what you meant.』

The catgirl slowly drifted towards a nearby stall, seemingly attracted by its scent. The dish being sold had quite the interesting appearance to it. They folded up a bunch of dough in a conical shape before slapping something that kinda looked like Qeema Curry with all its liquid drained on top. It was kinda like an ice cream cone, but made with curry instead.

Both my companions happily shoved the stuff down their throats instead of actively looking around. It kinda seemed like I would have to take care of all the actual searching.

We spent a bit more time in the port's general vicinity as the two gluttons I was accompanying went around buying and eating whatever they pleased. During that time, I managed to spot two different ships with the Beastkin's Country's crest, but I didn't particularly want to board either of them.

My reasons were as follows: the first ship seemed worn down and belonged to a really small company hoping to profit from international trade. All the crew members were relatively low level, and the same went for their sailing-related skills. I didn't feel like it was safe to board, in fact, I was more or less convinced that it was going to sink. The second ship was in much better shape, it looked prim and proper. The same, however, couldn't be said for its crew. They couldn't be called decent regardless of how you looked at them. They weren't really pirates just yet, but they were definitely getting there. We couldn't trust them. Boarding their ship was clearly a terrible idea.

As we hadn't found anything, we ended up wandering around the port for a bit longer, at which point in time we were greeted by a male merchant.

「Hey there!」

「Nn?」

「Are you maybe looking to escort a ship?」

「How can tell?」

Though we were on guard at first, we soon came to understand that our goal was fairly obvious to the average bystander. Most immediately recognized Fran as the Black Lightning Princess because she happened to be a young Black Catkin girl with a wolf at her side. In other words, they recognized her as an adventurer instead of just your everyday average girl.

She'd very obviously been looking at the ships that happened to be around, so the merchant had put two and two together and came to the conclusion that Fran needed to cross the sea. It was fairly typical for adventurers to take on escort missions in order to hitch rides, after all.

「That's why I approached you. What do you think about escorting my ship?」

Hiring an adventurer as strong as the Black Lightning Princess would not only secure the man's cargo, but also allow him to promote himself as a prestigious merchant. He sweetened up the deal by not only offering us a ride, but also a pretty decent reward along with it.

Though the offer was quite promising, we couldn't take it without first sorting out a few facts.

「Destination?」

「We were planning to set sail for the continent of Reddina.」

「Can't.」

The merchant looked quite disappointed, but ended up backing off shortly after Fran shook her head. I'd expected him to be a bit more persistent, but it seemed he was the type that knew that getting on Fran's bad side wasn't that great of an idea.

He wasn't the only merchant to speak to us. A few more tried asking us the same thing, but unfortunately, none of them were headed to Chrom, the continent in which the Beastkin's Country was located. Still, we kept looking around and didn't give up. In the end, it took us about three hours looking to finally find a ship whose destination was in line with our own.

I didn't know too much about ships myself, but, the bit of knowledge I'd managed to pick up from a certain pirate-themed manga told me that the ship in question was probably a galleon. It had five masts, and was definitely one of the biggest ships moored at the harbour. It even had a Beastkin's Country's crest on it, namely one decorated with a crown, meaning it was a ship that worked directly under the royal family. The sailors on board seemed disciplined, but lively nonetheless, as laughter often boomed from atop the ship's deck — a sign that the environment they worked in was at least decent. In other words, both the ship and its crew seemed like the kind we could put our faith in. Moreover, they would probably accomodate us if they could because we had Royce's ID card on hand, so I decided to try asking to see if they could let us on board.

『Hey Fran, how about checking that ship out?』

「Nn. Got it.」

242. Boarding Decision Made

Chapter 242. Boarding Decision Made

Boarding Decision Made

We began moving towards the ship we had our eyes on, the massive galleon with the Beastkin's Country's crest on it. Its size made it seem like the type that wouldn't have too much trouble crossing the ocean.

『Hmmm... We're probably going to need to talk to the captain. What do you think we'll need to do to get ourselves a meeting with him?』

「Call out to crew?」

『That's definitely an option, but I'm not really sure if the crew'll know anything about you...』

The crew's members weren't merchants or adventurers, but sailors. They spent most of their time at sea, so I highly doubted they'd know much about Fran at all. That in turn meant they probably wouldn't be willing to call for the captain just because she, some random little girl, told them she wanted to meet him.

There was no guarantee they'd actually know the ID Fran had was the real thing either. They could easily call it a fake and dismiss us. The captain, on the other hand, probably had the ability to actually discern that it was genuine.

『What do you think of sitting around until we see someone that looks like they might be a bit higher on the corporate ladder and then just calling out to them?』

「Nn... Will call now.」

『Whatever works for you works for me.』

Fran's method was straight forward, but it still did work, especially seeing as how there wasn't really a need for us to go into this thing with a plan in the first place. More importantly, Fran wanted to get this done and over with as soon as possible. She really didn't want to be late for dinner.

「Going.」

「Woof!」

The sailors seemed to be in a meeting of sorts, but both Fran and Urushi ran up to them and attempted to get their attention regardless.

「Hey.」

「H-Hi there. Did you n—」

「What's u—」

The sailors had responded to Fran in a light-hearted fashion, but ended up immediately stopping and freezing up when they caught sight of Urushi. They then immediately began looking back and forth between the two without continuing what they were saying earlier.

Both their faces were clearly decorated with expression of shock. Fran didn't really pay them any mind, and instead, moved onto asking for their boss.

「Adventurer, named Fran. Want to talk to captain.」

I felt like she could've been a bit more careful with how she introduced herself. I honestly wouldn't be surprised if they turned her away because of her poor mannerisms.

But much to my surprise, they ended up doing the exact opposite.

「A-Alright! Give us just a second!」

「I-I'll go grab the captain!」

A part of me felt like they probably recognized Fran.

「Y-You said your name was Fran?」

「Nn.」

「A-Are you perhaps the Black Lightning Princess? The one everyone's been talking about lately?」

My suspicions were on point. They really did know exactly who Fran was.

「Yup.」

「S-s-s-seriously!? Wait, I could've sworn the rumours said the Black Lightning Princess had evolved...」

The sailor's words reminded me that Beastkin were able to discern whether or not another Beastkin had evolved. It was a function that clearly worked even amongst different tribes given that Fran was able to discern that both Aurel and the Beast Lord had evolved.

Fran, however, had the Evolution Concealment skill, meaning other Beastkin wouldn't be able to tell whether she was just a Black Catkin or actually something more. Hence, the sailor must've felt confused by the discrepancy between what he saw and what the rumours had told him.

There wasn't really much of a point in Fran explaining her circumstances, so she decided ask her a question of her own in order to move the conversation forward.

「Evolved Black Catkin. Never seen before?」

「I-I'm from the Beastkin's Country and I meet a lot of beastkin because of my line of work, but I can't say I have.」

It seemed that Fran really was the only evolved Black Catkin out there, which did make sense in its own right. One would need to kill either 1000 Evil Beings or a single A ranked Evil Being in order to undo the curse. It was very unlikely that anyone would end up accidentally fulfilling either of the two conditions.

And honestly, the second way of undoing the curse was basically just there for decoration. The only way for an unevolved Black Catkin to solo an A ranked Evil Being was to have a miraculous stroke of luck.

The other condition, hunting down 1000 Evil Beings a piece, was the much more likely of the two to achieve. There was a chance that the other Black Catkin could eventually evolve if we spread the former of the two conditions far and wide. The stronger ones could even find themselves evolving into Black Heavenly Tigerkin.

It'd be possible to defeat an S ranked Evil Being and undo the curse that affected the entire species so long as enough Black Heavenly Tigerkin came to be. There was definitely a chance for the Black Cat Tribe to remove its curse.

Having the entire race hunt down Evil Beings was something that benefited the gods. The whole point of the curse was to make the Black Cat Tribe repent through their many battles to begin with, but the Beast Lords of old had disallowed it.

Fortunately, the current Beast Lord was nothing like his predecessors. The situation would probably change for the better once he started disseminating information regarding the Black Cat Tribe's current evolutionary conditions. Of course, we couldn't leave it all up to him. We too had to make sure we spread the word once we reached the Beastkin's Country.

The sailor that'd left brought over a important looking man as I continued to contemplate the Black Cat Tribe's situation. His massive frame, which spanned a large area both horizontally and vertically, was decked to hell and back with huge burly muscles.

He was wearing a captain's hat atop his head, specifically the kind you'd typically expect a pirate ship's captain to have. The only difference between his hat and a real pirate's was that the skull had been swapped out for a crown bearing version of the Beastkin's Country's crest.

「Oh? Are you perhaps the Black Lightning Princess?」

「Nn.」

「I see, I see. I've heard quite a bit about you from all the merchants passing through the city.」

He started off with a rather grim expression, but he quickly replaced it with a friendly smile after seeing Fran nod in response to his words.

「So what'd you need me for?」

「Nn. Looking for ship. Going to Beastkin's Country.」

「Were you wanting to board our ship as a guard for the trip's duration?」

「Nn.」

「Hahaha! Great, looks like we've got ourselves one hell of a reliable escort then.」

「Okay to board?」

「'Course it is. I can tell just by looking at you that you're one damned strong fighter.」

The captain seemed to be quite decent in combat himself seeing as how he was able to discern that Fran was strong with just a glance.

With all the pleasantries out of the way, we decided to show him the emblem we'd gotten from Royce.

「Huh. You've even got one of His Majesty's IDs...?」

「Genuine.」

「I'd assume so, seeing as how you're the Black Lightning Princess, but I'll have to run it by to check if it's actually real a bit later on.」

「Nn.」

「The Adventurers' Guild will get mad at us if we don't make sure the request goes through them, so we're probably going to have to get that handled. You mind tagging along?」

It seemed the captain couldn't actually employ us on the spot, but he was more or less willing to do the equivalent. Having the guild handle the request was also beneficial to him in the sense that it'd allow him to verify Fran's identity.

「Don't mind.」

It also seemed like he was planning to hire a few other adventurers as well just so he could have more hands in the case of an emergency. We didn't really see any problems with it, so we accompanied the captain to the guild and accepted the request the moment it was done being processed.

「Leaving when?」

「We should be setting sail in three days if all goes well.」

He wasn't too sure about the precise date because it could change based on magic beast sightings and the weather. Storms in particular tended to be a major source of delay.

「Got it. Will go to ship in 3 days.」

「Sounds good to me. It's good to be working with you.」

「Nn. Same.」

Fran and the captain exchanged a shake of hands before going their separate ways. We probably wouldn't see him again for another three days. That said, I was already looking forward to boarding that huge ass ship of his.

243. The Orphanage's Current State

Chapter 243. The Orphanage's Current State

The Orphanage's Current State

「Nom nom nom nom nom!」

「Om nom om nom nom!」

「You two sure are digging in.」

「Wow Fran! You're so awesome!」

「Yeah! Look at Urushi! He's super amazing too!」

We were currently at the orphanage, where Urushi and Fran were both rapidly tucking Io's curry away. They were eating so vigorously that I was starting to worry whether they'd give themselves stomachaches.

I was also concerned as to whether or not it was okay for them to eat as much as they were given that they were at an orphanage. Fortunately, Io didn't really seem to mind. In fact, seeing them eat the way they were had caused her to break into a smile.

「I've made a whole lot, so eat all you'd like.」

「Nn! More.」

「Woof woof!」

「How large a serving would you like?」

「Huge.」

「Roof」

In the end, the pair ended up eating five super large servings apiece, to which the children reacted with both admiration and a bit of resentment. It seemed like they'd probably be able to have curry the next morning so long as Fran and Urushi didn't eat it all.

Some of the kids had actually cared much less about that, and much more about how much Fran could actually eat. Though they seemed a bit less attached to the curry itself, a fair portion of them still ended up gazing at her a bit reproachfully because their incorrect predictions had caused them to gamble away a part of their breakfast.

I figured it'd probably be a good idea for us to pay Io back later for all the food we ate. The orphanage was definitely much better off than it'd been before, but it was still an orphanage nonetheless.

「Thanks.」

「Ruff.」

「No, thank you. I'm glad you enjoyed it as much as you did.」

「Nn. Tasty.」

Fran patted her now swollen stomach a few times to express just how content she felt. The curry Io made was clearly ridiculously delicious, so much that she almost seemed a bit envious of the fact that she couldn't have it on a regular basis.

Unfortunately, it wasn't something I was capable of imitating. Io was running an orphanage, so she obviously hadn't used any super expensive spices. She was only really using the standard kinda stuff, meaning the curry she made was only as delicious as it was because of her abilities as a chef. I would've been able to mimic her variation of the dish had I watched her throughout the entire preparatory process, but I hadn't.

The children had already finished their meals, and didn't have much of a reason to stick around, so they went off to play. The only people left in the cafeteria were Fran, Urushi and Io.

「Leaving now.」

Fran stood up and got ready to go as she stroked her stomach.

「Already? You should really take it easy and stay around for a while. I'll even make you some tea if you do.」

「Io-made tea?」

「Mhm. I can even get you some snacks with it if you'd like, though unfortunately, all we have is baked sweets.」

「Yes please.」

Fran had been presented a chance to have herself some Io-brand tea alongside some Io-brand tea time snacks, a chance her more glutinous side simply refused to miss.

Driven by her appetite, she sat herself back in the chair with a series of graceful, flowing movements. Likewise, Urushi, who shared her dietary interests, also positioned himself in a chair while clearing his expression of all but composure.

「Don't worry Urushi, I'll make sure you get your share too.」

「Woof!」

The baked sweets Io made were quite simple. They only contained sugar, flour, and eggs, but a simple glance at the way Fran and Urushi reacted to tasting them made it quite apparent that they were delicious regardless. The same went for the tea even though the leaves used to brew it were considered rather cheap. Both gluttons enjoyed the experience so much that they ended up wearing expressions of bliss throughout the culinary experience.

Io watched over the two with a smile basically the whole way through. More specifically, she waited for Fran to finish draining her tea before addressing her in a much more serious tone than usual.

「Thank you very much.」

Her expression turned serious as she bowed as she spoke a few words of appreciation.

「Nn?」

「I admit I splurged a bit for today's sake since I knew you were coming, but it was well worth it. Your actions have brought genuine smiles to the children's' faces. They've just been overflowing with joy ever since you reached out and offered us your help.」

Fran stayed silent and listened as Io continued to speak.

「We, the children and I, used to spend our days with the constant fear that we wouldn't have enough to eat. The children still used to smile, but not the pure, carefree way they do now.」

They never knew when the orphanage would end up having to shut down, so it only made sense for them never to really have peace of mind. Children had the tendency to be naive, but that didn't mean they were stupid. The building they lived in was more or less decrepit, they only had very little to eat, and they'd even been bothered by a loan shark every once in a while. The signs were all there, and they were more than obvious enough to tell the children that the orphanage wasn't doing too well.

All the adults involved would always try their best to hide their financial troubles from the children. This would stress them and cause the children to notice their displeasure, which in turn stressed the children out, which of course only lead to the adults redoubling their efforts. It was a vicious cycle with no end in sight.

「Thank you very much for allowing the children to smile again.」

「Helped by Amanda. Not me.」

「You're right. Amanda was the one that helped us out of our conundrum, but that was something she'd only done because of you. She would've never had the opportunity to help us if not for you informing her of our plight. Thank you, thank you so much.」

Io pushed herself into an even deeper bow, as if to demonstrate that she couldn't thank Fran enough for what she'd done.

And so, an hour flew right by.

Things ended up getting a bit awkward after Io finished apologizing, seemingly because both parties were feeling a bit embarrassed. The two had been on pretty good terms to begin with, so they managed to drive the discomfort out of the air around them and get back to engaging in conversation.

「Leaving now.」

「I'm sorry I kept you for so long.」

「No problem.」

Io escorted us all the way over to the orphanage's entranceway. We tried to offer her some cash given all we'd eaten, but she ended up stubbornly refusing any form of payment. She insisted that she'd only fed us as a way of expressing her thanks, and that there was no way she could charge us for it.

(Master, what do?)

In the end, we ended up holding onto the money we'd planned on giving her. I figured it would be rude to force her to take it after all she'd said, and that she'd actually be much happier not accepting it.

Speaking of happiness, Fran seemed to be in a great mood. She'd even hummed a rare tune as we made our way back to the inn.

『Was the curry she made really that tasty?』

「Nn!」

Oh god damn it. I'm going to have to try really hard not to let her best me.

「Besides.」

『Besides what?』

「Seemed happy. Both Io and orphans.」

『That they did.』

「Nn. Glad.」

To Fran, the orphans under Io's care weren't just strangers. They were people whose situation paralleled her own. She too had lost her parents at a young age, so, she must've empathized with them. Seeing them happy had tugged at her emotions and filled her with a wholehearted sense of joy.

『Yeah, I guess you're right. I'm also glad everything ended up working out in their favour.』

「Nn.」

244. Aboard a Ship

Chapter 244. Aboard a Ship

Aboard a Ship

Fran, Urushi and I spent the three days leading up to our ship ride walking around the city, eating, and just lazing around. The rare bit of downtime served to function as a decent break from all the action we normally threw ourselves right into.

We actually ended up visiting the orphanage a second time. Our timing had been a bit off, so Fran and Urushi didn't end up catching themselves a meal, but they did manage to get themselves a cup of tea and couple baked sweets, which, for our purposes, was more than enough. The whole reason we'd visited was so we could give them a bunch of stuff, and use their hospitality as just cause for doing so. Of course, we made sure to give them more than enough stuff to also make up for all the curry Fran and Urushi had consumed. I figured they probably wouldn't be all that comfortable with us giving them money, so we ended up giving them ingredients instead. More specifically, we handed off a bunch of flour, some sugar, and several different kinds of spices.

Though lazing around was nice and all, we were still rather keen on actually going places. To that end, we set out early in the morning on the day we were scheduled to leave and immediately headed in the ship's direction.

『Looks like we're finally taking our first step towards the Beastkin's Country.』

「Nn. Can't wait.」

『I'm pretty sure we can do a much better job at guarding the ship this time around than we did the last. That said, don't forget to enjoy the ride.』

「Can't wait. Tough foes.」

We'd gotten a lot stronger since our last boat trip. I was pretty sure we'd be able to handle anything that came at us with ease, save for maybe the Mydgard Wurm.

When we arrived at the ship, we saw the captain talking to a group of people that seemed to belong to some sort of government office. I wasn't really sure exactly what he was talking about, but he wrapped things up and began calling out to Fran when he noticed her.

「Hey Black Lightning Princess. I think I forgot to introduce myself last time. The name's Jerome, captain of the HSS Algieba.」

「Nn. C ranked adventurer. Fran.」

The pair exchanged a handshake. They almost seemed to be on the same wavelength or something, as the act caused both to smile. It was a rare moment for Fran, who typically really didn't care for appearances.

「Hey, you! Get over here. Show Fran to my first mate and have him introduce himself.」

「Yessir.」

「I'm stuck doing a bunch of stuff so I can get us ready to sail, so my second in command'll fill you in on all you need to know.」

It turned out that the people Jerome had been speaking to belonged to the Ministry of the Port. He needed to work through a few details with them before the ship could actually depart from the harbour. The government officials more or less functioned as sea traffic control. They were making sure people worked on a schedule and only departed when it was their turn to leave. Likewise, they also made sure each ship was assigned a priority so that any lower priority ships would yield in the case of a schedule conflict. Their function was near identical to the sea-traffic control stations you'd see back on Earth.

The world I was currently living in definitely was a totally different world, but its port-related rules were quite similar. I honestly wasn't surprised, rules were needed no matter where you were, and the ones that both worlds had chosen were not only functional but also rather easy to implement. Ships like the Algeiba only emphasized the need for regulation all the more. Allowing large ships to leave whenever they wanted would lead to a whole slew of issues.

「Should be over here.」

「Nn.」

One testament to the ship's sheer size was the 100 odd step staircase we needed to climb to get up to its deck from the harbour.

A large group of sailors were working the day away atop the ship's massive deck. The one that was supposed to be guiding us walked past most of them and approached a man that seemed to be supervising everyone else's work.

「Vice Captain!」

「What? Oh, I'm guessing that's the last escort?」

「Yessir. Her name's Fran.」

「Me, I'm Buphett, the captain's first mate.」

Unlike the captain, the first mate didn't really seem like much of a fighter. He was tall, lanky, and to be frank, seemed a bit frail overall. Appraising him allowed me to confirm that he was the type that stayed out of battles. Both his combat related skills, Bow Arts and Spear Arts, were still at level one. To compensate, he had high levels in Commerce, Way of the Word, Arithmetic, and Observation. In other words, he was great at everything he needed to be proficient in to qualify him as the ship's second in command.

Though his skills did draw my attention, I found myself much more interested in his race than anything else. He was apparently a sort of goatkin, so I couldn't help but suspect that he would end up eating the documents he was supposed to fill out.

「I've heard plenty a rumour about you, but honestly, it's a bit hard for me to believe that the Black Lightning Princess everyone's been talking about is still just a little girl. I thought I might change my mind after seeing you, but...」

「The captain says she's legit though.」

「Nn. Genuine.」

「Sorry if I offended you. I was just trying to say that it's really hard for an everyday civilian like me to tell that you're really strong. To be frank, you look just like every other beginner to me.」

「Not offended. Used to already.」

「Hahaha, good to hear. I guess I should probably have you meet the other adventurers we hired. I hope you guys'll be able to get along.」

「Will be careful.」

「Please do. Give me just a second to have them all brought over.」

Buphett ordered several of his subordinates to go fetch the other adventurers. It seemed that they were all already here, and that we were in fact the last to arrive.

「Total, how many?」

It'd become something along the lines of a tradition for ships that worked directly under the crown to hire adventurers, an act that served to show that there were ties between the royal family and the guild. More importantly, adventurers proved quite useful in the case of an emergency. Most tended to have a ton of experience, so they could really aid in keeping everyone calm and battle-ready. To that end, most ships would make sure they grabbed a few adventurers in addition to just having a few battle ready crew members on board.

「I believe you're also the only one that's running solo.」

「Strong?」

「I'm not qualified to gauge how strong they really are, but, there are a total of three parties, with their party-wide ranks being C, D, and E respectively. The C ranked party's leader is probably the strongest of the group. He himself is a B ranker.」

I was impressed that there was actually a B ranker aboard the ship, as I assumed the person in question would end up being decently strong. However, I couldn't help but feel as if having them around would end up being more of a pain in the ass than anything else, as we would have to listen to their orders in the case that something happened. I myself didn't really mind, but I somehow doubted Fran would obey the person's commands.

「It looks like they're here.」

「...Strong.」

『Seems like it.』

The crew members led the adventurers that'd been inside the ship onto its deck. The warrior-like man at the group's forefront immediately caught our attention. He, the B ranker Buphett had just told us about, looked much stronger than the rest. A sense of deja vu struck me as I looked at him. I felt like I'd seen that blue armour of his somewhere before, but I couldn't pinpoint exactly where. Chances were, we'd probably crossed paths at the Adventurers' Guild or something, but I wasn't really too sure.

「Right this way, Mordred.」

Hearing his name made me suspect that he was going to end up betraying us at some point, but the more rational part of my mind told me that it would probably be fine. [1]

「This is the last adventurer that'll be joining us in escorting the ship.」

「Oi, what the hell? Why'd you go and call my bro Mordred all the way out here just to introduce him to a puny little girl? It would've been much more polite for you to have her head over to him instead goddammit.」

The short man next to Mordred angrily responded to the first mate's summons as soon as he laid eyes on Fran.

What pissed me off the most was that he wasn't wrong. Fran, a mere little girl, was technically lower on the the social ladder than a B ranked adventurer. Hence, many of Mordred's party members ended up nodding along to voice their agreement.

「Boss, these bastards are making light of y-」

「Shut up Slunin. You're embarrassing yourself.」

But he was soon cut off. Mordred, the person the angry midget had complained to, had spoken up as if to silence him.

「Eh?」

「We were the ones that were told to move because it's natural for the weak to go out of their way to convenience the strong. Putting on a show of respect is our job, not hers.」

「W-What're you saying bro!?!」

Witnessing the natural manner in which his boss had submitted caused Slunin to shout in surprise. He was quite loud, but Mordred paid him no mind. He instead turned towards Fran and bowed.

「Excuse that subordinate of mine. He tends to be a bit rude.」

「Nn. Don't mind.」

「Allow me to introduce myself. My name is Mordred, I lead the C ranked party known as the Iron God's Breath.」

「C ranked adventurer. Fran.」

Slunin seemed hella pissed. He clearly felt that Fran should've been paying Mordred her respects instead of the opposite because she was just a C ranker. He was about to start yelling again, but Mordred cut him off before he could.

「Am I right in assuming that you're the Black Lightning Princess?」

「Called that often lately.」

「I thought so. I saw all your fights.」

「Was at Ulmutt?」

「Yes, but I was the only one of my party members that was there. I participated, but ended up losing to Fermus in the second round.」

Only then did I realize why I felt like we'd seen him before. We hadn't met him, but we'd watched his matches. Fran also ended up recalling him after I reminded her of one of the battle's key points.

「Lava Mage?」

Mordred had been pretty good at using Lava Magic. I very vividly recalled being impressed by how he'd made it seem like such a valuable skill to have.

「You remembered me?」

「Nn. Because strong.」

「I'm honoured to hear that from the person that defeated an opponent that wiped the floor with me.」

「So uh... boss, care to explain?」

「You guys were holed up in the Crystal Cage back when it happened, so I doubt you know, but she's the person that won third place. She's still a C ranker right now, but she's in no way weaker than an A ranker.」

「Shit!」

「You serious!?!」

「You've gotta be kidding me...!」

「I'm serious. She's way stronger than me.」

「 「 「We're really sorry!」 」 」

All three of Mordred's subordinates dove in front of Fran and started prostrating the moment Mordred's declaration left his mouth. Seeing them had made me realize that they weren't so annoying after all. They were punks, but honest ones. Fran seemed to feel the same, as she wasn't really angry either. Instead, she seemed to be finding the sight of three massive dudes prostrating themselves before her to be more curious than anything else.

[1] Arthurian legend. Mordred the traitor.

245. The Cabin

Chapter 245. The Cabin

The Cabin

Everyone started introducing themselves after the C ranked party, the Iron God's Breath, finished apologizing to Fran.

At first, I thought that they didn't actually need to go as far as prostrating. However, the combination of the willingness with which they did it and the jock-like impression I got from them made me feel that to them, it wasn't really anything out of the ordinary.

Their overbearing attitudes seemed to have entirely vanished. They instead had started to bow submissively over and over as if to make up for their mistakes. It seemed that Mordred's statement, his proclamation that Fran was far stronger than he was, had left a pretty deep impression on them.

I was honestly surprised that one word from him had caused their attitudes to change so drastically. Most other adventurers would still doubt Fran's strength because she looked the way she did. A bit of further consideration led me to realize their willingness to accept Fran's strength came from their trust in Mordred. They seemed absolutely certain he'd never lie to them.

Although Mordred's subordinates didn't really question the authenticity of his words, I did. Fran was definitely stronger than him, but she was only really way stronger than him in her awakened state. The way I saw it, he was an accomplished Magic Warrior skilful enough to match even Colbert in single combat. He'd make for a dangerous opponent if we didn't take him seriously.

「And these are my four party members.」

「 「 「We look forward to workin' with you.」 」 」

「Nn. Same. Will also introduce again. C ranked adventurer. Fran. And Urushi.」

「Woof!」

「Woah, that wolf just came out of nowhere!」

「I-It rose from the shadows!」

「Well then. He looks quite strong.」

「Nn. Reliable.」

Unlike his subordinates, Mordred remained calm even though Urushi, a decently powerful magic beast, had appeared seemingly out of nowhere. In fact, he even ended up smiling after affirming the wolf's strength, as if to express he was glad to see another fighter amongst our ranks. I really did have to take my hat off to him. All the other adventurers had backed off and just stared at the Darkness Wolf from afar.

「I guess I might as well introduce everyone else. First up'll be these guys. They're Red Earth, a D ranked party.」

「It's good to be working with you.」

「'Sup.」

「Eyyyy.」

Though the party's leader seemed to be the formal, uptight kind, the same couldn't be said for its two other members. They both gave off a much more laid back impression. I couldn't help but notice that everyone in the party had green scales growing on their arms and faces, a feature that apparently clearly denoted them as serpentkin. I couldn't help but feel that they were a bit weird, not because they had scales, but because they all seemed to be a part of the exact same demographic. Their well built frames were all about the same size be it in height or width. Likewise, they all wore twin swords and had similar-looking faces.

「Identical.」

「Ahahahaha. That's cause the three of us are brothers. We've been wandering the world and adventuring together for quite some time. It's been a while since we last went home, so we decided to take this escort mission so we could head back for a bit.」

Their appearances weren't all they shared. All three of the serpentkin had been taught by their father, so they'd ended up with the exact same skillset. The uncanny resemblance they bore to one another led me to suspect that they were probably triplets. The only real way for me to tell them apart was to look at their hairstyles. I didn't really think that to be too reliable, so I decided to appraise them each time we spoke to them going forward in order to make sure we knew which was which. For the record, the uptight leader was actually the oldest of the bunch.

Though Red Earth came off as a bit intimidating, I found that they were actually pretty decent people. They didn't seem to hold any prejudice against Fran's tribe.

「These last three belong to the Crystalline Defenders, an E ranked party.」

「H-Hiya.」

「Fancy seeing you again.」

「Ahahaha...」

The last three adventurers were actually our acquaintances. In fact, they were still quite fresh in our minds because we'd only just sparred with them a few days ago. They were Miguel, the greatsword user, Liddick, the earnest spearman, and Naria, the female archer.

「Oh, you guys already knew each other?」

「Kind of. She crushed us in a spar just a few days ago.」

「Right, you guys were the guildmaster's apprentices, huh? Man, I'm jealous. I would've loved me a chance to spar with the Black Lightning Princess. Well, I'm glad you know her. Makes things more convenient.」

Though the Crystalline Defenders barely counted as our acquaintances, I still preferred having them over someone we didn't know for the sole reason that they'd already come to understand that Fran was strong.

「Here, why?」

「Well, the truth is, sparring with you taught us just how weak we really were.」

「Everyone talked a bit, and we realized that we were starting to get sloppy because of how big our party was. Having nine whole people just ended up making us feel too relaxed.」

「We decided to split into three smaller parties so we could start training ourselves again from the ground up.」

Apparently, they hadn't actually wasted the lessons they'd learned from fighting Fran. They'd realized that something was wrong and immediately acted on it.

「Okay. Good luck.」

「Thank you.」

「We'll do our best!」

「Thank you very much for both the instruction and words of encouragement!」

The captain's first mate pulled Fran and Mordred aside for a quick discussion after all everyone introduced themselves because he'd recognized them as the two most influential members of the group. The other adventurers didn't seem to mind, as they'd left after stating that they'd go along with whatever the pair decided.

「We should probably figure out how we're going to handle the chain of command. Any ideas on your end? Me, I don't mind either way. Feel free to take over if you want.」

Mordred was the type of guy that valued ability, or more specifically, strength in combat, over all else. He was more than willing to yield his position to Fran, but honestly, both Fran and I lacked the skill set necessary to fill it. The lava mage was much better suited to the job. Hence, we ended up rejecting his proposal.

「Bad at giving orders.」

「Alright, go on.」

「You take command. Want to be treated as autonomous unit.」

Fran had basically said that she wanted to just be able to do whatever she wanted in response to the situation at hand. In other words, her proposition was a selfish one that allowed her to retain her freedom while also casting away all the troublesome responsibilities that came with taking charge.

「That's fine with me, but can you make sure you check with me when you're going to start acting on your own?」

「Nn. Will be prudent.」

「You're stronger than me, so I'll try not to give you orders if I can, but I still will if we get into the kind of emergency that calls for it.」

「Of course.」

「...Alright.」

Mordred heaved a heavy sigh, but ended up agreeing to go along with our idea nonetheless. It seemed that we were going to be fortunate enough to do as we wished for the most part.

「It looks like the two of you have wrapped up your meeting, so, Fran, why don't I show you to your room?」

「Nn.」

「I'm sorry in advance, but, it's going to have to be just a bit on the smaller side.」

「No problem. Just need bed.」

「I don't think you'll need to worry about that. There's no way we could possible treat you that poorly.」

One of the sailors led Fran to her quarters. The room she was assigned to was a private room meant for the ship's stronger fighters; its close proximity to the deck made it easy for her to get to wherever she needed as quickly as possible in the case of an emergency.

「This'll be your room.」

「Nn. Looks good.」

「Good to hear. I'm glad you like it.」

The sailor seemed to think Fran was complimenting the room just for the sake of it, as he seemed a bit ashamed of it throughout the conversation, but she and I honestly both really liked it.

It was a bit on the smaller side, but that was literally my only complaint. It was a private room with a clean bed, some drawers, a closet, and a decent looking desk. There was even a magic lamp suspended from the ceiling. It was way better than the cheap inns we usually stayed in.

Though, with all that said and out of the way, the one thing that really iced the cake was the round window decorating the room's outside wall. It was exactly the kind of window you'd expect to see on a seafaring vessel. A single ray of light streamed in from it and illuminated the room's otherwise dim interior. That was all it did, but, that alone was enough to really emphasize that we were in a ship's cabin.

Fran seemed to like the room's ambient atmosphere, as she herself down on the bed and started to swing her legs back and forth. The expression that decorated her face was clearly one of excitement.

「I like this room.」

『Yeah, me too.』

She laid down and started rolling back and forth on the bed until she eventually tired herself out.

246. The Algieba Sets Sail

Chapter 246. The Algieba Sets Sail

The Algieba Sets Sail

A sailor brought Fran to a room not too far from her own, one labeled as the Captain's Quarters.

「I heard that you met the other adventurers, and that you seemed to get along quite well. Do you think you can work with them?」

「No problem.」

「Good to hear.」

The captain seemed really relieved to hear that Fran was capable of getting along with the other adventurers. At first, I didn't quite understand why, but then I recalled the rumours. It seemed that he had been worried that she might start a fight with one of the other people he'd hired.

Fran was strong, and honestly speaking, probably one of the best escorts he could get. Therefore, as captain, he needed to consider what his options were. He had be ready to make a choice between her might and his experience in case she ended up antagonizing Mordred

「Chances are, we'll be running into magic beasts, and maybe even a couple pirates. But until that happens, you can just kick back, relax, and do whatever you want.」

「Nn. Got it. Want to explore ship.」

「Explore? I mean, I don't mind, but I don't quite see the fun in it.」

「Okay to?」

「It shouldn't be a problem as long as you don't enter the sailors' private quarters without their permission. I'm also going to have to ask you not to mess with the magic item we use for propulsion.」

「No problem.」

「Oh, and don't mess up the storehouse. We don't really have anything to hide to begin with, so that should be it for the off limits areas.」

「Really okay? No fear of theft?」

「You're bound by the contract you signed with the Adventurer's Guild, and we're rather inclined to assume it'll hold. 'Sides, none of the stuff we have is valuable enough to warrant you risking your reputation.」

We managed to get the captain's permission to explore the ship, but we didn't go looking around at every nook and cranny right away. We were going to be aboard the ship for quite some time, so we decided to take our time and explore it bit by bit as the voyage went on.

「Oh yeah, can you show me that Beastkins' Country ID you got?」

「This?」

「Is that space time magic...? Sure seems convenient.」

「Nn. Very.」

「I'm jealous. That's something any merchant would want. Anyway, I'd better get to checking this thing for authenticity.」

The captain's voice slowly shifted over to carrying a more serious tone as he spoke. Though he himself couldn't technically be called a merchant, the function he served was rather similar. To that end, he shared many of their sentiments.

Apparently the captain's ring had a sort of function that allowed him to double check whether the ID thing we were given was legit, as he pressed the two against one another.

「Interesting, so it really was the real thing.」

「Nn.」

「We should be setting sail some time in the afternoon. For now, I'll have to ask you to go talk to Mordred.」

「Got it. Mordred's room, where?」

「It should be right next to yours. Do you need me to get someone to help you find it?」

「No need.」

When the captain said right next to, he'd meant that Mordred's room was literally just two over from Fran's. He was sharing a triple room with a couple of his subordinates.

The reason we had to meet with Mordred again was so we could sort out how we were going to handle shifts. Mordred had already sorted out all the details, so he told us that we were going to have to stand guard during the night once every four days.

He then went over a few other escort mission fundamentals, as Fran had very little experience with them. The most important thing he highlighted was that any magic beasts we defeated would end up belonging to the people that'd hired us.

To compensate, the escort group would be granted a bonus based on the total number of enemies defeated. This calculation was done on a group-wide basis as opposed to an individual one in order to prevent the adventurers from arguing with one another.

Individuals could still be given additional rewards in some cases if they proved to be truly outstanding, but that was it.

One of the guild's clerks had already told us all that information when we accepted the request, but Mordred had wanted to reiterate it just to make sure everyone was fine with the rules, as there were many cases in which adventurers would later complain that they were unfair.

「I think that's everything. I'm looking forward to working with you.」

「Nn. Same.」

Fran shook hands with Mordred and headed back to her own room. There wasn't much left to do but wait for departure.

Fortunately, we didn't have to wait too long for some sort of event, as a sailor soon came and informed us that lunch was ready. Today was still our first day here, and we had no idea where to go. The sailor seemed aware of it, as he ended up showing us over to where the food was being served. There, Fran ate her fill before heading back to the room and plopping herself down on the bed yet again. I really had to say, the escort mission we were on had some pretty damned good benefits to it. It included all three meals and the servings were big enough to satisfy even Fran. The fact that it took place on a boat only served to add to just how novel and fresh it felt.

I was about to pay the mission another compliment or two, but my thoughts were cut off by a sudden sense of oscillation. It didn't seem to be just my imagination either, as Fran sat up and started restlessly scanning her surroundings.

「Master, shaking?」

『Just a bit. It doesn't really seem like an earthquake though, so... I guess that means we finally set sail.』

The boat was massive, so it didn't really shake in response to the small waves that'd been constantly hitting it. The same, however, couldn't be said for when it lifted its anchor.

「Will go check.」

『Sounds like a good idea to me.』

We rushed out of the room and gazed toward the port, only to find that it was a bit further away than we remembered. Both Fran and Urushi then ended up running all the way over to the ship's edge and looking down.

『Huh, so we really are moving.』

「Nn.」

「Woof.」

The cityscape slowly began to drift away from us. We weren't being seen off by a crowd of people with streamers and whatnot, but that was probably because we were on a merchant ship as opposed to one meant to transport civilians. Besides, tens of ships left the port every single day. There was no way every single one could be sent off.

『This ship sure is fast.』

The ship was moving much more quickly than I'd expected. I wouldn't have been surprised if its current speed was what it had with its sails hoist, but they were all currently still in their folded up states.

I started to grow curious about the magic item that propelled the ship forwards. It had to be really powerful to be able move such a large vessel so quickly.

One of the first things that I considered was its shape. I really wanted to know whether it used a propeller, an aqua jet, the wind, or maybe even something else altogether.

『Let's go check it out once you've calmed down a bit.』

「Explore!」

『Hell yeah.』

Jerome, the ship's captain, approached us as we continued to look over past the deck.

「Hey. You catch sight of something interesting or somethin'?」

「Moving.」

「Huh? Oh, I'm guessing you don't really spend too much of your time at sea then.」

「Nn. First time on big ship.」

「Makes sense then.」

「Moving using magic item?」

「You got it. This ship has actually get the newest magical propulsion system on the market. That's not all either. It's also equipped with a barrier and eight turrets to help drive off monsters and the like.」

It turned out they were using a whole slew of magical items. Though the ship looked like something from my world's middle ages, it was actually far more technologically advanced. The magical engine system it was using would allow it to continue moving even without the wind's assistance.

Wait, they even have a barrier to help keep things away from them? Why would they need to hire escorts if they had something like that?

Fran relayed my question to the captain, to which he reacted by informing us that the barrier wasn't perfect. Its main function was to hide the ship from larger magic beasts, and thus, it had very little effect on any of the small or medium sized ones, which, to me at least, made a lot of sense. The sea was full of larger magic beasts, and many of them would sink the ship if they struck its hull.

There was a second barrier device that worked against the smaller-scaled magic beasts as well, but all it did was make them less inclined to approach.

One of the bigger reasons ships hired escorts was because they needed more hands on deck to fight off pirates. Most pirates avoided ships that worked directly under a country's command because they were concerned that they would ultimately get wiped out after catching the country's attention. That, in other words, meant that the only thieves interested in targeting the HSS Algieba were infamous pirates confident in their own abilities.

The Algieba's access to the newest magic engine model made it capable of outrunning most of its attackers, but it would still sometimes be intercepted, rammed, and subject to an attack.

「I'm going to be counting on you, Black Lightning Princess.」

「Nn. Leave to me.」

「Hahaha. You sure do sound reliable. Looks like we'll be getting to our destination in one piece.」

247. A Discussion About Routes

Chapter 247. A Discussion About Routes

A Discussion About Routes

And so, a whole day passed.

「Another storehouse.」

『Well I mean, this is a merchant ship, soooooo...』

「Smells good.」

『Yeah, it looks like this is where they keep all the foodstuffs.』

We'd already started exploring the ship's interior. At first, there hadn't really been much to see, reason being that we'd started atop the deck and slowly made our way down. Most of the sailors' rooms were located near the deck so they could react quickly in the case of an emergency. Hence, the first area we ran into was the only one we weren't allowed to check out in too much detail.

Most of the rooms on the lower floors were just storerooms. The door to the room with most of the more valuable stuff in it was locked, but pretty much everything else was still open to exploration.

All we found in the storehouses were boxes, bags, and a whole tonne of dust, but Fran was having fun looking around nonetheless.

Likewise, I also hadn't lost interest in looking at all the odd ingredients, nor the strangely designed goods the boxes seemed to contain.

「Moving on」

『Sure.』

We left the storehouse area and entered a room near one of the ship's outermost sides. There, we found a huge, cylindrical lump of metal with a hole in the middle. Its surface almost seemed to give off a sort of dark glow.

『Looks like a magical cannon. It uses those balls of iron as ammo and propels them with magic.』

「Why iron balls?」

『The projectiles it fires are weaker than actual spells, but are probably much more efficient with mana. It runs on magical energy, but it probably only has a finite amount of it.』

The cannons we were looking at seemed to be rather high class, as they could switch between physical and magical rounds. The physical rounds were probably for other ships, while the magical rounds would instead be used on magic beasts.

I couldn't help but feel that the cannon was much bigger than the ones we had back on Earth, in part because it had a magical engine strapped to it.

We ventured further downstairs after inspecting the cannon and found ourselves in the ship's lowermost subsection. Most of the space was taken up by the ship's ballast tanks, many of which were filled with water. The second largest room, however, had an item of interest in it, another large magical device. Said device was almost constantly emitting a sort of low-pitched rumble.

「Huge.」

『I guess this is probably the engine the captain was talking about earlier.』

「Nn. Really loud.」

『Hmm... that part has water coming out of it, and this one looks something like a pump.』

The engine seemed to be the aqua jet type. It used a huge pump to suck in water and then forcefully ejected it in order to propel the ship forwards.

Several of the ejection devices were placed around the ship's hull. It seemed like it could use them to not only change direction, but also make tight turns.

We'd more or less finished exploring, and Fran wanted to get a bit of exercise, so we headed back up to the deck in hopes of being able to find a spot to do a few practice swings. Upon arrival, we found that the deck was actually quite busy. Jerome was ordering the sailors around as they scrambled to raise the masts.

「We're finally out that damned gulf! Men, get ready to sail!」

「Yessir!」

「Get your lazy asses ready! We're going full speed ahead 'till we hit the Kraken's Nest!」

One of the things the captain had said immediately nabbed my attention.

「Kraken's nest?」

「Oh hey, didn't see ya. The Kraken's Nest is exactly what it sounds like, a danger zone where you'll find a whole shitload of Kraken.」

「Passing through?」

「Well, I guess you could say that.」

I knew the ship had a barrier that let it ward off large magic beasts, but I couldn't help but feel as if passing through a place called the Kraken's Nest wasn't too good of an idea.

「We aren't actually going to be passing right through it. We'll just be skimming the edge of it is all.」

Fortunately, the captain's intentions hadn't been what I was imagining them to be.

Kraken were the local ecosystem's top predator, so most other magic beasts naturally chose to avoid their territory. This was especially true of medium sized magic beasts, as kraken had the tendency to prey on them.

「We shouldn't have to worry about getting attacked by magic beasts there so long as we mind the kraken.」

「But kraken?」

I was worried that a kraken would attack us and totally screw us over, but, according to Jerome, the chances of that were particularly low. The barrier was designed to make the ship especially difficult for kraken to detect.

As I wasn't completely convinced, I had Fran ask about the other larger magic beasts that lived in the area, to which the captain replied with a rather simple answer: there were none. The only large magic beasts that lived in the area were the kraken.

「Why?」

「The patch of sea between the Gilbard continent, from which we just departed, and the Chrom continent, our destination, is only a couple hundred meters deep. Relatively speaking, it's quite shallow.」

Apparently, most of the other oceans were much, much deeper.

「Most B ranked magic beasts, like Whale Lords, Water Dragons, Leviathans, and Dagoes, prefer to live in deeper waters.」

None of the types of magic beasts the captain had just mentioned had ever been spotted in the space between the Gilbard and Chrom continents.

「But the part of the sea between the Gilbard and Brohdinn continents, the Demon Sea, makes up for it. It's filled with powerful beasts, and has even got the world's one and only known S rank leviathan.」

The legendary leviathan in question was said to be over 1000 meters long, capable of creating tsunamis while turning over in its sleep, and, all in all, one of the strongest magic beasts to have ever existed.

That said, very little was known about it. Sightings were few and far between. There was, however, a significant mention of it dating about 3000 years back in which it completely obliterated a coastal nation that'd pissed it off overnight. Said report was likely true as it had apparently been confirmed by someone with an oracle-type skill.

One of the most surprising but well known facts about it noted in the aforementioned report was that the S ranked leviathan's staple food was in fact the Midgard Wyrn, an A ranked magic beast. It would leave its nest, capture one, and then slowly feast on it over the course of about 100 years. Most sightings of it would happen precisely during these hunting sessions.

Naturally, the legendary leviathan was only one of the many massive magic beasts that inhabited the Demon Sea, so most ships going between Gilbert and Brohdinn would avoid passing through it. They'd instead take a safer route and stop by Chrom along the way. The route we were currently on was just that much safer.

But despite that, it still had enough kraken for one of its subsections to be labeled the Kraken's Nest.

「You won't have to worry about encountering any Kraken. This ship's got all the kraken countermeasures a sailor could ever ask for.」

「Nn.」

「But we've dedicated most of our resources to it, so we'll have to be relying on you to deal with pirates and all the other magic beasts, y'hear?」

「Got it. Leave to me.」

「'Course.」

248. A Report on Midgard Wyrms Ecology

Chapter 248. A Report on Midgard Wyrms Ecology

A Report on Midgard Wyrms Ecology

Several days had passed since we left Barbra.

All we'd done so far was relax. There wasn't really much to do in the first place unless we ran into some sort of magic beast, so we'd spent our days eating, sleeping, and occasionally enjoying the salty sea breeze while getting a bit of exercise on deck.

Purification magic allowed us to keep the room clean without having to tidy up.

The meals were not only hearty, but also quite healthy. Item box-type skills allowed the sailors to preserve fresh fruits and vegetables throughout the trip. Beriberi and scurvy were both total non-concerns.

That said, depleting the ship's resources wasn't actually the crew's first choice. They would much rather eat whatever they could catch. To that end, they were currently hauling up a giant net they'd thrown down for fishing purposes a bit earlier.

It wasn't something Fran had ever seen before, so she ended up doing more than just observing them. She joined them in saying "heave, heave ho," over and over as they raked the net in. The only difference was that she muttered it under her breath instead of shouting it.

「Gahahaha. You never seen a couple guys lug up a huge net before or somethin'？」

「Nn. Interesting.」

「Thought so. The only ships with nets that big are huge ones.」

「Really?」

「The only way you could haul up a net that big without a bunch of people is if you have some sort of magic item do it for you. And y'see, both those options require big ass ships.」

「Oh.」

「'Sides, the bigger the net, the bigger the catch, and the bigger the catch, the bigger the chance you'll attract or even catch magic beasts. Fighting them off needs manpower and space. It's not something you could do on a small boat 'nless you want to put yourself in danger.」

The captain's words led me to the conclusion that it was about time for us adventurers to finally do our jobs.

「I'm pretty sure my men'll be fine without you for now, but y'might as keep an eye out.」

「Nn.」

Fran got into position just in case anything happened, but nothing really did. The sailors hoisted the net onto the deck and laid out all the seafood they caught without running into any show-stopping issues.

「Those, fish, or?」

『Which ones? Are there magic beasts mixed in or something?』

「Soft and flabby thing.」

『Oh, you were asking about those? Those are goosefish.』

Goosefish were really strange looking, so it did make sense for people that didn't know about them to assume they were magic beasts. I heard that many people outside Japan feared octopuses, but I myself found goosefish way more terrifying.

「And that?」

『Those are hagfish.』

「And those?」

『I'm pretty sure those are sea cucumbers, though they're way bigger than any kind I know.』

The world I was currently in was a veritable fantasy world, but its fish honestly weren't that different from the ones we had back on Earth. In fact, I felt that most of them were easier on the eye; Earth's fish were way uglier on average.

「And that?」

『Which?』

「That.」

There were too many fish jumbled together for me to identify the one Fran was trying to point out to me, so she just ended up walking over and picking it out of the pile.

「This.」

『Oh, ew.』

The fish in question was one of the grossest looking ones I'd ever seen. I really had to commend Fran's willingness to touch it. She'd lifted it up without even the slightest bit of hesitation.

It, the thing in Fran's hand, looked to me like a reddish-black, softball sized, blob of flesh. One end was shaped like an intestine. It came with an alien-like mouth, one that had its sharp teeth arranged in a circular pattern. The other looked like it'd been pinched. My immediate reaction was to assume that it was some sort of deep-sea creature.

Appraising it caused me to telepathically shout in surprise.

『That thing's apparently a midgard wyrm!』

「Midgard Wyrms? This?」

『Y-Yeah, it's probably only that small cause it hasn't grown up yet.』

「Ohhh.」

I almost couldn't believe that the tiny magic beast Fran was holding onto could possibly grow into the 100m long thing we'd fought before. The only way one could possibly describe the creature was to call it fantastical.

『T-There's one over there too.』

「Where?」

『It's that long thing over there.』

「This?」

Fran grabbed the long, rope-like organism I was talking about with her bare hands. Its colour and texture were identical to the midgard wyrm larva Fran was holding in her other hand, but their lengths were incomparable.

The first specimen was about the size of Fran's palm. The second was about a whole meter long. That said, they were still both definitely midgard wyrms.

「This becomes that?」

『I think so... Oh god that thing's gross. Its unevenness only makes it all the worse.』

The longer specimen wasn't just thin and long. It looked like a bunch of spheres stuck onto one another. The indents ran along it in an almost regular sort of pattern.

Jerome approached Fran as she continued to observe the still-wriggling midgard wyrms.

「Oh, so you managed to find a couple puny midgard wyrms.」

「Nn.」

「At that size, I'd say they're probably still only a few months old... Their parents might still be in the area.」

「Thought only kraken around here?」

「For the most part, yeah. There are a couple other things, just not too many of 'em.」

「Fought midgard wyrm before.」

「You mean recently?」

「Nn. Very recent. On way to Barbra.」

「Seriously? If that's the case, then we'd best be on our toes.」

「What to do if attacked?」

「Midgard wyrms tend to react most to smell, so we should be able to outrun them if we just throw a couple barrels overboard as a decoy.」

It looked like we wouldn't have to worry because the ship had countermeasures on hand. That said, we were still quite curious as to their ecology. Jerome actually seemed really knowledgeable about them, so we decided to have him sate our curiosity.

「This becomes that?」

「Yeah, but the stubby one you're holding onto won't just grow longer or anything.」

「Then how?」

「They get longer by sticking together. You see how the longer one's got indents all over? And you see how they're about the same length?」

「Nn. Narrow parts.」

「That's because that's where two midgard wyrms are connected. The larvae bite onto each other's butts in order to form chains. As time passes, they eventually all merge into a single creature.」

The fuck nature?

I was freaked out at first, but immediately recalled that there were similar creatures back on Earth. I wasn't too clear on the details, but I did remember that most were single celled organisms, like jellyfish.

Hearing Jerome's explanation finally led me to understand why the damned things had so many hearts. A midgard wyrm was both a single giant magic beast and an entire colony of smaller magic beasts at the same time. It was that precise trait that stopped them from being affected by Deathgaze's instant kill ability.

「What to do?」

「They're parasitic and not that great for the sea, so we'll gather them up and dispose of all of them at once later. You seem to be able to pick them out, so could you lend us a bit of a hand?」

「Got it.」

Our Appraisal and Magic Perception skills made it easy for us to sort through the pile and pull all the magic beasts it contained. The task's only two downsides were that it was boring, and that it made Fran's hands stink. That said, the stink could be cleansed, so I made a mental note telling myself that I should cast purification magic on Fran's hands once we were done.

The screening process ended up finishing without any real hitches; today's haul hadn't seemed to contain any dangerous magic beasts. More importantly, it looked like tonight's dinner was going to consist of quite a few interesting fish-based dishes.

(Master.)

(Want to take bath.)

『You do know we're on a ship in the middle of the ocean here, right? That's definitely going to be asking for too mu-wait a second. Maybe not, actually.』

Getting our hands on hot water would be a cinch since it was something we could make with magic. The only real problem was that we didn't have a bathtub. We'd normally just make one out of earth magic, but there wasn't any soil anywhere in sight.

They probably had wooden wash basins somewhere, but I figured we'd be able to find some sort of higher quality substitute if we looked hard enough. Asking led to the surprising answer that the ship actually had a bathtub on board.

At first, I thought that having a bath on board was a luxurious addition that we shouldn't have expected, but soon realized that I was wrong. I should've known there'd be one seeing as how the ship was equipped with a whole slew of expensive magic items to begin with. In fact, it turned out that most larger ships actually did have them.

We only hadn't really heard of other people using it because sailors didn't like bathing. I wasn't really surprised. Sailors were, for the most part, wild seafarers not too different from pirates. I couldn't exactly see them sitting down and soaking in a tub. They didn't normally bother getting the baths ready at a set time because it was just an added cost that few ever made use of.

Fran started heading over the moment they told us we were allowed to make use of it as long as we got our own hot water.

Mordred, Buphett, and several other guys had told us they also wanted to get in, so we ended up telling them it was ready once we finished with it.

Buphett had been particularly happy about being able to take a bath, and even asked us to keep taking them going forward so he could as well. Fran liked washing herself on a daily basis anyways, and I kinda liked the idea of him owing us a favour, so we ended up happily agreeing.

249. Finally, Action

Chapter 249. Finally, Action

Finally, Action

A day had passed since we learned a bit more about midgard wyrms.

We were still living the high life. Fran had taken a bath last night, so she had been in an excellent mood all morning.

For the record, we made sure to drain the bath and refill it with a whole new tub of water once Fran was done with it. No way in hell was I going to let a bunch of dudes soak in the exact same water she'd just finished using.

Fran had spent most of the day gazing at the horizon, observing the fish and dolphins that passed by, and idling around in her room whenever she got bored.

But, that afternoon, our peaceful boat trip finally came to an end.

The clanging of a loud bell filled our ears. It rang four times, paused, and repeated. The four-clang pattern was a signal whose meaning we'd memorized ahead of time. It denoted that the ship was being attacked by pirates.

『Pirates!?!』

「Going!」

「Woof!」

Fran grabbed me and rushed out to the deck. There, she found the captain, who happened to be in the middle of issuing orders to his crew. He had the sailors move around so that they'd be in position for the battle to come.

Mordred seemed to have been on the deck from the start, as he and his men were currently leering at something to the north.

「You're here? That was fast. I'm impressed.」

「Pirates, where?」

「They're right over there.」

We were certainly able to make out something where Mordred was pointing, but it was too far away for us to make out any significant details. We couldn't even tell it was a ship, let alone a pirate ship.

「Those, pirate ships?」

「No way in hell they aren't. Damned things have got pirate flag raised high.」

Jerome sounded really confident. At first, I thought he was somehow able to just naturally see really far, but upon closer inspection, I realized that he had a telescope in hand. He'd clearly used in order to scope out the incoming ship.

「Escape possible?」

「Doubt it. Those over there are fast, small ships, and the wind ain't really doing us any favours right now. They'll probably catch up in about an hour.」

「Then will fight.」

「We'll probably have to. It doesn't seem like they've got any intention of letting us get away.」

I highly doubted that the pirates would be able to damage our large boat with their much smaller ones. I highly doubted that they'd be able to board us even when they finally caught up. That said, there was no way they'd initiate a battle they didn't think they could win.

「Those ship's have got naval rams engineered into their front. They're probably planning to breach our hull and have their men board us.」

The pirate ship's naval ram wasn't entirely solid. It had a passageway built inside of it for ease of infiltration. Their strategy was one crafted under the assumption that the ship they would be attacking was larger than their own.

They would catch up to us with their high speed vessels, stop us by ramming us with several different ships, and then break into our galleon's interior. It was a much safer method than the one I thought of, lining their ships up with ours and boarding via ladder. As the defenders, I found it honestly quite difficult to deal with their approach. We had to be concerned with the fact that there'd be enemies inside our ship from the very start.

「How?」

「We basically have to fall back on the basics and sink 'em with spells and cannonfire before they reach us.」

The thing the captain had told us really was pretty much the most basic possible thing one could do in a naval battle. The pirates needed to get up close and personal if they wanted to be able to board us. All we needed to do to stop them was to make sure they never got close enough to actually reach us. That said, I felt that engaging them up close wouldn't be too bad an idea. We could just beat the pirates down, capture them, confiscate their ships, and trade them in for cash once we reached the shore.

「Sinking 'em is probably the best option, 'cause the aftermath's a huge pain in the ass to deal with if we don't.」

「Reason?」

「Think about it. We need a place to lock 'em up till we reach the shore. We'd also need to feed 'em and keep 'em alive. As for the ship, we'd need to transfer a couple men over it can actually get places.」

「But enemy treasure will also sink?」

「The only way they'd have loot on their ships is if they just finished attacking somethin'. I doubt any of the ones attacking us'll have anythin' valuable on board.」

「Okay.」

The captain had a good point, and more or less convinced me that it was perfectly okay for us to just sink the incoming pirate ships.

「The only ships worth capturing would be the larger ones. Their propulsion systems can fetch a pretty penny on the market. They can rake in such a profit that I'd say it'd even be worth it for us to attack them instead o' the other way 'round.」

Jerome's tone was so serious it sent shivers down my spine. Merchant ships realllly weren't supposed to be attacking pirate ships, were they...?

「I'd be more pissed if they got away than 'nything.」

Though the captain knew of most of the pirates around these parts, he didn't recognize the group attacking us. Their flag was an unfamiliar one.

「They probably either came from the north or south. We'd be best careful, they've already thrown five ships our way.」

That said, the appearance of a brand new group of pirates wasn't anything to be too concerned about. The place was practically a hotbed for pirates because of all the merchants ships that would make use of the route. Pirates practically infested the place, but most merchant ships were ready for them. The act of attacking was actually quite the risk. Still, the sheer frequency with which merchant ships passed through the area still attracted them from all over, often leading to territorial disputes and the like.

Several bigger pirate gangs more or less completely dominated the area. It was really hard for a newly arrived crew to really make too much of a name for themselves, and it was for that reason that the appearance of a new band of pirates really wasn't anything to be concerned with. They were probably just going to end up getting taken over by one of the bigger gangs eventually anyways.

「Them sending out five ships means they think they've got a pretty good idea of exactly where we are and how much we can fight back. It'd be best for us to sink 'em.」

I wasn't sure what the norm was, nor whether or not it'd be fine for us to butt in just yet, so Fran turned towards someone with a bit more experience for advice.

「Mordred, what do?」

「The battle'll start with an exchange of cannonfire. We adventurers, er, the spellcasters we've got, will start firing spells once we get close enough for it.」

The lava mage's explanation made perfect sense to me, as the ship's cannons had more range than most spells. Still, I felt it was inefficient. Both we and our enemies had cannons, so we'd effectively just be trading damage at first. Jerome and Mordred both told us that taking some damage was a foregone conclusion when we asked them about it. As far as they were concerned, trading hits was just a natural part of naval battles to begin with. We, however, opted to disagree.

「Hey.」

「Yeah?」

「Leave to me.」

「I take it you've got something in mind?」

「Nn. Will sink enemies.」

「Sounds promising to me, but you sure you're up for it?」

「Sure.」

「Hm, I don't want you doing anything that'll put you in too much danger. We've still got a long trip ahead of us, and we'll be needing you to power our way through it.」

Jerome exchanged glances with Mordred, as if silently asking the B ranker whether or not he thought Fran would actually be able to pull it off, to which he replied with a nod.

「A rankers are strong enough for us to call them flat out inhuman, and she's got enough power to take one down. Me, I'd say she'll be just fine.」

「Alright then, go fer it. Just make sure you don't damage our ship, 'lright?」

「Got it. Going now.」

「Going?」

「Nn. Going to sink enemies. Urushi.」

「Woof!」

「Woooah! Your wolf was actually that damned huge?」

「I'm... starting to think that it could probably even beat me up...」

Fran ignored Jerome, who's eyes had shot open in surprise, and mounted Urushi.

「Go.」

「Woof!」

And so, the two of them leapt towards the pirates, leaving naught but a series of shocked sailors in their wake.

250. Anti-Ship Sword

Chapter 250. Anti-Ship Sword

Anti-Ship Sword

Urushi was so fast that he managed to close the gap between us and the pirate ships in the blink of an eye.

We used our birds eye view to observe the pirates, only to find that they were staring up at Fran with dumbfounded looks on their faces. The daze lasted for a moment, as they immediately drew their bows, knocked their arrows, and attempted to shoot us down. It was a vicious attack, but not one that bothered Urushi even in the slightest. He dodged them all with ease.

『Alright, let's do this.』

「Nn.」

『You know what? I'd say this is actually probably as good as chance as any to run a few experiments, just so we can be a bit informed going forward.』

「Explain?」

『I was thinking we could try and figure out the most efficient way for us to sink a ship. What do you think about hitting each of the five with a different kind of attack?』

We were still going to be at sea for quite some time. I highly doubted that we were only going to run into a single group of pirates. Figuring out the most efficient way of eliminating them would definitely function to our own benefit.

Fortunately, none of the pirates out on the deck seemed strong enough to catch my eye. They weren't going to be capable of getting in the way of our experiments—unless we messed up really hard, that is.

『Let's start by trying out Lightning Magic.』

Last time, we'd only managed to sink the pirate ships we encountered by hurling massive rocks at them. We'd grown a lot since then, we now had a much wider variety of options.

「Kanna Kamui?」

『That's a bit too extreme for just pirates, don't you think? Plus, we won't be able to use it several times in rapid succession.』

I figured Kanna Kamui would allow us to obliterate all five ships off at the same time if they happened to be close enough, which, upon further inspection, they actually seemed to be. However, I wrote decided to write it off for the time being, as it would defeat the purpose of the exercise I'd planned.

Kanna Kamui aside, I began to consider our options. Spells like Thunderbolt were rather decent, but they lacked the power to take out an entire ship in just one hit. What we needed was something in the middle.

『Oh, I know.』

I began to focus so I could cast a powerful spell. It wasn't anything on Kanna Kamui's tier, but it was still powerful nonetheless.

『Alright, let's go!』

『Ekato Keraunos!』 [1]

Countless thunderbolts descended from the sky the moment I chanted the spell's name. They shot towards one of the pirate ships, razed it, and annihilated it in the most literal sense of the word. It had been completely and utterly erased, there wasn't even the slightest trace that it'd been there in the first place.

Looking at the result made me feel as if I'd gone a bit overboard.

Ekato Keraunos was a spell that created exactly 100 bolts of lightning. It was up to its caster to determine exactly how those 100 bolts would act. It didn't take much effort to concentrate them on a single target as I'd just done.

Though it only output 10% of Kanna Kamui's power, it was still evidently way stronger than what was needed to take down a small ship. It looked like we wouldn't need to use anything more than our regular AOE lightning spells to wipe them all out if we wanted.

The pirates stopped attacking. Seeing one of their allied ships flat out vanish seemed to have scared them shitless.

That said, they didn't seem to think Fran had attacked them, but rather, that the ship had been hit by some sort of abnormal, weather-related phenomenon. To them, it must've looked like the lightning bolts had just randomly descended from the clear sky above.

「Next, my turn.」

『Sure.』

「Nn. Thor's Hammer!」

Her follow up, however, clearly revealed that it'd all been her doing from the start.

A huge magic circle appeared right above one of the ships as Fran chanted the name of the spell that we'd gotten by leveling Lightning Magic up to level 8, the spell that'd failed to break Fermus' defenses.

The thick, high powered lightning bolt that came with the spell descended from the magic circle. It tore the ship in half and left the pieces it came into contact with charred black. Whoever named the spell had aptly described it; its aftermath made it look as if the god of lightning himself had descended, swung his might hammer, and smashed it right into the ship.

『That spell looked like a pretty good fit.』

「Nn.」

I could help but think back to our battle with Fermus. He'd managed to mount a perfect defense against an attack that could totally wreck a pirate ship in one hit, albeit a small one, with nothing more than just his threads. He really was one hell of a strong fighter.

『Let's try a different approach now, namely one that doesn't make use of brute force.』

「What do?」

『I mean, all we're doing is sinking a ship here, so we should be able to finish it off by just blasting a hole through its hull or something.』

「Really?」

『I'm pretty sure, yeah. We'll have to see how this goes.』

I used the level 4 flame spell, Exploding Flare, and shot it towards the sea.

It did exactly as it was supposed to, and launched a large fireball that ultimately ended up exploding with a loud boom.

『Welp. That failed.』

「But made hole?」

『Yeah, but I didn't hit the right spot. I was supposed to make a hole in its belly, not in its flank. I mean, they've still got water flooding in, but not enough to sink them right away. Man, Flame Magic gets really hard to control when you're at sea.』

「Then what?」

『We'll have to change it up a bit is all.』

I recast the same spell, but this time, enveloped the resulting projectile in a wall of wind so I could stop it from touching the seawater.

This time, I managed to accomplish my original goal of blowing a hole in the ship's underside, but I didn't actually manage to sink the vessel right away. The seawater had weakened Flare Explosion drastically, so the hole had ended up being way too small.

On the bright side, I did manage to move the fireball to the exact place I wanted it before it detonated, the pirate ship's propulsion system was no more. The ship as a whole wouldn't be sinking right away, but it'd eventually go down, especially seeing as how it could no longer move. Of course, that wasn't to say I'd succeeded. The method I'd just devised would allow the pirates on board more than enough time to escape.

『I guess that means we should fire a few more at it.』

「Got it.」

We fired off another five projectiles and totally wrecked the bottom side of ship's hull. It was no longer able to keep the water out, and so, it began sinking in earnest.

Our third approach did work, but it took far too much time, and required us to get too close to the ship. Honestly speaking, it wasn't very practical.

『Next, I guess.』

「Next method?」

『It's been a long time since I've used a full powered Telekinetic Catapult, so I was thinking of maybe giving it a go.』

「Got it.」

I was really curious as to the total amount of damage I'd be able to output, so we put every last bit of effort into powering up my attack. We used my telekinesis, alongside elemental blade and Fran's wind magic. We poured in every last bit of mana we could and purposefully avoided considering the effect the attack would have on my durability.

「Ready?」

『Ready.』

「Nn!」

Fran borrowed the help of a wind spell to boost me up to a high speed. I telekinetically accelerated myself even further the moment I left her hands.

『Leggoooooooooo bitchesssss!』

It felt really nice to finally let loose and just bash myself into something as hard as I could.

I destroyed both the ship's masts. I hit the first head on and totally wrecked it before striking the second around where it was rooted into the ship. Despite that, I didn't show even the slightest sign of stopping.

My blade smashed through the pirate ship's hull; it penetrated every last wall and pillar before opening a massive hole in the seacraft's belly.

I knew that was what'd happened, but it'd all gone by so quick that I hadn't been able to process it. For me, it'd been more of a three step process. I left Fran's hands, hit the mast dead on, and then suddenly found myself underwater.

Only after returning to Fran did I realize that I'd punched a huge hole in the ship. My telekinetic catapult had done quite a bit more damage than I'd been expecting it to do.

That said, overboosting elemental blade had totally killed my durability. It was kinda wasteful, and probably not worth using on a mere pirate ship.

『It's kinda already started running away, so we should probably find ourselves a method that'll allow us to sink it real quick.』

I began thinking about what we'd done so far in order to figure out what might work. It looked like using wind magic might be a good idea for the time being, as I'd be able to stall them with a cross wind.

「Can I choose?」

『Sure, what do you have in mind?』

「Need to ask Master to do something.」

Fran explained her concept to me. I was honestly quite surprised to hear it, as it involved pushing my ability to transform to the limit. Long story short, she told me to make myself huge.

Shape shifting itself wasn't really anything out of the ordinary. I'd already tried becoming threads, as well as a shield on occasion. But this was going to be my first time literally just supersizing myself and nothing else.

She still wanted to be able to swing me, so I kept my handle the same size, but boosted the hell out of both my blade and guard with everything I had.

I ended up being way bigger than I expected. I'd long surpassed the horse slayer in terms of size; my blade had grown to be almost a whole 10 meters long. I'd more or less transformed into one of the anti-ship swords that a certain mech would always swing around. [2] [3]

『This work for you?』

「Nn. Perfect. Going now.」

『Please do. I won't be able to keep this up for too long, so I'm going to have to ask you to be as quick as you can.』

「No problem!」

Fran more or less did the same thing she did to Rynford to the pirate ship. She jumped off Urushi, boosted my weight, cast elemental blade, and drew me from a sheath made out of air as she approached the ship.

「Haaaaaahhh!」

Naturally, the attack divided the pirate ship in two. The sheer amount of blunt force the strike carried caused the wood that made up the ship's hull to fly all over the place as Elemental Blade set the whole goddamned thing on fire. The ship had no hope of surviving the attack. Neither its front nor back half could do anything but sink into the ocean's depths.

In the end, we figured that Thor's Hammer and my Anti-Ship Sword mode were probably our two best options, with the former being better against a smaller number of foes, and the latter a larger group.

「Done.」

『Pretty much, yeah.』

[1] I may be wrong, and please correct me if I am, but I believe this means Hundred Thunderbolts in Greek.

[2] A horse slayer, or zanbatou, is often referred to as a sword big enough to split both a man and his horse in half in one slash in the world of fiction. It's a pretty commonly used mention in Japanese culture, and something whose origin can be blamed on China.

[3] I'm thinking this is referring to Schwert Gewehr, a 15.78m Anti-ship Sword from Gundam Seed. Though, in the raw, he says it comes from a game specifically. The game is probably Super Robot Wars, but I'm not actually 100% what the unit+sword he's referring to is, because, though sword gundams are in SRW, they're pulled in from animu, so....

「Well, that's the Black Lightning Princess for ya!」

Captain Jerome happily greeted Fran with a full faced smile upon her return. He was very pleased to see that his ship had remained undamaged despite the pirate's assault.

Likewise, the sailors had even started cheering for her. Not a single one of them seemed to be sympathizing with the pirates, nor the miserable fate they'd met. That said, their actions weren't abnormal. The world we were currently living in was one in which you had to eliminate your enemies and the people that tried to steal from you; it was kill or be killed. To that end, having a powerful ally was something deserving honest gratitude.

Unlike the sailors, most of the adventurers had ended up going quiet and turning meek, but not out of fear. Rather, they seemed to be trying to express their respect. Though adventurer rankings were based on more than just one's ability to enact violence, overwhelming strength was still a force that called for powerful feelings of admiration.

The only member of the group whose expression was any different was Mordred. He, unlike the others, seemed more taken aback than anything. He ended up smiling in a bit of a wry manner as he called out to Fran.

「Man, you're strong. You're the first person I've ever seen whose strength and rank differ as greatly as night and day.」

He had a fair point. Fran was way more powerful than any C ranker should be.

「Listen up y'little shits! We're getting the hell out of this stretch of sea as fast as we possibly can!」

「Yessir!」

「The battle turned out to be a bit too flashy, y'see.」

Jerome was worried that the loud sounds and huge shockwaves would attract Magic Beasts to our current location, especially seeing as how there were a bunch of pirates floating around in the area. They would likely soon be preyed on.

Hence, it would be best for us to get the hell out of the area as soon as possible.

「Went too far.」

「I wouldn't say that. The lil' bit of risk we just incurred is well worth getting out of that situation scot-free.」

「While I do agree with the captain, I'd like to say that it would be better for you to keep try to keep the flashiness in moderation, if possible.」

Jerome was all smiles. He didn't seem to mind what we'd done at all. Buphett, on the other hand, took a bit more reasonable an approach to the whole situation. I decided to adopt it and be a bit more careful going forward.

「W-We'd like to ask a favour!」

「Please make us your apprentices!」

Fran started heading back towards her room right after she finished speaking with Jerome, but she was interrupted before she so much as left the area. Miguel, Liddick, and Naria rushed in front of her, prostrated, and began asking for her guidance.

「The way you fight is incredible.」

「We want to get strong, much stronger than we are now.」

「So please make us your apprentices!」

All three of them seemed earnest, frantic, and desperate for her aid. I wanted to help them, but I didn't feel like it was actually plausible for Fran to take them as her apprentices, as they'd get in the way of her travels. More importantly though, she didn't really seem like the type that'd actually be capable of teaching.

Still, she seemed to have something in mind.

「My apprentices?」

「Yes ma'am!」

「Please!」

「We beg of you!」

All three pressed their foreheads against the ship's deck as they awaited a response.

『Wait, are you actually gonna do it?』

(No. But interested.)

『We can't really have them accompany us though.』

There were two major issues associated with letting them travel with us. The first was that they'd slow us down, and the second was that they might figure out our secret.

(I know.)

『Just had to make sure. But what exactly are you planning then?』

(Nn. Will make apprentices for duration of boat trip.)

『Right. That does sound like it could work.』

Fran's suggestion did sound like it would work. The three had their own room, so they probably wouldn't be able to figure out that I was an intelligent weapon.

『Well, I mean you do you. My only concern is, do you actually think you'll be able to teach them properly?』

(Nn? Yes. Because interested.)

『Well, alright. Just make sure you let them know that it's your first time teaching anyone. I'll be all for it so long as they don't mind.』

「Nn. Will make apprentices. But just during boat trip.」

「R-Really!?!」

「Thank you so much!」

「But never had apprentices before. No experience teaching. Still okay?」

「That's perfectly fine!」

「We're happy to have your guidance, Master!」

Fran sent Liddick a sharp glare and freaked him out a bit the moment he declared her his master.

「Don't call me master.」

「Huh? Why not?」

「Because no. Not me. Master only reserved for the best.」

I was glad Fran respected me and all that, but calling me “the best” was taking it a bit too far. That said, I wasn't going to stop her or anything. Shit would start getting really confusing if people started referring to Fran as “Master.”

「Can call me anything but Master.」

「A-Alright.」

「Think of different title.」

「S-Sure thing.」

The three adventurers managed to nod even though Fran was looking at them in a serious, intimidating manner. They looked at each other and quietly discussed a few things before finally simultaneously turning back towards her.

「W-What if we called you Ms. Fran then, like we would if you were our teacher?」

「Teacher?」

「Y-Yeah. Does that work?」

「Nn. Teacher acknowledged.」

She seemed to have taken a liking to the title, as she nodded while repeating “I’m a teacher,” several times over.

「Starting training immediately.」

「 「 「Yes Ma’am!」 」 」

The joy of being referred to as a teacher had totally pumped her full of motivation.

I was really curious as to exactly what she was going to tell them to do. Though I was really curious, I wasn’t really planning on butting in regardless of whether or not what she told them to do was anywhere even remotely within the realm of being sane. The three had asked for her to train them, not me. All that mattered to me was that Fran enjoyed the experience.

「First is...」

Fran paused for a moment, which in turn caused her three disciples to curiously repeat her words, as if to urge her to continue.

「Practice swings?」

「Practice swings? Got it! We'll be right on it!」

Though her tone seemed to carry a few hints of confusion with it, Fran had managed to get them off to a pretty decent start. A part of me had even started to suspect that she just might actually have a talent for teaching.

Miguel and Liddick abided by her orders and immediately began practicing. Miguel swung his greatsword up and down, while Liddick started to thrust his spear forwards and backwards.

Naria, however, seemed not to have any idea what to do. Fran's instructions had been directed towards her as well, but she was an archer. And as far as she was concerned, there wasn't really any point in swinging her bow around like a melee weapon.

「Umm... Am I supposed to join them? I don't really use swords or anything...」

「Only carrying bow?」

「Yeah, that's it.」

「Only using bow is bad. Will die in close combat.」

「Umm... So does that mean you want me to learn how to use some sort of weapon I can use up close too?」

「Nn. Recommend shortsword. Not for attacking. Defending or throwing only.」

Watching Fran in action allowed me to confirm that she really did have talent for instructing others. I was surprised at how well she was handling everything.

「Okay!」

「Will feel unnatural at first, but start today.」

「I definitely will!」

Fran pulled a rusted shortsword out of her dimensional storage and handed it to Naria. I was confused as to where she'd got it from, so I asked her about it. Apparently, it was something that she'd looted off one of the goblins we killed some time ago.

「Here.」

「Is it really okay for me to take it?」

「Nn. Rusted, can't be used in combat. But good enough for practice.」

「Thank you very much.」

Fran silently watched over Naria as she began to get a feel for the weapon. Her face had on it a clear look of satisfaction.

「Ummm... Am I doing this right? Do I just keep swinging it around?」

「Nn.」

Though Fran didn't actually give Naria any direct advice on how she was supposed to swing it around, I didn't disagree with her methods. Repetitive training was something that ultimately made one better at wielding a weapon, and the existence of skills only made said training all the more worthwhile. Hence, Fran didn't actually need to say anything to her newfound apprentice. All she needed to do was watch over her so she could make sure she continued to practice her use of the weapon.

And in fact, that was exactly what she did. She tirelessly continued to watch over all three adventurers without getting bored or distracted. As for me, I was really looking forward to seeing whether or not Fran would be able to drive them to improve by the time the boat trip was over. I was excited to finding out just how far they would go, if anywhere at all.

252. Fran As A Teacher

Chapter 252. Fran As A Teacher

Fran As A Teacher

Today was the day after Fran decided to accept the three adventurers she met back at the guild as her temporary apprentices.

It was still quite early in the morning, but she'd already gathered them so they could start another day's worth of training.

「First, stretches.」

「Stretches? What's a stretch?」

Liddick mulled over the word that he'd clearly never heard before, as if contemplating its meaning.

「I dunno, but I think it's probably something related to some sort of super training!」

「Are you sure? It sounds more like a spell to me.」

Miguel and Naria answered him in turn, each with their own respective interpretations of the exercise.

It turned out that stretching wasn't actually something this world's people normally did. They did have warm-up exercises, but none of them were meant to increase one's flexibility. The concept of stretching, as I knew it, was completely foreign to them. In fact, Fran herself had only started stretching after I instructed her to and informed her that it was good for her. And now, she was taking that bit of information and spreading it.

「Warm up before exercise.」

「Er, alright, but is there actually any point to it?」

Liddick began questioning the exercise before Fran could get to demonstrating or explaining.

「Nn.」

「Huh, interesting. Could you explain what the point is?」

「Warming up. Many benefits.」

「Many? Could you give a few specific examples?」

「Nn? Many is many.」

Although Fran knew that stretching would improve her condition, she wasn't able to explain why. She had clearly forgotten all the theory behind it even though I vividly recalled explaining it to her not too long after we first met. As far as she was concerned, stretching was just another routine exercise she drilled into her body for the sake of getting stronger.

All three of her apprentices had initially reacted to her clearly incomplete explanation with a dumbfounded stare. It took them a few moments to shake their heads free of their doubts and begin following her instructions.

「D-Do we really need to do this?」

「Shut up and just do it, idiot! Look, even Teach herself is doing it.」

Liddick continued asking questions, but Miguel silenced him with a shout.

「T-True...」

Though the spearman still seemed unconvinced, he felt that his party member's logic was both solid and believable.

「I'm sure she's doing it for a reason us lower rankers can't even begin to wrap our heads around.」

Sensing that, Miguel appended another convincing argument to the end of his explanation.

「Y-Yeah, you know what, you're probably right. They're even worth Ms. Fran's time, so they're definitely worth ours too!」

Mentioning his lack of knowledge caused Liddick to re-evaluate his stance yet again. Recalling his own faults made him much more willing to accept the unfamiliar exercise despite its purpose still being shrouded in mystery.

「You're right. I'm sure these movements will lead to some sort of incredible effect!」

Like Miguel, Naria had also decided to abide by Fran's instructions.

「Yeah, it has to have something to do with why she's so strong even though she's really young!」

Miguel took the lack of an explanation as a prompt to begin theorizing why Fran wanted them to stretch.

「That's true! It might have something to do with making training more efficient.」

The constant reinforcement his party members were feeding him eventually caused Liddick to come up with a more reasoned out answer.

「That has to be it!」

「Damn, do I like the sound of that. It's getting me hella pumped!」

Naria and Miguel both unhesitatingly latched onto his seemingly logical conclusion.

And surprisingly, despite being overglorified, it wasn't really that far from being the right answer. Stretching didn't have the sort of miraculous effect they were expecting, but it did reduce the chance of injury. Hence, it technically did have the potential to allow one to train more efficiently.

「Stretches, taught by Master.」

「Your master, teach?」

「Nn.」

「What kind of person was your master?」

「Amazing. Best master in world. Made me strong.」

「Wow! He sounds really impressive!」

「Master is best.」

Liddick paused to let Fran make a comment before continuing.

「And he was the one that taught you how to stretch? T-」

「See, I called it! This stretching thing's gotta have some sort drastic effect!」

Feeling validated, Miguel cut Liddick's comment off with his own.

「Let's give stretching our all!」

Neither of Fran's other two apprentices disagreed with Naria's suggestion.

They were all totally gung ho about it, and because of that, started off by trying to force their bodies as far as they could. Fortunately, Fran, who'd realized they misunderstood the exercise's purpose, stopped them before they hurt themselves. She patiently continued to instruct them until they started going about stretching the slow but thorough way one was supposed to.

Fran was doing her job as their teacher incredibly well. The three were moved by the fact that she, someone way stronger than them, was willing to carefully instruct them. Their respect for her had been bolstered many times over even though all she'd taught them to do was stretch.

「Next, sparring.」

「Eh?」

「Seriously?」

「W-Who will we have to go up against?」

Naria, Miguel, and Liddick reacted in that order. The first leaked a sound to represent dumbfounded surprise, the second proclaimed his disbelief, and the third ended up asking a question in hopes of a favourable response.

Even just considering the possibility of sparring with Fran had caused the colour to visibly drain from all three of the trio's faces. They clearly remembered getting totally creamed by her just the other day.

None of them wanted to fight her. They all hoped that she would have them spar with one another instead.

A hope she mercilessly crushed.

「Nn. Me, one by one.」

「...Alright.」

Resigning himself to death, Liddick nodded and acknowledged the idea.

「I can let you go first if you want.」

「Nah, you can go right ahead, Miguel.」

「Sorry Naria, but I'm with Miguel. Ladies first, you see.」

「Damn you Liddick, you traitor!」

Fran was getting tired of seeing the trio's pitiful argument, so she raised one of her arms and pointed in Miguel's direction.

「Swordsman first.」

「S-Seriously...?」

「Hurry up.」

「G-Got it, Teach.」

「Do your beeest.」

「Don't die out there bro.」

「O-Oh shut up! You two are going to be following me straight to hell in a few seconds anyways.」

Miguel stepped up, his face dyed in a shade of hopelessness.

「You attack.」

「H-Here I go then! Oraaaaaahhhh!」

Miguel came right at Fran with his sword in motion. There wasn't even the slightest bit of hesitation in his movements; he swung to kill because he knew just how much stronger than him she really was.

The nearby sailors, however, didn't. All they saw was a hulk of a man viciously lunging at a little girl with his greatsword in hand. Not all of them had watched yesterday's battle unfold, so most judged based off of appearances and assumed that Miguel was way stronger than Fran.

They'd found the sight of her teaching him, the thing they'd been watching up until now, entertaining and humorous. That was precisely why the sudden change in activity had caused them to start screaming in panic.

But their concerns were needless. The tragic event they'd expected to see simply never happened.

「Wind-up too big.」

「Toryaaah!」

「Power important, but no point if can't hit.」

「Shiiit!」

「Smaller swings.」

「Haaaah!」

「Too rushed.」

「Grgghhh!」

Fran basically didn't bother retaliating. She instead spent her time dodging while giving him advice. She would also lightly tap him whenever he exposed an opening in order to show him what he needed to work on.

Watching the two caused the sailors to freeze up; they were completely dumbfounded.

As far as Miguel was concerned, however, things were going roughly as expected. The only thing he didn't account for was that Fran wasn't actually going to retaliate. He was glad to see that she continued instructing him as opposed to just totally wrecking him.

He ended up sinking to the floor completely exhausted after maintaining his all out assault for approximately 10 minutes.

「Nn. Last attack, not bad.」

「T-Thank you very much!」

「Next, spearman.」

「Sure thing!」

Liddick took Miguel's place and began a second vigorous assault on Fran. He tried to strategically angle and shift his attacks such that they'd hit, but she totally saw through all of his tactics and maintained a flawless defense.

「Thinking too much before attacking.」

「Kuh!」

「Too easy to read. More variation.」

「Haaah!」

「Not bad, but too slow.」

She more or less treated him the same way she treated Miguel. She dodged all his attacks and occasionally pressed her palm against his body to demonstrate that he'd made a mistake that would've lead to his death. In the end, Liddick, like Miguel, ended up collapsing out of sheer exhaustion.

Last up was Naria. Firing projectiles from a bow was quite dangerous given that we were on a ship with a bunch of people on it, and Fran wasn't really able to offer too much bow-related advice in the first place. Hence, she instead focused on teaching Naria how to use her short sword.

Her methods remained the same, but she made sure to attack a bit more frequently since she wanted Naria to get more used to blocking than anything else.

「More attention to blocking. Less to attacking.」

「Got it!」

「Dodge if can't block.」

「Ow!」

「Use dagger for control. Feints.」

Naria ended up yielding a bit faster than Miguel and Liddick. I didn't really blame her. She was using a weapon she wasn't used to, and the need to block Fran's strikes had drained her of her energy really quickly.

But either way, Fran was satisfied. She'd proven herself capable of functioning as a teacher.

「Archer, keep practicing with short sword.」

「Got it!」

「Swordsman, spearman, focus on offensive footwork.」

The three nodded after Fran gave them some feedback. She'd successfully managed to root out their weaknesses.

「Archer, can also keep practicing with bow.」

But despite that, she continued to call them by their weapons as opposed to their names, and not because that was just how she wanted to refer to them. It was instead something that needed to be attributed to one of her bad habits: forgetting everything she wasn't really interested in. In other words, although she was interested in having them as her apprentices, she hadn't actually taken to any of the three individuals themselves. I couldn't help but wonder whether or not any of them would be able to get her to remember them by name before the Algieba reached its destination.

253. The Water Dragon Warship

Chapter 253. The Water Dragon Warship

The Water Dragon Warship

Two days had passed since Fran had sunk the five incoming pirate ships. It was currently around noon, the sun was shining directly overhead.

Fran was doing the same thing she'd been doing most of yesterday: training her apprentices. She made them stretch, sparred with them, and showed them how to move. The training itself was going well, but it was cut short by an interruption nonetheless.

The alarm bell began ringing during one of the group's cooldown sessions; its clangs sounded off over and over in a fourfold pattern.

We'd once again found ourselves subject to a pirate assault.

「L-Let's go teach!」

「Shit, pirates again!? Why the hell are there so many? Isn't this supposed to be the Kraken's Nest?」

Both melee ranged fighters, Liddick and Miguel voiced their opinions in that order the moment they heard the bell. The former suggested immediately jumping into the fray, whereas the latter groaned and complained.

「They might be a part of some sort of huge pirate brigade, the kind that can get its hands on brand new, state of the art ships capable of easily outrunning kraken.」

Liddick spoke up yet again. Unlike his immediate reaction, which seemed to function as a call to action, his second set of words seemed to contain a bit more thought.

「You serious man? We might be in some deep shit then.」

「Stop panicking Miguel. We've got Ms. Fran, our teacher, here with us. How's a pirate ship even supposed to begin to compare?」

Fran had her apprentices to stand by before heading over to the ship's bow. There, she found Captain Jerome already gazing at the incoming pirates through a telescope.

「How many?」

「I was just thinking it was about time for you to show up. They've got 12 this time 'round. There seem to be a couple bigger ships mixed in amongst their ranks too.」

12? Damn, that's pretty big for a band of pirates.

「They're waving the same flag as the five you sank a couple days back.」

「Their friends?」

「Seems like it. They've probably got their HQ somewhere in the area.」

「Sent main force?」

「Sorry princess, but no idea.」

At first, Fran and I had both thought that 12 was a pretty big number, but according to Jerome, it wasn't. Pirate fleets could get big, really big. The ones we were up against were, relatively speaking, so few in number that the captain couldn't actually figure out whether they were some small-time group's main fleet or a larger group's scouting party.

「The one thing I do know is that somethin' feels off.」

「Meaning?」

「No idea. I've just got a bad feelin' is all.」

「Want to see enemies.」

「Right. I'll let ya borrow this then.」

「Nn. Thanks」

Jerome handed Fran a spare telescope. She promptly picked it up, lifted it to her face, and joined him in gazing at the pirate fleet.

『You see anything?』

「Nn... That, weird-looking?」

『Uh, you're asking me? I was asking you cause I can't see shit...』

「So not even you know what that is, Black Lightning Princess?」

「Nn.」

The sight of a really buff dude standing next to a little girl, with the two both speaking in low, guttural tones, was one I couldn't help but find comical. Seeing them side by side made me want to burst into laughter.

「Oh!?!」

「What?」

「Look at that ship over there.」

Jerome seemed to have noticed something.

『Is he maybe talking about the ship's flag, Fran?』

「Nn? Weird flag above skull and crossbone flag.」

『Isn't that just some sort of pirate flag?』

「Strange insignia. Draconic.」

Well, it probably wasn't a pirate's flag if it looked draconic.

「That's... the Sheedran flag. Shit, I knew it!」

Jerome seemed to have figured something out, as, though he still had the telescope to his eye, he'd started to groan in displeasure.

「Well, I've figured out why I felt so on edge.」

「Why?」

「That draconic mark you saw? It's a sign that the ship's from Sheedran, one of the maritime nations to our north.」

We didn't really know much about Sheedran, so we had Jerome elaborate a bit further. According to him, it was an oceanic country whose borders spanned the archipelago with whom it shared its name.

The continent we just departed, Gilbard, had Chrom to its west and Brohdinn to its north. All you needed to do to find the Sheedran islands on a map was to mark the three continents, connect the dots to form a triangle, and find the centerpoint. Visualizing that allowed me to realize that it lay just south west of the demonic sea, the expanse of water between Gilbard and Brohdinn. Taking our current position into account, we'd probably actually be able to reach it if we headed straight north.

Wait, they've got a country's flag hoisted? Does that mean they're not actually pirates?

It turned out the whole situation was much more convoluted than I'd initially suspected.

「Y'see, thing is, Sheedran's status as a country is something that people like arguing about. The place was originally occupied by a group of notorious outlaws called the Sheedran Pirates. They were successful, so successful that they managed to absorb basically every other pirate band in the area. Before long, they started calling themselves a country instead of just a group of criminals. Probably shouldn't really think about that part of it though. We ain't got no time here to talk politics. All that really matters is the gist. We'll be golden so long as you know that the Sheedran people descend from pirate folk, meanin' they like to be rough. I've even heard rumours sayin' that their entire population's made up of sailors.」

As far as Sheedran's citizens were concerned, the strong and charismatic belonged in society's upper rungs. The country's former king was especially outstanding. He had been so charismatic that he got every single one of the country's citizens to acknowledge him, and then some. Even people like Jerome looked up to him, and that was seriously saying something.

「The king was a hell of a man, but no one lives forever. He kicked the bucket a few years back. His successors jumped right into fightin' over his seat the moment he left it. Ended up throwing one hell of a shitshow.」

The flag fluttering about above the pirate flag indicated that the vessel belonged to Sheedran's royal family.

「Then, Sheedran's navy?」

「Not even Sheedran's navy would be brazen enough to fly a pirate's flag. You see how the royal flag's blue? That's apparently s'pposed to mean that it belongs to the first prince, the guy that lost the power struggle and got his ass kicked outta the country.」

The first prince took his men and started playing pirate after leaving his country. As Sheedran's royals had descended from pirates in the first place, it would technically be more accurate to say that he returned to his roots.

I wasn't quite convinced that we could really conclude that much from just a flag. It could've just been a fake. I didn't need to think too deeply to think up more reasons why that'd be than I could count. Besides, why would someone that's gotten their ass deported want to raise their old country's flag in the first place?

I had Fran express my doubts, but they were shot down. According to Jerome the flag was probably authentic, and the ship most likely bore some sort of connection with Sheedran's royal family.

「Why?」

「Try lookin' at the ship's bow.」

「Bow?」

『You see anything, Fran?』

「Nn... Chains?」

「Right. They're hooked up to a water dragon. Water dragon warships like that one were the whole reason the Sheedran were so powerful at sea.」

The concept of taming magic beasts and using them to pull seafaring vessels had been around for as long as people could remember, but Sheedran's first king was the one and only person to have ever succeeded in taming B ranked magic beasts, water dragons.

「There were only ever four of them, but those four alone gave the Sheedran enough power to plow through every other group of pirates and topple even the fleets sent by the most powerful of countries.」

Water dragon pulled ships were truly terrifying; they totally eclipsed regular ships in terms of both speed and firepower and dominated any battlefields they were sent to. Mentioning their traits and specialities caused Jerome to realize why he'd felt something was wrong. It was the speed. The water dragon ships were closing in on us as quickly as would speedboats.

「They've probably got the flag raised either cause they want to assert themselves, or 'cause they want to intimidate anyone they come across.」

The act of self-assertion sounded really stupid and reckless, but not too unlikely based on what Jerome had told us. After all, the prince had already gone as far as causing a shitstorm inside his own country despite his responsibilities.

「Dealing with 'em isn't something we'd want to do, but they've got too much speed on us for us to get away.」

「Won't fight?」

「Hell no, not against a Water Dragon Ship. Shit's worth a whole fleet 100 strong.」

「But can't escape.」

「Yeah, we're shit out of luck. Damn it! Why the fuck did we have to run into that monster of a ship!?!」

It looked like we weren't going to be able to retreat.

「The Sheedrans hate our country, so I doubt we'd be able to get away with losing only the usual 30 percent of our cargo either...」

Many of the less extreme pirates were willing to let you go scot-free so long as you were willing to pay a toll fee. The ones attacking us, however, had a Water Dragon Warship. They could care less about making an enemy out of a country. It was possible that they'd slaughter everyone on board even if we surrendered immediately.

「Fuck it. Our only hope is ramming their flagship head on and engaging in an all out melee. They've got too many cannons for us to stand a chance at range. Time for you adventurers to earn your keep! Think yer up for it?」

I didn't understand why the captain felt that engaging in melee combat was better than letting Fran do the thing she'd done last time. Logically speaking, that seemed like it'd be the way better choice.

「You'll be up against a water dragon, y'know? That shit's dangerous up close.」

「Can just attack from ship.」

Though water dragons were B ranked threats, it was rather unlikely for them to be capable of sniping us out of the air. All we had to do was find a few openings, and we'd be able to sink the dragon ship alongside all its escorts.

I couldn't say for sure whether or not we'd be able to take the water dragon itself down, but destroying the ship it pulled would honestly be a pretty easy task.

「I like the idea, but it doesn't get us out of the bind we're in. The water dragons could start going berserk if freed. We'd sink for sure if they attacked us.」

The only people that knew how to calm down a raging water dragon were Sheedran's higher ups.

「Hmmm.」

To be honest, I was at a loss. I had no idea what to do.

『We still have a bit of time to figure things out before we actually have to engage them in combat. What do you say to asking Mordred what he thinks?』

「Nn. Got it.」

The most optimal solution would be for us to totally wipe the pirates out, water dragon and all. Our biggest blocker was that we weren't sure we'd actually be able to kill the dragon in question. We'd never fought any sort of dragon before, so we didn't have a frame of reference we could use to figure out our chances. To that end, we needed to keep ourselves on guard, just in case.

254. The Water Dragon Warship's True Power

Chapter 254. The Water Dragon Warship's True Power

The Water Dragon Warship's True Power

Fran and a few others, Mordred included, gathered to discuss the plan going forward immediately after we confirmed that we were going up against a Water Dragon Warship.

「So, just to double check, you said you could wipe out all the ships escorting their flagship?」

「Nn. Leave to me.」

「I guess that means the only thing we'll have to worry about will be the Water Dragon Warship...」

It turned out that not even Mordred had any experience fighting water dragons.

「So you remember how you won against Fermus...? I think you'd be able to take the water dragon down if you used that again. Do you think that's something you can pull off, or does it need some sort of condition you can't fulfill right now?」

「Can use.」

「Great. In that case, all we'll have to do is come up with a contingency in the case that it manages to survive it.」

The ship was sure to get totally wrecked if we launched both Kanna Kamui and Black Lightning Advent at the dragon. It would undoubtedly be set free if we failed to take it down. To prevent that exact situation from unfolding, we needed a more reliable way to damage the dragon, a method of attack that was both precise and extremely high in terms of power.

(Telekinetic Catapult?)

『You were thinking that too?』

(Nn. Only option.)

Taking down the water dragon attached to the ship didn't seem like it'd be too difficult. In fact, it was probably way easier than taking down a wild water dragon. The chains that held the creature to the seaborne chariot it pulled greatly limited its range of movement.

Hitting was going to be fairly simple. All we had to worry about was doing enough damage to kill it through all its defenses—which I figured wouldn't be too hard so long as we hit one of its vitals.

「What if only attacked dragon?」

「That is probably the most ideal solution... but do you know of any ways to realize it?」

「Nn.」

「Then I guess we'll have to leave that to you too. God, I feel pathetic.」

Mordred's inability to act vexed him. He'd basically no choice but to have Fran, an adventurer way younger than he was, resolve everything all on her own. Worse yet, he wasn't being limited because he was weak, but rather, because he lacked the precise skill set needed to make a difference. His speciality, lava magic, was short ranged, but it could provide the ship with excellent defenses, but a focus on defense wasn't exactly what we needed at the moment.

A completely different thought crossed my mind as I contemplated Mordred's capabilities. The ship we were about to attack was one that did technically have a member of a royal family on board. Was killing their dragon and sinking flagship potentially going to lead to some sort of international outcry?

「Okay to sink enemy?」

「What do you mean?」

「Will country retaliate if prince dies?」

「Hahaha, no worries there. The vessel's flying a pirate flag, so sinking it is only the most natural course of action even if it does belong to Sheedran's navy. If anything, we'd be under more scrutiny if we didn't.」

「A pirate flag's basically a threat in and of itself, basically means “hand over your shit or die,” y'know? As far as we seafarers go, attackin' anyone with a pirate's flag is just common sense.」

His argument made sense to me, so we moved on to the next problem: figuring out the order in which we'd sink the ships. We had to choose between focusing on either the flagship or its escorts. Though the options seemed quite different, they resulted in the creation of a similar set of disadvantages. The water dragon warship was likely going to chase the Algieba down if we took down the escorts first. Likewise, targeting the flagship could lead to the rest of its fleet hunting the Algieba down. Making a decision would've been a much simpler task if we were capable of providing time estimates and whatnot, but we honestly had no idea how long we would need to actually beat the dragon.

Jerome ended up solving that problem for us by pointing out that the other ships would likely run the hell away if we took their flagship down, meaning we'd save on the number of things we had to fight if we got our priorities straight.

「They'd probably find it totally suicidal to go up against something that managed to take a Water Dragon Warship down, y'see.」

We found ourselves launching off the ship's deck once the meeting adjourned.

『Urushi, focus on dodging.』

「Woof!」

『Fran, try to aggro the dragon. Make it raise its head out of the water if you can.』

「Got it.」

It would be much more difficult for us to finish the dragon off if it stayed underwater. The dragon itself didn't gain any bonuses from being submerged, but it would still naturally be protected by the seawater around it. Water was much denser than air, and we lacked anything specialized for subaqueous combat. The vast majority of our attacks would simply end up losing force below the ocean's surface.

To that end, I asked Fran to barrage the dragon with weaker spells in an attempt to annoy it enough to lure it out where we could hit it harder.

Arrows, cannonballs, and even spells would periodically fire from the ship. But Urushi, swift as he was, avoided them all with ease. The ratio of spells to other projectiles was surprisingly high, and indicated that there were multiple mages on board the ship. That same statistic further served to indicate that the people on board really weren't just your typical pirates.

As they posed no threat, Fran ignored the incoming attacks and just continued to single mindedly throw spells at the water dragon. She didn't actually seem to be hurting it, but that didn't mean it wasn't getting annoyed.

All it took was five short minutes worth of pestering for the lizard-like beast to emerge from the water, its face adorned with an expression of rage.

To me, the term water dragon suggested something along the lines of a plesiosaurus, a big, underwater creature with flippers on its sides and smooth, slippery skin.

Clearly, I was wrong, or least mostly wrong. The only accurate part of my guess had been the general plesiosaurus-like shape. Unlike a plesiosaurus, however, it was covered in from head to toe with rugged scales, and even had a sharp horn growing out of its forehead. Its rear was decorated by an abnormally long tail, and its back a pair of fins resembling degenerated wings. Likewise, its arms and legs were also part fin, and bore a strong resemblance to a sea lion's front two limbs. The way they were shaped led me to suspect that the water dragons would probably still be capable of moving around even on land.

The whole creature's body was covered in a layer of what appeared to be seawater. It'd appeared to have wrapped itself up in moisture in order to prevent its skin from dehydrating.

「Master!」

There was no point in thinking about what the dragon was doing or why it looked the way it did. All that could be saved for after we defeated it.

『Yeah, let's do it!』

Fran brandished me and pulled me into position. I'd finished all my preparations ahead of time; I was already ready.

「Haaaah!」

『Fuuuck yeaaaah!』

I boosted myself with Telekinesis and charged towards the dragon's head the moment Fran threw me. Despite being a B ranked threat, it was incapable of reacting given the combination of my speed and the lack of distance between us. Both my aim and our setup had been perfect. I smashed into the water dragon's unprotected face.

「Oryyyywaaat!?!」

A deafening sound echoed throughout my surroundings, but it was neither the sound of the water dragon's head exploding, nor the sound of a new hole opening up in its skull.

It'd instead been the sound of me popping the membrane surrounding the dragon's body. And that was it. There'd been a sort of magical barrier underneath the layer of seawater. The combination of the two defensive walls had killed all my momentum and minimized the amount of damage I'd actually been able to inflict.

My telekinetic catapult had only managed a scratch. We'd thought that just one hit would be enough to take our foe down, but at this rate, it almost looked as if the dragon would be totally fine even after a couple hundred.

『Well, then how about trying this on for size? Lightning Blast!』

I cast the spell I'd gotten from leveling Lightning Magic up to level 5, Lightning Blast. Though it was rather short ranged, it more than made up for it with its high damage output. I'd assumed that using it would be a good idea because water-aligned life forms seemed like they'd probably be weak to electricity.

『Your defenses won't block shit if I attack you from point blank!』

Electrical energy zapped through the water dragon's head; there was so much of it that it even ended up illuminating our surroundings. But despite that, the water dragon took no damage whatsoever.

I didn't understand what'd happened.

It didn't have any skills that let it resist lightning.

「Groooooooooooooohhhhh!」

『Fuck!』

It seemed that the water dragon was about to try and bite me, so I quickly teleported back into Fran's hands.

「Okay?」

『I only just made it out, but yeah, I'm fine. But shit, that thing's defenses are rock solid. It's got a magical barrier, a layer of seawater, and its scales all working in tandem to protect it. It basically didn't take damage from

Telekinetic Catapult. It didn't seem to take any damage from my lightning magic either.』

I knew we were going up against a B ranked magic beast, but I honestly hadn't expected it to remain perfectly unscathed even after taking several attacks head on.

「Understood something by watching from afar.」

『What?』

「Ship supplying magic to water dragon.」

『Oh...? Yeah, I didn't notice.』

「Biggest mana flow when Master used magic.」

『Wait, so that means the ship has something that it can use to boost the dragon's defense!?!』

The moment I considered the existence of such a device was the moment I realized I should've been expecting it, or something like it, from the very start. Skilled mages and adventurers were difficult to come by, but there were still quite a decent number of them out there. Some sort of dragon-protecting countermeasure should've been par for the course.

Their ship was big, big enough for it to be carrying a whole boatload's worth of magical apparatuses. Moreover, it was a flagship that used to belong to a country that basically dominated every single major power out there in terms of its ability to do naval combat. Magical items with ridiculously powerful, unimaginable effects should've been one of the things we'd expected from them from the very start.

『Well, this is a huge pain in the ass if I've ever seen one. We can't kill the water dragon unless we blow the ship up, but that stupid oversized lizard's probably going to go on rampage the moment we let it loose..』

『I dunno, that sounds like it could be pretty risky.』

We'd be forced into a pretty tough spot if the dragon decided to dive the moment it was freed. I highly doubted we'd be able to chase it and defeat it if it did. It wouldn't pose too much of a problem if it decided to flee, but, it'd be a huge pain in the ass to deal with if it decided it wanted revenge, and started attacking from the depths. We'd have literally no way of dealing with it if it did.

「Will dragon want revenge?」

『Dunno. It's a B ranked magic beast, so chances are, it's probably at least as smart as Urushi.』

And anything that smart was more than capable of wanting revenge.

「Understood. Troublesome.」

『Yeah, it looks like we've pretty much got no choice but to board them.』

I had no idea how they were actually retaining control over the water dragon, but I suspected it was likely either through a tamer or some sort of magic item. Either way, we'd probably be able to figure it out and deal with whatever it was if we managed to bring the fight to the enemy flagship.

『We're pretty much out of options, so let's head back to the Algieba for now.』

We wouldn't be able to comb through the entire ship on our own. It was way too big. We were going to need more hands on deck if we actually wanted to get much of anywhere at all.

255. The Start of a Melee

Chapter 255. The Start of a Melee

The Start of a Melee

Fran wholeheartedly apologized to Jerome, Mordred, and everyone else that'd placed their faith in her as soon as she got back on the Algieba. Honestly, I wanted to do the same. I was the one that'd kept going on and on about how we'd be able to pull it off, but the Water Dragon Ship had made me totally eat my words. I felt really bad about the fact that Fran had ended up apologizing in my stead.

God damn it, Water Dragon Ship! I swear I'll sink your ass for this!

I'd expected everyone to get mad at us and start yelling at us, but much to my surprise, none of them did.

「So you attacked the water dragon the same way you attacked the pirate ships we ran into the other day?」

「Nn.」

「If it won't take any damage from an attack strong enough to sink a ship in one blow, then we can't really blame you.」

Luckily for us, they were able to understand our circumstances.

「Looks like our only hope at winning this would be to board their flagship and take out whatever or whoever's controlling the dragon.」

「Sounds 'bout right.」

The captain nodded as he thought over Mordred's suggestion.

「Knowledge of control method?」

「None here. What about you, captain?」

「I ain't got any details, but I know the royal family's been handling them for ages.」

「Then, capture royalty?」

「Seems like a pretty good idea. We might be able to figure how to stop the damn dragon if we do. Or maybe, if we're lucky, we might even figure out how we can steal it from 'em, ship and all.」

「Okay.」

We'd be able to bring the Beastkin's Country a nice fancy souvenir. That said, figuring that part out was just a stretch goal. For now, our main focus was going to be stopping the Water Dragon Warship from doing its thing.

「Only problem is we have no idea how to get on board the ship. Far as I know, our only shot at it would be to ram 'em somehow.」

「Can leave to me.」

「You've got something figured out already, princess?」

「Nn. Can move everyone to enemy ship instantly.」

It was finally Dimension Gate's turn to shine.

It would've been difficult for us to open up a gate to any place outside the range of our vision, but the Water Dragon Warship had gotten close enough for its deck to be seen with the naked eye. Linking our ship and theirs was an easy task.

Our confidence was greeted by a set of skeptical-looking gazes. Fran had only just failed spectacularly despite talking big, and space/time magic was a super rare element, so most wouldn't bother suspecting that she could use it.

Realizing that we needed something to back our claim, I had Fran grab the captain's hat through a super short distance gate.

「Woah! That's an incredibly advanced spell...!」

「Y'can even use space/time magic? Colour me impressed.」

「That's our teacher for you!」

Adventurers and sailors alike reacted to our reveal with shock; they began talking amongst each other and making a whole lot of noise.

「So you can use the spell you just cast to get us onto the enemy's ship?」

The quickest to regain his cool and get back to business was Mordred. We were really lucky to have him and his level head on board.

「Nn. Can connect gate to ship's deck.」

「I guess that means we should keep this 'ere ship as far from theirs as we can.」

Likewise, Jerome was also fairly quick to begin contemplating the spell and its implications.

「Nn. No point in boarding enemy if ship sinks.」

「Do you think we'd actually be able to outrun that fleet of theirs, captain? It looks to me like they're faster than us.」

「Yer right, they're bound to catch up. The Algieba's pretty damned solid, but concentrated cannonfire's sure to put 'er in danger.」

Protecting our own ship was a must, so we proposed splitting up our forces. Specifically, our idea was to have Mordred lead a group of people aboard the enemy flagship while Fran sank the rest of the fleet as quickly as possible before hurrying over to reinforce him.

It didn't take long for the plan to be validated as our best option given the current situation.

「Alright boys, let's raid the enemy ship, kick asses, and take names. Are you ready!?!」

Mordred fired the men up as he got to his feet and prepared himself to board the pirate's flagship.

「 「 「Yessir!」 」 」

「Fran, if you could.」

「Nn.」

I opened the gate.

With Mordred at the lead, our forces began pouring through and invading the enemy ship. The strategy we'd employed was a sink or swim approach. Either we won, and everything went well, or we got totally fucked. If the ship sank, we were done for, so there was no point staying on board and just waiting around. Thus, literally every single adventurer and sailor we had on board ended up following Mordred over to the enemy's flagship, Fran's three merry disciples included.

「It's time to shine, Teach, so here we go!」

Liddick readied his weapon as he got ready to head through the portal.

「It's time to show off everything you've taught us!」

「We'll capture the enemy's commanders for sure! Just watch us!」

Likewise, Miguel and Naria totally pumped themselves the hell up as they awaited their turn to sortie.

「Don't push selves too hard. Very important, stay alive.」

「 「 「Yes ma'am!」 」 」

And with that, they left.

Personally, I didn't really want to see any of the three die for the sole reason that Fran would be sad if they did. Hopefully, they wouldn't try too hard.

I started to hear screams, mostly pirate screams, leak over from where the gate was connected. There were bound to be a ton of the seafaring ne'er-dowells on board, but I figured that our allies were rather unlikely to lose given that we had Mordred. Still, it would be in their best interest for us to blow up all the other ships as quickly as possible.

「Time to act.」

『You betcha.』

「Woof!」

「We're counting on you, princess!」

「Nn!」

We exchanged a few words with Jerome, closed the gate, and leapt into action. Time was of the essence, the longer we took, the more casualties our allies would suffer. Given that, we decided to go full throttle from the very start.

「Master! Ready!」

『On it!』

「Urushi, full speed ahead.」

「Woof!」

I transformed into the anti-ship sword form I'd first adopted a couple days back as Urushi plunged straight towards the enemy ship. Fran raised and swung me the moment we passed it by. The combination of her attack's power and the additional boost brought about by Urushi's speed allowed her to cut through it like a hot knife through butter.

A single strike was all it took her to bring my blade from the ship's front all the way through to its back, bisecting it and sinking it one go. Though he wasn't able to continue using gravity to his advantage, Urushi refused to slow down. He pumped his legs over and over, bringing her from ship to ship.

Not a single one of the seacraft he passed survived. Each and every single one was torn right in two. The pirates weren't slow to react, they immediately began bombarding him with their attacks, but to no avail. It simply wasn't possible for them to hit Urushi at his top speed.

While Urushi and Fran targeted nearby ships, I focused on the ones a bit further away. The might of Thor's Hammer struck every ship too far outside my companions' reach.

Urushi managed to maintain his speed for a full 10 minutes, just enough time for us to loop around and sink all the fleet's vessels, flagship aside.

『We were pretty lucky that all the other ships were small enough for us to sink in one hit each.』

「Urushi, go to Water Dragon Warship.」

「Woof!」

All we had to now was stop the Water Dragon Ship before it reached the Algieba. In other words, we probably needed to board the ship and find the former prince.

Fran leapt off Urushi's back as soon as we arrived, and started cutting down the pirates that happened to be where she landed.

「Haaaaah!」

「Higyaaah!」

「S-Shit, more enemies!」

She loosed an intense aura of bloodlust after dispatching a couple enemies, one powerful enough to stop every nearby pirate in their tracks. I used the time they spent unmoving to quickly appraise them all, but failed to find anyone that seemed noteworthy in our immediate vicinity.

『Hey Fran, you see how, over there, there's a guy with a huge ass spear? He's an executive. Same goes for the mage that's standing right beside him.』

「Only need to capture them?」

『Pretty much. Let's get rid of everyone else since they'll probably just get in the way when we interrogate their execs.』

「Nn. Got it.」

Fran nodded before charging into the pirate mob.

「Gyaaaah!!」

「Hiiii!!」

The pirates panicked as she cut her way through them. The moment she joined the fray was the moment they realized they were doomed. She moved so fast they weren't even capable of seeing her, let alone keeping track of her. Every time she did appear, their allies would groan scream as they were slaughtered like lambs. But even then, they still wouldn't even so much as catch a glimpse of her. Their lines of sight were cluttered by the fountains of blood erupting from their friends' corpses.

Only after murdering another ten or so pirates did she finally pause to issue a threat.

「Choose. Jump overboard or die.」

She spoke in a low, intimidating tone that only those standing right by her could hear, yet, half the pirates present reacted to it and immediately plunged themselves into the sea.

The other half, the remaining half, managed to keep their wits about them and remain on deck despite her threats. I couldn't tell whether their decisions had stemmed from loyalty, or maybe something like their creed as pirates, but either way, they'd chosen to fight. In vain.

「Made choice? Then die.」

Fran stepped forward.

We'd telepathically told all our allies to move behind her; all the people in front of her were pirates.

And so, as she took a second step, she swung me.

I extended my blade and warped my general shape into that of a five meter long katana the moment she moved and activated a sword technique. Though she'd only swung once, the combination of my form and her masterful attack had reaped 20 entire pirates and heavily injured many more.

All the pirates that'd survived the attack fell onto the deck, groaning in pain. Ignoring them, she continued to step forwards, her gaze focused only on the two execs we'd spotted earlier. Neither was able to move. Both stared right back at her, frozen in terror.

...Wait. Why's the guy with the spear got his face all covered in blood?

『So uh... Fran...』

(Nn. Made small mistake.)

Apparently, we'd happened to make a small incision on the spearman's forehead. We were pretty damned lucky. We would've accidentally killed him before he told us what we wanted to know had he even been the slightest bit closer. That said, almost getting killed had him totally scared shitless, so in a wall, things did kinda end up working out.

「How to control water dragon?」

「O-Oh god!」

「I-I-I'll tell you everything I know! P-Please, just don't kill me!」

256. Suarez

Chapter 256. Suarez

Suarez

Fran disarmed the two executives she captured before sitting them down so she could interrogate them.

Her goal was of course to get them to divulge the Water Dragon Warship's secrets.

「How to control dragon?」

「N-No idea.」

「Nn?」

「Giiiiiiii!」

One of the execs tried to play dumb, to which Fran reacted by mercilessly stabbing me into his thigh.

「How to control dragon?」

「T-The only ones that can tell you that'll be the boss and the guys right under him!」

「W-We're telling the truth! We're just regular pirates that happened to get raised up through the ranks! They wouldn't tell the likes of us anything!」

「Tell all known information. Even if insignificant.」

「I-I'll tell you everything I know, so please, pull your sword out of my leg!」

「Nn.」

The pirate that agreed to talk began wailing in a mix of pain and fear as she removed me from his thigh.

His companion, the mage, paled. He realized that he would soon suffer the same fate as the spearman he'd been working with should he refuse to talk. To that end, the small framed caster immediately began spouting off everything he knew, and even went as far as to elaborate on things without us needing to ask.

Though he really didn't know too many details, he was at least capable of confirming that the dragon simply seemed to obey orders; it wasn't being controlled through some sort of large scale magic item. That said, it would only really ever listen to the prince, the guy the pirates called their boss.

Asking them about exactly how the prince was controlling the dragon failed to lead to any results. They didn't even know whether it just recognized him as someone it should listen to, or if it was being manipulated through some other means. In other words, smaller scaled items, skills, and spells were all possibilities we still had to consider.

The most useful thing we got them to do was tell us a bit about the prince. His name was Suarez Sheedran. He was supposedly a brown-skinned hulk of a man with silver-blond hair adorning his head. He was known for being quite strong; the average adventurer supposedly wouldn't be able to match him. His main weapon was a massive battleaxe, one he was likely to be carrying around right this moment. Capturing him sounded like it was going to be much easier said than done.

Of course, we also managed to get them to talk about the magical device they were using to strengthen the dragon. Apparently it was quite large, and near the ship's rear, but as the part of the ship holding it was cut off from the rest, we wouldn't be able to find it if we just walked around.

Annoyingly enough, neither of the two we captured knew how to get into the cut off section. In fact, they were both oblivious to its precise location. This, of course, stemmed from the fact that the prince didn't trust them. They, unlike many other executives, hadn't started off as his followers. They were instead just the former top brass of the pirate brigades that used to occupy the area prior to the prince's arrival. Though he did trust them enough to allow them to keep their positions, the prince basically never let them in on anything too important.

「W-We've told you everything you asked for!」

「S-So please, don't kill us...!」

「Got it.」

「T-Thank you so mguraaaaghh!」

Fran kicked the mage right in the face. The sheer force of the strike sent him spiraling off the ship's deck.

「D-Didn't you say you wouldn't kill us if w-we told you what you wanted!?!」

The spearman screamed indignantly as he watched his friend plunge into the sea.

「Didn't kill. Just dumped in sea because in the way.」

「W-What the fuck is that suppraaaaghghhhh!」

She wasn't wrong. Fran hadn't actually killed either of the two men. Instead, she'd just knocked them overboard while also depriving them of their consciousness. Though it was rather likely that they'd die, they could still live if they were lucky, so it would be more accurate to chalk their deaths up to their own inability wake as opposed to attributing them to her. Besides, they were pirates, professional seafaring pests. As far as I was concerned, they were sure to survive.

「Damn Teach, you're totally merciless!」

「I really love that part of her.」

「It looks like we should take after her example and start doing stuff like that too.」

Fran's apprentices threw in a few comments as they watched the second man follow the first into the sea. The first two, Miguel and Naria, seemed impressed, whereas the third, Liddick, began making note of her behaviour. Realizing that they'd been watching led me to contemplate whether or not they would benefit from imitating her merciless tendencies. My first instinct was to refute the thought, but then I considered the possibility that they might one day get stabbed in the back and die because they sympathized with a foe. From that, I determined that Fran's approach would probably be best for them in the long run. Probably.

『A-Anyway, why don't we go hunt Suarez down?』

「Nn.」

We informed all the other adventurers still on the ship's deck about Suarez so we could have them help us look for him. We hadn't been able to talk to Mordred's party directly, as they'd already started invading the ship's interior, but, we attempted to make up for it by asking everyone else to relay the information to him if they happened to see him.

I had no idea exactly how strong Suarez was, but there was a chance that, Fran aside, Mordred's party would be the only ones capable of dealing with him.

「Urushi, search too.」

「Woof!」

All the Algieba's sailors already knew that Urushi was Fran's familiar, so the chance of him getting attacked by one of our allies mid-search was incredibly low.

『Capture him if you can, but come right back if you think he's too strong for you, alright?』

「Start.」

With a single word and nothing more, Fran ventured into the ship's interior through the nearest exit.

Our allies had already taken out most of the pirates within, so we were able to look around without any interference—or at least that was how it went until we went down a flight of stairs.

Enemies began attacking us the moment we descended, and continued to do so as we explored. Not a single one of them was anywhere close to being Fran's match, but they were still quite annoying nonetheless.

A dense aura of battlelust began to assault us as we moved a bit further along. It seemed we'd found our mark.

『Fran!』

「Nn!」

Fran traced it to a remarkably large door, which she kicked down to reveal something along the lines of an empty warehouse.

Several adventurers and pirates were facing off against each other in the room's center. The bloodlust Fran had tracked down had originated from the two most powerful people in the room.

One was our ally, Mordred. And naturally, the other was Suarez, the pirate we'd been looking to capture.

The Sheedran prince was honestly quite strong. He had Divine Bow Arts, and several other skills indicated he was obviously an accomplished warrior. But, despite that, I didn't find him to be qualified enough to function as the captain of a pirate ship. He lacked too much in the boatmanship department for me to really think him a sailor.

Unfortunately, appraising him didn't tell me much about how he was controlling the dragon. None of his skills indicated that he was capable of taming or summoning monsters.

「You're idiots, retards! Did you really think you could defeat a Water Dragon Warship?」

「It's true that your ship is strong, probably the strongest there is, but that doesn't mean shit if we can just take the people aboard it.」

「Gyahahaha! Nice joke! I'll torture you even more than all my usual prey before feeding you to the fishes!」

So he likes torturing the people he captures? That's pretty low...

The two combatants engaged as I pondered the prince's distasteful hobbies.

「Dorryaaaahhhh!」

Suarez swung his battleaxe straight at the crown of Mordred's head. His attack had quite the speed to it; he looked to be at least as strong as a C ranked adventurer.

But despite that, we weren't even the slightest bit concerned.

「Too slow.」

「Kuh! How impertinent!」

Mordred received the blow head on with his spear and cleanly parried it—a move which appeared well within Suarez' calculations. The axe-wielder didn't let the resulting impact throw him off balance. He promptly twisted the weapon around and brought it back for a second slash. I had to admit, the technique was skillful, and it would've been more than enough for him to take down the average adventurer.

But Mordred was no average adventurer.

「Metal Control」

「W-What the!?!」

「Your axe is mine. It's already fallen under my control.」

At a glance, it almost looked as if Mordred had stuck his right arm up out of desperation after realizing that he couldn't block the attack, but of course, that wasn't the case.

The massive axe that had seemed to be on course to sever Mordred's arm bent out of shape the moment it was about to make contact. It almost looked like the battleaxe had actually been made out of clay and not steel.

Though Suarez had already basically lost, Mordred didn't let up. He assured his victory by manipulating the axe's metal and wrapping it around Suarez' body. The way it coiled around its former wielder had almost made it appear like some sort of living creature.

Mordred's actions had demonstrated why Lava Magic was so fearsome. It allowed its wielder to take control of and freely manipulate metal-based substances.

「Shit! What just happened!?!」

Suarez' axe, or rather, his newfound fetters, had already returned to a hardened state. The prince tried to break free, but soon found himself unable escape his restraints. The steel hadn't just been melted down and reshaped. It'd also be strengthened.

「Guooooooooohhhhh! Release me, damn it!」

「Stop struggling. It won't be possible for someone as weak as you to escape.」

And with that, the prince was made our prisoner.

257. A Discussion with Suarez

Chapter 257. A Discussion with Suarez

A Discussion with Suarez

「Y-Your Highness!」

「Shit! Damn you! Let our boss go!」

The prince's many subordinates immediately began kicking up a fuss the moment they realized he'd been captured.

「In the way.」

「Gyaaaah!」

「Guaaaahh!」

But Fran budded into the conflict and cut them down before they could so much as make a move.

「So how did the whole pirate ship thing end up going, Fran?」

「Sank all but this one.」

「That was quick. Nice job.」

「You too. Captured captain.」

「I was just lucky. But enough of that, let's save singing each other praises for later, shall we? We've got a bit of an interrogation to get out of the way first.」

「Nn.」

Suarez still had quite a bit of fight in him. His expression was fierce, and expressed that he wasn't willing to give up. That wasn't to say, however, that he wasn't intimidated. He twitched a bit, as if daunted, when Fran and Mordred approached him.

「Release me, you mongrel!」

「Why?」

「Insolent! Do you not know who I am!?!」

「Let me guess. A guy that leads a group of criminal scum?」

「Filth, causes problems by being alive?」

「The lot of you are all ignorant fools! I am a man of great importance, Sheedran's king!」

「Mhm. I'm sure you are.」

「How dare you!」

Mordred, being the total badass he was, ignored Suarez' shouts. He instead lifted a foot and started grinding it into the prince's face—an action that Fran soon began to imitate.

「Cease that immediately! I will allow you to acknowledge me as your lord, and yourselves as my retainers if you immediately prostrate yourselves before me and apologize!」

I couldn't believe what I was hearing. There had to be something wrong with the prince's head. He seemed to think that his offer would entice his assailants despite the fact that they'd already defeated him and tied him up.

And he meant it. The expression on his face demonstrated that the offer was as serious as could be.

「I am one of Sheedran's royals, a lord that commands water dragons. All you have to do is the natural act of licking my shoes. Do that, and I'll treat you no different from any other in my service.」

There was no way the prince was simply bad at reading the mood, he must've had some sort of communication disorder or something. I was surprised he lived as long as he did, and I also now fully understood why he'd gotten ripped off the throne and deported.

Still, I could see why the pirates had taken his side. His lack of brain cells was a pretty major issue if you asked me, but he was still strong, and did still have control over a Water Dragon Warship. To them, his threats held plenty of weight; he could easily annihilate them if they failed to yield. Moreover, serving him wasn't without its merits. There were clearly many payouts, of both the immediate and potential future variety. Besides, I highly doubted he'd gotten himself captured by them before starting to negotiate. Given all the aforementioned circumstances, their allegiance to him was almost a given.

That said, neither Fran nor Mordred hadn't bothered caring even the slightest bit for what he had to say. They ignored everything he had to say and immediately began interrogating him.

「Tell everything about controlling water dragons.」

「We won't hurt you if you tell us what we want to know.」

「What!? Why would I tell you anything!? 」

The prince refused to talk. I couldn't tell if he was demonstrating a royal's pride, a pirate's obstinacy, or the simple fact that he couldn't read the mood. But either way, he shut his mouth and turned his face away from his interrogators.

「Fmph.」

「Guaaahh! The paiiin!」

Fed up, Fran pressed once again jammed her foot into Suarez' face and started to grind down on it even harder than she had the first time.

「Cease that immediately, woman!」

Though many would rejoice from having Fran step on them, to the non-masochistic, it was merely a sort of humiliating torture.

「Last chance. Explain controlling water dragons.」

Fran's gaze went cold. She started emitting a heavy aura of bloodlust as she looked down upon the prince. It was powerful enough to make the average person shit their pants. Still, the prince managed to both retain his wits and return her glare as he continued to complain.

「Stop going on and on about that and release me!」

A foolish move.

「Got it.」

「Good. Finally, you understand. Now hurry up and undo these res-」

「Got that you won't talk yet.」

「Gyaaaaah!」

「Heal. Next, feet.」

「S-Stop! Cease that immediately!」

「Say please.」

「H-How dare you ask that of s-」

「Fmph.」

「Gyaaaaaaaaah!」

Fran continued to violently thrust me into his body and casting heal to make up for the hp he lost. At first, Suarez refused to talk. He resisted until the situation repeated itself five times over. Only then did he finally realize that he was unable to appeal to her through the use of his authority.

「P-Please stop! N-N-No more!」

He started to beg her, his face dyed in terror.

「Explain controlling water dragons. Will stab if anything you say anything else.」

Though we didn't really care for his pleas, we did stop so we could repeat our demands.

「Fine! I'll tell you! So stop, cease your acts of viole-」

Stab

「Giiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiii!」

「Heal.」

「Aarrrrgghhhh! Stop iiiit!」

「Said to only explain controlling water dragons.」

「I-I understand! The water dragons are bound by contract to obey any orders made by anyone with Sheedran's first king's blood flowing through their veins. That's why they'll listen to whatever I say!」

And so, the prince began to speak. Fran threatened him every single time he hesitated by brandishing me, whereas Mordred played more of a good cop kind of role and spoke to him almost sympathetically. The combination of these two methods allow us to draw everything we wanted out of him. Unfortunately, dealing with him was still a pain in the ass. He would start getting all cocky and shit every single time anyone softened even the slightest bit, so Fran had ended up grinding me against his thighs upwards of 30 times throughout the process. I almost felt like we'd gone a bit overboard, but it honestly couldn't be helped. He simply just never learned his lesson.

His abnormally strong willed and ridiculous sense of pride honestly impressed me. Literally anyone else would've long broken into tears and become obedient. He, on the other hand, somehow managed to regain his defiance every other time he opened his mouth.

Still, we'd made him bend enough to learn what we'd wanted. The water dragons weren't being manipulated through the use of some sort of magic item. Their obedience to him stemmed from the first King of Sheedran's ability to use contract magic.

I was surprised to hear that the dragons the nation used today were the very same ones that they'd had from the very start, well, sort of. The nation had started off with seven dragons. Three had fallen in battle, only four remained.

The dragons weren't the only thing that left me astonished, the device that was used to enhance them did the very same. Their boosts weren't unconditional. Bolstering the dragon's defenses came at a cost. Dragons had powerful offenses, and accidentally firing upon one's allies was quite the concern should the dragon failed to aim its attacks precisely. To that end, the device's designers had traded its capacity to autonomously use breath and other similar abilities for a magical barrier alongside greatly increased self healing and stamina. The only way for the dragon to use its long ranged attacks would be for Suarez to order it to do so.

Learning of this gave rise to a pretty big problem. We couldn't destroy the device without putting the Algieba in danger. The moment we blew it up would be the moment the dragon once again became capable of barraging our ship of its own will.

「What do?」

「The best way to handle the situation would probably to get our friend here to order the dragon to stand down.」

「Only option?」

「Yeah. Once we're done that, we can destroy the item boosting its defense before finally slaying it. We should be able to give you a hand with that last part if its rendered defenseless.」

With that decided, Fran, Mordred, and all the other adventurers present lugged Suarez up to the ship's deck. so he could order the dragon not to attack.

「It looks like we won't have any problems stopping the dragon, but destroying the defensive device it uses may need some more thought.」

「Leave to me. Can teleport.」

「Good point, that sounds like it'd be the best option. I'll leave destroying it up to you then.」

「Nn. Then will check on device once first. Easier to teleport to known locations.」

We could go back and forth between several locations with ease if we decided to drop a few beacons.

「Then leave that to you.」

By “that,” Fran had been referring to Suarez; she'd decided to leave him behind with Mordred.

「Yeah. Be careful.」

「Nn.」

With everything considered and out of the way, Fran set off towards the location Suarez had described to her.

258. No Rest For the Weary

Chapter 258. No Rest For the Weary

No Rest For the Weary

Fran and I navigated our way through the ship's interior, only to eventually stop ourselves in front of an average-looking wall. Nothing about it seemed out of the ordinary, but we were confident that it served as the entrance to the room that contained the device bolstering the water dragon's defenses. Suarez had given us a fairly thorough description when we asked him where we needed to go find it.

We investigated the wall by knocking on it a few times and confirmed that the space behind it did indeed seem hollowed out. The prince had told us exactly what we needed to do to access the room, and I'd memorized all the necessary steps, but we decided to circumvent the prince's ritual through the use of brute force. The method described to us had been far too complex; we simply didn't want to bother with it.

"Fmph."

Fran swung me several times and filled the wall with incisions before giving it a light kick. The cuts themselves had been so clean that they'd allowed the wooden surface to retain its form, but the force she'd applied with her foot had caused its now-unstable structure to collapse. The first thing we did as we stepped into the room was gaze upon the device within. I couldn't help but immediately think of the thing we saw as the product of eccentricity. I'd only ever seen one other device like it. It was a technological oddity, one made from the union of magic and machinery, a pair of clashing concepts.

The magical part, the device's core, was comprised of two smaller pieces: a giant crystal, and the sculpture that supported it. Though the crystal shone like a jewel, my eyes were more drawn to its base, a delicately crafted carving seemingly made out of bone.

The mechanical part, the device's shell, was installed to enclose both the crystalline core and the support that held it in place. Its shape almost seemed to resemble that of a sports car's engine; metallic pipes protruded from it in the same way as would a muffler.

All in all, the strange device looked like it'd come out of a game that mixed steampunk elements with more fantastical ones. In other words, it appeared to be the type of device one would discover in F*inal F*antasy, as opposed to something one would stumble across while playing Dr*gon Qu*st. Like the Algieba's propulsion device, it reminded me very much of heavy machinery even though I knew its functions were derived from a set of magical principles as opposed to the laws of physics.

"Mmph." Fran grunted as she felt a sudden wave of magical energy pulse through her body.

"Holy crap that thing's using up a ton of mana," I thought.

The room had been constructed in such a way that magical energy wouldn't escape it. We weren't able to feel the sheer amount of magical energy whirling around within it until we entered. The device was clearly very powerful; it would've been easy to detect had the room not been manaproofed.

Wait. What if we just took it instead? Destroying it seems like it'd be a waste of a perfectly good item. The water dragon would lose its buff even if I just shove it into my dimensional storage. There really isn't any reason not to take it, is there?

I settled on the idea of stealing the device, but decided to save working out the details for later.

"I'm going to want to take this thing for ourselves a bit later, but let's just drop a beacon and head back up to the deck for now."

"Nn." Fran acknowledged my suggestion, turned around, and got ready to leave.

She'd originally planned on walking her way back up to the deck, but her plans were thrown off the moment I finished setting up a beacon. The boat suddenly began violently shaking from left to right and back and forth at random.

"Earthquake...?" Fran muttered.

"Probably just feels that way because we're inside the ship. Something probably happened. Let's hurry back up to the deck."

"Nn!" She nodded.

Fran rushed to the deck, darting through the ship's swaying corridors and dashing up the stairs on her way. The sheer force with which the vessel continued to wobble throughout her journey seemed to indicate a major change in the status quo.

Upon arrival, we expected to see the water dragon flailing about, but we were instead greeted by a sight completely outside our expectations.

"T-The fuck is that!?"

"Big octopus legs?" Fran tilted her head in confusion.

"Wait! Fuck! Those are kraken tentacles!"

"Oh."

The catkin nodded as she observed the long, thick, wriggling tendrils. Several of the kraken's feelers had already wrapped themselves around the dragon, binding it and forcing it to be subject to the oversized octopuses' attacks.

"What!?" I groaned as I caught sight of our ship out of the corner of my eye. "Something totally busted up one of the Algieba's masts!"

"There you are!" Seeing that she'd emerged from the warship's interior, Mordred rushed over and filled Fran in on the status quo.

“What happened?” Again, she tilted her head in a questioning manner.

“Well, you see...”

He elaborated on the present state of affairs by describing what had been between when we left and when we returned.

Mordred brought Suarez over to the dragon so he could order it to stand down—exactly as we’d discussed ahead of time. Unfortunately, the prince had other ideas. Though we hadn’t the intention, Suarez had been concerned that we would execute him once he issued the order, so he’d told the water dragon that he wanted it to go on a rampage. Mordred immediately attempted to threaten him into rescinding the command, but he refused. No amount of pain or punishment was enough to force the over-dignified royal into submission.

Freed from its fetters, the water dragon loosed a breath attack towards the Algieba. It tore down one of the galleon’s masts and damaged its deck in the process. Our ship was sturdy enough to withstand the hit, but it wouldn’t last for long if the assault continued. Fortunately, and unfortunately, the dragon was attacked by a group of kraken right before it could launch a second projectile.

“Those, kraken?” Fran pointed at the mollusks, her tone filled with curiosity.

“A whole three of them.” Mordred frowned. “I guess you could say they technically saved our skins, but it looks like executing our old plan is out of the question. Let’s hold off on destroying the dragon’s augmentation device for now.”

“Got it.”

As always, Mordred’s judgement failed to disappoint. Water dragons were stronger than kraken—they would almost undoubtedly come out on top given a one versus one scenario—but the difference in strength was not nearly significant enough for the dragons to take on two kraken, let alone three. Our water dragon was currently faring quite well in combat, but only because its defenses had been bolstered. It seemed rather prone to perishing the moment the device supporting it was deactivated, especially given that it was already in the process of being attacked on all sides.

And if the water dragon died, the kraken would likely set their sights on the Algieba. Preserving it was undoubtedly in our best interest.

“Can’t just kill all?” Fran asked as she stared down all four monsters present

“I do think we can, but it’s probably not a good idea.” I muttered.

Both types of monsters were highly specialized hunters. The water dragon was highly offensive, and quite dextrous. The kraken had outstanding defenses, and they were known to regenerate. I was confident that we could defeat all four monsters regardless of their specialities so long as we used both Kanna Kamui and Black Lightning Advent, but doing so would leave us exhausted—and that was incredibly short sighted.

The area we were currently in was called the Kraken’s Nest. It was not only possible, but rather likely that kraken would continue attacking us even after we left the water dragon’s immediate vicinity, Draining ourselves was unwise.

“I’d say we should probably try to escape while the water dragon and kraken go at each other,” Mordred suggested.

“Got it. Return to Algieba?”

“Yeah. Could I get you move us over again? All our men are already standing by on deck and waiting for you.”

Mordred had clearly already considered our options and come to a conclusion before even prior to our return. Both the sailors and adventurers had already been organised so that they would be ready to depart at a moment’s notice.

All the adventurers were present and accounted for, but we had lost a few sailors in the exchange.

It's kind of unfortunate, but that's just how these things go. I contemplated. A melee was a type of messy skirmish. It just wasn't possible for everyone that participated in it to come out alive.

Putting the relatively depressing thought aside, I opened a Dimension Gate so the survivors could make their way back to the Algieba.

To be honest, I was disappointed. I really wanted to kill the water dragon. I wanted both its core and the materials we could loot off its corpse. I'd also really wanted to steal the device that bolstered its defenses, but it looked like I would have to give it all up. Fran's safety was much more important than any amount of material gain.

All the sailors and adventurers, Mordred aside, left through the portal, leaving Fran and the B ranker as the last two individuals remaining on the enemy's ship.

"Give me a second." He commanded. "I'll cast a spell to make it harder for them to chase us down."

"Doing what?"

"I can't do too much against monsters this strong, but I should at least be able to lock them down a bit."

Mordred pulled an elixir out from one of its pockets and swallowed its contents in a single gulp. Appraising the strange liquid allowed me to identify it as an item that drastically increased both one's proficiency in lava magic and overall magical prowess for several minutes.

"There goes a whole years worth of income," the B ranker grumbled.

"That expensive?"

"Yeah, but it's worth it. It's extremely effective and doesn't have any side effects."

Wait, just how much does a B ranker make in a year anyways? Hmm... Probably somewhere around three million a year, I guess? Wait, that potion costs three whole million? Shit! Though I guess it does kind of seem like it'd be worth it...

Consuming the potion had boosted Mordred's magical powers by a factor of five. He promptly took advantage of his strengthened abilities and cast a spell.

“Vulcan's Order!”

Both the ship's anchors floated from their respective positions over to Mordred. He manipulated the two 10 meter wide lumps of metal, melted them down and merged them to form a single, massive, steel serpent—a feat that would have been impossible had he not consumed an expensive potion.

The massive metallic snake abided his commands. It wrapped itself around both the oversized octopuses and the dragon they were assaulting and bound them as it hardened. Despite their size, the monsters were unable to escape. His spell locked them in place.

“Whew...” He relaxed his shoulders and heaved a sigh. “I've strengthened it as much as I could, but it won't last too long against monsters that powerful. Let's get out of here.”

“Okay.” Fran grabbed Suarez—who'd been rendered unconscious after refusing to listen to Mordred one too many times—and followed the more experienced adventurer through the portal and back onto the Algieba.

After passing through the gate, she turned around and gave us a bigger picture view of the whole kraken-dragon engagement. Frankly, it looked like a fight between several of the giant monsters you'd often see in P*wer R*ngers.

“Wow.” Fran stared at them as they struggled against one another and their newfound metal bindings.

“Any ship that gets caught up in that is bound to sink.” I mused.

Mordred’s spell had denied the water dragon the opportunity to chase us. We would, without a doubt, be able to open up some distance between it and us so we could escape.

“More.”

“Oh god, there’s even more!?” Fran’s statement caused me to panic.

Another Kraken appeared on the water dragon ship’s stern, seemingly attracted by the commotion.

“Man the sails! Full speed ahead, get us the ‘ell out of here immediately!” Jerome yelled.

“Master. There, look.”

“Wher—Oh shit. You have got to be kidding me.”

Only then did I realize that, by “more,” Fran hadn’t been referring to the kraken, but rather, the arrival of another sort of creature, one that looked like it’d come straight out of the realm of nightmares.

“Fran! Get the crew’s attention! Make sure it gets noticed!”

“Nn. Big enemy!” She quietly nodded and voiced her agreement before yelling in a voice loud enough for all the sailors to hear.

“Big...? Ohhhh fuck!”

“The hell is that thing!?”

“You’ve gotta be kidding me!”

“Shit, shit!”

“Oh come on!”

Their eyes widened as they caught sight of the creature she'd directed their attention towards.

“Well, no rest for the weary, I guess.” I grumbled as I examined the monster's features.

The grotesque critter was one that I recognized on sight, one I highly doubted I'd ever be able to forget.

Its body was covered in a thick layer skin made up of red mixed with a yellowish brown. Its head looked very much like that of a sea anemone's, but, with massive fangs lining the inside of its mouth.

A creature known as a parasite that plagued the ocean and leeches off of its life.

A midgard wyrm.

259. The Water Dragon's Demise

Chapter 259. The Water Dragon's Demise

The Water Dragon's Demise

The Midgard Wyrmling wriggled its body as it rapidly darted through the sea at an incredible speed.

Fortunately, the Algieba wasn't its target. It was instead headed straight for the water dragon warship, seemingly because it wanted to attack the monsters in its vicinity.

Or at least that was what I'd thought at first.

「Nn? Midgard wyrmling disappeared?」

『Did it dive out of view or something?』

Wait, wasn't it supposed to be heading straight towards the kraken and water dragon?

The midgard wyrmling resurfaced the moment I questioned its actions.

「Gyagogoggooooooooo!」

It attacked the still entwined dragon and kraken from directly below, a tactic likely derived from its instincts rather than its intellect.

The midgard wyrmling raised their bodies about 10m into the air as a testament to its brute strength before leaning itself on the water dragon warship. Unable to handle the monster's ridiculous weight, the symbol of Sheedran's might creaked and snapped it in two.

The resulting shockwave caused the ocean's tides to turn violent and rock the Algieba as would a heavy storm.

「Uwawawawa!」

「Don't fall into the sea!」

The midgard wyrm's sea anemone-like mouth once again emerged from the ocean with a water dragon's neck and several kraken tentacles hanging from its mouth.

「Kuooooon....」

The plesiosaurus-like monster, which normally would've had the might to decimate a large city, whimpered feebly. It was no longer capable of action.

「Gyoooooooooo!」

The midgard wyrm's proud cry echoed throughout the sea, as if to declare its victory.

「This is looking bad. Hurry the 'ell up, you bilge rats! We need to get outta here immediately!」

「Yessir!」

「Can we actually escape a midgard wyrm, Captain?」

「No clue. It's way faster than us, but we might be able to get away if it decides to attack some more kraken instead of chasing us down.」

Jerome's response to Mordred's question was grim.

Mydgard wyrms swallowed things whole, so they didn't have to stop to chew. In fact, eating didn't inhibit them from moving in any way which. They were known for consuming up everything in an area and then slowly digesting it all later.

Still, we would have more than enough time to get away if it first went after all the kraken and the pirates that'd fallen into the sea. But unfortunately, things weren't going to work out that conveniently for us.

「Looked this way.」

『It's heading for us cause our ship's bigger than pretty much anything else it can find it seems』

It swiveled its head around a bunch and examined its surroundings before finally looking back at us.

Following its instincts, it headed towards the biggest prey it could see, our ship.

It rapidly closed in on us.

「Black Lightning Princess! I need you to do us a favour!」

Jerome ran over to us. Behind him were several sailors carrying a huge barrel.

「What?」

「I need you to fly again, and dump this barrel somewhere off opposite the direction we're headed. It's filled with stuff midgard wyrms love, it should be attracted by its scent and stop chasing us.」

「Nn. Got it.」

「Thanks. Here's to hoping it actually works.」

The barrel was normally supposed to be used while before the wyrm got as close as it was, but Jerome hadn't had the chance to issue the order. He had been preoccupied by the water dragon/kraken fight. He didn't know how much effect it would have given the lack of distance, but he wanted to at least try gambling on it nonetheless.

『Alright, let's try dropping it.』

「Nn. Urushi, go.」

「Woof!」

Fran took the barrel, leapt on Urushi's back, and had him run straight behind the midgard wyrm before dropping the cylindrical, wooden casket into the sea. It broken open as it hit the water's surface and spilled its contents all over.

『Is it working?』

「Nn... No.」

『Tsk.』

The red, yellow and brown abomination was more attracted to the Algieba than the stuff it apparently loved due to the ship's proximity. And as such, it continued to rush the ship down.

Looking at the wyrm from our angle really emphasized its size. The goddamn thing was massive.

『What about getting its attention by attacking it?』

「Nn! Thunderbolt.」

「Groooooowl!」

『Flare Blast!』

We fired spells at the midgard wyrm's exposed back so we could draw its attention away from the ship. I figured that, if we were lucky, we'd be able to draw its attention to the barrel—but we weren't.

『Damn it! It's totally ignoring us!』

It was too big. Our weaker strikes were too insignificant for it to note.

『How about this then!? Thor's Hammer!』

A thunderbolt struck the midgard wyrm dead on and caused an explosion, but not even that was enough to stop the creature's charge. It cared much more about eating than it did our attacks.

(Master, what now?)

『Well... Honestly, our only hope at getting its attention is probably going to be getting between it and the ship. Looks like it's either sink or swim.』

Fighting the midgard wyrm head on was our only choice. I wasn't confident we could beat it, but we didn't need to. We just needed to hit it hard enough to stop it in its tracks.

We went back to the ship and its captain that we were going to hit the monster really hard. We also made sure they were aware that Fran would end up exhausted thereafter. She wouldn't be able to fight anymore.

「Don't be ridiculous! There's no way you could beat a midgard wyrm, is there!?!」

Jerome was shocked by the suggestion.

「Might at least slow down.」

「I guess you're right... Our only choice is to leave it up to you.」

「No problem.」

「Make sure you come back in one piece, alright?」

「To adventurers, own life most important」

「Gahahaha! Good point. Then do your best. Show that thing hell.」

「Nn!」

The task entrusted to us was a simple one. All we had to do was put all our power into one attack and blast it right at the midgard wyrm before retreating.

『Urushi, focus all your efforts in making sure Fran stays safe on her way back, alright?』

「Woof.」

And if worse comes to worst, I'll think of something and hopefully handle the situation myself. But enough of that for now. I'll cross that bridge when I get to it.

260. The Legendary Monster

Chapter 260. The Legendary Monster

The Legendary Monster

『Alright, let's do this!』

「Nn! Awakening.」

Fran awakened as she looked down at the midgard wyrm from Urushi's back. She went full throttle right off the bat and immediately activated Brilliant Lightning Rush.

The electricity radiating off her body caused Urushi's fur to stand on end.

『Let's start by provoking it and making it raise its head.』

「Got it.」

「Woof.」

『And when it opens its mouth, we hit it with everything we've got.』

「Nn! Urushi.」

「Woof woof!」

Urushi slowed down, bravely placed himself right in front of the midgard wyrm, and fired several spells at the creature's submerged head.

『Leave attacking it while it's still underwater to me.』

Urushi's attacks weren't having too much of an effect, so I asked him to relinquish his role as an attacker for the time being.

Taking his place, I dove underwater. I made a beeline for its face and started blasting it with lightning and explosions.

It ignored the first strike, but the second and third ticked it off enough for it to start to twitch.

『Alright, this should do the trick.』

I threw in a telekinetic catapult just for good measure and charged straight at the monster's head. I didn't expect it to do too much damage given the amount I was being slowed by the water resistance, but for some odd reason, the attack managed to get a huge reaction out of the midgard wyrm. It stopped moving and loosed a loud roar the moment it got hit.

「Gyobobobobooo!」

The sea stirred. The massive shockwave spawned from its bellow caused the ocean's waves to violently rock through my surroundings.

『Woah!?!』

I didn't take any damage from the shockwave, but it sure as hell fucked me up. The resulting water pulses knocked me around and disoriented me to the point where I couldn't tell up from down.

I was surprised. It seemed really mad, and I didn't understand why. The telekinetic catapult's damage shouldn't have differed much from my spells'.

After hurrying back to Fran, I realized that the wyrm was totally locked onto us. It raised its head out of the water and stared us down with its neck curved like a goose's. Though its face lacked eyes, I could tell it was giving us a hateful glare. It wanted to kill us so badly that its body had started radiating pure enmity.

「Did something?」

『Dunno. It suddenly got all pissed right after I hit it with a telekinetic catapult.』

「Remembered last fight?」

『Last fight?』

「Nn? Last time, blasted face off with telekinetic catapult.」

『Wait, that's the same one we fought last time?』

「Nn.」

The monster had higher hp than it did last time we saw it, and I'd known that it was possible for the midgard wyrm to grow infinitely, but I'd still presumed it a different individual.

Fran, however, was somehow able to tell that it was the exact same individual. Maybe it's just a beastkin thing?

But that would mean that this wyrm's the exact same one we fed all the monoliths.

『So it remembered me even though it's dumb as a single celled organism?』

Does it not forget grudges? Oh well, it's not the only one that still wanted to fight. It was time for us to show it just how much we'd grown since our last conflict, even if we had to end up running away.

It tried chasing Urushi down, but it was far too big to catch him. He could easily slip somewhere it was harder for the massive creature to reach.

The act of him running around bought me enough time to get my spell ready.

『I'm good to go, Fran.』

「Nn!」

We struck the moment it tried to attack Urushi, and launched our attacks straight into its mouth.

『Now! Kanna Kamuiiiii!』

「Haaaah! Black Lightning Advent!」

My spell, a dragon made of pure white lightning, mixed with Fran's, a burst of jet black lightning, and flew straight into the wyrm's interior.

I used the sorcery skill to put 80% of the mp I had left into the attack and hit the midgard wyrm with the most powerful Kanna Kamui we'd ever used to date. Likewise, Fran had also poured every last bit of her mana into her black thunderbolts.

The wyrm's head exploded into a million pieces. Blood and flesh, its body parts, flew all over the place and fell around us like pieces of a deflated balloon. The explosion had been huge; it covered an area 50 meters in diameter.

It caused waves to pour through the ocean and crash into the Algieba. I quickly turned towards the ship out of concern to check on it, and breathed a sigh of relief after confirming it was still fine.

The only reason it didn't get capsized was because the wyrm's thick ass body had absorbed most of the impact. In a sense, one could say that the wyrm had actually stopped the ship from flipping over.

Speaking of which, the wyrm itself was a terrible sight to behold. A third of its body was flat out missing. Serpent and centipede type monsters were known for their vitality, but the wound was so bad it looked like it would've been more than fatal for any normal member of either of the two aforementioned types.

But the midgard wyrm was an A ranked magic beast, a creature far outside the realm of human imagination. Though its defenses were lackluster, the injury we'd given it was far from fatal.

It still had over two thirds of its max health, and it was already started to rapidly regenerate.

『Fuck, that thing's a monster. But we at least managed to slo—oh shit.』

「Not... good...」

Wait, what the fuck!? That thing's headed for the Algieba even though it doesn't have a head!? How is it already moving!? Aren't you normally supposed to wait for your missing body part to regenerate before you start doing shit again!?

Is its brain not in its head, or does it have multiple, like how it has a bunch of different hearts? Wait, does it even have a brain in the first place?

Fuck! Thinking about this shit is just a huge waste of time!

『Urushi, get in front of it again!』

「Woof!」

The only choice I had was use the rest of mana to hit it with another Kanna Kamui. And if that didn't stop it, I'd have no choice but to use my real trump card.

『Yeah. I'll be fine. You can sit back and rest for now.』

「Nn.」

I left Fran to Urushi and leapt off so I could focus on casting my spell. I wasn't expecting it to do much, I didn't have enough mana.

『I really want to avoid using Latent Potential Release unless I really have to.』

Things were looking pretty grim. I was probably going to have to have to use it in the end—or at least that was what I thought was going to happen.

『Huh?』

The situation suddenly took an unexpected turn.

I felt a powerful, imposing presence. It was several kilometers away, but it was incredibly overbearing nonetheless. The speed at which the thing came at us was incredible. It looked like it was somewhere around the 500 km/h range.

『Fuck, that thing's huge!』

There was no other way to put it. The only part I could see was the part sticking out of the water, the thing I presumed to be its dorsal fin. That alone was already 20 meters high and 100 long. I was certain that the thing coming at us was some sort of monster.

『Urushi, get the hell out of here!』

「W-Woof!」

Retreating, I returned to Fran's side. Urushi was terrified; he was trembling with his tail between his legs. Fortunately, he still somehow managed to move his way back over to the Algieba.

「Master, that, what?」

『No idea. Appraisal won't work because I can only see its fin.』

That said, I had more than enough information to guess. Its aura carried way more magical energy than the midgard wyrms. It was clearly a monster even more powerful than the one we'd just fought.

「Master, that.」

『I knew it!』

The mystery monster rushed the midgard wyrm and attacked it.

「Gaaaaaooooooooooooooooooooo!」

It drove its fangs into the midgard wyrms body and lifted it, and in doing so, showcased its 100m long neck. It was adored from head to tail in beautiful scales, like a kingfisher. I couldn't help but feel that it both resembled a dragon and a sort of serpent.

『Haaaah...hahahaha』

Appraising caused me to break into laughter. There simply wasn't anything for me to do but laugh. It was so strong I couldn't even see its skills. It was a veritable S ranked monster, a ridiculously overpowered creature capable of destroying the entire world if it wished to.

Just appraising it had completely drained me of the will to fight.

I immediately began to think of the worst case scenario, and what I needed to do. If the Leviathan attacked, then my only choice would be to abandon the Algieba and focus on preserving Fran.

I would have to teleport us away the moment it showed even the slightest sign of aggression.

Right as I started working out the details, the leviathan looked at us—but its eyes lacked even the slightest semblance of hostility.

Its gaze instead seemed to momentarily reflect a sense of amusement, as if it was entertained. The impression only seemed to last for a second, so I wrote it off as just my imagination. Me hoping it wouldn't antagonize us seemed to have led to a delusion of sorts.

Either way, the leviathan ended up leaving; it turned around and nonchalantly carried off the midgard wyrm despite its desperate struggles to break free of the more powerful monster's grasp.

『It looks like... it let us off the hook...?』

「Nn...」

「Whimper...」

261. Returning to the Ship

Chapter 261. Returning to the Ship

Returning to the Ship

Though the leviathan, the Divine Beast, had saved us, it'd also kind created its own sort of trouble for the sole reason that encountering it was nothing short of extraordinary. Upon returning to the ship, we'd realized that everyone had totally lost their wits.

Some had spaced out, whereas others had started smiling like idiots. There was even a group that'd started to offer the heavens their prayers.

Like basically everyone else, Jerome and his first mate had been unable to respond in their usual manners. Instead, they'd started laughing dryly.

I was honestly impressed that the Algieba was still upright and floating. The crew's current state seemed to indicate that it should've already capsized, especially given what'd just happened. The leviathan was huge, so massive waves accompanying its advent were only a given——Except they weren't.

It somehow managed to avoid disturbing the ocean and creating waves despite its massive size.

Does that mean it was trying to avoid capsizing the Algieba? Nah, no way, right? It was probably just coincidentally using something that let it swim faster through the reduction of water resistance or something.

Mordred, Jerome, and Buphett regained their senses in that order, mostly because that was the order Fran decided to lightly shake them in.

Despite being known for his calmness and rationality, he was panicked. The event had shocked him enough to make him start shouting hysterically the moment he finally regained his capacity of speech.

“Shit! I just sweat enough cold sweat for a whole goddamn lifetime. I’m surprised my heart didn’t stop. Holy fuck, that was absolutely terrifying. I think I’m not going to accept any boat related escort jobs for a good while!” Mordred screamed.

We ran into a water dragon, some kraken, a midgard wrym, and then the S ranked leviathan to top it all off. We had a total of four different encounters in a matter of moments. Each one of the four groups of creatures was powerful enough to cause instant death, and hence, we’d ended up getting swept into a series of fierce battles. It’d been far too much to take in, even for Mordred. The experienced adventurer had been reduced to a terrified mess.

“Dude. Woah. Shit. Did ya see that thing? Did ya!?” Jerome, on the other hand, was excited as all hell. He was leaning over the ship’s edge and staring off in the direction the leviathan had went.

“Aye, captain... But I do have to say, I never did imagine we’d see it around these parts...” Buphett commented. “Wait, what if...”

Unlike the other two, Buphett’s state was more akin to one of suspicion. He’d already moved on to questioning the leviathan’s motives.

“Leviathan, wasn’t supposed to only show up in demonic ocean?” Fran directed her question towards Jerome, as his state of mind had seemed much more sound than that of anyone else present.

Man, that thing was god damned massive. It would’ve have measured somewhere in the 100m range even if you only looked everything from the base of its neck up till the tip of its nose. Its head alone seemed to be about 40-50m tall. I didn’t see how it could’ve possibly even fit around these parts. The deepest areas apparently only go 300m down, meaning there are likely many spots with a depth of 100m or less.

Given its size, the leviathan most likely would have ended up scraping itself around the ocean floor as it moved about.

“That’s how it’s always been in the past, but the past and the present are clearly two completely different things. S’t true that it’s only ever been seen in the demonic sea, but, that ain’t enough evidence for us to say that it’ll never show up anywhere else. The thing’s a goddamn legend. Ain’t no way for us humans to understand everything ’bout it,” Jerome shrugged.

Yeah, makes sense. There isn’t any reason for it not to leave its nest to hunt and what not, especially seeing as how it literally just did exactly that.

There was no reason for the leviathan to stay in a small, confined area given its speed. There seemed to be a good chance that it just so happened to have only been sighted in the demonic sea, and that it was actually moving around and going wherever it wanted while remaining under water all the time.

“Alrighty, now that that’s over with, we should probably get the ‘ell out of ‘ere,” the captain quickly recovered and got back on task.

“That seems like quite a good idea. All the kraken have fled due to their fear of the leviathan, so we’ve got ourselves just the chance we need.” Likewise, his first mate also refocused himself on a more current set of priorities.

The kraken were no match for the midgard wurm or leviathan, so they’d all long escaped the area. Likewise, the pirates we’d cast into the ocean were also nowhere to be seen. They’d all either been dragged off by kraken, swallowed by the sea serpent, or simply caught in the massive waves that resulted from the creatures’ advent and washed away.

“So what are we going to do with him?” The first thing Mordred did after regaining his wits was kicking the prisoner rolling around at his feet. Suarez just happened to have gotten brought back to the Algieba because that was simply the most natural flow of things. He was still unconscious, mostly due to all the pain Mordred had inflicted on him while trying to get him to fold.

“What do you say to randomly dumping him somewhere?” He commented while giving the man another kick.

There isn't really any point in keeping him alive much longer seeing as how the dragon is already gone and whatnot, but, he is still royalty, so keeping him alive might present us with some sort of merit.

He could be used as a sort of bargaining chip, but at the same time, it was also possible for him to end up functioning to ignite some sort of political conflict. There was no way for us to know the consequences of our actions for sure, so we instead chose to leave the decision in a more qualified person's hands. That is, we had Jerome, a man officially sanctioned by the Beastkin's country, make the final call.

"Hmm... I'd say we'd best keep 'im in the ship's hold for now,"

"Aye, captain, I agree, especially seeing as how he might even have some sort of bounty on his head," Buphett added.

"You don't say. Stealing one of those Water Dragon Warships is a surefire way to earn a country's ire," the captain smirked.

A part of me had thought that it might've ended up being some sort of gift, but apparently that was definitely not the case. Every Water Dragon Warship was a vital part of the country's forces. Having one rampage about was prone to leading to diplomatic problems.

In other words, there was no way Suarez had any claim to the ship he'd been in possession of.

"It'd be much more convenient for us to get rid of 'im, but I'd say he's got enough use to keep around," Jerome grumbled.

With that, Suarez' fate was decided. Mordred took him in the hold and organised the adventurers so they could keep watch.

"How are you feeling, princess?"

With all urgent business dealt with, Jerome turned back towards Fran and asked her about her condition.

"She looks quite exhausted to me," his first mate commented.

“Nn... Body feels heavy.”

The Black Lightning Advent Fran put all her power into had drained her of most of her stamina and magic. She could still walk, but she lacked the ability to engage in any sort of serious conflict.

“I would expect so, seeing the amount of power behind the attack you launched. I doubt you’ll be able to perform too well in combat given your current state, so please do get back to your room and get some rest.”
Buphett dismissed her from her duties so she could heal up and be ready for any battles to come going forward.

“Nn. Will do.”

We decided to have Urushi guard the deck in Fran’s place while she rested. He and Mordred would probably be more than enough to handle any magic beasts that came the ship’s way while Fran was out of commision.

“We’re counting on you Urushi.”

“Do best.”

“Woof!”

262. Greyseal

Chapter 262. Greyseal

Greyseal

Two days had passed since we'd run into the Leviathan and nearly met our demises.

"Drop the anchors!" Jerome shouted.

"Aye aye captain!"

"One of you is going to need to run over to the magistrate's office. We've a serious political situation on our hands, one involving royalty," Buphett noted as the crew began getting to work.

"Yes sir!" One of the sailors immediately responded and began running an errand as per his instructions.

The Algieba managed to safely reach Chrom. More specifically, it found itself currently docked in the port of a seaside city named Greyseal. Both the city and the port were about a whole size smaller than Barbra's, but still of a respectable scale nonetheless.

All the adventurers had already gotten off the ship after receiving a hefty bonus. The total number of battles we engaged in was on the relatively low side, but they rewarded us handsomely nonetheless given the whole midgard wrym incident. Fran in particular had been paid a whole hundred thousand golde.

With her duties completed and renumerations rewarded, she, like all the other adventurers, had gotten off the ship. She was currently standing in front of it, saying her goodbyes to her three apprentices.

"Thank you very much, Ms. Fran."

"You taught us a whole lot."

“We’ll do our best to make sure we keep training ourselves hard! We’ll get strong enough to impress you next time we see each other!”

Naria, Miguel and Liddick responded in their usual ways as they got ready to leave, to which Fran responded with a simple “Nn.”

“Good bye!”

“Later!”

“Farewell!”

Their training had only lasted a few days, but it seemed to have been impactful nonetheless, as the three all seemed to have taken her teachings quite seriously. Fran had tried her best to play the role of an instructor as well, albeit seemingly because she wanted to kill time. I couldn’t tell whether or not she really thought of them as her apprentices. She didn’t seem reluctant to part with them, and I wasn’t even really sure whether she ever ended up remembering their names.

“We should probably heat out too.”

“Miguel, Naria, Liddick,” I many doubts about her stance on the matter, but Fran struck them all down before I even so much as had a chance to voice them by calling out to her three apprentices in turn.

“Huh?” Miguel’s jaw dropped.

“Teach just called us by our names!? That has to be the first time she’s ever done that!”

“D-Does that mean she’s acknowledged us?” Likewise, Naria and Liddick also responded with their voices filled by surprise.

“See ya.”

“See ya, teach!”

All three immediately responded in loud, clear voices.

Satisfied, Fran turned around and began to move without so much as even showing any sign of turning back.

“So you actually did end up memorizing their names?”

“Nn. Because apprentices.”

Fran’s response made it clear that she’d taken from the experience and matured, even if only a bit. As her guardian, I was overjoyed, both because she’d grown up and because a part of me empathized with her disciples. She’d reciprocated their emotions; their efforts hadn’t been in vain.

The first place Fran decided to head towards was the guild so she could pick up the request’s standard reward. She didn’t know where it was though, so she had Mordred and his buddies show her over.

“It should be right over there,” Mordred gestured towards the guild as it came into sight.

“Huge.”

“That’d be because Greyseal is a pretty big city.”

Greyseal’s guild wasn’t too far away from its port. The building was quite large, as per Fran’s description. Apparently, it was relatively influential because it was frequented by adventurers that liked picking up ship-related escort tasks.

Upon entering, we found ourselves staring down a bar with a large number of adventurers hanging around it. Some seemed to gaze upon Fran in one of many unrespectful ways, but quickly averted their eyes once they saw Mordred enter right behind her.

Being a B ranker, Mordred was quite well known, even in Greyseal. There weren’t any adventurers dumb enough to mess with anyone accompanying him.

Fran was both a cute child and a Black Catkin, so I expected a few people to try messing with her, but fortunately, it didn't look like we would need to bother this time around. Though no one tried to explicitly attack her, that didn't actually mean we didn't have to deal with any sort of annoyances. A bearded, lazy looking middle aged man that seemed a bit too thin to be an adventurer waded through the crowd and approached us.

My immediate thought was that we were going to have to deal with him and whatever idiocy he would pull, but I was well off the mark.

“That’s a cute girl you found there Mordred. Is she travelling with you?”
The lanky looking man grinned as he spoke in a teasing tone.

“Oh, hey Leroy. You’re a bit off the mark this time. She and I just happened to be escorting the same ship. It was her first time in Greyseal, so I lended her a hand and showed her over to the guild.”

“Huh. Well, I guess I’d better introduce myself then. The name’s Leroy, I work as an adventurer around these parts.”

“He’s only a D ranker, but he’s got great memory, so he can come in handy. I’ve often asked him for help so I could work around these parts without needing a map,” Mordred nodded as he affirmed the other man’s usefulness.

The fact that even Mordred asked him for help made me understand that Leroy was a respectable adventurer in his own right even though he didn’t look the part.

“Nn. C ranker, Fran.” The catgirl named herself curtly.

“You’re a C ranker at that age!? I could tell that you were pretty strong, but god damn!” Leroy’s eyes opened wide in response to Fran’s introduction, a reaction that caused Mordred to put on a bit of a wry smile and look at Leroy with an almost pitying gaze. He’d only just called Fran out the other day for being way stronger than was justified for a C ranker.

“I think you might want to change the way you introduce yourself, Fran,” he suggested.

“Why? Not lying.”

“That’s true, but I think you should at least make sure you mention that you’re the Black Lightning Princess.”

“What? She’s the Black Lightning Princess everyone’s been talking about lately?”

“That she is, friend.”

“That would mean she’s way stronger than me... Man, and her rank made me think we weren’t all that different in terms of our combat ability too...”
Leroy was completely taken aback by Fran’s identity.

It seemed that information about Fran had already made its way to Greyseal through the merchants given Leroy’s reaction and willingness to accept Fran’s identity. Mordred, once again, had voiced a really good point that proved his judgement solid. Fran would be able to stop people from looking down on her so long as she revealed a bit more about herself.

There was, however, a certain risk related to Mordred’s suggestion. Anyone that had yet to hear about Fran’s exploits would likely think her an idiot with a self proclaimed identity. I wouldn’t be able to stand for someone making fun of her as a result.

For that reason, we decided to stick with the C ranker thing for the time being.

“You serious!?”

“That’s the Black Lightning Princess?”

“Wait, the Black Lightning Princess is here!? Where!?”

“Damn!”

“Y-Yo, you serious?”

It seemed that all the adventurers present had heard of her, as they immediately began kicking up a huge fuss. Some stood up in order to get a better look at Fran, while others let their curiosity get so out of control that they approached despite the heavy aura Mordred was giving off.

The reaction we got out of making Fran's identity public was even bigger than the one we'd gotten back in Barbra. Upon further observation, I realized that over 90% of the adventurers were beastkin, and that the beastkin were much more curious about Fran than I'd initially thought. Though their interests were far outside my expectations, I did at least understand them. Black Catkin weren't supposed to be able to evolve, but Fran had done it nonetheless. But more importantly, she had defeated Goldalfa, a veritable hero that all of the country's citizens knew.

"Did that little girl really manage to beat Goldalfa?"

"That's what they say. It's probably true too, seein' as how the info came from a merchant sanctioned by the crown."

"Must've been because he let her win though, right?"

"Huh, you've got a point. It might be one of those public appearance things."

"Are you guys stupid? We're talking about Goldalfa here, there's no way he'd ever do that."

"Yeah man, there's no way Goldalfa would just fork over a win, especially not to a kid. That'd tarnish his reputation."

"Exactly. You all know he's not the type to pull his punches."

"And you've gotta consider this. It wasn't a spar either. I could see him holding back if it was a spar, but Barbra's tournament lets its participants fight for real, so he must've been going all out."

A fair number of the adventurers seemed to think that Goldalfa had allowed Fran to beat him. I couldn't really refute their sentiments. It was quite hard to believe unless you were actually there.

People continued to stare at Fran even as she turned in her quest.

“And she’s really evolved too.”

“I know, right?」

“How the hell did she manage that?”

“I remember the merchants saying something about killing evil beings. I don’t remember the details though, ’cause I thought it was bullshit at the time.”

We’d long turned Evolution Concealment off so we could spread the idea that Black Catkin were indeed capable of evolution.

The merchants and nobles had already started to spread the method we told the Beast Lord. People would probably start believing it once we went around and showed off that Fran really had evolved.

Gazes continued to follow Fran all the way up to the moment she finally left.

“Alright, let’s find ourselves a place to spend the night and figure out how we’re supposed to get to the capital.”

“Nn.”

263. The Horned Carriage Association

Chapter 263. The Horned Carriage Association

The Horned Carriage Association

Translation: SupremeTentacle

Editor: SupremeTentacle (Want your name here? Volunteer today and get TSKD chapters out more quickly! Poke me on discord for details.)

We found ourselves wandering around the suburbs not too long after we booked ourselves a place to stay the night. The original plan was for us to head back to the guild so we could figure out what we needed to in order to get back to the capital, but speaking with the lady running the inn we chose had caused us to change our minds.

The innkeeper was a businessman with a whole plethora of connections. The combination of the information she'd gotten from her peers and her instincts as a beastkin had immediately allowed her to identify Fran the moment she walked through the door. As a result, she'd treated Fran with as much fidelity as she could possibly manage. That is, she offered the best room she had for an extremely discounted price.

She then went onto declare that she would treat the form Fran filled out as a family heirloom before hearing out our plans and giving us a bit of advice.

It was precisely her advise that led us to our current destination.

"That?" Fran tilted her head as she pointed to a building that seemed to match what what the innkeeper had described to her.

"I think so. The roof's blue, and structure makes it look kinda like a barn. It's pretty much a perfect match."

Approaching the building a bit more confirmed that it was the exact one we were looking for; the sign hanging outside it labeled it as a branch of the Horned Carriage Association.

“Welcome,” a calm, collected woman in her twenties called out to us as we entered the building. She looked quite similar to the type of girl one would often find working at the Adventurers’ Guild, with the sole difference being that her uniform had been swapped out for another.

Unlike the innkeeper we met earlier, the association’s receptionist was human, so she didn’t immediately identify Fran. Many of the people we’d met along the way, however, did. Most of the people she walked by totally frozen the moment they realized she was what she was. Even those that had yet to hear about the Black Lightning Princess ended up stopping and staring the moment they realized that she was an evolved Black Catkin.

Some of the older men that saw her had been shocked so far out of their wits that they started worshipping her on the spot. All in all, she was treated kinda like the type of mythical creature that would bless all that managed to spot it with happiness — basically every beastkin she came across would stop in their tracks just to get a good look at her.

“Want information,” Fran got to business and began questioning the clerk as I recalled the events that’d just transpired.

“Might this be your first time riding a horned carriage?”

“Nn.”

The receptionist gave us a quick overview and explained the services the Horned Carriage association offered. Simply put, they basically provided a transportation service. They rented out carriages pulled by Dual Horns, rhino-like monsters with high speed and endurance. They took very few breaks, so they were able to get places roughly twice as quickly as horses could. They themselves were considered F ranked monsters, so they could also function to scare off thieves and other weaker potential assailants.

“ I see,” Fran nodded.

“Here are the prices,” the receptionist showed Fran a piece of paper with a whole bunch of numbers written all over it. The fees seemed to vary based off of two main factors. The first was whether or not one was willing to share a carriage with other passengers. The second had to do with the amount of distance traveled.

“Want to go to capital.”

“Your destination is Vestia then?” The receptionist pointed towards the fees written on the page and paused for a moment before continuing. “In that case, the fee will be 40,000 golde if you’re willing to ride with other passengers, or 120,000 golde if you’d like to reserve a carriage for yourself. The trip should take a total of around 10 days.”

“Expensive.” Fran’s one word comment referred to more than just the cash cost. She also meant that the trip would eat up far too much of our time. Seeing that Fran seemed rather confused, the receptionist showed her a map and began to explain the circumstances.

“This is where Greyseal is on the map. Vestia is right over here, to its west.”

“Not that far?”

Greyseal was on Chrom’s eastern coast. Vestia seemed like it was just a little to the west of it. I wasn’t able to make any definitive conclusions seeing as how the map was missing a scale, but it didn’t really look like it would take 10 days nonetheless to move between the two relatively close points nonetheless.

Being an experienced as she was, the receptionist addressed all my concerns before I even voiced them.

“The straight line distance between the two cities isn’t too far, but you see this green patch?” She moved her finger over to the large green area right between Greyseal and Vestia.

“Scorpion Lion Forest?” Fran read the words aloud.

“Exactly. The Scorpion Lion Forest is area designated as a C ranked haunt. Manticores, C ranked monsters, are known to live within it.”

Oh, so that’s why people avoid going straight through the forest.

There wasn't any way the average person was going to be able to somehow manage to make their way through a C ranked haunt.

"The forest extends quite far, both to the north and to the south. The carriages have to go a rather long ways to loop around it," the receptionist explained.

"No places to pass through?"

"It isn't possible for a regular person, more skilled adventurers are known able to do it."

"I'm an adventurer."

"It does appear that way, but I don't advise trying on your own."

The receptionist was a really nice person. She seemed to think that Fran was a brand new adventurer, but she didn't immediately shoot her down rudely, and instead phrased her statement in such a way to avoid injuring Fran's pride. Moreover, she didn't question whether or not Fran could afford a carriage ride, and simply continued to attentively answer all her questions regardless.

"Most adventurers setting off from Greyseal prefer passing through Argentlapn instead. The town's fairly close to where the Scorpion Lion Forest is at its thinnest. You might be able to find yourself a party that's looking to get through if you head over."

In other words, we had two choices. The first was to loop around the Scorpion Lion forest by taking a huge detour. The second was to pass through it by heading over to Argentlapn. The haunt was apparently only ranked in at C. It likely wouldn't give us too much trouble, so we would probably be much better off breaking through it..

That said, getting to Argentlapn was still a task in and of itself. The map made it seem like we could reach it so long as we headed in a south-westerly direction, but it probably wouldn't be that simple in reality. The route undoubtedly had its own ups and downs, ones that a mere map wasn't capable of illustrating.

"How much to Argentlapn?"

"It should take about a day. The cost is 3000 golde if you're willing to ride with other people and 9000 if you want a private carriage."

"Riding a Horned Carriage sounds like a pretty good idea as far as I'm concerned. It'll be much more difficult for us to get lost if we get ourselves one."

"Agreed," Fran responded telepathically.

We'd been curious about horned carriages to begin with, so we ended up booking one that would set out first thing tomorrow morning. We spent a good bit of time debating whether or not we wanted to ride a public carriage or rent one out ourselves and ultimately ended up choosing the first option over the second. Publicity was important, and riding with other people was a pretty good way to advertise Fran's status as an evolved Black Catkin.

"Do you have anything to serve as identification?"

"Adventurer's Guild card okay?"

"Of course."

"Then here."

"Thank yooouwahat! You're a C ranker!? Really!?" The receptionist's eyes widened as she looked over Fran's guild card. She flipped it over several times and examined it from all different angles before finally confirming its authenticity by scanning it with a sort of crystalline device.

"It's... the real thing?" She was clearly taken aback and impressed by Fran's ability.

"Nn. Real."

“R-Right! I should give this back to you. I’m terribly sorry if I came off as rude.”

“No problem.”

“So I hope you don’t mind, but there’s something I’d like you ask you, seeing as how you’re a C ranked adventurer.”

“Nn,” Fran prompted the receptionist to continue with a nod.

“To be honest, we’re in need of escorts. We can’t seem to find enough to fill all our positions, so Would you be okay with being a guard rather than a passenger? You’re a C ranker, so we’d be willing to give you a 50% discount if you’re willing to accept.”

“Why not enough? City has lots of adventurers.”

“Most of this city’s adventurers focus primarily on escorting ships. That’s all the more true right now given the current state of international affairs.”

“Meaning?” Fran tilted her head in confusion.

“Oh, did you perhaps come to Greyseal by sea?”

“Nn.”

“Things have started to get a bit tense between us and the neighbouring country, in part because the king’s currently off abroad. Most of the soldiers have been assigned to the border. Very few have been left to perform the usual patrols.”

The lack of soldiers led to a proportional increase in the number of thieves and monsters. Many of the adventurers that normally worked escort jobs were busy exterminating all the vermin that’d arisen due to the lapse in the usual military presence.

“War going to happen?”

“I doubt it given the agreements our country has with the Kingdom of Bashar, but tensions are rising nonetheless. That would in part because the Basharians don’t really quite like Beastkin.”

At present, the beastkin’s country was relatively free of discrimination. It was a peaceful, relatively accepting country. However, it hadn’t always been that way in the past. Beastkin used to hold many social advantages. Most other races were discriminated against, and even oppressed if one was to go further back in time.

Bashar was a kingdom comprised precisely of these discriminated people. It was originally established by a group that had either escaped from or been driven out of the Beastkin’s country. To that end, the Basharians hated the beastkin. They instead advocated human supremacy and ensured that humans were given more leverage and opportunities.

“As human, Bashar’s past makes me feel ashamed. The country used to proclaim that humans were the ultimate race and that beastkin were just inferior beings meant to be treated as slaves.”

“Explained using past tense. Different now?”

“The royal family’s non-extremist faction came into approximately a hundred years ago. Though the two countries have yet to get along, the basharians have become much more tolerant of our country than ever before.”

Unfortunately, the two countries were still keeping an eye on each other. The Beastkin’s Country recognized that they were currently in a state that made it so that the Basharians wouldn’t actually be able to do much against them, especially with the king being as strong as he was, but they still couldn’t help but have their soldiers gather up upon learning that the Basharians had done the same—even though the Basharians had declared that they were only using their military might to clear a dungeon.

“And that’s why we’re a bit short on hands at the moment,” the receptionist concluded. “Would you be willing to take up the job and help us out?”

The 4.5k golde we would save was honestly just chump change for us, but the request was one that would officially go through the Adventurer's Guild and add to our credit, so we figured there wasn't really anything to lose."

"Will accept escort job to Argentlappn."

"That's great," the receptionist smiled. "Is 6 in the morning a good time for you?"

"Nn. No problem."

"Then we'll see you then."

Woo. Transportation get.

"Alright. I guess we can just kick back and relax until tomorrow."

"First, eat all local specialities."

"There's local specialities around here?"

"Saw on sign just now."

"You've always been quick to notice that kind of stuff... But alright, let's go check it out."

"Nn!"

The horned carriage we were riding in rattled as it travelled down the highway at a pace a horse-pulled vehicle could never match. Its destination was, of course, Argentlaphn, the town closest to the Scorpion Lion Woods' most traversable subsection. Although we were working as guards, we were basically acting in the same manner as would any other passenger. We wouldn't need to do anything unless we were subject to an attack.

A calm atmosphere filled the carriage's interior. It was a strange mix, one that was somehow both relaxing and festive at the same time.

"Would you like a snack, milady?" One of the passengers handed Fran a treat.

"Thanks," Fran gratefully accepted with a nod.

A second and third passenger soon imitated the first and offered Fran a couple treats, which again, she accepted. Her acknowledgement of their offerings caused the other passengers aboard the carriage to react with joy. Speaking of the other passengers, most of them were older, unevolved individuals well past their prime. It was precisely this status of theirs that caused them to view her as an idol to worship and pay her a near superfluous amount of respect. The fact that she was a black catkin, a member of a tribe known not to evolve, only amplified the admiration they held for her all the more.

In other words, the festive mood had stemmed from Fran's presence. She was being celebrated for allowing the older beastkin to breathe the same air as her. That said, they had given her too many offerings for her to hold; the many snacks presented to her ended up getting laid out in front of her.

The older individuals weren't the only ones aboard the coach. Some of the grandchildren were too. One would normally expect children to look upon the mound of snacks with greed or envy, but they weren't. Like their grandparents, they too were too busy idolizing Fran. As far as they were concerned, she was a hero. The combination of their grandparents' attitudes and their instincts as beastkin had deemed her as such.

Young, innocent sounding cries of "Ebolving ish so cool!", "I wanna be like Fuwan!", and "Awesome!" filled the carriage as toddlers scrambled about and admired her.

Again, the atmosphere was peaceful and relaxing. But alas, it wasn't to last.

"M-Monsters sighted!" The coachman shouted in panic as he spotted a group of enemies up ahead. The contents of his message caused the passengers to curl up in fear and direct their gazes towards Fran, as if begging for her to bring them salvation by resolving the situation.

"Milady, please! Eliminate the beasts!" The driver raised his voice again as he regained a bit of his composure.

"Nn. Got it," Fran nodded as she stepped onto the coachman's platform and looked ahead.

"T-Thank you very much!"

Ten odd german shepherd sized dog monsters looked to be waiting for us a bit down the road.

"Can't just break through? Only around 10."

"I-I'm sorry milady, but I'm 'fraid that ain't gonna be possible!" The coachman replied.

That wasn't quite the response I was expecting. I knew that the dogs were monsters, but the Dual Horn was still the size of a god damned rhino. I assumed it would be able to just smash the dog like creatures out of its way and keep moving.

A bit of a closer examination revealed to me why I'd been wrong.

The monsters were called Venom Dogs. Their stats were quite low, but they were capable of delivering toxic bites through the use of their agility. Moreover, they would then use that superior agility stat to kite their foe around until it succumbed to their venom. It was an effective strategy, and one even the Dual Horn was prone to falling victim to given the sheer number of Venom Dogs. There was, however, a fairly simple solution. All we needed to do was obliterate the enemies before they closed in on us.

“Don’t slow down,” Fran ordered the driver as she got into position and lifted me into a combat ready stance.

“A-Are you sure?”

“Nn. Just leave to me.”

“Y-Yes ma’am!” Though he seemed to lack confidence, the driver still ended up obeying Fran’s commands because she’d evolved and he hadn’t.

“Alright, let’s do this!” I telepathically shouted.

“Nn.”

Fran launched me towards the monsters as I boosted my velocity with telekinesis. The attack was swift; I pierced through two of our enemies’ cores and absorbed them with pinpoint accuracy. I then used a mix of wind magic and sheer telekinetic force to prevent them from escaping before tearing through them one after another.

I grabbed their corpses and shoved them into my storage immediately after defeating them. Venom dogs were quite weak. They probably weren’t worth too much, but I decided to loot them regardless, just in case.

The coachman seemed to want to say something about the fact that the monsters had vanished in an instant, corpses and all, but ended up rescinding his comment because he didn't want to spoil Fran's mood. He instead heaved a sigh of relief and thanked her, to which she responded by nodding lightly as she returned to the vehicle's interior. There, she found herself showered in a shouts of gratitude and praise.

She responded to them one by one at first by stating that she hadn't done anything impressive, and that she was just doing her job, but was eventually overwhelmed by their enthusiasm and forced to retreat back to the coachman's seat.

She'd already fulfilled her duty and showed off just how strong black catkin could be, so there wasn't really any issue with her retreating. That said, she still made herself an excuse and stated that she was repositioning herself so she could better remain vigilant of any additional monsters.

"Haha, they sure have kicked up a fuss." The coachman smiled wryly. The passengers had been quite noisy, so he knew exactly what had just happened.

"Nn."

The only thing that followed her reply was silence. The driver recognized that there was a large rift between her social status and his own and thus, remained silent and didn't really try talking to her. That said, he didn't seem particularly bothered by the silence. He simply continued to look straight ahead and direct the dual horn along the road before him.

And just like that, 4 hours flew right by.

"Town spotted," Fran commented as she awoke from a nap.

"You've got some really good eyes! We're just about coming up on Argentlaphn," the driver replied, surprised.

It took a good bit of time, we finally reached our destination. There was only a single group of monsters on the way. Fran didn't really have much to do. The combination of her boredom and the vehicle's gentle shaking caused her to end up napping atop the driver's platform for most of the trip's duration.

“Adventurer's Guild in town?”

“A pretty big ‘un. It's right by the town's entrance, so you'll prob'ly see it soon.”

Unlike Greyseal, Argentlaphn lacked a space specifically intended for horned carriages. Our vehicle had ended up pulling up beside a stagecoach just outside town.

The passengers began to get off shortly after the vehicle reached its destination. They each thanked Fran and then the driver in that order as they left.

“Thank you!”

“We owe you our lives, milady!”

“Bai bai Fuwan!”

She responded to them with the usual “Nn,” before departing from the drop off area.

To be honest, having people treat us like that is kind of draining. It looks like we're going to have to put with it if we want to keep bolstering the Black Cat Tribe's place in beastkin society though...

I felt the urge let out a mental groan as I entertained the thought, but was interrupted by Fran before I could.

“Master.”

“What's up?”

“Tired...”

It looked like I wasn't the only one. But still, it wasn't really an issue. We were sure to grow accustomed to it in due time.

265. Argentlapn

Chapter 265. Argentlapn

Argentlapn

We found Argentlapn's Adventures' Guild immediately after passing through the town's front gate.

The size of the guild was, like Greyseal's, quite impressive. This made me believe that all the Beastkin's Country's guilds were large, but apparently that was a misunderstanding. Us seeing two larger guilds in a row was just a coincidence. Greyseal was a portside city and Argentlapn was right by the best place one could pass through the Scorpion Lion Forest. As far as adventurers were concerned, both were hotspots.

『There seem to be a good number of adventurers hanging around.』

“Nn.”

Upon entering, we found more than 30 adventurers sitting around what looked like a bar and drinking booze.

All their gazes immediately flew right at Fran, evaluating her. Most were beastkin, so they immediately recognized Fran as someone who had evolved. The realization not only shocked them, but also eliminated any thoughts they had of harassing us. The reckless and ignorant adventurers that would've otherwise tried were immediately told to stand down by their buddies.

“W-Welcome.”

“Nn. Want to sell monster parts.”

“Sure thing. Could I please see your guild card?”

“Nn. C ranked adventurer. Fran.”

“I-I knew it...!”

The receptionist already knew who Fran was. The guild’s intelligence network reached both far and wide and its employees were held to a high standard, so they were always kept in the loop. She soon realized that she’d been timidly staring at Fran’s card, so she lightly cleared her throat before returning it.

“I-I’m sorry, please excuse me. We handle all monster related transactions over there,” she said, pointing towards a table

“Got it.”

Fran brought out the corpses of the venom dogs she’d slain on her way over to the guild. They were not yet dismantled because we hadn’t had the time to get to it.

For some odd reason, the adventurers were riled up by her bounty.

Wait, why do they seem so impressed? Venom dogs are only F ranked threats, aren’t they? How is killing 10 of them any bit of a big deal?

Diving deeper into the conversation led me to understand the reasons for their admiration.

“That’s quite the number of venom dogs, miss,” said the guild’s receptionist, her eyes wide. “Did you perhaps encounter a pack?”

“Nn,” replied Fran.

“Wow, how impressive.. I should’ve expected nothing less.”

Venom dogs were quite difficult for weaker adventurers to handle because they had access to the Magic Poison Fang skill. Packs of 10 or more were considered especially dangerous and boosted their threat level up to E. In other words, one needed to be at least as strong as a D-ranker to handle a pack all by oneself.

It was obvious from looking at the corpses that Fran killed each one with a single blow, yet another testament to the extent of her skill.

“Meat edible?”

“It’s poisoned, so unfortunately not. But on the flip side, the guild is willing to buy any sort of poison, so we’ll be happy to take it off your hands regardless.”

The guild ended up paying us 5k Golde a pop. The price was that low because the monsters had yet to be dismantled and all were missing their cores. The 50k profit we got seemed like it would probably be about enough to cover the night’s lodging expenses.

“And here is your 50,000 Golde. Thank you for doing business with us,” said the guild’s receptionist, handing Fran a large bag of coins.

“Thanks,” replied Fran. “Also, wanted to ask question.”

“Please go right ahead.”

“How to get to capital?”

“Give me just a second and I’ll show you.”

The receptionist pulled out a map of the surrounding area.

“The most important thing is knowing exactly where to go.”

I looked at it and realized that we could enter the most narrow part of the Scorpion Lion Forest by heading south from where the town was located. It certainly did look like a good spot to use to break through.

“As I’m sure you’ve noticed already, this is where the forest is thinnest,” she said, pointing to a spot on the map. “It only takes about a day to get out of the forest if you pass through here. The adventurers tend to call it ‘The Shortcut.’”

“Got it. Chance of encountering manticore?”

“About one in one hundred.”

“Seems low?” asked Fran, tilting her head.

“Manticores tend to avoid preying on adventurers if possible,” explained the receptionist.

Weaker adventurers were easy prey, but the manticores would be overwhelmed if they ran into stronger adventurers. As a result, they believed attacking adventurers as risky and instead focused on the consumption of other monsters.

That said, some manticores would still attack adventures near The Shortcut. Those were either young and inexperienced, or desperate because they’d been driven out of their territory by stronger manticores.

“There’s a road leading all the way to The Shortcut, so it should be quite easy to find.”

Passing through the shortcut took one straight to the town of Roseraccoon, another large town bordering the Scorpion Lion Forest.

“While I do think you’d be perfectly fine on your own, you can find yourself a party if you so wish by checking the recruitment board over there.” She pointed towards a large wooden board behind Fran.

“Recruitment board?”

“Yes. Safety comes from one’s individual combat prowess, but can also come from numbers for those who are lacking.”

Partying up allowed you to take on stronger opponents by working together with other people also capable of putting up a fight. Moreover, it also allowed the possibility of escaping by sacrificing one's companions in times of desperation.

That was why it was only natural for those that liked to solo or work in small groups to temporarily join up with each other and form slightly larger parties before attempting to move through the forest.

I, however, was against it. Partying up with people would only serve to slow us down.

"Hey there."

"Nn? Hi?"

"You're planning to head through the Scorpion Lion Forest, right? You wanna join us? We may not really look it, but we're E-rankers, so we won't slow you down or get in your way."

A handsome looking human adventurer approached and called out to Fran right as she attempted to leave the guild.

I couldn't help but feel a bit of suspicion with regards to his motives. I highly doubted a non-beastkin E ranker would be able to discern the extent of Fran's might at a glance.

That said, why was he going about assuming Fran isn't a weakling?

"Called out to me, why?"

"Well I mean, you've pretty much got everyone's sights on you, and I just overheard something about you saying you were a C ranker."

"You believed that?"

"Well, you beastkin tend to have higher stats than us humans, and a good portion of you tend to be able to hold your own in a fight. I met another young, but incredibly strong beastkin girl around your age the other day too, so I'm pretty confident that you're a strong one."

“I see.”

Welp, don't I feel like an asshole. He'd actually been wanting to party up with Fran and not trying to mess with her.

That said, we ended up turning down his invitation because he wasn't leaving until the day after tomorrow, and we couldn't afford to just sit around and waste time with our schedule. Moreover, I'd been thinking that it was possible for us to just get on Urushi and fly over the forest. Though, that would eat through his mana, so I wanted to go as far as possible on foot first. Thus having companions wouldn't quite work out with what we had in mind.

“We should leave now.”

“Nn.”

So, with that done, we thanked the receptionist and headed back out the front door.

“It's still morning, and we've still got the whole day ahead of us, so why don't we head right over to The Shortcut?”

“Think will encounter manticores?”

“Why again do you seem like you're looking forward to it...? Though, you've probably gone and jinxed it now, so I'd say we're more or less sure to run into one.”

“Can't wait.”

The act of “jinxing” something, also known as “raising a flag”, has always been one that has both brought trouble and evoked fear. It has changed all sorts of destinies. It’s known for hooking up average losers with the hottest girls in school, brutally murdering loving fathers serving in the military, reversing all but guaranteed victories, and everything in between.

So you’re probably wondering where I’m going with this tangent and all.

“Garuooooohhh!”

“Wasn’t there only supposed to be a 1% chance for us to run into a manticore?!” I complained.

“Nn. Lucked out,” Fran happily replied.

“More like this only happened ’cause you jinxed it!”

We happened to encounter a 5 meter tall lion with a scorpion’s tail as we tried passing through The Shortcut.

Description: A monster that resembles a lion with a scorpion's tail. Its rank is justified by its defensive prowess as it's offensive stats tend to be relatively lackluster. It is quite easy to combat so long as you take note of its tail. Its core is located within its heart. Threat level: C.

The manticore's stats seemed reasonable and rather fitting given its rank. That is, it was about as strong as all the other C ranked monsters we'd fought to date. As indicated by its description, its skills were mostly centered around bolstering its defenses.

That said, it had both Magic Poison Fang and Herculean Strength, so its ability to attack wasn't something to be underestimated.

Or at least that would've been the case if we'd run into it when it was in perfect condition.

"Dying?" asked Fran, as she tilted her head.

"Not quite. It's health and mana are both sitting at about half."

The manticore had deep wounds carved all over its body. The guild had said that younger manticores and manticores that'd been kicked out of their territory were the only two types that adventurers would normally encounter on The Shortcut.

The one we were staring down seemed to belong to the latter of the two categories. Its right leg had a deep gash in it and its right eye had a cut that seemed to render it useless. Its ever important tail had been torn down the middle and was missing its upper half, stinger and all.

"Nn."

"Groooooowl!"

It seemed to have sensed Fran's strength, as its back was arched like an aggravated housecat. Its injured leg had prevented it from running away, so it instead chose to ready itself to engage her in combat.

"Alright. Let's get ourselves some exp and loot its corpse once we're done."

"Nn!" Fran nodded, excited at the prospect of combat.

"Stay on guard, Urushi. Whatever almost killed our manticore friend here might still be nearby."

"Woof!" Urushi replied reliably.

"Let's go, Fran!"

"Nn! Awakening!"

The manticore's defenses were focused towards physical resistance as opposed to magical resistance. To that end, I was going to be taking charge of our offensive efforts; Fran's capacity for magic fell behind my own.

Fran was going to be focused on defense. She awakened in order to make it easier to avoid the enemy's attacks by using her perception-type skills in tandem with her boosted dex stat. She'd be using her Sword Lord Arts and Perfect Barrier to parry and mitigate anything she couldn't dodge. Though I was going to be focused on attacking, that wasn't all. I was also preparing a teleportation spell just in case we ever needed to escape.

"Graaaaaaohhhh!" the manticore roared as it lunged towards Fran.

"Fmph," Fran grunted as she dodged the manticore's strike and took to its rear.

"Sweet! It looks like you've got us into a pretty good position. Thunderbolt! Thunderbolt!!"

"Gyaaaaoooooooo!" the beast howled as the magical projectiles drove themselves into its body.

Lightning Magic's biggest perk was the crowd-control type effect that came with its damage. The paralyzing bolts slowed its limbs and allowed us to better avoid its strikes.

"Nn! Effective!"

"Yeah! Let's keep this up till it dies!"

We continued to fire off spells. We probably could've opened with Kanna Kamui or even Thor's Hammer and just straight up won, but, we didn't want to blow up the monster's core by spamming spells with too much power.

Thus we whittled our foe down with medium powered spells instead.

"Lightning Blast! Lightning Blast!!"

I called them medium powered, but that was only because I was used to casting the two other spells I'd just mentioned. Truth be told, the spells I was casting were probably considered high powered given that they could hurt C ranked monsters.

Another four blasts of lightning caused the manticore to die.

“...Dead?” Fran narrowed her eyes, still on guard.

“Oh god damn it Fran! You're jinxing things again!” I groaned.

“Nn?”

Fortunately, we were fine this time around. The manticore was actually dead. It didn't get back up and attack. I pierced through its corpse and absorbed its core.

“It's been a while since I've last absorbed anything this strong.”

My mood improved as I felt the manticore's magical energy flow into me. I ended up gaining a whole 200 monster core points worth of value from it, which was a lot more than I imagined. I almost wanted to run into another manticore now.

Unfortunately, it didn't seem like there were any other manticores nearby. They weren't the kind of monster one encountered regularly.

“Grr!” Urushi let out a low growl to warn us of an incoming entity.

“Something coming...!”

Likewise, Fran's ears twitched as she picked up on the individual the wolf had detected.

“Whatever it is has got quite a bit of magical energy.”

The thing coming towards us had about the same amount of magical energy as a manticore, but it wasn't one. Whatever it was, it was approaching incredibly quickly.

And it wasn't alone. There was what seemed to be one of its allies following behind it as well. If they were monsters, it was possible that they were the type that hunted in pairs.

"I'll get us ready to teleport the hell out if need be."

"Nn."

Fran kept her guard up and took a combat ready stance with me in hand as she awaited the incoming pair. But both she and I were taken aback regardless.

"What impudence! I have been robbed of my prey!"

A young girl that looked to be only the slightest bit older than Fran complained as sprang from the bushes. Her voice carried with it the sort of tone one would expect from a highborn.

She was pretty. She was really pretty. Her beauty was of such importance that I had to say it twice. Twice! [1]

Her hair was cut rather short, but curled inwards at the ends. Her eyebrows were thick, but not too long horizontally. They almost seemed a bit like the kind you'd see in Imperial, historical Japanese courts if you looked at her from afar. When combined with her big forehead, it made her give off a youthful charm. Both her hair and the ears that adorned her head were a platinum blonde while her skin was white as snow.

Her deep, crimson eyes clearly stood out from the rest of her visage. They were big, round, and carried within them all the girl's obstinacy and determination. The sheer strength of her gaze was more than enough to draw attention to her.

Furthermore, her eyes weren't the only thing that contrasted with her skin and hair; her armour did too. It was like her opposite: everything she wore was dyed in black. Her metal armour was ornamented all over with gold, giving her an air that was magnanimous and threatening. I couldn't help but feel like it was too over the top for a child to wear, but for some odd reason it seemed to suit her nonetheless.

I could tell at a glance that she was a beastkin, but I had no way of knowing what race she was in particular. I appraised her, given that it was only natural in our current circumstances, but I wasn't able to get anything out of it. She must've had a skill or item powerful enough to totally ward off the effects of even my Eye of Empyrea.

I instead had to rely on using my experiences to discern that she was some sort of cat-related beastkin.

"I can't appraise her, so I can't say for sure, but it looks like she's probably a White Catkin or something," I pondered.

"White Catkin. Doesn't exist," Fran telepathically replied.

"Shit, seriously?"

"Nn. Know all catkin types since also catkin. No white."

"Right..."

Wait, so what is she then? Is she not a cat? Nah, she has to be a cat based on how her ears and tail look. Maybe she's like a White Pantherkin or White Tigerkin or something, assuming they exist?

"Not evolved yet," she remarked conclusively.

"Huh. Well then..."

"Nn... But strange. Can't tell species."

She could not only stop me from appraising her, but also somehow had the ability to prevent other beastkin from figuring out her precise species.

The girl briskly walked towards us as I found myself lost in thought. She was giving off an extremely hostile aura, but not the murderous kind. We decided to take a wait-and-see approach and hear her out for the time being.

That said, we weren't going to let her approach us any more than she already had.

"Stop there," Fran narrowed her eyes as she issued a warning.

"...I need not for you to tell me that," the other girl replied.

Much to my surprise, she stopped right where we told her to. Thinking about it, I realized it made sense. There was no reason for her to step within range of our attacks.

That action alone was more than enough to inform me that the girl was a skilled fighter. With a single glance she had not only discerned that Fran was strong, but also accurately estimated her effective range.

Her eyes widened as she took a second look at Fran. I couldn't tell whether it was because she'd realized Fran was the Black Lightning Princess, or if it was simply because she was an evolved Black Catkin.

I wanted Fran to ask her who she was, but that had to wait. There were more important issues to be addressed.

"Approaching person, your party member?"

"Indeed."

A second individual emerged from a bush behind the girl as she answered Fran's question.

"Please don't rush on ahead of me, my lady," the individual rebuked.

A wave of shock coursed through my brain the moment I saw her. The sheer impact I felt was on par with the one I'd felt when I saw the Leviathan just the other day.

I was so surprised I couldn't stop myself from muttering under my breath.

"Is that... a maid...?"

The individual that had pushed her way through the bushes was undoubtedly a maid. Wait. Weren't we supposed to be in the midst of a haunt containing C ranked monsters? The hell is a maid doing here? If there was a limit to how out of place one could possibly be, then this maid had just exceeded the hell out of it.

Her being a maid wasn't really the part that surprised me the most. I'd already met many maids post reincarnation.

I was as surprised as I was because the maid before me was a whole cut above the rest. She wasn't wearing the traditional servant wear one normally saw on the maids around these parts. Rather, she wore a less sexualized version of the frilly, lacy, gothic-lolita style dress you'd typically see in anime and manga. Her clothes clearly put cuteness well above functionality.

The dress, whose main colours were white and navy, came with an equally fancy apron attached to it. The bottom part of the dress extended almost all the way towards the ground. It gave her a really prim and proper kinda feel, which really got me going. The girl wearing the maid uniform had a well proportioned figure and clear body lines. Her curves reminded me greatly of Fujiko's. [1] Moreover, her eyes made her seem cold. She was just the type of maid I liked. Her long chestnut hair was styled into three distinct braids. Her long bangs had been pushed aside to put her forehead on display.

Her nose was decorated with a pair of thick-lensed glasses. They were heavy, and if you looked at her straight on, it almost looked like they were falling off her face.

Man, round glasses are the best.

There was no doubt in my mind that her glasses were sexy as hell. Her ears were black and resembled those of a horse's. They were a bit difficult to see, in part because of the brim she was wearing and in part because they'd been pushed back such that they blended in with her hair. At first, I'd thought that they were just accessories.

Unlike her companion, the maid could actually be appraised.

She was pretty strong, seeing as how she'd evolved. She looked like she was more than fit for combat, or rather assassination, even though she was a maid.

Classifying her in adventurer terms, she was at least as strong as a B ranker. I wouldn't be surprised if she were an A ranker either, given that I had no idea how large the powerboost she'd get from awakening was.

"My lady, I've told you time and time again to slow down. I can't keep up with you, and it's dangerous for you to dash on ahead of me," rebuked the maid.

"I do apologize, Kuina. Chasing down my prey caused me to lose myself," replied the little girl.

"And who might this newfound acquaintance of yours be?"

The maid, Kuina, turned her eyes in Fran's direction. Her gaze remained cold, but it didn't seem like she was judging Fran. Instead, it seemed more like she was simply sleepy, but at the same time, she gave off a mysterious feel. The lack of emotion within made it difficult to guess her thoughts. Her eyes were similar to Fran's, but gave the impression that she had even less interest in other people.

In fact, she didn't seem surprised even though she'd stared Fran down. Of all the beastkin we met she gave the smallest reaction to Fran's evolution.

"That... is surprising, so much so that I almost tripped and fell," the maid remarked.

"Indeed. Never before have I seen your face decorated with such a deep expression of surprise."

Apparently, she was not actually uninterested in Fran. Her emotions just didn't show on her face. I was honestly impressed that her companion was even capable of discerning her emotions, let alone their intensity.

"You, name yourself!" the silver haired girl commanded.

I wanted Fran tell her that it was rude to ask another's name without first providing one's own, but—

"Rather, it would be more appropriate for me to provide my own name first. I am Mare, and I allow you to refer to me as such!" the girl that had named herself Mare declared in an imposing, self-important tone.

"And I'm Kuina. Nice to meet you."

Mare placed both hands on her hips and took a proud stance as she declared herself, whereas Kuina instead performed a clean, crisp bow as she gave her name. They seemed really disorganized given the disparity between the manner in which they introduced themselves, but didn't really come off as bad people nonetheless.

“C ranked adventurer, Fran. This, Urushi,” Fran replied in her usual tone. She was clearly undaunted.

“Woof!”

“Fran...? So you really are the Black Lightning Princess,” Mare nodded, as if to confirm her own suspicions.

“Nn.”

She knew about the Black Lightning Princess. So wait, does that mean she’s an adventurer? She’s got a maid though, so she’s probably not... Is she a merchant or something? No, that doesn’t seem quite right...

“I never would have thought that we would meet you under circumstances like these,” said Kuina. “I would have liked us to meet in a more peaceful environment.”

“That reminds me! How dare you rob me of my prey!?” exclaimed Mare, outraged.

“Prey?”

“I am speaking of the manticore that you slew! I was in the midst of hunting it down. You snatched the most enjoyable part of the hunt from right under my nose!” Mare shouted indignantly as she pointed towards the roasted manticore corpse lying right by us. Apparently, the manticore hadn’t been in our way because it’d lost its territory but rather because it had chosen to flee from Mare and her maid.

Under normal circumstances, my first reaction would be to accuse Mare of bullshitting, but I was pretty sure that she and Kuina would be able to handle a manticore without issue.

There was no debating that we’d stolen their kill. But at the same time, it was also their fault for letting their prey run from them in the first place. Still, we would’ve likely also began complaining if we were in their shoes.

“I’d prefer not turning this into any sort of major conflict if possible. What say you, Fran?”

“Nn...? Can just give manticore?” she replied nonchalantly.

“You sure?”

“Don’t mind.”

I personally had no problem giving them the materials if it meant avoiding conflict. The only issue would be that I’ve already absorbed the core. Cores were valuable to adventurers, and given that there was obviously no way we could’ve possibly sold it already, I wasn’t sure we were going to be able to talk our way through the current circumstances.

“Then can give you manticore materials,” offered Fran.

“Keep them. I need them not.” Mare flatly rejected her.

“My lady, I beg you to reconsider,” interjected Kuina. “We do require them given our funds are beginning to run dry.”

“...I do admit that there is no harm in procuring them. However, they are but an extra. I was more interested in the slaying of the manticore and the experience I would gain, as I am quite close to leveling up.” Mare complained.

Oh, so they were grinding. That made sense. If Mare was anywhere near as strong as Kuina, then she’d need to defeat something at least as strong as a manticore if she wanted to gain any significant amount of experience.

“Your fault. Let prey escape,” pointed out Fran.

Mare grumbled in dissatisfaction, her face scrunching up.

“I believe the Black Lightning Princess is in the right here, My Lady,” Kuina noted.

“...I understand,” Mare relented. “...But I won’t forgive you lest you engage me in a spar!”

Again, Mare spoke in a cocky, self-important tone, but I didn’t mind it. At first I thought it was because of how pretty she looked, but Fran felt the same way I did, so that probably wasn’t it. Mysteriously, Fran didn’t feel repulsed by it like she often did when other nobles did the same.

Was it just because her cuteness seemed to overrule her stubbornness? Or because her pride almost seemed a natural fit for her? Of course, I don’t feel the urge to suddenly kneel before her and obey her every whim, but I did feel like nodding along and agreeing was the natural thing to do.

“Interested,” said Fran.

“I’m not sure that’s a request you would typically spring on someone so suddenly, My Lady,” Kuina remarked.

“A duel with the famous Black Lightning Princess,” said Mare, ignoring her maid, “should more than suffice to make up for the loss of the manticore. What say you, Black Lightning Princess?”

I didn’t even need to hear Fran’s answer to know exactly what she was thinking. Her eyes were blazing in a way that they only ever did when she was in battle mode. It was completely self-evident that she was going to comply with Mare’s request.

“Got it.”

“A splendid response!” said Mare, happily. “Let us find a more convenient place to spar. This area is not exactly what I would claim the most suitable.”

“Nn!”

Oh well, I guess it’s fine. Neither Kuina or Mare had lied, and neither was giving off the impression that they wanted to kill her, so why not.

268. Dueling Mare

Chapter 268. Dueling Mare

Dueling Mare

Translator: SupremeTentacle

Editor: Exkalamity

We followed Mare and Kuina out the Scorpion Lion Forest so Fran could spar with Mare. Our party was so strong we instantly obliterated all the goblins and other weaker creatures we encountered on sight. Mare and Fran would immediately charge at any unfortunate monsters they could find. They competed for kills so intensely that I felt not even a manticore could survive a hit from the two combined.

We negotiated to keep all the cores of the monsters defeated along the way and relinquished all the remaining materials to Mare and Kuina. They didn't particularly mind since all they really wanted was money. Kuina was responsible for transporting all the monsters we defeated. She put the materials into an interesting sort of item bag. It had a small opening, but would suck things inside and had no issues storing things larger than it.

The two catkin chattered and debated their favourite foods as they walked. Kuina, on the other hand, mostly stayed silent. She instead focused on examining the surroundings for any potential danger. Her ears would move about and occasionally twitch. It really was hard to read her expressions though. I couldn't tell what she was thinking at all.

We journeyed through the Scorpion Lion Forest effectively unhindered, taking about two hours to pass through it. Exiting the forest, we found ourselves greeted by a wide, open plain.

"Shall we begin!?" Mare suggested.

"Nn!" said Fran as she reached for my hilt.

The two warriors, both exhilarated by the idea of a spar, turned to face each other as they prepared to draw their weapons—only to be interrupted.

“Stop right there,” said Kuina as she grabbed onto Mare’s head with an iron-claw grip.

“What now!?” shouted Mare.

“You’ll bother everyone else that wishes to use this route should you two spar right here” said Kuina, adjusting the rim of her glasses with her free hand. “Please move a bit further into the plains so you won’t be in anyone’s way.”

I had to admit, she had a point. I highly doubted that the duel would end with just a clash of blades. The two would likely destroy the road if we did not relocate.

And so we continued walking for another ten minutes and stopped once we were sure that there was nothing important nearby.

“Okay, this will suffice,” said Kuina. “Remember two things: do not kill each other, and do not awaken.”

“That much is obvious!” Mare complained.

“Nn!”

“But you needn’t hold back too much. I can heal both of you even if you bring each other to the verge of death.”

Mare laughed. “I can hardly wait! This will truly be a test of my skill!”

“Same.”

“Will that wolf be joining you in combat? I mind not if it participates.”

“Numerical advantage?”

“That is not a concern.” Mare drew the blade she carried on her back, raised it to the sky, and shouted, “Llinde!”

A red light radiated from its blade and from that light materialized a dragon.

“Kyuooooohhh!”

“Cute,” was Fran’s first response.

It was fairly small, but a dragon nonetheless. If I had to guess, I would assume it to be a child.

“Monster Weapon?”

“Nuhahahaha! Amazing, is it not?” replied Mare. “My sword is none other than Llinde, the Dragonblade!”

Mare’s ability to block me from appraising her didn’t apply to her sword. I was able to appraise both it and the dragon that had emerged from it.

The reason the dragon lacked a description was likely because it was associated with the blade and lived within it. That aside, it was decently strong. It wasn't a match for Urushi, but it was powerful enough to be considered a D ranked threat. Its unique skill apparently allowed it to manipulate any flames in its vicinity.

"Llinde here will take that wolf of yours on."

"Got it," said Fran. "Urushi, no losing."

"Woof!"

"The very same applies to you, Llinde! Show them what it means to have a dragon's pride!"

"Kyuoohhh!"

"This is a spar, so no hard feelings from either of you regardless of the outcome," said Kuina. "Do I make myself clear?"

"Naturally," Mare affirmed.

"Nn"

And so, the two began their duel. They did not immediately charge at each other right out of the gate. The match began with neither fighter willing to make the first move.

The two instead stared each other down with their blades raised. They made only the slightest of feints to keep each other in check. The moment I thought the two would be forever stuck in a deadlock, Mare suddenly charged.

"Haaaahhh!"

“Fmph!”

The sharp ring of steel on steel echoed throughout the plains as the two young girls let loose their battlecries.

Mare was quite the swordsman. She was able to cross blades with Fran and hold her ground through a short exchange of blows. But unfortunately for her, Fran held the Sword Lord Arts skill, which gave her the edge and allowed her to gradually overwhelm her foe through sheer technique.

“Hahahah! Impressive, Black Lightning Princess! I expect no less from a tribe whose name has been carved into legend!”

“Also impressed. Not bad.”

“Frustrating as it is, I must admit that my skill fails to surpass your own. I’ve no choice but to up the ante.”

“Bring it on!”

The two seemed to be getting along; they somehow found the time to trade words despite being engaged in a furious exchange of blows.

Mare attacked Fran with flame magic, but the black catkin managed to ward off her spell through the use of just her sword and a barrier before returning fire with spells of her own. Fran was the more agile type of fighter, so her attacks came in the form of a relentless barrage. On the other hand, Mare was more a strength type. She launched fewer attacks, but each was much more powerful. The two girls smiled as they unhesitantly launched attacks that each carried lethal force. It was clear that both did not want to yield to the other.

Some of Mare’s flame-based attacks would come without any chants. I couldn’t tell if these attacks were magical spells or if they were instead a trait of her species. I suspected it was the latter, but at the same time I highly doubted it. She was too white to be a Red Catkin, after all.

Thinking about Red Catkin, I remembered that the Beast Lord had once mentioned that he had a daughter, but I highly doubted said daughter would be gallivanting around doing adventurer-like things with a maid by her side...

Wait... that does seem possible seeing as how the Beast Lord is who he is...

I looked towards Urushi and his foe.

"Grrr!"

"Kyuuoooh!"

The wolf and dragon were engaged in a high speed battle. The two were using the wide open space they were given to its fullest, trying to chase each other down without being caught. I couldn't help but be surprised at Llinde's speed. It could generate bursts of speed that exceeded Urushi at his fastest even though the latter had a higher agility stat.

Of course, its ability to fly contributed in part to its speed, but the bigger part seemed to be attributed to the flames that would trail behind it whenever it accelerated. It seemed to be using something similar to the Burnia spell. [2]

That said, speed was the only thing the dragonling had on Urushi. The wolf was superior in every other category. He held the advantage from start to end even though he was holding back. I was pretty sure he'd eventually win if I just left him be, so I turned my attention back over to Fran.

She and Mare were still happily exchanging blows, but the winner was already clear. Mare had substantial wounds all over, but Fran had only suffered a few light scratches. Mare's hands were tied. Fran was both the better swordsman and the better mage of the two. There was simply nothing she could do.

Realizing that, Mare used her flame magic to create an opening and distanced herself from her opponent. It seemed that she still had something up her sleeve. Fran defended against the spell, and had more than enough liberty to pursue, but stood her ground. She wanted to see what Mare was planning to do.

Mare's eyes were filled with exhilaration. The battle was giving her an adrenaline rush, one that caused to raise her voice and loose a bestial howl.

“...Coming.”

A massive amount of magical energy began gathering within Mare's body. There was so much of it that it caused the air around her to begin crackling with energy. Was she awakening? Or maybe using some other skill?

I couldn't tell. I only knew that she was trying something big, so I focused my attention on her in hopes of figuring out exactly what it was.

Fran's expression was identical to Mare's. She was excited to see what would happen next, to see the challenge she would have to overcome—but it didn't. Something appeared behind Mare and caused the magical energy she started building up to disperse.

“Ngyaaah!”

“Geez. Were you seriously about to go ahead and do that, My Lady?”

“K-Kuina...”

Kuina had suddenly appeared behind Mare and dumped a large volume of magically created water over her head. The sudden wetness caused the startled catkin to scream and leap before turning back towards Kuina with a resentful gaze.

Naturally, I had picked up on Kuina's actions ahead of time. I had my guard up against her just in case. She'd suddenly disappeared using what I assumed to be illusion magic, but I did not mind it because she directed her next actions towards Mare and not Fran. Fran had also picked up on the maid's movements. Mare, however, didn't. All her focus had been directed towards Fran.

“And what exactly did I say about attempting to kill your opponent, My Lady?”

“B-But I was going to lose if I did not attempt drastic measures...”
whimpered Mare.

“And why exactly are you being so obstinate about winning or losing a spar?”

“Mmph...”

“Well?”

“V-Very well, I apologize!”

And so, that was how the spar ended with the pair apologizing to Fran. She was a bit disappointed with how things ended, but still decently satisfied, so she ended up letting things be. It was a good place to call it quits. Fran was starting to get hot headed as well. We managed to avoid having her and Mare actually try to kill each other, so this was probably as well as things could’ve possibly ended.

“Next time I will surely win! You wait and see!”

“Kyuuuu!”

With those parting words we separated from Mare and Kuina and made our way towards the town of Roserracoon. We asked them to come with us but they declined. For some reason the two of them wanted to avoid the town. Maybe they were involved in some sort of incident? Regardless we decided to let matters be and head towards the town ourselves.

“They were surely a lively pair.”

“Nn. Will win next time.”

“Woof!”

“Nn. Both of us.”

Our encounter was definitely a fruitful one. I got to see a hella gorgeous maid and Fran met Mare, the first person in her age group capable of putting up a good fight. We won the spar, and Mare didn't seem like the type of fighter to pull her punches, but I wasn't certain we would have won a serious death match. She was clearly holding onto some final trump card at the end. This fight will definitely encourage Fran's growth as a warrior down the future. My only worry is that she may become too much of a battle junkie.

After walking for a distance, we spotted walls rising out of the horizon.

“Master, town spotted.”

“Yeah and it’s pretty big too. The walls are impressive. This is probably Roserraccoon.”

“Nn.”

As we approached the town we noticed a commotion outside the walls. Although it wasn’t strange for a town as large as this to be noisy, it was strange to see so many people milling around outside the walls. As we approached we saw that all the people were adventurers. There were about thirty of them, all trying to board the same horned carriage. Fran called out to one of the adventurers.

“Something happen?”

“Hah? The hell do ya want ki– WHOA HOLY SHIT!”

The man took a glance at Fran and cut himself short. He froze, one foot on the horned carriage, the other still on the ground, his eyes bulging out of their sockets.

“Well?”

“My ba-” he coughed. “My apologies.”

He clearly cleaned up his act the moment he saw Fran. He probably realized she evolved.

“Okay?” asked Fran.

“Yes,” he said. “We’re currently tasked with escorting a noble. Our destination is a town down south.”

“Adventurers for guards? Not soldiers?”

“Yeah. All the knights and soldiers are headed to the border. There aren’t any to spare.”

“Understood.”

It seems there were some extenuating circumstances in this case. Normally a noble will be escorted by knights and soldiers unless they wanted to travel incognito. In that case they would hire adventurers as escorts, but having a full entourage of thirty people was antithetical to staying under the radar. I urged Fran to continue questioning.

“So many people, cause trouble?” asked Fran.

“Well this amount is to be expected given we are escorting the princess herself,” he said.

“Princess, here?”

“Yeah. The guildmaster decided to go over the top with this escort commission.”

It seemed the guildmaster was trying to please the royal family by sending the princess a large group of guards.

“In fact you can see her over there,” the adventurer said.

We looked over towards the direction he indicated. There stood a girl in a very ostentatious, out of place dress.

Maybe we should go talk to her... We are pretty heavily indebted to the Beast Lord, after all.

That said her entourage was giving the surroundings quite the stink-eye.

“What do?” asked Fran telepathically.

“We might as well get closer and check things out.” I said.

“Nn.”

Fran thanked the adventurer and we headed towards the princess. As we approached we suddenly felt something terribly wrong. A chill ran down our spines. It felt similar to when we were made subject to Coerced Camaraderie in Ulmutt. But maybe not that specifically. Were we appraised by the princess' guards? Probably not since the sensation was very brief.

“Fran back off a bit.”

“Nn.”

We backed away about twenty meters and the offputting sensation disappeared. I then used magic perception and found some sort of active skill covering the entirety of the princess' surroundings. I decided to try appraising the situation. I had to be very careful in case one of the guards had appraisal detection, I didn't want Fran to be accused of a serious breach of privacy. It's best to stay out of trouble.

I first made a copy of myself while still hiding behind Fran. I switched places with that copy so it looked like I was still on Fran's back. Then I shrunk all the way down to about the size of a ping pong ball. Finally I teleported to right above the princess. Making myself smaller was harder than making myself larger, so I probably couldn't keep this form for long. I recalled what Kuina did and made an illusion to blend into the sky behind me. I was able to get an appraisal but what I saw was really odd.

Why the hell is there some stuff in parenthesis? There's a bunch of notable stuff like acting, royal guard, and even an appraisal disguise ring. Is the stuff in parenthesis things that are disguised that my max appraisal and Eye of Empyrea can see through? I can't be certain since there might be stuff hidden behind an even stronger layer of disguise. Another confusing part is the "Princess (Royal Guard)". I can't tell if it means a guard of royal blood or a guard that specifically attends a person of royalty. I wanted to investigate further but appraisal disguise obscured any further details.

Either way, the princess looked really weak considering she was that Beast Lord's daughter. Though, I guess it's a bit unfair to compare her to someone that's S ranked. Besides, she's actually pretty good for a sixteen year old. The only real issue I saw was that her skill levels were low compared to her status level. Maybe someone carried the hell out of her? I highly doubted that the Beast Lord would powerlevel his daughter but that was the only way to explain the discrepancy.

Wait! Wasn't she supposed to be fifteen? Did her birthday just pass?

I concluded that the source of my malaise was the appraisal disguise ring. She probably was not someone too suspicious given that the guildmaster was showing her out. Appraising some people around her, I found them to be court ladies and attendants so that made things seem even more legitimate. There likely wasn't any danger in approaching her.

I slowly made my way back to Fran.

"Looks like we're in the clear. We can go greet her"

"Nn. Got it" she replied.

Since there currently was only one evolved black catkin and it was well known that it was a little girl, they should instead realize she was Fran. The Black Lightning Princess nickname was a good as identification and provided us a decent social standing in these parts.

We approached the princess and this time got close enough for her to notice us.

"Oh. Are you perhaps the Black Lightning Princess?" she asked.

"Nn."

"Oi watch your mouth!" a guard shouted. "You are to address Her Highness with respect!"

Apparently he didn't like how curtly Fran responded. But the princess reproached her guard.

"Stand down!" she said. "Do you recall that my father specifically ordered us to receive her graciously?"

Apparently the Beast Lord already arranged for stuff ahead of time. Shiet, thanks dude.

“Normally I would hold a proper reception for you but unfortunately currently we are in the midst of an emergency,” said the princess.

“Nn. Don’t mind.”

“Thank you so much for understanding.”

The princess bowed apologetically as we watched the adventurers around her scramble to board the horned carriage. It was clear they needed to depart as soon as possible.

Upon getting closer I saw that she looked nothing like the current Beast Lord.

She’s also kinda weak, so I doubt she’s really his daughter. She’s probably a body double, I think?

That would explain her bizzare status page. All evolved beastkin should receive a species specific skill upon awakening. For example, a black tigerkin would get Lightning Rush and a black heavenly tigerkin would get Brilliant Lightning Rush. The Beast Lord is a golden flame lionkin and I saw he had Golden Flame of Extinction, so this gold lionkin should have had something similar.

Hmm... Nothing quite seems to add up. There are too many inconsistencies. She has to be a body double or something.

I doubted that the guildmaster would fall for such a disguise. He was likely aware of the situation. The extravagant escort he commissioned was probably intended to help sell the story and trick people into thinking that the royal guard really was the princess. With this level of preparation, it was impossible for anyone that didn't already know her to tell that she was a fake, especially if they saw her treated and addressed as a member of the royal family.

“Master?”

“Nah, it's nothing. I'm just thinking about the princess and how she's probably a fake.”

“Fake? What do?”

“Good question. Honestly, I dunno.”

There was zero benefit towards pointing out the princess was a fake. We would probably jeopardize some important mission, piss off the Beastkin's Country, and have our backs marked as a result.

In the end, we just saw the “princess” off. She gave us a light bow, boarded her personal carriage, and then quickly departed with the rest of her entourage. She had only exchanged a few words with Fran, but we didn't mind. If anything, it worked in our favour. We wanted to get the capital ASAP and being asked to have tea with the princess or even guard her would have been a bother.

“Alright. Let's go to the guild.”

“Nn.”

And so we turned towards town but Fran suddenly stopped as we found ourselves upon the town's gate.

“What's wrong Fran?”

“Master, something there.”

“Where?”

She pointed towards one of the gate’s supports. There, I picked up a strange presence, like a monster trying to escape detection. The person in question was quite skilled, but not enough to escape Fran’s senses. The only reason why I didn’t pick up on him myself was because he wasn’t hostile. He was just trying to hide, it seemed.

Wow, I’m impressed she actually noticed him.

I decided to scope the mystery man out since he was clearly beyond your average back alley punk.

“Wait here,” I told Fran.

“Nn.”

I teleported closer to better investigate. I found the person in an alley beside the gate. He was hiding in the shadows and using a skill to further hide his presence. I quickly appraised him.

Hmm. So he’s an assassin.

The man’s name was Genro and his class was assassin. He must have been a veteran given his Noble Killer title. I would have ignored him if he was just another punk or hired sword but someone of his caliber shouldn’t be left to his own devices. I decided to capture and forcefully interrogate him. I used telekinesis to freeze him in place, then used earth magic to mold the ground and constrain his lower half.

Fuck yeah! Surprise attack success!

“W-What!?” he exclaimed.

“I’ve caught you.” I spoke to him telepathically. “Don’t try to resist.”

“Don’t fuck wi—”

“You won’t find me. Don’t bother trying”

“Kuh...”

I was actually just hiding on the other side of the wall behind him. But being a sword, I didn't get caught by skills capable of searching for living creatures. Only people with high leveled magic detection skills could track me down.

“Now let's get down to business, Genro.”

“Wha-?!”

“Don't try to lie. I already know everything about you.”

“You have appraisal?!”

“Why are you here? To assassinate the princess?”

“...”

“Silence, huh?”

“...Guh.”

Genro bit into his mouth. He had a poisoned capsule embedded into his tooth. As his face turned purple and his pupils began to widen,

“Nice try asshole. Antidote!”

I healed him.

“What!?” he shouted.

“That was a strong poison. But too bad my healing magic is stronger.”

“-are you kidding me?!”

“And don't bother biting your tongue. I can heal that too.”

“...”

“Now answer my questions. I’ll have to get rough if you don’t.”

“...”

“Well, you asked for it.”

And so I beat him close to death. He didn’t actually tell me anything, but I was able to put together what happened by using Principle of Falsehood whenever he said “no” or “I don’t know.” The results? Genro was an assassin from the Kingdom of Bashar and he was actively targeting Princess Nemea. His plan was to chase down the convoy and kill her. He apparently thinks that princess is real. That body double must be doing a good job if they can draw people of his caliber out. Genro moaned in pain. Now what to do with a half-dead assassin?

I should probably hand him over to the guards if I can find a way to call them over.

While carefully aiming high into the sky, I fired a flame-based explosion above the town. The sound of the blast reverberated throughout the town.

Guards will definitely come running after that. Yep, in fact here comes three of them.

“You there! Freeze!” they shouted.

“Yeah yeah I know.”

I had made a human shaped doppelganger beforehand. I raised its arms as if to surrender and then gestured towards Genro’s body.

“This guy is a Basharian assassin.” I spoke through the doppelganger.

“What? How do you know this?”

“He was after Princess Nemea so I captured him. I’m turning him over to you. Have fun~”

“Wait what do you mea- holy crap he’s vanishing!?”

The guards, stunned, watched my doppelganger melt into thin air. After blinking a few times, they suddenly remembered they had an alleged assassin to deal with. They looked down and saw his hands and feet were already bound, courtesy of me, of course. After watching them take the assassin in, I pat myself on the back for a job well done.

Welp. Back to Fran I go.

After handing off the assassin to the guards, I returned to Fran. Together, we made our way to the Adventurers' Guild. We entered and found the inside to be unusually quiet.

Well a whole load of adventurers just left with the princess so I guess it makes sense for it to be empty.

“Ey! ‘Elcome!”

A loud voice called out to us from the counter. The receptionist was a hearty, middle aged man with a rolled up headband around his forehead, one that would not look out of place at a fisherman's market by the wharf. We approached the counter.

“Interestin’. You the Black Lightning Princess, lassie?” he asked.

“Nn. Me.”

“I knew it! Good to have you ’ere!”

He nodded as he examined Fran's guild card.

Goddamn, this dude is way too lively!

“So what can I help ya with today?” he asked.

“Want to know how to get to capital,” said Fran.

“The capital? Oh, ya wanna go to Vestia? Normally, ya wanna find yourself a horned carriage.”

“Normally?”

“Yeah.” He scratched his head. “They’ve all been rented out for the time being.”

“Princess?”

“Yeah. I told the guildmaster he was spendin’ way too much on the adventurers and the horned carriages, but he didn’t listen to me. Our guildmaster’s the type that really likes to please his higher ups, ya see.”

The guildmaster employed all the adventurers and horned carriages available just to ingratiate himself to the royals.

“But honestly, I can’t really say anythin’ too negative ‘bout it. I can get why he’s goin’ all out for our royals, y’see.”

“Why?” asked Fran.

“O’course. The country’s been doin’ real well since the current Beast Lord took over. He ‘imself used to be an adventurer, so he’s been givin’ the guild a good cut of benefits too.”

At first, I’d thought that the guildmaster was just a tool, but it turned out there was a bit more to it. He and many other adventurers simply adored the Beast Lord and the adventurer-benefiting policies he stood behind.

But will Roserracoon be okay with so many adventurers and horned carriages missing? What if there is an emergency?

“Guild empty, okay?” asked Fran.

“Haha don’t ya worry! We can deal with it lassie” he replied. “This city’s a hotspot as far as adventurers go. They gather here from all over the country, ‘specially if they’re planning on makin’ use of The Shortcut. Give it 10 days or so, and we’ll be just as full as we were this mornin’.”

“Got it,” Fran nodded.

“We’ll ask for reinforcements from the guild in the capital,” he said.
“Couple o’ strong guys would come and keep us covered for a bit. Our guildmaster’s pretty capable too.”

“Guildmaster, strong?” asked Fran.

“Yeah. He’s gotta be to be a guildmaster,” he said. “Plus we’re in this situation cuz of his selfishness, so we’re gonna work ‘im to the bone haha!”

Seems like my worries about the lack of manpower were needless.

“So,” he said. “A normal horse carriage takes ‘round five to six days to reach Vestia, ya see.”

“Route complicated?” asked Fran.

“Route? Naw it’s basically a straight line from ‘ere to Vestia. There’s even a highway built for carriages, so ya can’t get lost.”

“Okay. Thanks.”

“You plannin’ to head over by yerself?”

“Nn.”

“Well, if even half the rumors ‘bout ya are true, then you’d be there sooner without a carriage.”

I don’t know what these rumors are but if they are basically equating us with an A rank adventurer then they’re probably accurate enough.

“They be some crazy rumours. They sa—” the receptionist was about to continue talking, but suddenly stopped himself short.

“Something wrong?” asked Fran.

“Seems like the guildmaster’s callin’ for ya,” he said.

“Nn?”

“Our guildmaster here’s a wind mage. ‘e can send his voice to specific people.”

Huh, interesting.

It definitely sounds plausible if you can control vibrations in the air. Although you’d probably need a good amount of skill in order to make the message clearly reach the person you’re targeting. It seems the guildmaster uses this technique to give orders to people around the guild.

“Just go upstairs?” asked Fran.

“Yeah. Sorry in advance,” he said. “If our guildmaster says somethin’ stupid just smack ‘im.”

“Got it.”

“But he’s not a bad person at heart so don’t worry.”

Those words alone gave me a rough understanding of his character. We went upstairs and entered the indicated door only to find a frivolous looking man standing beyond the doorway.

“Hello there!” he said with a cheap smile. “I am Emyute, the guildmaster of Rosserracoon’s adventurer guild and a Wind Soul Tanukikin.”

“Rank C adventurer, Fran. Black Heavenly Tigerkin.”

“So you’re the legendary beastkin? This is an amazing moment for me. You definitely look as strong as you look cute, so I can see why the Beast Lord approves of you.”

He seems to be an evolved tanukikin, and from the species name, he is a subspecies that specializes in wind magic. Overall the receptionist was right about him. He seemed lighthearted and kind of annoying but not a bad person at heart.

“Had business with me?” asked Fran.

“Straight to the point I see,” he said. “To be honest I wanted a favor from you.”

“Favor?”

“Yes. You see we just captured an foreign assassin. The problem is, his target was the princess.”

“Princess Nemea?”

“Exactly.”

Does he mean the assassin I just caught? Holy shit, information in this town travels really freaking fast. I really didn't think information would have gotten all the way from the guards to the guildmaster even if there were no delays up the chain of command.

“You see, we have a magical item for communications in the guard room,” he said. “Everything they report goes to me. I just got this information a few minutes ago so your timing was absolutely perfect.”

“So, need what?” asked Fran.

“It's simple. Deliver this letter to the capital. You can treat it as a proper quest.”

“Okay to deliver to guild in capital?”

“You can move much faster than a horse-drawn carriage, right?”

We're being directly asked by the guildmaster himself so why not? We're going to the capital anyway and doing this will put the guildmaster in our debt.

“We should accept,” I said.

“Got it,” said Fran. “Will accept quest.”

“Thank you so much!” said the guildmaster. “You’re doing me such a huge favor. Inside this letter is a request for more escorts for the princess so the faster the better okay?”

“But guarded by lots of adventurers already?” asked Fran.

“Hmm...well I guess it’s okay to tell you since I want this letter delivered for sure. But no telling other people, okay? An oath of silence will be included in this quest.”

“No problem” said Fran. “Will swear on tail.”

“The truth is that the princess that just left town is a fake. The real princess is elsewhere.”

Booyah! I fucking called it!

Sending thirty adventurers and all those horned carriages with the fake princess seemed kind of questionable. It turned out it really was all a ploy to make the fake princess seem more real. The assassin I captured had some doubts. There was a chance that other assassins may have started catching on as well.

“Delivering the letter is also for the safety of the real princess,” said the guildmaster.

“Got it.”

“That aside, would you care to join me for a meal before departing?”

“Not hurried?”

“That is that and this is this. It would not do for you to travel on an empty stomach. Above all else I get to have a meal with a lovely lady!”

But Fran is a still a child, you pedophile!

“Hmph.” Fran landed a beautiful jab right into his abdomen.

The guildmaster groaned. “But why...?” he asked.

“Receptionist said: ‘If our guildmaster says somethin’ stupid just smack ‘im’.”

“Damn him...ugh that hurt.”

“Hurry up. Tell way to get to capital.”

“Fine...”

And so we got the letter and managed to extract detailed directions to the capital from the guildmaster. It was pretty much just a straight line down the highway with only one branch somewhere in the middle. We had to turn right there then just follow the road. Information in hand, we exited the guild and made our way out of town to a place suitable for departure.

“Alright let’s do this!”

“Urushi, do best.”

“Woof!”

Fran mounted Urushi.

“Fly, Urushi! Fly!” I commanded.

“Woof woof!”

Urushi accelerated into a full run. His top speed was so fast we might even reach the capital in a single day.

“Aww hell yeah! YAHOOOOOOOOOO~!”

“Yahoo!”

“Woof woof!”

Urushi's clearly having fun since it's his first time running without hindrances in quite some time. Wait. Holy shit, he's still accelerating. We might arrive even earlier than I anticipated.

Urushi, full of spirit, raced non-stop down the highway connecting Roserracoon and Vestia. After a mere eight hours of travel, we spotted the capital city looming in the horizon. This was the first time I had travelled to any capital city since reincarnating as a sword, so I was absolutely stunned by the sight. Barbara was the largest city I'd been to so far and it paled in comparison to Vestia. It was night time, so the whole city was illuminated by torchlight and magical fire. The flickering lights dancing on the massive 20 meter high ramparts were magnificent to behold. The Royal Castle could be seen standing tall over the walls and towering over the city. Its spire was easily the tallest building I had seen yet, easily visible even from a distance.

"You'll think they'll let us in at this time of night?"

"Nnn... Don't mind camping out."

"Yeah but I'd rather we not. Let's just keep that in mind as a backup plan."

Some cities closed their gates after dark as a preventive measure against thieves and monsters, and I wasn't sure if the capital had similar policies. As we approached, we thankfully found that the gates were still open. Merchants and adventurers were lined up outside the gate in an orderly fashion. There appeared to be some formal procedures that must be taken care of before being allowed to enter. As expected of a capital city, the security was much tighter.

We joined a line that was around twenty people long with Urushi once again in his smaller form. People were already nervous because it was night time and we didn't want to exacerbate that by having a giant wolf suddenly appear in front of them.

I wanted to casually join the line without drawing any attention but apparently Fran stands out a bit too much for that. We're getting a lot of stares.

It seemed people were surprised to see a girl her age travelling with only a wolf by her side. Even more so that she was a black catkin, which was supposed to be the weakest of the beastkin tribes. Those that curiously observed her would realize that she had evolved, which caused them to be taken aback.

"Huh, wha?"

"Are my eyes actually working?"

"No way! It's her, the..."

"Dude, it's the Black Lightning Princess."

"Black Lightning Princess? Who's that?"

The merchants and adventurers around us whispered in hushed voices. But since we're already used to it, Fran, Urushi, and I paid no heed to it. After waiting in line for a few minutes, we were approached by three catkin.

"Umm... sorry to bother you. Are you perhaps the Black Lightning Princess?"

"Nn?"

"We call ourselves The Six Whiskers. We're a party of catkin. We're huge fans of you and your accomplishments. "

The speaker was a young red catkin. Standing behind him were his companions, another red catkin who looked to be in his twenties and an older blue catkin likely in his thirties or forties.

“Dang... She really did evolve.”

“Looks like those rumors were true.”

The two whispered to one another. I was on guard against the blue catkin. I expected him to try badmouthing Fran, but he did nothing of the sort. If anything, his face showed only a look of admiration.

Huh, I’m surprised to see a blue catkin that isn’t a scumbag. Though, I probably shouldn’t be, given the Beast Lord’s black catkin-related reforms.
[1]

In the end, the Six Whiskers didn’t have any particular business with Fran besides wanting to greet her. They were mostly interested in her because she evolved. At first, I got a little nervous over questions that might expose the exploit we used to evolve her, but thankfully that didn’t come up. Our discussions did however inform them about the conditions needed for black catkin to evolve. We explained to them that black catkin needed to either slay a thousand Evil Beings or defeat an A ranked one in single combat to evolve. It was good way to kill some time while waiting in line.

As more people started to approach us, a huge figure suddenly cut in through the crowd. The man stood two meters tall and was emanating a clear aura of hostility.

“Hey you,” he said. “Are you the brat they call the ‘Black Lightning Princess’?”

“Nn? Mhm.”

“Gwahaha! My shitty uncle must be losing it if he even lost to a brat like you!”

I was filled with an unpleasant feeling when he burst into laughter. I appraised him and saw that he was a white rhinokin, not yet evolved. His name was Guendalfa. Given his race and the similarity of the names, I could only think of one acquaintance that he could possibly be related to:

Goldalfa, the white rhinokin and Beast Lord's guard that fought Fran in the tournament at Ulmutt and lost.

"Hey Fran. I think this guy's related to Goldalfa."

"Goldalfa's acquaintance?" she said.

"Hah!" he snorted. "A little brat is addressing you without a title. Look how far you've fallen." He pointed to his chest. "I am Guendalfa. The one you speak of, Goldalfa, is a coward. As much as I hate to admit it, he's my father's older brother."

"Coward?"

Fran's face twitched in annoyance. Goldalfa was a warrior Fran came to respect through fierce battle. She did not like some condescending little shit disrespecting him.

"He's a fucking coward," said Guendalfa. "He threw away his position of patriarch of our clan just to become the Beast Lord's little bitch."

"Not coward. Strong, brave warrior!"

"Strong? After losing to someone as fucking puny as you? What a joke. How about I kick your little ass and prove how much of a pussy he really is?"

"You're free to take him down but be mindful of our surroundings." I tried to calm Fran down. "We don't want to be refused entry because we caused a scene."

"Nn. Change locations." said Fran.

"Haaaaaaah?" he sneered. "Why? You scared? Come at me, brat!"

"Don't wanna cause a scene."

"Stuff your bitch-ass mouth and just fucking do it!"

Fran did not respond.

“Hey Fran. Calm down a bit. Rather, you’re totally ready to go at it aren’t you!?”

“No problem. Instant victory.”

Welp we’ve passed the point of no return.

The crowd began to shout.

“Don’t worry Black Lightning Princess!”

“We’ll testify that he started it!”

“Go kick his ass!”

Oi! Peanut Gallery! Don’t encourage her dammit!

I quickly used Stonewall to enclose Guendalfa and Fran to block them from the surroundings.

“Take this. Awakening. Brilliant Lightning Rush. Serious Punch.”

“Guboh-!” Fran’s lightning straight landed square on Guendalfa’s chest.

“-GWUAAAHHHHHHHHHHH!”

ONE PUNCH FRAN!

Guendalfa was sent flying, crashing straight through the stonewall I erected. His armor was completely caved in and blood was flying from his mouth.

Fran shook her wrist.

“Hmph. So weak for talking so big?”

[1] For those that don't remember. The beast lord's reforms fought back against black catkin slavery and effectively ran a lot of blue catkin out of their original line of work. Master is stating that fewer of them are criminals because they had to pick up more respectable jobs.

“You, weak,” said Fran.

Guendalfa did not reply

“So I don’t think he can respond very well while unconscious...”

“That punch? Goldalfa would barely feel.”

“Well, yeah. Goldalfa was almost immortal. Not a fair comparison.”

So what the hell are we supposed to do with a knocked out rhinokin anyway...?

Fran wasn’t satisfied and was glaring terribly at Guendalfa.

“Get up.”

She kicked him, but the only response she got was an unconscious groan. The rhinokin showed no sign of waking, so she kicked him again and again. A guard came out of the station and approached us.

“Okay okay, that’s enough, everyone break it up,” he said.

“Hmph,” said Fran, giving one last kick.

“Oh man though. Hell of a way to knock him out in one hit!”

Oh shit! We may have gone way too far. I hope they’ll still let us in.

The guard poured a generous amount of recovery potion on Guendalfa's body and spoke to Fran.

"Sooo, can you let him go now? I know he was being an ass, but I don't think he deserves to be killed."

Huh? So we're not in trouble at all? Wait. If he knew he was being a little shit, this means that he saw the confrontation leading up to the fight. Why didn't he stop us?

"Didn't stop, why?" asked Fran.

"To be honest, he had it coming and I wanted to see someone beat the crap out of him," said the guard. "I already knew how strong you were, so I thought you would be the perfect person for the job."

"Nn. Easy," Fran boasted.

Oh god dammit Fran. Don't go tooting your god damn horn just 'cause he praised your ability to beat up some random grunt.

"I used to know Goldalfa back in the day," said the guard. "He really saved my ass when I was starting up myself. I really looked up to him. Guen too. He was really attached to his uncle back in they day. He would go on and on about how he was going to do everything to help ol' Gold out once he became the family Patriarch."

Goldalfa as some sort of patriarch? Yeah, I could see that. The guy's mad strong, so I could totally see him pulling it off.

"Goldalfa became the Beast Lord's guard and renounced his position before it was even passed to him," continued the guard, "Guen saw that as betraying expectations. The position went to Guen's father instead. And as of recent, Guen's started channeling his emotions into surpassing his uncle."

So that's why he challenged Fran. If he could beat Fran, who beat Goldalfa, then the implication is that he would be stronger than Goldalfa. He's oversimplifying it and kind of wrong, but I can at least see where he's coming from.

"Sorry about him," said the guard. "I'll make sure to tell him off. I'm not sure if this is enough to make up for this, but if you need any help just call me. I'll do whatever I can. You have my word."

The guard bowed then effortlessly picked up Guendalfa with one hand and slung him over his shoulder. I was shocked because the guard was a scrawny man and Guendalfa was no lightweight. After a quick appraisal I saw that the guard was a high leveled oxkin on the verge of evolving.

Not bad for a city guard.

He was apparently going to be throwing Guendalfa into the slammer for a bit so he could cool his head.

"At this point I think we should just forgive him. It's not like dealing with him really cost us anything, after all. "

"Nn. Good exercise."

After that we managed to enter the capital without further incident. We got its location of the Adventurers Guild from a guard when passing through the gate, so we didn't have to stop and look for it en route. Passing through the city had once again demonstrated to us the sheer amount of respect with which beastkin treated those that had evolved. Not a single beastkin adventurer messed with on our way to the guild, and all the non-beastkin that seemed to want to were quickly shut down by their buddies. Guendalfa had been the only odd one out.

Vestia was an enormous city, so we expected the guild to be scaled up proportionally. But upon reaching it, we found that it was disappointingly only about the same size as the guilds in Roserraccoon and Argentlappn. Fran entered the guild.

"Good evening," she said.

“Welcome,” replied the receptionist. “How can I hel- ahh. Would you happen to be Fran?”

“Nn. Know me?”

“Yes! All of us guild staff in the beastkin country know you. The staff from the Argentlaphn branch sent out a message from a magic communicator informing the other branches of your arrival.”

Wait, there’s such an item for long distance communication? That’s probably how the guildmaster in Roseraccoon quickly received the info on the assassin I nabbed. Thinking about it, It only makes sense for every branch to have such a device. But then, why would they need to have us deliver a letter if they have something that convenient? I thought they gave us this letter because they had no other way to send messages over long distances. Then again, Dias did mention they he talked to other guildmasters around the time of the tournament. At this point I don’t know what to make of the situation so let’s just hand over the letter.

“This. From Roseraccoon’s guildmaster,” said Fran.

“A letter?” The receptionist received the envelope. “Let’s see. Hmm... I see. There’s no mistake. Please wait a moment.”

After examining the seal on the letter, the receptionist got up and hurried to an office in the back. After a couple minutes of waiting, she came back, brought us around the counter, and took us to the back.

“Guildmaster, I have brought her,” said the receptionist.

“Good work. Please return to your post,” said the voice of an old man.

“Understood.”

We entered the office and saw an old man with a crooked back, a set of white fox ears, and a white tail.

Normally, I’d get all excited if upon encountering someone with real fox ears and a fluffy tail, but an old man...? Yeah, no.

“I am Melrosse,” he said. “Master of the Vestia’s Adventurers’ Guild.”

“C ranked adventurer, Fran.”

“Hohoho I see. You are even more powerful than the rumors suggest. Indeed very reliable.”

My first impression was that he was just a kind old man. But his eyes carried a very sharp glint as they evaluated Fran.

There’s more to him than he gives off. We can’t underestimate him.

Of Letters and Items

Melrosse opened the letter and read it carefully.

“I see... Well done, Black Lightning Princess! We will hereby move to immediately support the princess.”

So the letter really was about guarding the princess. But again, why use a letter when they have magical long distance communicators?

“Why letter?” asked Fran telepathically.

“Good question,” I replied.

“Nn. Faster to use item.”

It seemed Fran and I were wondering the same thing.

“You were of great help,” said Melrosse.

“Nn...”

“Ho? What is it young one? Your face clearly shows unvoiced dissatisfaction.”

What!? How did he know that?

It really bothered me that he had accurately interpreted Fran’s expression. Fran was never the type of person to wear her emotions and that was true even now. The change in her expression was so subtle that I’d assumed I was the only one capable of noticing it. I unconsciously appraised him before I could stop myself. Since I'd already gone ahead and done it, I decided I might as well check his skills and confirmed that he didn't have anything that would allow him to read her mind.

"Could tell, how?" asked Fran.

"Ho. When you have lived as long as I have you can observe what other people often miss."

Seriously? Just pure wisdom from age? What the hell!.

"...Can use item. Why send letter?" asked Fran.

"Hoho, so it was the letter that was bothering you. There is a significant reason why we chose to use that method in particular. Would you like me to explain it?"

"Nn."

"Very well."

The guildmaster held the letter out to Fran.

"Okay to read?" she asked.

"Indeed."

Fran and I took a look at the contents. The letter described how a Basharian assassin was caught in the beastkin country and that the evident danger was reason to provide the princess with additional guards. It didn't seem like anything out of the ordinary save the code-like numbers that followed the rest of the letter's content. I glanced at Melrose and found him carefully observing Fran.

"Weird numbers? Meaning?" asked Fran.

"They contain information pertaining to the princess' destination," he said.
"We encrypt the information for security reasons."

The guildmaster went on to explain why they used a letter and not the long distance communication tool. It turned out the Basharians also had similar tools, and the concern was that they could eavesdrop on conversations in the beastkin country. Information on assassinations and invasion plans had apparently been compromised in the past. If that was the case, I could see why they would rely on a physical letter for top secret information.

“If we knew the exact methods they used to eavesdrop on us we could deploy countermeasures,” he frowned.

“Not known?” asked Fran.

“Yes, their methods are unknown to us. That is the only reason we fall back on more traditional methods of communication, like letters. Strong couriers like you are essential to the swift relay of information.”

I was using Principle of Falsehood during the entire conversation. All the parts that the guildmaster said about Bashar was true. But the very last part about it being the only reason was a lie. It could be that simply an organization as large as the guild would naturally have one or two secrets. But I couldn't help but feel bothered that we were used for more than just confidential communication..

I hope we weren't used for something malicious.

I discussed my suspicions with Fran.

“Nn. Will ask discreetly,” she said.

“Yeah, let's try not to make an enemy of the guild. If he doesn't talk then just drop the matter.”

“Nn.”

Fran turned to the guildmaster.

“What are other reasons?”

Oi! What's with that straight-ball question!? There's nothing discreet about that!

"Hmm?" said Melrosse.

"If need speed, then send letter by bird," said Fran. "Still hiding something. Wanted me to deliver. Why?"

"Hm. You are certainly right that a messenger bird would be quicker, or some other method of communication too. But we still have our reasons."

"Which are?"

"Not telling. This information is not privy to a C ranker."

Welp we just got stonewalled by the bureaucracy. Can't do anything about that.

"Don't glare at me like that," he said. "I'll still tell you what I can. You see, that letter was intended to verify whether or not our country's guilds could trust you."

"Some sort of test?" asked Fran.

"No comment. But just like how you are doubting me right now, we were also doubting you since you came to our country. You have yet to do anything to earn our trust."

And so they asked us to deliver a top secret letter? I don't know how it proves our trustworthiness, but I'm glad we actually did our job properly and refrained from breaking the seal on the envelope. We were accustomed to being welcomed with open arms in the beastkin country simply because Fran evolved. Most of the people we met had assumed that Fran was someone that would help them in their time of need. But in reality, not all beastkin would necessarily ally themselves with the beastkin country. As far as the guild was concerned, we'd started off on the list of those that couldn't be trusted, but with this task under our belts we were under far less scrutiny.

“Got it,” said Fran.

“Hoh. So are you satisfied with this explanation?” he asked.

“For now.”

“Very good. We are grateful for the work you have done for us, so we shall give you a suitable reward.”

“Nn. Got it.”

We exited the guildmaster’s room and headed to the counter where we received our reward. By the time we headed to an inn recommended by the adventurers guild it was well into the night. Thankfully the inn had a receptionist posted 24 hours a day. It was quite suitable for adventurers who did not have consistent schedules and would often request lodging and random times at night..

When we got to our room Fran jumped headfirst into the bed.

“At least take off your cloak.”

“Uuu...”

“I’ll cast purification on you and clean you up.”

“Nmmm”

“Come on. Get into the covers too, okay?”

“Mmph.”

I tucked Fran, who was half asleep, into bed using telekinesis.

“Goodnight.”

“Nn.”

Fran was out within three seconds.

Children do need their sleep after all.

Tomorrow's the day we finally visit the castle. I was a bit concerned about getting around at first, but luckily the guildmaster said that he would provide us with a guide. Hopefully we'll finally get to meet Kiara, the older catkin who was instrumental towards Fran's growth. I wonder what kind of person she is. Hopefully someone that will spoil Fran like a child.

Fran and I were both eager to get on with the day, so we headed over to the Adventurers' Guild as soon as we finished our morning routines.

"Good Morning Fran," greeted the receptionist.

"Morning."

"Are you planning to head to the castle right now?"

"Nn."

"Understood. Please wait a moment while I go retrieve your guide."

"Nn."

We found a seat in the guild's lobby while we waited. There wasn't much to do besides observing the guild staff members as they went about their day-to-day activities, so we resigned ourselves to watching them.

"Hey babe! Won't you do dinner with me tonight?"

"Hmph. Like you don't say that to every girl you meet."

"Hey! Isn't this way to cheap for these materials?"

"Nah, they're in terrible shape so they aren't worth crap."

Most of the receptionists were conducting themselves rather unprofessionally. Their default approach was to deal with the adventurers as casually as they would their buddies. Fran was the only one they treated with courtesy and respect.

We were currently the center of attention and received many a curious glance from the adventurers around us. In spite of that, we remained undisturbed. Anyone that tried to approach us would immediately be stopped by one of the guild's staff members. We eavesdropped on their conversations and overheard them claim that there were orders to ensure Fran was left alone.

We couldn't help but wonder why the guild was preventing people from approaching us, but we didn't want to bother the guild's staff while they were busy, so the question remained unanswered until one of the staff members approached Fran and served her a cup of tea.

"The guildmaster's ordered us not to let anybody bother you," she said. "You are the only evolved black catkin, and adventurers are a curious bunch, so he was concerned that you would be subject to the discomfort of becoming a circus attraction."

Preventing curious onlookers from bothering has eliminated the chance that an unfortunate confrontation would ignite between Fran and some newbie ignorant of her strength. It was a preventative measure that not only allowed the guild to protect its adventurers from getting hurt, but also benefit us by keeping the morons off our backs. It was a win-win situation.

The guildmaster is doing us a favor here, so we better thank him later. Though, it seems being left alone is making Fran awfully bored.

The receptionist we first interacted with returned by the time Fran had finished her cup of tea, our supposed guide in tow.

"Guendalfa?" said Fran.

Fran was frightfully bad at remembering people's names but even she wouldn't forget the name of someone she met the day before.

“Yeah, I heard about that little scuffle you had with him yesterday,” said the receptionist. “If you would like, I could make arrangements for a replacement guide. What do you say?”

If they heard about yesterday’s fight, why bother bringing him out in the first place?

While I was thinking that Guendalfa suddenly prostrated himself in front of Fran. Seeing him with his hands, face, and knees all pressed against the floor really emphasized the sheer size of his frame. He was so massive that he was still taller than Fran even in his current state.

“My deepest apologies, Black Lightning Princess!” he shouted, digging his forehead into the ground. “My unseemly actions yesterday were truly regrettable.”

His attitude had taken a full 180.

“I am uncertain if this will suffice as compensation but I offer my services to you during the entirety of your stay in the capital,” he said.

I was deeply suspicious of him just trying to get closer to Fran again for some banal revenge plot but his eyes were full of sincerity. A single glance was enough to convince me that his actions had been driven by earnesty and earnestly alone.

“Ate something bad?” asked Fran, crept out.

“After being blown away by you and then lectured by my buddy, Brass, I have realized how deeply shallow I have been behaving,” he said.

“Brass?”

“Brass was the gate guard that carried me off yesterday.”

“The oxkin?”

“Yes.” Guendalfa raised his head. “Black Lightning Princess! I plan to use this opportunity to turn my life around. But first I must show gratitude to the one who opened my eyes. Please let me be of service to you.”

“What should we do, Fran?” I asked her telepathically. His change was so sudden that it left me at a loss.

“Nn. Don’t care.”

It seems she no longer bore any animosity towards Guendalfa. A good night’s sleep had been more than enough for her to forgive him. While we had our internal dialogue, the receptionist whispered in Fran’s ear.

“The rhinokin are a tribe of warriors,” she said. “It’s natural for them to show respect to those who defeat them in combat. On top of that, you are an evolved beastkin while he is not. His respectful attitude is completely naturally.”

So basically he’s a musclehead that believes power and strength are everything?

“Also, he’s the son of the rhinokin patriarch,” continued the receptionist. “His face is well known, he has standing, and some authority. He is probably the best guide you could get.”

In the end, we decided to accept Guendalfa as our guide. He seemed to have seriously reflected on his actions. Sending him away and finding a new guide seemed like more like a waste of time than anything.

“Look forward to working with you,” said Fran.

“No, it is my honor to be of use to you,” he replied.

“Nn.”

“I know you want to go to the castle, but could I perhaps interest you in a tour of the capital? I was born and raised in Vestia and I could take you to the best spots around town.”

“No thanks. Person want to meet as soon as possible.”

“I see. Is that person in the royal castle?”

“Nn. Black catkin: Kiara.”

“Master Kiara? Understood.”

“Acquainted?”

“Yes. I have been her disciple since I was a child.”

Given that his former attachment to Goldalfa, one of Kiara’s disciples, his relationship with the old black catkin came as no surprise.

“Understood. I will introduce you to her,” he said.

“Please do.”

“Leave it to me.”

Guendalfa stuck his chest out proudly as he nodded. He seemed really confident. I was almost inclined to think that we could actually trust him to get the job done.

276. Vestia's Royal Castle

Chapter 276. Vestia's Royal Castle

Vestia's Royal Castle

TL: SupremeTentacle

ED: Exkalamity

Guendalfa led us out of the Adventurers' Guild and onto the street after boasting that he would introduce us to Kiara. His massive frame parted the bustling crowd like water, making it really easy for us to follow behind him. We could see the Royal Castle from the Adventurers' Guild but that didn't mean it was close by. That was just how big it was; its sheer size messed with my sense of distance. It took us twenty minutes to walk from the Adventurers' Guild to the gate of the Royal Castle. As we approached, we saw that the walls around the castle were just as tall and wide as the walls surrounding Vestia. There was even a moat carved around the castle like a muddy serpent gouged into the earth, complete with a wooden drawbridge featuring a stone portcullis on top.

"This castle was designed as the capital city's final bastion," explained Guendalfa. He seemed to have decided to play the role of tour guide for us. "If need be, the castle can be turned into a fully armed and fortified stronghold. Any enemies that manage to breach the city's walls will have to deal with a second set."

As we approached, a guard appeared out of a house next to the drawbridge on the town side.

"Halt," he said. "You are now entering upon the royal castle. All who wish to pass must first validate their identities."

Guendalfa approached the guard.

"I am Guendalfa, son of the Patriarch of the Rhinokin. With me is the Black Lightning Princess herself! I vouch for her identity on my honour. I also carry a letter of recommendation from the guildmaster in Vestia.”

He handed over a black card and a sealed letter to the guard. After opening up the letter and reading the contents carefully, the guard looked at us in disbelief.

“You could get an audience with the king with this letter,” he muttered.

An audience with the king? What the hell kind of recommendation did that guildmaster write us? He puts way too much faith into us for just completing one delivery quest.

It would make sense if the guildmaster had planned to give Fran such a recommendation all along with the quest as a pretext to give it to her. The guild probably wanted to build ties with the first black catkin to evolve since the tribe’s downfall. Fran may as well have been a living legend, and because of that, the guild wanted to gain her favor early into her career. Likewise, the Beast Lord had given her a crest with his personal ensignia engraved into it back in Ulmutt right after the tournament. He was probably thinking the same thing.

Actually given his musclehead personality, probably not. But Royce, his aide, had definitely thought that quickly establishing a working relationship with Fran was prudent given her circumstances.

I urged Fran to give the guard the crest. It was most likely a more trustworthy form of ID, and I figured there was no harm in showing it.

“Nn.”

“This is...!” The guard’s eyes bulged from their sockets. Guendalfa also stared daggers into the crest.

“P-P-Please wait one moment, ma’am!” stuttered the guard and he dashed back into the guardhouse. We saw him hold the crest up to a crystal shard, which flashed briefly upon activation. Afterwards, the guard ran back to us and gingerly handed the crest back to Fran.

“H-here’s your ID back, ma’am,” he said. “Everything is in order. Please enter!”

He signaled behind him and the gates of the portcullis across the drawbridge slowly began to open.

“Amazing! You even had the Beast Lord’s crest with you,” said Guendalfa. “You didn’t need me at all. You should have left someone like me behind.”

“Not true.”

Fran was right. Even if we wouldn’t have needed Guendalfa to pass through the gates, he really helped smoothen the process out by escorting us and interacting with the guard on our behalf. More importantly, his company had made us seem like the real deal. I was sure the guards would have doubted us more and spent more time investigating our motives had he not been present. I had to say, his change in attitude had really benefited us. Guendalfa’s behaviour had come as a bit of a surprise, but it was by no means unprecedented. Goldalfa had also become more deferential to Fran after losing to her in single combat.

After passing through the gates on the castle side, Fran and I noticed another set of walls set up down the road.

“Another wall?”

“Yes,” said Guendalfa. “The castle is right past it.”

“Why two walls?”

“The wall ahead of us separates the nobles and the common folk. The outskirts are designated as the living quarters for the guards and servants. It also works as a place for merchants to do business. Behind the wall is where you’ll find all the nobles.”

“How to enter?”

“Allow me to show you. Please follow me.”

We walked along side the wall and found a massive gate as big as the entrance to the city. There was what appeared to be a large mansion built next to the gate. Guendalfa led us inside. The building's lobby was enormous. It contained enough space to comfortably house several dozen people on top of the numerous guards and other staff members already stationed throughout. The rhinokin led us up to the counter and spoke to a receptionist.

"I am Guendalfa, and with me is the Black Lightning Princess. We are here to request an audience with my master, Kiara."

"Very well, we will process your request," said the receptionist. "Please allow us to guide you to a private waiting room in the meantime."

Fran's gaze curiously flickered back and forth as a guard guided us through the mansion. We went up stairways and down hallways, passing by many decorated waiting rooms before finally arriving at our destination.

"You see," said Guendalfa, resuming his role as tour guide, "the royal family had this mansion built as an extravagant waiting room next to the gate. They wanted as many lounges and private rooms as possible. With security being as high as it is, it takes time to process even just one person's entry request. And really, you can't have nobles lining up outside like at some festival stall, can you?"

The guard stopped in front of intricately patterned door and opened it. Inside was the most lavishly decorated room we've seen yet, complete with a sofa and two armchairs around a coffee table. It also contained a fireplace, an ornate desk with matching chair, a bookshelf, and a window that let the gentle sunlight seep through. Fran and Guendalfa sat down on the sofa, with Guendalfa sinking a little deeper into the cushions than Fran. After a couple minutes, there was a knock on the door. A maid entered with a cart featuring some freshly brewed tea and a variety of pastries. The moment the maid set the food onto the coffee table, Fran lunged at it. Guendalfa did the same after waiting for her to grab the first bite. Together, the two hungry companions devoured the snacks they were presented in less than a minute.

After letting out a contented sigh, Guendalfa once again began to speak.

“You really are something, Black Lightning Princess.”

“Nn?” said Fran, sipping on a cup of tea.

“You see, this room was made to entertain people of noble birth. Normally, common folk wouldn’t feel right being in such a fancy place, but you look right at home,” he said. “The food too. What they just brought us was some high class stuff but you scarfed it right down like it was ‘nuthin.’”

“You too.”

“Well of course. I am a noble, so this much is normal for me.”

Fran and I stared.

What the hell! He was a blue blood?! How the hell does he still have peerage given the attitude he was going around with?

“What? Why are you so surprised?” laughed Guendalfa. “I know I don’t seem like a noble, but my father is technically the patriarch of an entire tribe of beastkin, so I’m used to all the bells and frills that comes with having status.”

After that surprising revelation, a knock came from the door.

“Excuse me. Madam Fran, Mr. Guendalfa, Lady Kiara will see you now.”

The door opened and two maids were waiting for us. We followed them deep into the castle, passing by large banquet halls and wide ballrooms along the way.

“You used to be able to find her on the practice grounds in the outskirts of the castle,” said Guendalfa. “But lately her health is getting worse, so she’s been confined to her room.”

“Bad health? Will be okay?” asked Fran.

“I’m worried too,” he replied. “She is getting pretty old. But the fact that they let us see her means she’s alright.”

It can't be help. She's around 70 years old.

"It's finally time to meet Kiara," I said to Fran.

"Nn."

Kiara

After taking us deep into the heart of the castle, the maid responsible for guiding us stopped in front of a door with a red carpet and turned around to face us.

“We have arrived at Lady Kiara’s private bedchambers,” she said. “Please wait a moment as I seek permission to enter.”

Fran and Guendalfa nodded as the maid turned around and knocked gently on the door.

“Lady Kiara? Guendalfa and the Black Lightning Princess are here to see you.”

“Yeah, come in,” said a voice from inside the room.

The maid opened the door for us. There was a desk with a chair next to the window, a full length mirror next to a vanity closet, an armchair in the corner, and a king sized bed in the middle. All the furniture and interior was done with gold or gold leaf, but the designs weren’t gaudy. Rather, they were carefully crafted such that they appeared subdued and pleasing to the eye. The curtains, carpet, and bedsheets were all made of luxurious cloth or silk. The entire room was cleaned and tidy. It was obvious that its inhabitant was being treated as a guest of honor.

An old, black catkin sat upright on the bed. We knew that she was supposed to be a black catkin, but she didn’t quite look the part. The hair on her ears and tail had long turned completely white. Her posture was good, which indicated that she was probably still active in spite of how haggard and thin her body appeared. She was tall too. It looked like she could probably reach 170 cm when standing. She definitely did not give the impression of a frail old lady whose body was wasting away.

She looked at Fran with a gaze of such intensity that I was intimidated for a brief moment. I felt like my heart stopped and that I was pierced with daggers. If I were still human, I probably would have instinctively prostrated myself on the ground out of fear. Fran, however, was completely unperturbed.

“You’re Kiara?”

“And who exactly told you that you could speak to me so bluntly?”

“Beast Lord.”

“Hah!” She slapped her knee. “Good to know. I’ll be sure to smack him hard next time I see him.”

Whoa she definitely speaks pretty brusquely. But, surprisingly, it fits her quite well.

“To answer your question,” she continued: “Yes. I am Kiara. I know the snot-nosed brat over there.” She jerked her chin at Guendalfa.

“Snot nosed? I’m already 22!” retorted Guendalfa

“Quiet you!” yelled Kiara. “Everyone under 40 is a snot-nosed brat to me. So, who’s the girl?”

“Master Kiara,” said Guendalfa, surprised. “Have you not heard of the Black Lightning Princess?”

“Lady Kiara just woke up today,” said the maid who guided us to this room. “For the past twenty days Lady Kiara has been in a coma.”

Holy shit! A coma for twenty days!? If she was out for that long it’s not too surprising that she hasn’t heard of Fran yet.

I took a closer look and saw that her cheeks were a little sunken and her lips were really dry. Her arms looked rather thin and brittle, indicating that they had been out of use.

“She is-” began the maid, but Kiara interrupted her.

“Hold up.” She gestured to Fran and said in a gentle voice, “Come here dear.”

Fran trotted over to the bedside.

“What’s your name?”

“Fran.”

Kiara opened her arms and Fran embraced her. At first it was a light hug but after a few seconds, Kiara suddenly pulled Fran tightly into her.

“All these years I feared that the goal I sought was unachievable,” she said. “Now I have proof of success standing right before me. Thank you Fran, for coming to me and showing me that my journey was not meaningless.”

Kiara buried her face into Fran’s shoulder. I felt my heart twist when I heard what she said. Her whisper, which carried the weight of 50 years of doubt, uncertainty, and resolve, seemed to reverberate throughout the room.

After a few moments of silence, Kiara eventually calmed down and released Fran.

“Can you give me the details?” asked Kiara. “How did you do it? Unless there is some reason you can’t tell me. I won’t force you.”

“Of course,” Fran nodded. “But heard Granny Kiara should already know method.”

“Who told you that?”

“Dias”

“Wha...? So he still remembers me...?”

“Nn. Aurel and Rumina too.”

Kiara’s eyes began to waver, and she smiled.

“Those fools,” she said. “They should have forgotten me and moved on long ago.”

“They didn’t. Always looking for you,” said Fran.

Kiara sighed, “What I have is just a hypothesis. Let me get more comfortable first.”

Kiara turned and got out of the bed. Guendalfa frantically held his hand out but she shooed him away and sat herself down in her armchair.

“So it all started back in the day in Ulmutt. I ventured into the depths of a dungeon, only to discover that its master was an evolved black catkin,” she said. “That was how I met Rumina 50 years ago. She was really too sweet for her own good. She offered to help me evolve, but her method was too contrived. It required her to turn herself into an evil being.”

Fran blinked.

“Turn into evil being, how?”

“In the past, one of the Black Cat Tribe’s chiefs invoked a ritual to drown our species in the power of the Evil God,” said Kiara. “It was for something stupid like for the sake of strengthening the tribe. Like many members of the tribe, Rumina had also been caught up in the ritual’s processes. She too had the power of the Evil God embedded into her.”

She grimaced at this point.

“So she told me to stand back, and I did, and suddenly my Evil Presence Detection skill went crazy. I felt a disgusting presence coming from Rumina, one that only grew stronger and stronger as I stared it down. She was probably using her powers as a dungeon master to unlock some tainted part of her soul or something. Anyway, I knew whatever she was doing was bad news, so I ran over and punched her. Told her that I didn't want to evolve if it meant losing a friend. And that was the end of that."

"But why turn into evil being?" asked Fran.

"I wanted to find that out myself," said Kiara. "After thinking about it, I recalled the research I did on our clan's inability to evolve. There was a lot of misinformation being spread about at the time. Some of it was by our own tribe members trying to save face or keep the morale of the younger kinsman up. Some of it was spread by blue catkin that just wanted to mess with us. And there wasn't much written evidence wherever I searched."

She sighed.

"One of the few items that came to mind was an old, torn-up scroll that was barely readable. The parts that I could read said that our tribe invoked the Gods' wrath and we were cursed. We needed to defeat something on the level of the Evil God to break that curse. I think Rumina was trying to become that evil thing herself. She wanted to let me defeat her so that I would evolve."

Rumina folded her arms and leaned back as she wrapped up her explanation.

"So, that's my theory," she said. "How does that match up to your experiences?"

Fran spoke up after Kiara finished talking about her journey and her understanding of evolving black catkin.

"Got it," said Fran. "Kiara not wrong, but more than one way."

"What! There was more than one way?"

"Mhmm. Kiara's way would redeem entire tribe. Must kill one S ranked evil being with only black catkin. But two easier ways to just evolve self. First, kill 1000 evil beings. Second, solo kill 1 A ranked evil being."

"That's it?"

"Nn."

Kiara's shoulders began to tremble. I thought she was about to cry or something, so her next actions took me by surprise.

"Kukukuku... Ahahahahahahaha!"

Kiara grinned, threw her head back, and roared with laughter. Her eyes teared up as she pushed up on the sides of the armchair and jumped onto her feet.

"Mia! Bring me my sword!"

Fran blinked a few times in surprise. Guendalfa's eyes shot wide open. The maid, however, was unperturbed.

“What are you planning, Lady Kiara?”

“Isn’t it obvious?” Kiara let out a fierce grin. “I’m going to beat the shit out of 1000 goblins.”

“You have to be kidding me,” said the maid. “It was only yesterday that you were still in a coma.”

“You think a couple of goblins will get the best of me just because I didn’t get a little rest? Not a chance! I can kick their asses all day any day!”

Guendalfa tried to usher Kiara back into her seat but she darted right past him towards the closet. Her belongings clattered about as she rummaged through its contents.

“It must have been fate that brought Fran here to see me the day I open my eyes again,” said Kiara. “I will not let this chance pass me by. All these years, I’ve been wondering why that detestable beast lord didn’t kill me even though I held the secrets of evolving black catkin. Now I understand: he didn’t need to kill me at all. What I knew was the hardest way to evolve as a black catkin. Nothing would’ve come of it even if I had spread the news. No one could’ve possibly pulled it off. Knowing would only have brought my people despair. But now things are different. I can do it. I can finally evolve. All I have to do is kick the shit out of a couple goblins, and I’ll be done.”

“But you aren’t as able as you were before,” said Guendalfa. “You’ve even lost your blessing!”

“Blessing?” asked Fran.

“Right, you wouldn’t know,” said Kiara. She turned to us while still holding onto an old belt. “For a very long time I held the Blessing of the Warrior God.”

“Ohh! Amazing!” Fran clapped.

“Right? I’ve already passed it down to another, but I’m still quite the fighter without it.”

I had no idea what this blessing thing was.

“What’s this Blessing of the Warrior God thing anyway?”

“Nn. Very famous skill.”

Fran’s explanation left me in shock. Blessing of the Warrior God was an extra skill with world wide renown. The basics were that it gave its user a flat increase to all stat values. It also doubled the stat values gained upon each level up. But the most famous part of the skill was the condition required for retaining it. Once each month, the skill’s bearer had to put his or her life on the line in combat. The exact definition of “life on the line,” was not well known, but something on the level of beating up a bunch of back-alley grunts wouldn’t cut it. If this condition was not fulfilled even once, the skill will leave its user and pass itself onto another.

“I first got it when I was seven years old,” continued Kiara. “I had to keep fighting and fighting in order not to lose it. I got pretty strong because of that. I managed to hold onto it for five whole decades. Sadly, I lost it about ten years back.”

“Lost it, why?” asked Fran.

“There was a time I was bedridden for six months due to illness. Because I was confined and couldn’t fight, the skill moved on from me.”

“But how keep skill while slave?”

“Oh that? When I was still working at the castle, once a month they would let me hunt monsters near the capital. That way I would keep my blessing. Slaves with extra skills were pretty valuable back in they day.”

Kiara grinned.

“So yes, I’ve lost my blessing, but I don’t give a damn. I’ve been training for decades for this moment. I will not let anyone stop me!”

Kiara addressed Fran after she finished rummaging through her closet.

“First, we head towards Schwartzkatze! We gotta tell everyone that us black catkin can evolve.”

“Everyone in the village has already been informed while you were asleep,” said Guendalfa.

“Excellent! I’m sure those that are interested in evolving have already started recruiting party members to hunt evil beings. I shall join them at once”

“Schwartzkatze?” Fran tilted her head.

“It’s a village of black catkin,” explained Guendalfa. “After being freed from slavery, many black catkin either lost their homes or couldn’t make the journey back to their hometowns. The village was built as a place where they could recover their livelihoods in a safe environment.”

“Yeah you should come with me and show your face around,” said Kiara to Fran. “Everyone will probably love you.”

With that Kiara headed towards the door but was stopped by the maid who grabbed her by the arm.

“I won’t let you go,” she said. “You’ve been bedridden for almost twenty days. You need to rest for at least another week.”

“Ugh. Dammit Mia! Let me go!”

Kiara tugged on her arm but it would not budge no matter how much she struggled. She even grabbed the edge of the doorway to help pull herself through but all that did was make the doorway bend and creak.

Holy shit! That maid is strong! Aren't Kiara's stats supposed to be massive since she gets double the normal stat growth from that blessing she had? Goddamn dude, that maid hasn't moved an inch! Wait that maid's already evolved!?

"These royal maids are really do live up to their reputations," said Guendalfa.

"Famous?"

"Definitely. Royal maids are the cream of the crop, hand picked to serve the royal family and guests of honor. They are selected from an early age and trained extensively in etiquette, housekeeping, hospitality, and even combat. I'd get totally slaughtered if I tried picking a fight with any one of them."

Having given up on struggling against Mia, Kiara turned to Fran.

"Oh so by the way I heard that you came here by boat from the other country. How was the weather on your journey?"

"Nn. Good."

An awkward silence followed. Kiara gave her arm a quick tug but the maid still gripped it tightly.

She tried to distract the maid with small talk! How embarrassing!

"...So what did you come here for?" asked Kiara sheepishly.

"Came here to meet Kiara. And one more person."

"Wait Fran. I don't think you should mention the god-tier blacksmith. The Beast Lord said that all info on him was supposed to be classified.."

"I know." She replied telepathically. "Won't say more."

“I see,” said Kiara. “Well I wish I could help you more since you’re a black catkin like me but I don’t think I can. I might live in a fancy room like this but I have no influence outside of that doorway.”

“Nonsense,” said Mia. “There is almost no one who would oppose your will, Lady Kiara.”

“Hmph. Anyone that listens to an old crank like me should throw themselves in jail.”

“I’m sure they would if you asked them to.”

Wow. Mia seems pretty relaxed for a royal maid. She isn’t as uptight as the other maids we’ve met.

“But seriously,” Mia continued, “You cannot call yourself unimportant after providing many of the country’s most important individuals with your teachings. The Beast Lord, the Princess, the generals, the royal maids, the castle guards. Many of us spent our entire childhood under your care, and we would come running to your bedside if you called.”

“Damn I messed up,” said Kiara. “I shouldn’t have trained you so hard when you were younger if I knew you were going to get strong enough to stop me at this point!”

“Too bad. You’ll have to be more careful next time.”

“Nrrrggh!”

“Give it up. You’re not in top shape right now. The adrenaline rush you are having is keeping you from noticing that fact.”

“Haaah.”

“You don’t have to exert yourself right this minute. The evil beings aren’t going to vanish anytime soon. Have someone at the top lay out the groundwork for you. I was not kidding when I said like half the castle would come running if you called.”

“Fine.” The tension in Kiara vanished. “Mia, go and get me someone decently competent from the castle.”

“As you wish.”

Mia let go of Kiara, took out a piece of paper, wrote down a small message, and handed it off to a maid waiting outside the door.

Kiara straightened out her clothing.

“Fran, I know I said this before, but I’m very grateful that you came here to see me. You are truly a light in my life. I would like to do something for you to express my thanks. As you can see, I have a fair bit of unofficial power in this castle.”

“No need. Didn’t do for thanks.”

“Hah! Good answer. But I’m not asking out of any sense of obligation. I just want to do something for you. It really can be anything, ya know? For example, I don’t mind permanently removing somebody you consider an eyesore.”

“No thanks. Would do that myself.”

“Really? No, you’re right. It’s more fun to do it by yourself.”

“Nn.”

Dias was right. Fran and Kiara do get along in weird ways. Both are female black catkin warriors that could casually talk about assassinating someone they didn’t like.

Fran and Kiara continued to chat about some rather concerning topics, stopping only after they were interrupted by a knock outside the door.

“Excuse me. Did you call for me, Madam Kiara?”

“Yeah come in.”

An old man entered the room. He had silvery gray hair and was wearing an embroidered vestment robe. He spoke cheerfully.

“Madam Kiara, I have come to answer your call.”

“There you are. I was wanting to introduce you to someone.”

“Oh?” he turned to Fran. “You must be the Black Lightning Princess.”

“What? You already know of her?”

“Of course. I think you were the only person in the country that didn’t.”

The man bowed elegantly to Fran.

“Greetings, my lady. Forgive me for not introducing myself earlier. My name is Raymond, and I hold the position of Prime Minister of this country.”

Holy shit! I knew he looked important, but he’s actually the Prime Minister!? Kiara really knows how to throw her weight around.

“C ranked adventurer, Fran. Sometimes called Black Lightning Princess.”

“Stop it with the excessive bowing already,” said Kiara. “You made it to Prime Minister, so if you keep on lowering your head people will stop respecting your position. Hold your head up high and keep your eyes looking forward. ”

“That was simply due to the grace of the current beast lord. At heart, I am simply a humble public servant.” He turned back to Fran. “I was previously informed of your circumstances by His Majesty and was told to accommodate your needs during your stay. I will also get that letter of recommendation to that person written as you requested. Is there anything else you require of me?”

Fran spoke to me telepathically.

“Master. Anything?”

“Nothin’ from me. You?”

“Just one. Want to visit black catkin village.”

“Sounds good to me. Go for it.”

Fran told Raymond her request.

“Understood,” he said. “Truth be told, I was actually going to ask you to visit Schwartzkatze. Your request is most timely. I have a map already prepared for you.”

“Thanks.”

Raymond opened up a large map and handed it over to Fran.

“Schwarzkatz is located near the foot of these mountains that serve as our border,” he said. “It’s a three to four day journey by horned carriage, but I suspect that you have means of covering that distance more quickly. In that case, I suggest that you make a stop at Greengoat. It is one of the country’s largest trading hubs. Many major roads converge on it.”

“Nn. Thanks.”

“And here is that letter of recommendation that the Beast Lord instructed me to write for you.” He handed Fran a letter adorned with a fancy wax seal.

“I believe that is everything on the agenda. If you have no further concerns, I shall excuse myself here. May your journey be safe and prosperous.”

Raymond exited the room. He was gone and we had everything we came for, so it was time for us to go too.

“Will be leaving too,” said Fran.

“Aww, already?” asked Kiara.

“Nn. Bye Kiara, Guen.”

“Bye Fran,” said Guendalfa. “And uhh... about that thing... when we first met...”

“Nn. No problem. I forgive you.”

“Hmm? What’s this?” said Kiara. “Why is she forgiving you, brat? What did you do to her?”

“N-Nothing! I didn’t do any-”

“Guen picked a fight”

“Gahhhhh!” Guendalfa covered his head with his hands and cowered down on the floor.

Fran explained in detail our first encounter with Guendalfa, starting with him being an arrogant son of a bitch and ending with Fran flooring him with a single punch. After listening to our story, Kiara directed a furious gaze at Guendalfa.

“I can’t believe you!” she shouted, drilling her fist into the top of his skull
“Why are you still so obsessed with your uncle?”

“I’m not obsessed!” he stammered. “I couldn’t care less about that traitor. He-”

“That right there is what makes you a goddamn snot nosed brat! You’re over 20 years old and you’re still throwing a tantrum over Gold leaving. It’s an honor to serve the Beast Lord, and you shouldn’t think of it any other way.”

“But-”

“No buts! Stop being so goddamn immature. I know you’re just mad he left the tribe without telling you first. Get over it already.”

“Urk…”

Guendalfa couldn’t find a way to retort, so he just sat angrily on the floor with a frown on his face. Kiara turned to the maid, Mia.

“Mia. Get this snot nosed brat out of my room.”

“Understood, Lady Kiara.”

Mia grabbed Guendalfa by the collar and dragged him out the room. Kiara turned back to Fran and gave her a hug.

“Do come back and visit,” she said.

“Nn. Kiara, don’t push self to hard.”

“Hahaha! I can’t promise you that. I’m trying to evolve, after all.”

“Nn. Then push self just enough to avoid death.”

It seems both Kiara and Fran are the type of people to constantly push themselves to their limits to achieve their goals. I can protect Fran along the way but the same can’t be said for Kiara. I hope she stays safe, for Fran’s sake.

“I won’t die,” said Kiara. “I haven’t felt this alive in years!”

She shifted towards the open door.

“In fact, I feel so great that why don’t I just get a head start on evil beings. I think I’ll just accompany you an-”

“Not so fast, Lady Kiara.” Mia suddenly appeared behind Kiara and grabbed her by the shoulder.

“Goddammit Mia! Let me go! How did you even get back here that fast? I thought I told you to remove that snot nosed brat.”

“I had a feeling that you would try to bolt while I was away so I just dumped him in the hallway around the corner.”

“Nrrrgh!”

After a brief struggle, Kiara gave up trying to escape the maid.

“It looks like I can’t go, so won’t you stay with me a bit longer?” she said.

“Can’t. Need to leave.”

“I see.” Kiara smiled gently. “In that case, do visit again!”

“Will do!”

With that, we exited Kiara’s room. We turned the corner and found Guendalfa still sitting on the ground and sulking, so Fran asked him to escort us out. Guendalfa seemed to perk right back up and he happily accompanied us out of the castle and stuck with us all the way until we reached the city’s front gates.

“Well then. Be safe, Black Lightning Princess.”

“Nn. You too. Stop picking fights.”

“Haha yeah. I kinda learned my lesson the hard way.”

Once outside, Fran summoned Urushi in his large form and mounted him.

“Go Urushi! Go!”

“Woof!”

Urushi raced through the sky. We left the capital around noon. Only after travelling for about eight hours could we finally see some city lights emerging from beyond the horizon.

“It’s pretty late Fran. I think that’s Greengoat in the distance. Let’s touch down there and find an inn where we can have a meal and get some rest. We can continue travelling in the morning.”

“Nn. Urushi, descend.”

2 hours later, Fran lay contentedly on the bed, just having finished dinner.

What the hell was that? We got through this city way too smoothly! Nobody batted an eye when we arrived at the town gate and the guard let us through without issue. Nobody gave us shit at the guild when we were selling our monster mats either. Nor were we disturbed during the check in process. I swear to god, I'm so used to Fran getting harassed that being left alone actually bothers me more. Oh shit, did I just totally jinx it? Is something terrible going to happen to Greengoat now?

"Master, what's wrong?" asked Fran, half asleep.

"Nothing really big. I think it's odd that no one in Greengoat's messed with us yet."

"Is that a bad thing?"

"It's not. I'll let it go."

I decided to put the matter aside and let Fran get some rest. Surprisingly, the next morning was just as uneventful. We managed to set off from Greengoat without a hitch.

So nothing actually happened while we were in Greengoat? Well damn, I guess there really is a first time for everything after all.

As soon as I thought that, Fran and I spotted two adventurers standing on either side of the road about twenty meters from where we were. They weren't doing anything besides just loitering around and suspiciously scouring their surroundings. We were currently riding Urushi so we slowed down and kept our guard up because they directed their gazes at us, but again, nothing happened. As we passed them we saw that the two adventurers were not beastkin, but human. I thought we were in the clear after we passed them by, but then three more adventures on horseback appeared from the side of the road and stopped in front of us, blocking our way forward. Two more came out and stopped behind us. We were surrounded.

"Whew. We managed to make it here in time!" said one.

“Yeah! What the hell is that wolf? It’s crazy fast!”

“The guys on the ground should have signalled us sooner.”

One of the men dismounted.

“Oi you! Are you Fran, the Black Lightning Princess?” said one of the adventurers.

“Nn.”

He made an ugly smile. The other 4 adventurers dismounted and moved inwards, tightening the circle around Fran.

Are these guys seriously attacking us when Urushi is out in the open? He’s even in his large form. Are they brave? Or just plain stupid?

“Well then. It may be a bit sudden but you will forfeit your life here!”

“If you want to curse something, then curse the day you were born a beastkin!”

The five adventurers each reached into their bags and pulled out a large purple ball. I appraised them.

“Fran! Those balls create poisonous chunks of fog that weakens everything in them. It’s probably too weak to affect you but I think I’ll teleport you out just in case. Urushi. You have the Nullify Poison skill. Go waste them.”

“Woof”

The men threw the balls straight at Fran but I teleported her high into the sky before they reached. The adventurers’ stats were so low that I felt like I was watching them in slow motion. After missing their target, the balls exploded, covering the area below us with a thick purple fog.

“Did we get her?” said one of the men.

The next moment an enormous black shadow emerged from the fog and scooped up the man in its jaws. After violently shaking its head side to side a few times, the shadow loosened its grip and sent the man's chewed up corpse flying.

"Hiiii-!"

The other four turned tail and ran but Urushi was much too fast for them. Two of the men got their heads bitten off and the other two were pinned under his massive paws. The first two men who were monitoring the road were pierced by spears of Darkness Magic.

I checked our surroundings as we descended to see if there were any more attackers, but it was just those seven.

"Good boy!" said Fran.

"Wooooof!"

Five out of the seven men were dead. The last two were bound to bleed out within a couple minutes. I quickly healed them but left them under Urushi's paws. Fran kicked them awake. They put up some resistance but our tried and true process of Fran beating them half to death then healing them over and over made them quickly loosen their tongues.

"I really don't know who hired us! I never saw his face!"

"The guy just left us the money as well as these poison balls."

"Told us that these could subdue even the mightiest beastkin."

"He fucking lied to us!"

"Please don't kill me! I was set up!"

"Master. What do?"

"I think we should take them to the guards. They aren't a threat anymore and they don't seem to have any more companions, so it's safe to hand them over. They were probably disposable pawns or something. I'm not too sure why they were actually after us in the first place, but if I had to guess, I'd say they were probably just sent out to harass you. There's no way anyone with half a brain could expect goons on their level to take us out.

"Nn okay."

We headed back to town with the two goons hanging limply from Urushi's mouth.

"Master, something wrong?" Fran tilted her head as we closed in on the city's gates.

"N-Nah, it's nothing. Don't worry about it."

"Nn. Okay."

Holy crap, I can't believe she almost noticed. I can't tell her that being attacked by these guys actually made me feel relieved...

We walked back to Greengoat with the two remaining adventurers hanging from Urushi's mouth. We were greeted by one of the guards as we approached to the gate.

"Didn't you just leave?" he asked.

"Nn. Dealt with business."

"Wait... What's with those two guys being dragged by your wolf?"

"Business. They attacked me. Here to turn them in."

"Y-You were attacked!? Are you hurt in any way?"

"No."

The guard gave a sigh of relief.

"Thank God! This is definitely strange though. There shouldn't be any bandits in these parts anymore. The Beast Lord subjugated them all last year."

"Not bandits. Assassins. Were targeting me specifically."

"Assassins!? P-Please wait a moment. I must notify my superiors immediately." He turned to the other guard. "Go get the squad leader immediately!"

“Yes sir!”

The second guard took off. We handed the two adventurers to the remaining guard, who tied them up, dragged them to the guard tower, and dumped them into a jail cell. By the time he returned, so had his partner, their boss in tow.

“Black Lightning Princess!” said the squad leader. “Are you unharmed?”

“Nn. Unharmed.”

“That’s good news.” He turned to the guard that had stayed. “You! What’s the status report!”

The guard recounted to the chief everything that we told him and that he had thrown the assassins in prison.

“I see.” The squad leader turned to Fran. “Rest assured, we will find those responsible for this despicable attack immediately. I will also have this matter conveyed to the town’s lord right away. May I serve you some tea in the meantime?”

“Nn.”

He guided us over to the guard tower and ushered us through the front entrance. After climbing a set of stairs, we were seated in a reception room. Compared to the reception mansion in the capital this room was quite shabby, but it was probably the best room that they had.

“Oi you lot!” shouted the squad leader. “Go grab the finest tea that we have! And something for her to eat!”

“Yes sir!”

One of the guards at the entrance dashed back downstairs. After a few minutes, he returned carrying a tray with a teapot, a porcelain tea cup, some first flush tea, and an assortment of jams and honey. The guard poured a cup of tea and handed it to Fran alongside the honey and a spoon.

“Is it to your liking?” asked the squad leader.

“Nn. Not bad,” said Fran.

“Thank you very much!”

Two more guards entered the room carrying a large platter with a silver covering right as Fran finished her first cup of tea. They gently placed the platter in front of Fran and removed the lid.

What the hell!? What’s up with that massive steak!? Are they seriously serving that with tea?

Nobody else in the room seemed to share my disbelief. Fran happily munched on the steak as the rest of the beastkin guards stood by just in case she had any sort of request. It seemed that, to beastkin, steak and tea were a natural pair.

I guess being a glutton is a beastkin trait, not exclusive to Fran. Wait, Fran could probably down two or three of those so she’s probably considered a glutton even among beastkin.

Fran was approaching her last bite when we could hear the sound of heavy footsteps racing up the stairs. The footsteps stopped short of the door, and then the person quietly knocked on the door, as if they remembered their manners at the last minute.

“Enter,” said Fran.

“Please excuse my intrusion. Are you the Black Lightning Princess?”

“Nn.”

“I am Marmanno, lord of the city of Greengoat.”

The man spoke with a loud voice that filled the room. He was a large man with bulging muscles and had a large sword hanging by his waist. I quickly appraised him and saw that his species was green goatkin.

What the heck? He doesn't look like a goat. And did he name the freaking town after himself!?

"I received word of what happened and decided to take a look at the situation directly." He turned to the squad leader. "What's the latest status update?"

"Sir! My subordinates have reported that we are currently interrogating the suspects."

"Basharian bastards," said the goatkin. "I'm certain it was them."

"I concur," said the squad leader.

"Get them to speak even if you have to pry their finger nails off to do it! Don't let the mastermind escape. Capture him by all means necessary if you find him. He had the gall to attack the Black Lightning Princess, a veritable hero, so make sure he pays the price!!"

Wow, this burly ass dude considers Fran a hero? He's not even a black catkin.

"Roger that sir," replied the squad leader. "I have already dispatched soldiers to the scene of the crime."

"Very good. What about searching the city for suspicious characters?"

"That..." the squad leader faltered. "I've already sent two squads to locations in the town where ruffians are known to gather, but we just don't have the manpower to search the entire city. Most of the garrison has been deployed to the Basharian border."

"Damn those Basharian bastards!" bellowed the goatkin, slamming his fist onto the table. "Deploy the knights. Have them comb this city from top to bottom!"

"Is that okay sir? Wouldn't that compromise the security of the castle?"

“That is of little concern! They harmed the Black Lightning Princess! I will make those Basharian bastards pay! No matter the cost!”

I doubt that searching the city will turn up any additional clues. If all the mastermind wanted to do was harass Fran, then by now they would have skipped town. Though, it looks like the lord and his guards are getting fired up, so it'd probably be best for me to hold my tongue for now. It would be rude of me to dampen their enthusiasm.

“So Black Lightning Princess,” said Marmanno, “would you stay with us until we finish investigating these assassins? I will host you in my mansion and provide you the most luxurious accommodations I can offer. We can dine together and trade stories from the battlefield. What say you?”

“Master, what do?” asked Fran telepathically.

“I think we should turn him down. He seems like an honest guy but we don't have the time to sit around and wait for them to catch a criminal that's probably no longer in town.”

“Nn. Okay.”

Fran gently declined and we made our way out of the guard tower and through the gates of the city. Once outside, Fran brought out Urushi and mounted him.

“It looks like we got held up a bit, but whatever. Let's go!”

“Ohh!”

Urushi started speeding northwards from Greengoat. He was running faster than normal trying to make up for lost time. After travelling for a few hours, we spotted a river at the foot of the mountain range.

“Master. Up there. That river.”

“Yeah. Right beyond that river is Schwartzkatze. But we shouldn't cross it just yet.”

“Why?”

“It’s just in case we’re being tracked by the same dude that sent those assassins. Let’s throw them off our trail.”

I had Urushi double back and head south for a bit before turning eastward and making a wide circle around the village. Once we were north of the village, we ran forward for a little ways before ducking behind some bushes. I then teleported all three of us back to where we first saw the river.

“Alright. That should be good. Let’s cross that river.”

Beyond the river, we found a crossroads with two diverging paths. We took the path going west and followed it until we found a reassuring sight.

“Master! Black catkin spotted!”

We spotted a group of three black catkin men on our way to Schwartzkatze walking along the same path as us. Unlike Fran, all three of them were fully grown adults. They looked to be in the midst of returning from gathering firewood as bundles of sticks could be seen attached to the packs on their backs. We approached them from behind and called out to them.

“Hey,” said Fran.

“Wh- Aaaaaaaah!” One of the men turned around and then jumped back in fright when he saw Urushi.

“A-A monster! A giant wolf”

“Run away!”

The three men dropped the packs they were carrying and ran off into the distance.

“We messed up.”

“Yeah. It was probably a bad idea to approach with Urushi in his giant wolf form. They’re members of the weakest tribe, so seeing a monster as intimidating as Urushi probably overwhelmed them.”

“What do?”

“Hmm. We should probably chase them down and explain the situation. Things will get hairy if they start reporting that there’s a giant wolf on the prowl.”

“Nn.”

“Also, Urushi we need you to stand by for a bit.”

“Woof”

Fran hopped off of Urushi’s back and had him melt into her shadow. We decided to do the three men we’d just scared a favor and store branches they dropped in our dimensional storage. We ran down the path following their footprints until we saw their tracks split off into three directions. We then decided to start by catching the one closest to us.

“Fran, go all out.”

“Nn.”

Fran clad herself in wind magic and used it to boost herself towards the fleeing black catkin. She landed right in front of him, cutting him off.

“Hi again.”

“Whoa!”

He stumbled back onto the ground. His face relaxed momentarily when he saw that Fran was a black catkin just like him. But then, after looking at her for a couple more seconds, his eyes widened and he began trembling.

“A- a- a- a-....!”

“Nn?”

“E-e-e-e-e-ev...!”

“You okay?”

“AN EVOLVED BLACK CATKIN?!”

He rushed over to Fran on his hands and knees and grasped her hand tightly.

“W-w-w-w-w-w...”

“Speak normally”

“Y-y-y-y-y-y-y-...!”

“Come on.”

“Would you happen to be the Black Lightning Princess herself!?”

“Nn.”

The man collapsed onto the ground and burst into tears.

“It finally happened!” he wailed. “One of us has finally evolved! For such a long time we have suffered! It was almost as if we were cursed by misfortune itself, but finally we have someone from our tribe that has a promising future. Uwaaaaaaah!”

His reaction was the most extreme out of all the beastkin we have met. Probably because he himself suffered under the curse the gods have put on the black catkin. He can probably tell she’s a Black Heavenly Tigerkin because they’re from the same tribe.

“I’m so sorry about all the trouble I have caused you,” he said, after calming down.

“Nn, no problem.”

“Also, if you could go get the other two that are still running away. They are probably way too far away for me to catch them.”

“Got it.”

Fran used wind magic to boost herself to the other two black catkin and retrieved them. Both showed similar reactions to the first.

“You are our savior! I will follow you forever!” one wailed.

“I-I will never forget this moment for the rest of my life!” declared the other.

They look like kittens admiring a local badass.

After reuniting the three black catkin, we asked them if they could lead us to Schwartzkatze.

“It would be an honor to guide you to the village,” said one of the black catkin. “Let me return first and inform them that you are coming.” He seemed to want to leave immediately, but Fran stopped him before he did.

“Here,” said Fran, taking the dropped firewood out of her dimensional storage and handing it over to the remaining two black catkin.

“Ohh! Thank you very much!”

“You are so generous! Now we don’t have to go back to that forest!”

“Was that space/time magic? I thought that was the stuff of legends. As expected of the Black Lightning Princess!”

After taking his firewood back from her, the man that’d offered to act as a messenger kicked off and started running back to the village.

If this was back in Japan they probably would have asked her to autograph the firewood.

“Oh. Brought companion,” said Fran.

“Huh? I don’t see him.”

“Nn. Can call him?”

“Of course! The companion of the Black Lightning Princess must surely be a person worthy of our respect.”

“Urushi”

“Woof!”

“Gyaaaaah! It’s a wolf.”

“Run away!”

The two black catkin fell back when they saw Urushi in his small form. Despite no longer being a giant wolf, they were still frightened by him. Fran quickly managed to calm them down and we were able to resume our journey.

“Why so frightened?” asked Fran.

“Normal wolves are a danger for us,” said one of the men. “And it’s really obvious from his fur that your companion is not a normal wolf but a monster. Of course we would be scared!”

“My bad,” said Fran. “Big wolf from before, also Urushi.”

“Really? We should tell the villagers that the giant wolf that was spotted is not a threat. I’ll run off ahead and let them know!” A second black catkin ran off, leaving the last one to escort us.

As we walked the remaining black catkin started talking about Schwartzkatze. He explained that currently the population of the village was around 300 people. About 90% of them were black catkin, mostly civilians. The other 10% were guards, adventurers, and their families. The Beast Lord had personally arranged to have the village constructed. He ordered a solid wooden wall to be built, which is normally uncommon for such a remote village.

He seems to be treating the black cat tribe really well. Though, a part of me feels as if he’s just doing it to make Kiara happy.

We started to see the wooden walls emerge from beyond the horizon after walking along the road for about ten minutes. Standing in front of the wooden gate were three people. Two of them were the black catkin that ran off ahead of us. The last one was an elderly black catkin with a hunched back. The elderly man approached Fran, completely ignoring Urushi.

“Oh.... Ohhhhhhhh! It’s true! She really has evolved!” he said with wide eyes.

“See? I told you so, chief” said one of the black catkin.

“And you think I could possibly believe that a member of our tribe had evolved?”

“But His Majesty the Beast Lord already sent us a messenger telling us exactly that, didn’t he?”

“And you are telling me that you completely believed that? That every fibre of your being believed those words and didn’t harbor even the slightest amount of doubt?”

“Well...”

It seems like not all the black catkin believed the news that one of their tribe members had evolved. The thinking that ‘it is impossible for black catkin to evolve’ was so deeply embedded into their minds that they couldn’t even believe the words of the Beast Lord himself.

Fran stepped forward.

“It’s true,” she said. “Have evolved.”

Hearing those words and seeing her appearance, the village chief began to tremble. He finally was able to believe the reality in front of him.

“So does that mean the requirements for evolving that they told us are true?” asked the chief. “That all you have to do is defeat 1000 evil beings?”

“Nn.”

“Hooray! I thought it was too good to be true! But now more of us really can evolve.”

It took us a while to calm the excited village chief down.

“Well, it seems like they are happy you came, which is good, I guess.”

“Nn.”

“Woof.”

The village chief danced around for a bit before settling down and guiding us into the village. A huge mass of people crowded around the area in front of the gate. There were at least two hundred black catkin gathered around us. Despite that large number, the crowd was awfully quiet. We could hear some murmuring alongside the occasional sob, but nobody was cheering or shouting. Most of the villagers were stunned in silence.

One of the black catkin in front of us knelt onto the ground. He clasped his hands together in prayer and stared fervently at Fran, as if she was the Messiah. One by one, the other black catkin around him followed suit. It didn't take long for the entire crowd to begin praying, with Fran as the object of their worship. The bizarre atmosphere left Fran and I bewildered.

"People, people, stop it," said the village chief. "Can't you see that you are bothering the Black Lightning Princess?"

The people around Fran awkwardly got to their feet, though they did still continue to send her their ardent stares.

"I'm sorry about that," said the village chief. "As far as we black catkin are concerned, you may as well be a walking miracle. Everyone's just acting like this because seeing you has moved their hearts. Could you forgive them?"

"Nn. No problem."

As if Fran's voice was a signal, the crowd started to buzz.

“Oh my god, she talked!”

“Her voice is so adorable!”

“She is truly divine!”

“Mommy, how do I become like her?”

The people around us were talking excitedly. They were treating Fran more like a famous idol than an adventurer or warrior. The crowd rapidly closed in on her. Everyone was trying to get a closer look at her all at once.

“Enough!” shouted the chief. He waved his hands, shooing the crowd away. “I must show her our village’s hospitality. If you would please follow me, Black Lightning Princess.”

“Nn.”

The crowd parted and allowed the chief to lead us to a slightly larger house in the middle of the village. A large group of black catkin trailed behind us. Most of them were kids, so I half expected them to call out to us. But none of them did. It was obvious from the looks in their eyes that they were too busy admiring Fran to remember how to use their voices.

When we got to the chief’s house he sat us down and then personally brewed Fran a cup of tea. A bunch of black catkin crowded outside the window, watching her drink. I could sense that a lot more had their ears pressed to the walls.

“I apologize for being unable to serve you anything better,” said the chief.

“Nn. Not problem. Tasty,” said Fran, after taking a sip.

“Ohhhh! That’s good to hear! Thank you for your kind words!”

The people outside the house cheered.

“These tea leaves were produced by this village. Everyone will be honored to hear that you enjoyed them.”

“Nn.”

I hope Fran wasn't just providing them with lip service. What would they have done if she said it was bad? Probably have someone run off and buy expensive tea.

“Now then.” The chief sat down. “May I ask the reason for your visit?”

“Not much,” said Fran. “Just wanted to see black catkin village.”

“Oh I see!” The chief smiled as he nodded. “It's an honor for you to show interest in us. Please let me offer you my home for you to stay the night. There are no inns in this village and my house is the biggest here.”

“Don't worry. Just a few days. Will camp outside.”

“Nononono! How could I possibly allow the Black Lightning Princess herself to stay outdoors? Please, make yourself at home.”

“Really? Thanks.”

“If there is anything else you need, please feel free to let me know.”

This is a little troubling. We didn't come here to impose on the village. Rather, we came here to see if there was anything we could do to help.

“Tell if any trouble,” said Fran. “Will help with anything.”

“I am truly happy to hear those words,” said the chief. “But we could not possibly ask that of you, who has already brought so much hope to our tribe.”

“It's fine,” insisted Fran. “Tell me. Any monster problems?”

“We are in a secluded area that doesn't see many monsters,” he explained, “so they haven't been a threat for a while. We have the beast lord to thank for finding us this location. The land isn't very fertile, and it's hard to grow crops, but at least we can live here in peace. That said,” he paused, “could I ask one thing of you?”

“Nn. Happy to do anything”

“Can you show our young ones how strong you are?”

“Combat prowess?”

“Yes. It isn’t possible for us old folk to hunt 1000 evil beings. We’re just too old. But the younger generation has a chance. I would really appreciate it if you could show them that it’s possible for us black catkin to be more than just the weakest tribe. You may even be able inspire them to go out and hunt evil beings for themselves.”

“Nn. Got it. Right now, tribe a little cowardly.”

“Great! I’m glad to hear it!”

The black catkin outside of the house started kicking up a fuss right as we wrapped up the conversation. The commotion grew louder and louder until they were shouting with their voices laced with panic. And before long, someone began violently knocking on the chief’s door.

“Chief! Chief are you in? It’s an emergency!” the person shouted.

The chief hurried to the door and opened it.

“What is going on? You are being loud,” said the chief.

“Chief it’s bad! Goblins! We sighted goblins nearby the village!”

“Why are you so panicked? We have the guards. What are they doing?”

“This is more than the guards can handle!” shouted the man at the doorway.

“There are over 20 goblins!”

“What did you say? That’s way too many! Schwartzekatze is doomed!”

Hmm? Is twenty goblins alot? Maybe for a small village, I guess, but their reaction is totally overblown.

Fran stood up.

“Will handle them,” she said. “Will show my strength.”

“Will you really take care of it for us?” asked the chief nervously.

“Nn. Have some people follow. Will put on a show.”

“Got it! I’ll send some promising fellows your way.”

The chief nodded and dashed out the house in a hurry.

A Look into How Black Catkin Are Treated In Modern Times

A single red dogkin guard led Fran and a group of around thirty black catkin towards the area that the goblins were spotted. All of the black catkin were carrying weapons, albeit crude ones. Some were stuck with just sticks or farm tools. They all wore timid expressions on their faces and their eyes nervously darted all over the place.

What the hell? Why are they being so paranoid? All they have to do is sit around and watch Fran kill twenty goblins. Is it because they're so used to running away that they find it unthinkable for them to knowingly approach a group of monsters of their own accord?

"Anyone, combat experience?" asked Fran.

The black catkin all shook their heads vigorously.

"Never sent to fight Bashar?" asked Fran

"No we were never sent," answered a black catkin. "The beastkin country doesn't conscript black catkin. Our tribe's too weak to fight."

"Other tribes no complaints?"

"They don't. All the other tribes consider us a nuisance on the battlefield. They all say 'don't bother coming'. We couldn't contribute anything at all even if we did insist on joining."

“Before we were actually used as meatshields,” said another black catkin. “But that was in the past when slavery was still a thing. The Beast Lord quickly banned the practice once he freed all of us. We are grateful to him for that.”

“Yeah. So basically, outside of being a meatshield, we are useless in a fight.”

I was expecting that there would be at least one or two decent warriors among the black catkin living in the beastkin country. There’s a whole ton of them living here, after all. But looks like I was wrong. Rather, the exceptional black catkin seemed to be those that travelled outside the beastkin country like Fran’s parents or Kiara. The black catkin that live here are so cowardly that it’s almost kinda heartbreaking.

“Treated poorly?” asked Fran.

“Not really anymore. Before, when we were slaves, times were tough. But now that we are free, the other tribes don’t harm us directly anymore. But they still look down on us.”

“It’s not like we look down upon you,” chimed in the red dogkin leading the expedition. “You know how it is. Black catkin being weak is just a fact. Like how the sky is blue and the grass is green. Common sense says that it’s only natural for black catkin to be weak.”

Judging by his expression, he really doesn’t think anything malicious about the black catkin. It’s just that he grew up believing that the whole race was weak. The idea was probably reinforced by the fact that all the tribes except the black catkin were capable of evolution.

“But looking at you makes me feel like I should reconsider, ” said the red dogkin. “I can’t wait to see you in action.”

The guard seemed to acknowledge that black catkin did in fact have potential, but sadly, his opinion didn’t seem particularly widespread. Fran’s strength didn’t look like it would change everyone’s perception of the black catkin race as a whole.

15 minutes after departing from Schwartzkatz, we arrived at the area where the goblins were spotted. We found ourselves in a wilderness sparsely populated by trees. The soil in the area around the black catkin village was poor. It simply didn't have enough nutrients to support a dense woodland.

"This place, huh," remarked one of the black catkin.

"What's wrong with this place?" asked Fran.

"You see, there was a period of time that we wanted to cultivate crops and such around here," he explained. "Since our race is weak, we didn't have the manpower to deforest the entire area around the village. We could only cut down a few trees at a time and try to make do with a small area. When we found this clearing, we thought we would be able to build some big farms here, but it turned out that the soil was not fertile enough to grow anything."

The black catkin around him looked sadly at the ground. He continued.

"There are more fertile lands a bit further north, but those places are too cold for us to bear. Also, they are infested with monsters."

"Speaking of monsters, I see the goblins," said the red dogkin.

Fran quickly ushered the group to hide behind a large boulder. We spotted the group of goblins marching southwards in a rocky area up ahead. They would definitely come across the village if they kept their current course. The goblins were equipped with iron armor and were holding metal weapons like swords and spears.

That's odd. Goblins usually aren't that well armed. Most of the time goblins wear loincloths and carry around sticks. At best they tend to have the leather armor that they would loot off adventurers every now and then. But the only time I've seen goblins wearing legit armor was back in Alessa during the Goblin Stampede. And even then, the only ones that had it were hobgoblins. Is there supposed to be a dungeon nearby or something?

“Those goblins are way too well armed,” said the red dogkin. “They must have stolen their equipment from a group of bandits or mercenaries.”

“Goblins too weak for that,” said Fran.

“No, not if the group was bigger. If the mercenaries or bandits were too severely outnumbered, the goblins probably could have done them in. It would make sense if that group over there is all that was left of what started off as a larger horde.”

“It should still be a cakewalk,” I told her telepathically. “These are just still normal goblins, and I am not detecting any reinforcements in the vicinity. Go wreck them.”

“Got it.”

Fran stepped out from behind the boulder and turned to the crowd of black catkin behind her.

“Going now. Will eliminate goblins. Watch me.”

The crowd stared at her nervously.

“Please don’t go!”

“Don’t abandon us!”

“Don’t worry,” said Fran. “Urushi staying here.”

“Woof!”

Urushi popped out of Fran’s shadow and trotted over to the huddling villagers. Their faces relaxed when they saw that the big black wolf would be guarding them.

I’m glad that the villagers are no longer afraid of Urushi. They warmed up to him after seeing him being friendly and happily interacting with Fran.

“Will be quick,” said Fran.

“A-Alright.”

“Please be safe!”

“W-We’ll be watching.”

Fran left the villagers and stealthily approached the goblins under the cover of the rocky terrain.

“You should hold back a bit. You want to demonstrate your strength at an extent that the villagers can actually see it.”

“Nn. Awakening. Brilliant Lightning Rush!”

Black lightning bolts sizzled around Fran’s body. Her tail changed from solid black to black with gray stripes and stuck out like a lightning bolt. A cloud of dust to whipped up around her.

“What did I just say about holding back!?”

“Nn. Cooler this way. Will slowly demonstrate sword skills.”

“Alright then.”

Fran unsheathed me and slowly walked up to the goblins. The goblins noticed her and began eyeing her. Three of them approached her with swords drawn and their tongues hanging from their mouths. With three smooth strokes, Fran cut those goblins down. The remaining goblins, now seeing her as a threat, surrounded her with their weapons ready. Three more goblins lunged at her, but she stabbed the first through the chest after ducking under his blow, then spun around and beheaded the other two as they tried to attack her back. To the onlookers, she moved so effortlessly and gracefully that it looked like she was performing a dance.

“Welp. The goblin’s formation is already starting to collapse. Wait. Doesn’t that one on the ground look more nicely dressed than the others? You probably defeated their leader without even noticing.”

“Nn. Will use flashy magic now.”

While the goblin's were caught between either fighting or fleeing, Fran fired Tri-Explosion towards the edge of the goblin's formation. There was a great flash of light and one goblin was instantly vaporized. The two around him were blown a great distance away, their charred bodies tumbling on the rocky ground.

The remaining eleven goblins turned around and fled at full speed. But Fran was too quick for them.

"Stun Bolt. Stun Bolt. Stun Bolt."

"Gyaaoooooh!"

"Gyooooaaoo!"

Fran paralyzed the leftover goblins by firing weak lightning magic at them. After the final goblin hit the ground, Fran inspected their convulsing bodies.

"You're not going to kill them?"

"Nn. Will make others finish them off."

"Oh nice idea! That's a great way to give them some confidence and experience."

"Nn," she said smugly.

"I think it's safe now. You should go get them."

As we walked back towards the group of huddling black catkin, I took one last look at the twitching goblins.

I hope that the black catkin have the guts to finish them off. Hopefully their feral and ferocious side hasn't been completely extinguished.

We returned to the boulder where all the other beastkin were hiding. There, we found everyone was staring at us with stunned expressions on their faces.

“Everyone, over here,” said Fran.

“O-Okay.”

The group obediently followed Fran. They began to murmur the moment they saw the many goblins that been strewn across the undergrowth.

“A-Amazing!”

“As expected of the Black Lightning Princess!”

“Man! Evolved black catkin are awesome!”

“Now I get why there is so much hype around evolving.”

The red dogkin guard approached Fran.

“I was right not to judge you like other black catkin,” he said. “You really do live up to your reputation.”

He kept his expression calm and composed, but his tail was wagging like mad and his eyes were burning with admiration. He was clearly just as excited and impressed as everyone else.

Suddenly a scream ripped through our surroundings.

“Aiieeee! This one’s still alive”

“What? Oh no! That one is too!”

“We’re all gonna die!!”

The surrounding black catkin finally noticed that some of the goblins were still breathing. They all paled at the thought that they were casually standing around monsters that were still alive.

“Left alive for you,” said Fran. “Finish them.”

“What?”

“Letting you kill,” repeated Fran.

“What!? Why?”

The black catkin responded with shock. Many even seemed devastated. It was almost as if they thought Fran had betrayed them.

“Goblins, evil beings. Kill for evolution. Also confidence, ” said Fran.

None of the black catkin responded. They all just continued staring at her in mute horror.

Well, they’ve probably never held weapons before, so they probably lack the mental strength to instantly kill something on command. The most they’ve probably done is hunt. They don’t have the strong, warrior-like mentality shared by Fran and most other beastkin.

“Quick,” chided Fran. “Paralysis running out.”

“O-Oh lord!”

“You three!” She pointed at three young black catkin at the edge of the group. “Do it.”

The three black catkin jumped back in surprise, almost dropping their weapons.

“No way! Hitting monsters is scary!.”

“I’ll d-do it tomorrow. I promise.”

“I’ve never held a weapon in my life! Please spare me!”

“No!” Fran took an intimidating step forward. “Do it. Now.”

“But-”

“Paralysis wearing out.”

“A-Anything but that!”

“Now!”

“Y-Yes ma’am!” One of the young black catkin lurched forward towards the goblins. His fear had buckled under Fran’s intimidating glare.

“You two. Follow him,” said Fran.

“Oh god, why did it come to this?”

“W-We’ve got no choice but to do it.”

Goblins are the Evil God’s subordinates. If anything, it would be morally wrong not to kill them off. I’m sure these black catkin understand that. Their fear probably stems from the idea of raising a weapon and inflicting harm on another living being.

The three black catkin positioned themselves around of a single collapsed goblin. Each raised his weapon above his head and prepared to swing. Their faces were covered in sweat.

“Now swing!”

The three black catkin shut their eyes and brought their swords down. There was a clang as the swords bounced off the goblin's armor. The goblin let out a painful screech. Hearing it caused the three black catkin to yelp and scramble back behind Fran.

What the hell! That attack was so weak! Forget about cutting down goblins. Holy shit, you can't even till the earth with that kind of swing. Their fear is really hampering their abilities.

"Nn. Put hips into swing," said Fran.

"B-But..."

"Again. Use hips. Like this," she said, swinging me a few times.

"Yes ma'am..."

"Ugh..."

"I can't do this! I can't take it anymore."

"You gotta do it man. Come on! Don't leave us hanging."

Overpowered by Fran's forceful aura, the three of them once again stood in front of a goblin, raised their swords, and swung them down. This time, they followed through with their entire body and also they actually aimed for the head and other exposed parts. It took them a good thirty seconds, but they eventually managed to kill it.

"Haa...hahh..."

"How's that?"

"Did we... do it...?"

"Nn. Good job. Goblin dead," said Fran.

"Hell yeeaaaah!"

The three of them raised their hands and let out a cheer! They huddled together and started crying, their joy showing clearly on their faces.

Fran stepped in before they started getting out of hand.

“Bad. Getting cocky. Three attackers, one goblin. Still needed 10 swings,” she pointed out. “And goblin immobile. Need one hit kill.”

“Urk... Y-Yeah, I guess...”

“Yeah...she’s right.”

“Damn. We were getting carried away...”

“But not bad for first time,” said Fran. “If train and choose skills, can be stronger than goblins.”

“Yes ma’am!” the three shouted in unison.

Fran’s becoming a pretty good teacher. She’s employing the carrot and the stick method very effectively, making the black catkin both fear and worship her.

“Next three,” said Fran.

“Y-Yes ma’am!”

The remaining black catkin all stepped up in groups of three and finished off one goblin each. Most of the later groups had already completed their mental preparations by the time they were called. They knew it was coming; they’d already watched their comrades perform the very same act. Few resisted as much as the first group. The black catkin began noisily chattering the moment the last goblin fell.

“The Black Lightning Princess says I gained a level!”

“Me too! Me too!”

“Aww... That’s not fair! She let you hit its head! All I did was smack its feet.”

“I’m gonna totally start training when I get back home!”

“You do that. I’m totally done with this. I can’t handle any more.”

Fran rounded up the villagers.

“Okay. No more monsters around. Returning to village,” said Fran.

“Okay, but what about the corpses?”

“Will hold onto them for now.”

Fran walked over and swiftly placed the corpses into my dimensional storage before turning around and leading the group back to the village.

286. A Banquet with the Black Catkin

Chapter 286. A Banquet with the Black Catkin

A Banquet with the Black Catkin

TL: SupremeTentacle

ED: Position now vacant. Taking applications. The test is tough. Apply if you dare.

The black catkin were fired up. They continued excitedly conversing with one another as we made our way back to the village. Content wise, their conversations were rather serious. They were earnestly trying to form parties and learn more about areas in which they could hunt evil beings. Schwarzekatze's surroundings were almost completely devoid of monsters, so their only choices were either to head towards the capital or set sail for Gilbard, the continent Fran and I had just come from.

I'm glad they're motivated, but I'm also kind of worried. They'll probably die if they push themselves too hard right off the bat. We might've stirred them up a bit too much.

"Might be a good idea for you to hang around Schwartzekatze and train these guys up a bit."

"But then won't make to auction."

Fran shook her head disapprovingly.

"Yeah, I know, but I'm kinda worried they'll go out and just get themselves killed without actually getting anything done, y'know?"

"Can't stay. Need to keep promise."

"I'm not really sure if you can call what happened making a promise. I know Gallus left us a letter and whatnot, but we never sent him a reply. We technically didn't promise anyone anything."

“Still no.

“Well... if you say so.”

Fran firmly rejected my suggestion and left no room for negotiation. She could get surprisingly stubborn when it came to things like this. The young black catkin hated being wishy washy. She'd always stick to anything she decided on without so much as a second thought. There was no point in arguing with her, so I gave my metaphorical shoulders a shrug and laid off.

I wanted her to take care of the other black catkin, but I wasn't about make her go back on her word. The strength of her resolve was one of the most charming things about her, after all.

The black catkin that'd accompanied us in the assault began bragging about their exploits the moment we returned to the village. They talked about how they'd killed goblins, and how they'd witnessed Fran's heroic display of strength. Each and every single one of them had their voices filled with both pride and fervor. Even those that'd decided never to fight again spoke well of the encounter.

Witnessing the invigorated youth, the village's chief bowed to Fran.

“Thank you, Black Lightning Princess.” His voice dripped with gratitude and delight.

“I can't thank you enough for what you've done.”

“Not big deal.” Fran shrugged.

“It is to us. Our tribe has finally gained the vigour and determination it lacked. None of this would have been possible without you. I must thank you for everything that you've done. You make us proud to be black catkin.”

“Good,” said Fran, with a nod.

She stopped for a moment to open up her dimensional storage and extract a portion of its contents. Specifically, she took out all the armour she'd just looted off the goblins.

“This, can leave here?”

All of it was made out of iron. As far as veterans were concerned, the stuff was useless. But it was still pretty damned good compared to what most fresh adventurers could get their hands on.

“Sorry, I don’t quite follow. What do you mean?” The chief scratched the back of his head as he gazed at her with a clear look of confusion.

“Don’t need.”

“Y-You’re offering to give it to us!? We couldn’t possibly accept it. I’m sure it would make a fair amount of money if sold, so you’d best hold onto it.”

“Not big deal. Have enough money.”

“A-Are you sure? Can we really have all of it!?”

“Nn.”

“T-Thank you so much! I’ll make sure the villager’s youngers put it to good use!”

“Nn. Good. Then this too.”

“Y-you’re giving us all that!?”

The chief’s eyes practically bulged out of his sockets as Fran dumped a bunch of the equipment we’d been keeping around in her storage. We’d looted it from the corpses of goblins, bandits, pirates, and everything else we’d killed on our journey. Most of it was busted up, but none of it was really beyond repair. The leather stuff could just be stitched back together, whereas the metal stuff could be melted down and reforged.

The reason we hadn’t sold any of it was because the guild only dealt in monster parts. Armour and the like needed to be taken to stores and merchants, and neither Fran nor I had really wanted to go through the trouble of selling it all.

“Don’t need this. Can’t be bothered to sell. Would be glad if you took.”

“Thank you! Thank you so much!”

The chief began tearing up. He’d interpreted Fran’s actions as generosity, and her words as a pretext.

He seems really moved. It’s kind of a shame that Fran was actually telling the truth. She’d only decided to give him all that stuff because she was too lazy to sell it.

And so, the rest of the day passed by rather peacefully. That night, Schwartzekatze held a banquet. The town threw a huge party, all for the sake of welcoming Fran. Their land was infertile, so we didn’t really quite understand where they were getting the money or supplies to hold the event.

The chief informed us that he was planning to use up the village’s emergency rations. Of course, there was no way we could possibly allow that. We’d come to visit, not drain the village of its assets. We ended up supplying all the food instead. There was a lot of stuff in our storage. We had meat, vegetables, grains, eggs, and fish from all over the place.

At first, the black catkin had been hesitant to use our foodstuffs. In fact, they’d even tried to refuse, but Fran eventually forced them to comply by explaining that she really needed to clean up the gigantic mess that was her inventory. She told them that she had so much food it would literally be impossible for her to ever finish it all, and that she needed Schwartzekatze’s villagers to help her polish it off.

Again, the chief ended up choking back tears of joy. He’d thought of Fran as a sort of hero from the very start, but now, he’d begun seeing her as something even more than just that.

The chief's wife had actually taught us a recipe for a traditional black catkin stew. The taste was apparently kind of mediocre, but I still found it rather interesting because of the way it was made. It'd been cooked in an oddly shaped pot. The large vat was thick as a wall, and had the overall shape of a balance ball. Cooking in it had warmed up the entire room, likely due to something along the lines of the far infrared effect.

The meat and root vegetables that filled the pot softened extremely quickly. The village chief's wife had added two main seasonings: salt, and a fermented seasoning that kind of resembled soy sauce. She then just let the pot sit above an open and let it stew, occasionally stirring until it was thick and syrupy.

All in all, it turned out like something along the lines of a Japanese-styled stew. I decided to not only memorize the recipe, but also improve on it going forward so I could make Fran a tastier version of the soup that'd fed her people for generations.

The chief's wife had been curious about our recipes as well, so we'd taught her how to make stock, specifically from bones and vegetables.

She hadn't been the only one cooking up a storm. Many other villagers had joined in as well. There ended up being a whole ton of food, as one would expect from a banquet. All the villagers were super excited to see the sheer amount they had to eat.

They kicked off the banquet by practically worshipping Fran. Many of the black catkin danced as they sang the songs they would always repeat when faced with hardship.

At first, the atmosphere had almost been solemn. But as the hour passed, people started getting drunk. They cheered up and started getting all festive. They drank together, sung out of tune songs, and danced in a jolly manner that starkly contrasted the reverent atmosphere the banquet had started with.

Though many were dead drunk, the villagers failed to forget their appreciation. They started crowding around Fran; everyone wanted to thank her at least once.

They'd all the circle leave as soon as they spoke their words of appreciation but the number of people gathered around her didn't decrease in the slightest. In fact, more and more started lining up and crowding around her as the booze started getting to them.

"You okay, Fran?"

"Nn. Fine." She seemed happy.

Right, to her, this must be a dream come true. She's always wanted to evolve, both for her own sake, and for her tribe's.

The many black catkin continued to sing throughout the night with smiles on their faces. Fran stayed quiet, and her expression remained as usual, but I could tell that being the centre of attention had brought her joy.

I really want to encourage Fran to hang around for a bit longer, but I know she won't change her mind. I've no doubt she'll tell me that she wants to leave in a few days. But you know what, it's fine. All that matters is that she enjoys the time she spends here.

287. Ms. Fran's Magic Course

Chapter 287. Ms. Fran's Magic Course

Ms. Fran's Magic Course

The banquet had evidently exhausted Fran quite a bit. She got out of bed a good bit later than usual the next day. There wasn't anything in particular for her to do, so she started wandering around the village after eating her fill.

Everyone Fran passed bowed to her. The action was a clear indication of their reverence. This respect was most obvious in the older folk, as many even took to their knees the moment they laid eyes on her.

"It sure is quiet around here."

"Nn. Just fields, nothing else."

Schwartzekatz was a farming village. The many black catkin that lived here spent their days tilling the fields. Only a select few were hunters; most of the village's meat came from peddlers and travelling merchants. And since the village was poor, it couldn't afford to buy much, so most of its members basically ended up being herbivores.

The younglings were especially thin and frail. Their frames were so lacking in meat that I was worried whether they would actually be capable of living on given how infertile the surrounding land was. It didn't look to me like they were capable of lasting.

Most of the older black catkin had lived through the previous Beastlord's reign. Though they were still cowardly, they'd known that they were going to be used as decoys and meatshields, so they'd at least built up their muscle mass and whatnot. They were unlike the youngsters, that'd known that they'd never need to step on the battlefield. That, combined with the fact that they thought they were weak, had totally robbed them of the will to strengthen themselves.

That was why they'd spent their lives slowly tilling away at the fields. And that was why they'd never learned ambition. None of them had ever considered trying to evolve prior to Fran's advent.

Those that did want to evolve needed to kill a thousand evil beings. But of course, that wasn't the only restriction, it was merely the one placed upon them as punishment. They still needed to hit level 45 before they could actually awaken. And the way I saw it, none of the tribes members had possessed the conviction to go through that much combat.

Despite that, Fran wasn't worried, and for good reason. Unlike me, she'd known of the issue from the start. I was sure that she not only thought about it, but also came to the conclusion that it was impossible for the tribe's attitude to take a sudden 180. It seemed that she didn't expect any other black catkin to evolve within the next few years. It was possible that it'd even take several decades for one to fulfill all the necessary conditions.

"Want to do one thing."

"What?"

"Want to teach magic training method."

"Makes sense."

All one needed to do to evolve was kill a thousand evil beings and cap out their level. But all that would do was turn one into a Black Tigerkin. To become Black Heavenly Tigerkin, it was necessary to not only learn lightning magic, but also boost one's MGC and DEX stats. Grinding out stats wasn't too hard. All you had to do was work stat specific training segments into your routine, and you'd more or less be home free. Lightning magic, however, was much more difficult to obtain. Casting lightning magic required not just an affinity for the element, but also a high level in both fire and wind magic. It would be very unlikely for another Black Heavenly Tigerkin to pop up unless the Black Cat Tribe trained its younger members in the art of magecraft. Fran knew that leaving behind the techniques required for such an act would benefit her species greatly.

“Yeah, I don’t see why not. Go for it.”

Amanda had taught us everything we needed to know about magic-oriented training. I was confident we would be able to pass that knowledge on so long as we bundled it with a few hands-on examples. And so, Fran began to search for the village’s chief. The village was fairly small, so it didn’t take long for her to catch sight of him discussing something with a bunch of the tribe’s younger members, a serious expression decorating his face all the while.

“Chief. Morning.”

“Good morning, Black Lightning Princess.”

“Something wrong?”

“Everything’s just fine, thank you. A few of the youngsters had said they wanted to start training, so they came to me for advice, and we were talking it through.”

The youngsters in question were ones whose faces I recognized. They were members of the group that’d joined Fran on her goblin-slaying expedition.

“W-We want to get strong!” one said.

“I don’t know whether I’ll actually ever manage to evolve, but I want to try. I’m sick of just running away,” claimed another.

“As for me, I’d just like to get strong enough to at least protect myself and everyone else around me,” added a third.

It looks like Fran really did succeed in influencing them.

Hearing their opinions led my cat eared companion to contently nod before opening her mouth to speak.

“Got it. Good timing. Had idea.”

“I might be pushing our luck here, but are you perhaps willing to train them?” asked the chief.

“Kind of? Will teach how to learn magic.”

“How wonderful!”

The Black Cat Tribe as a whole had long forgotten the techniques required to awaken one’s magical talents. And because of that, its members thought that gaining the ability to cast magic would be akin to living a dream.

“I-Is it really possible for us to learn magic?” asked the chief.

“Probably. Not all will have affinity.”

“Yes, but some will, right?”

“Nn. Wind and fire probably common.”

Lightning magic was effectively the black cat tribe’s speciality, so it only made sense for many of their members to have an affinity for fire and wind.

“Anyone already can use magic?” asked Fran.

If such a person existed, then we could make the task easier on ourselves by turning them into the village’s mage instructor. Unfortunately, it seemed we’d gotten our hopes up. The chief had responded by telling us that there was simply no way a village as rural as Schwartzekatz would be home to a magic caster. Mages were in high demand all over. There was no reason for anyone with that much talent to stay in an area surrounded by nothing but infertile land.

“Ok. Then gather villagers.”

“R-Right away! I’ll grab everyone available!”

“Wa—”

Fran tried to tell the chief that there wasn't any issue in waiting until the villagers were done with the day's work, but he ran off before she could.

It only took ten minutes for him to return. He'd ended up gathering almost 200 black catkin. They were gathered and seated around Fran, their eyes full of hope and anticipation. Every single last one of the villagers was present, save for those that absolutely couldn't leave their posts.

"Will teach how to train magic," said Fran, nonchalantly.

"Yes ma'am!" Most of the black catkin replied at once. Their voices thundered throughout the village at a volume I'd never imagined possible from a group as timid as they were.

"Fire first."

And so, Fran's lecture began. Its contents pretty much mirrored what Amanda had told her when she was just starting out. She told them to work with fire and flame on a daily basis, to stare at it, approach it, and even touch it while resolving oneself to be burnt. She explained to the tribe's members that they needed to accustom themselves with fire to the extent of seeing it in their dreams if they wished to cast fire magic.

Hearing her explanation had caused the entire black cat tribe to go silent.

I guess the training must've sounded too harsh and fanatical.

The only one to speak was the chief.

"A-And doing that will allow us to learn how to cast fire magic?"

"Nn. If affinity."

"Understood. I'll prepare a place for our tribe's members to train immediately."

I'd thought that Fran would have to give a bit more insight into the theory for the tribe's members to actually believe her, but I was wrong. They'd all easily been convinced. They didn't worry about whether or not they would actually be able to tolerate the training. Nor did they concern themselves with its effectiveness. They simply took in every word she said and believed her.

“Next, wind.”

Fran continued explaining everything away in her usual tone. The tribe was getting riled up despite the fact that she herself didn't sound particularly excited or enthusiastic. They continued listening to her until her lecture came to an end, their eyes filled with a fiery passion throughout.

288. Village Chief Fran...?

Chapter 288. Village Chief Fran...?

Village Chief Fran...?

Many of Schwartzekatze's black catkin sat down by a fire or began fanning themselves the moment Fran's lecture came to an end. She'd not only taught them about the two elements needed for lightning magic, but also about water and earth magic as well. It seemed that the topics had piqued quite a bit of interest here and there, as a couple black catkin had started practicing the methods she'd mentioned for those two in particular. The vigour with which the villagers trained convinced me that at least one or two mages would end up popping up in due time. Or so I thought, until I'd come to a realization.

"Wait, don't they need to get magic manipulation to actually cast stuff?"

Amanda had told us that the magic manipulation skill was the key to learning magecraft, and I highly doubted that any of Shcwartzekatze's villagers already had the skill. Simply interacting with the magical energy abundant in the natural environments around them wasn't nearly enough to actually teach them how to manipulate mana.

"Chief."

"Yes, what is it?"

"Nn. Stand here."

"Sure thing."

The village chief obiently listened to Fran's orders and stood himself up right in front of her while she raised a palm and began to focus.

"I-I'm feeling some sort of strange sensation. What's happening?"

"Nn. Using magic."

She tried seizing control of the chief's mana through the use of her magic manipulation skill. Much to her surprise, it'd worked out surprisingly well. She wasn't able to gain full control, but she at least managed to gain the ability to mess with it and stir it up.

"Feel?"

"I... can! I can't tell what it is, but I can feel something!"

"Nn. Magical energy."

"I see!"

Huh, that's a pretty solid idea.

"Nn. Get everyone. Form line."

"Right away!"

The chief ran around the town square and gathered all the villagers before Fran. It only took them an instant to form a pair of perfectly neat lines.

And so, both Fran and I got to work. We began manipulating the mana within each black catkin in turn in order to get them accustomed to the flow of mana. Neither of us really knew exactly how effective the action was, but we were convinced that it was at least better than leaving Schwartzekatze's villagers completely unaware of what manipulating magical energy was supposed to feel like.

It took us a good bit to go through each and every single black catkin, but neither of us particularly minded it. We didn't really have anything else to do.

"Thank you very much," said the chief.

"Not big deal."

"It is, for us! You not only taught us that it truly was possible to evolve, but also mentored us in magecraft. We're so grateful for your actions that we've no way to express it!”

A couple other black catkin chimed in and mentioned that what we’d just taught them would normally be considered top secret information as they nodded along in agreement.

Magic wasn’t the only thing the villagers were focused on. Some asked Fran questions about swordplay as well. There were quite the number of them, so Fran ended up hosting a second lecture not too long after she was done the first, one focused on the more physical aspects of combat.

She taught them how to hold their blades, how to swing them, and what they needed to do to improve. The experience she’d gained from training her three apprentices had really shown. She managed to give effective, meaningful explanations despite still speaking in her usual taciturn manner.

The combination of the magic and swordplay lectures caused Fran’s popularity to skyrocket and reach even greater heights. It seemed that all of Schwartzekatzke adored her. I was pretty sure the chief would be totally willing to hand his position over to her should she ask for it.

Speaking of which, the chief ended up approaching Fran not too long after she finished answering most of her newfound students’ questions.

“To be honest, I would love for you to take over as chief so that you could lead our villagers and teach them your ways.”

Holy shit, I called it.

“Leaving in few days.”

“I see...”

Unfortunately for the villagers, Fran refused. Disappointed expressions immediately appeared on all their faces.

“But will do best while still here.”

“That sounds both wonderful and awe-inspiring. Thank you!”

The chief perked up and began to sing Fran praise the moment she voiced that she'd be willing to help.

God damn, I really have to give it to Fran. She's gotta be one helluva bigshot to remain completely unaffected by the fact that they're all worshipping her and shit.

Once Fran finished speaking to the chief, she began another training session centered around magic. But unlike the other two, the third training session failed to reach completion.

"C-Chief!"

"What is it?"

The red dogkin guard that'd accompanied us on the goblin hunt dashed into the town square. He was out of breath and panting as heavily as he could. A single glance was enough to tell that there was once again some sort of emergency.

"We've found another group of goblins!"

"What!? How many of them are there?"

"There's only ten, but it isn't normal for them to come around so often."

"Hmmm... You're right. That really is weird."

Wait what? Aren't goblins supposed to be everywhere anyway? Like, I swear they're fertile as all hell, so seeing them really shouldn't come as much of a surprise, should it?

Fran shared my opinion, so she asked the chief, only to learn that there'd never actually been many evil beings in Schwartzekatze's vicinity to begin with.

Most of the youngers that'd accompanied us yesterday had never even seen a goblin before. They were born and raised in Schwartzekatze, where it was, for the part, peaceful and devoid of creatures hostile to the black cat tribe. Getting attacked two days in a row was so out of the ordinary that it meant that there was probably something wrong.

“There might be a nest nearby.”

“Hmmm... I hope that there isn't going to be a stampede...Schwartzekatzke will be in deep trouble if the goblins birth a king.”

“Yeah... We'll need to find the nest as soon as possible.” The red dogkin grimaced.

If twenty goblins were already more than enough to plunge the village into despair, then an entire nest was sure to lead to its complete collapse. Or at least it would've under normal circumstances. Fran was currently in town, and it was highly unlikely for any harm to come to the village so long as she was around. Schwartzekatzke's villagers were really lucky. They would've been screwed had the nest shown up any earlier or later.

“Chief. Will check surrounding area.”

“W-Will you really do that for us?”

“Nn. But can't bring everyone along.”

“I understand. All we'd be good for is dead weight.”

The chief seemed to think that Fran would have a hard time protecting all the other black catkin mid-combat, but that wasn't actually true. We'd long become strong enough to kill a hundred goblins in less than ten minutes, even while keeping everyone that came with us safe.

The reason we didn't want to take all the other black catkin along was because we needed to get around as quickly as possible if we wanted to find the goblin nest. Specifically, we were going to teleport. And since we needed to crush the goblin nest ASAP, we'd judged that it would be much more effective for us to go alone.

“New goblins, where?”

“T-They’re hovering around the same place we found them last time.”

“Got it. Don’t let anyone leave village. Call people out looking back.”

“Yes ma’am, I’ll get that done immediately!”

Wow. Fran’s influence sure is coming in handy.

The guard’s obedience allowed us to focus on the matter at hand.

“Will leave now.”

“Good luck on your hunt.”

“Nn.”

I know he said good luck, but for some odd reason, I could’ve sworn it sounded kind of like “gob luck.” I mean, we’re hunting goblins, so I guess it kinda fits.

“Alright, here’s to hoping we find that goblin nest sooner than later.”

289. The Goblin Nest

Chapter 289. The Goblin Nest

The Goblin Nest

TL: SupremeTentacle

ED: Sebas Tian

Dashing over to where the goblins had been spotted was the first thing Fran did after agreeing to exterminate them. She made sure to keep herself concealed throughout the journey so that she wouldn't spook her foes before she found them.

“Master, how to find nest?”

“We'll probably have to either find their tracks or tail one of 'em.”

“Got it.”

“It might be best for us to split up. Urushi, you mind sticking around here and seeing if you can find anything?”

“Woof!”

Urushi's nose was nothing short of impressive. I was willing to bet that he'd be able to find the goblin nest with his sense of smell alone so long as it was nearby.

“As for us, Fran, we should probably start by hunting the goblins the guard spotted.”

“Nn.”

“Make sure you let a few live so they can lead us back to their base.”

“Got it.”

It didn't take long for us to find the goblins. They weren't too far from where we'd encountered the last group.

"Strange."

"Yeah..."

"Taking break?"

"Doubt it..."

It almost looked like the goblins were investigating the rocky area, which in and of itself, was already quite odd.

To make matters even more confusing was the fact that this group of goblins were just as well armed as the last. In fact, their equipment was pretty much identical.

It was immediately clear to me that they were from the same nest as the last group. The only difference my appraisal skill informed me of was that the second group was even weaker than the first. The combination of their apparent weakness and their smaller numbers made me feel as if they were relatively low on the chain of command; they were probably just your everyday grunts.

But that raises the question. Just how well off does a horde of goblins need to be to arm every single one of its lowly grunts with this kind of equipment? Like holy shit, they're goblins, not knights. God damn!

"It looks like they really might've birthed a king or something...No way they'd be this coordinated otherwise."

"Nn."

Okay, yeah, it looks like we're going to have to find that nest and obliterate it ASAP.

"Start with the leader. If we kill it, then the rest'll probably start running. We should probably let at least three of them live. There are ten of them, so I guess that means you can kill up to seven.”

“Okay.”

“Alright, let’s do this!”

“Nn!”

I teleported us behind the goblin that appeared to be in charge of the group. Fran swiftly dispatched both it and the one to its side in a single motion.

“Gyaooo!”

“Gya gya!”

“Slow.”

The goblins realized that they were under attack and attempted to react, but they were unable to. Fran cut down another two while I roasted three with a fire spell.

All three of the remaining goblins began turning their heads and looking at their allies. Their eyes wandered back and forth between the cut up corpses and the flame-broiled corpses before they finally realized that only they had survived our assault.

“Gyahiii!”

“Gyoeehhhh!”

“Hyahohiii!”

The goblins let loose what I assumed to be screams as they turned tail and began to flee. Naturally, we chose not to attack even though they’d made themselves totally vulnerable. We stealthily began to chase after them, ensuring that we remained hidden even while on the move.

None of the goblins so much as turned around as they sprinted forwards with everything they had. They were so terrified that they pissed their pants and shat themselves as they ran.

“Perfect,” said Fran.

Those mother fucking goblins! How dare they show Fran something that god damn filthy!? I swear to God that I’m going to “disinfect” the shit out of them the moment they lead us back to their nest.

The goblins couldn’t sense us, so it didn’t take too long for them to come to the conclusion that we were no longer pursuing them. They slowed themselves down to a fast walk. Though they thought they were safe, they were too terrified to stop, so they continued to advance as they fearfully gazed around.

They passed a water skin between each other. The goblins took turns drinking from it as they interacted with each other. Their gestures were strangely human-like.

Something about this whole scenario just feels... off. I remember chasing Goblins around back when I was still exploring the Demonic Wolf’s Plains. These goblins are stupid, but the ones I met back then were even dumber. They’d randomly start playing around and napping, as if they weren’t able to focus on anything for too long.

“Master. There.”

“Is that their base? It looks like it.”

The nest we discovered looked like it contained somewhere in the realm of a hundred goblins. I saw a couple goblin fighters and thieves mingled in with all the others.

“There.”

Fran directed my attention towards a specific part of the goblin base.

“Shit, is that a goblin king!? God damn, the guards were right!”

Well, at least they're not hiding away in some cave. Them being out in the open makes getting rid of them much more convenient.

"Huh, that's weird. They've all got the exact same equipment."

How the hell did that happen? Like, murdering a mercenary group or two isn't nearly enough to arm an entire group of goblins with the exact same shit.

"Doesn't matter if wipe out."

"Yeah, true."

Fran had a point. King aside, all the goblins were just negligibly weak grunts.

The three we tailed immediately ran up to the king and began making a sort of report. I couldn't understand their language, but I didn't need to. I knew that they were making some sort of report concerning Fran regardless.

"Well then. Looks like the goblin king's got balls."

He immediately began rallying his troops once the three goblins had finished with their report. Based on his gestures, it seemed likely that the king intended to take the whole horde to Fran's location.

"We should probably cage them up so none of them get away."

"Nn. Got it."

Fran and I both preceded by casting Thunder Wall, the spell that came with Lightning Magic's second level. The two of us focused our magical energy to create five large walls. Specifically, Fran created two, and I created three. They came together to form a sort of pentagon, enclosing all the goblins within. The large panels of lightning suddenly popped up around the goblins. They were buzzing with electricity, and clearly had the ability to electrocute anything they touched.

"Gogogyaaaaoooh!?"

“Agyaga!”

Wow, colour me impressed.

The goblin king remained rational as he ordered a subordinate to attack the walls. A goblin soldier immediately complied and smashed his axe into the electric fence, only to receive a sudden shock and collapse on the spot. Though the soldier hadn't died, he had temporarily lost his ability to move.

We then pelted the goblins from the sky with all sorts of lightning magic. Only after they were all dead did we finally undo the cage.

“Looks like we're done. I'mma go around absorbing all the cores.”

“Nn.”

“Most of their equipment got damaged by our magic, but I'm pretty sure some of it is at least still useable.”

“Nn. Will put in storage.”

“Yeah, might as well bring it back to the village.”

Killing the goblins had granted Fran a significant amount of experience. It managed to push her over the threshold.

“Grats! It looks like you've hit level 46.”

“Nn!”

Fran's level cap had changed due to her evolution, but only now did we finally actually smash through her old cap. Breaking past level 45 really did imprint a powerful sense of progression. I couldn't wait to see Fran continue growing to the point where she would be able to overpower even the Beast Lord and everyone else on his level.

We decided to give the area another quick check after defeating the goblins. Our goal was to check if there were any scouts or stragglers and hunt them down if there were.

Urushi joined Fran and aided in her search, but the three of us failed to uncover any clues even after an hour of investigation. We couldn't even find the nest the goblins had crawled out of. The result left me confused. Normally, goblins dug out massive shelters for their communities. Both the goblins Fran and I had worked together to defeat and the stupid ass goblins I'd destroyed back when I first came to this world had possessed huge nests. It didn't quite make sense for the group we just encountered to live out in the open.

They couldn't have just migrated over from elsewhere, right? Nah, no way. There were way too many of them for that.

As we found ourselves unable to find anything, we ultimately ended up returning to the village as is.

We did happen to see a monster called a Chicken Deer along the way, so we eliminated it and brought it along, so we technically didn't return completely empty handed. We at least picked up a half decent souvenir. The deer itself posed little challenge to us. It was extremely cowardly and attempted to turn tail and run the moment it spotted us, but it couldn't come anywhere close to keeping up with Urushi's speed, so he chased it down and ended it with ease.

The black catkin erupted into cheers as Fran arrived in Schwartzekatz. The flashy spells we cast were apparently so brilliant and showy that the villagers had seen them from within the walls.

“W-What power! Wow! That spell of yours was like a natural disaster in and of itself!”

“That’s the Black Lightning Princess for you!”

“Yeah! She’s so cool!”

They only became even more excited upon seeing her pull a chicken deer out from her storage.

“Woah! Holy shit dude, look at that! She even took out that deer monster all by herself!”

“Ermagawd!”

“I want to marry her!”

“Brought souvenir. For everyone. Eat.”

“I-Is that really okay!?” asked the chief.

“Nn.”

“T-Thank you so much!” The old man began bowing as he thanked her profusely. His voice was tinged with all sorts of emotion. Her actions had clearly moved him. He wasn’t the only one either, as many villagers began bowing and paying her their respects. Despite being a mere F ranked threat, the chicken deer was apparently one of the region’s toughest monsters. Seeing her bring one back had led the villagers to gaze upon her with renewed respect.

Because they were so fast and eager to run, their horns were actually worth a good bit. The black catkin would often salvage the horns off chicken deer that had naturally reached the end of their lives and sell them to supplement the village’s income.

“And this.”

“You’ve acquired more armour?” The chief’s eyes practically bulged out of their sockets. “And so much of it too!”

“Nn.”

A decent portion of the armour we dumped out had melted due to the intense heat of the electrical charges we’d sent pulsing through them, but a good bit of it could still be salvaged and put to use.

“Only this one barely burnt.”

“You’re right. It does seem quite special.”

The set of armour Fran was pointing at was the one worn by the goblin king. Being made of steel, it was a good bit stronger than everything else we gathered. None of the black catkin present were able to make good use of it as they were right now. It would be much better for the chief to hold onto it until the clan’s members grew more powerful. A thick stream of tears burst from the chief’s eyes as Fran explained her intentions.

“O-Of course! I’ll make sure it falls into the hands of someone worthy!”

The second night, like the first, ended up as a banquet, albeit a much quieter one. The black catkin were all too focused on magecraft and martial prowess to do anything more than quietly speak amongst themselves.

Tonight’s main dish was the four meter tall deer Fran had hunted. It was large enough to provide every villager with a cut of meat.

“Here, have some of this.”

“Nn.”

“Try this out too.”

“Nom nom.”

“And don’t forget to have some tea!”

“Nn.”

Many of the female villagers were taking turns serving Fran. She was clearly the party’s guest of honour. They had not only cooked up a storm, but also brewed tea for her because she was too young for alcohol. The manner in which they were bringing Fran her food was reverent; it was almost as if they were handing her offerings.

“Is the dish to your taste, Princess?”

“What about this one? Would you like to try it, Princess?”

Halfway through the party, the black catkin stopped referring to Fran as the Black Lightning Princess. They’d instead just started referring to her as just “Princess.” As Fran didn’t particularly care either way, she didn’t stop them, so the habit soon spread throughout the village.

Oh well, not like anything bad’s going to come out of it. Fran’s more than cute enough to be a princess, so if anything, I’d say the title suits her.

I’d never actually met the beastkin country’s princess, but I was certain that Fran was cuter than her regardless.

“We can’t thank you enough for all the equipment you’ve graced us with, Princess,” said the village elder. Even he had given the nickname the green light.

“Just dumped junk.”

“To us, your ‘junk’ is an entire mountain of treasure. Unfortunately, we don’t have a blacksmith present, but we’ll take it over to another nearby village and have everything repaired as soon as possible so we can distribute your gifts to the villagers.”

“No blacksmith here?”

“Unfortunately not. He passed away several years ago after suddenly being struck by illness.”

While he did have an apprentice, the apprentice was far too green to be worthwhile, so he temporarily moved to another village so he could learn from the blacksmith there. And because of that, Schwartzekatz was currently blacksmithless.

I guess that means they’ll need to wait a good while before actually putting the stuff we gave them to use.

“Master.”

“Sup?”

“Us, do something?”

“Hmmm...”

We’d stumbled across a rare chance for us to make use of the blacksmithing skill that we’d spent so many points on. Fran had never done anything past just maintaining me, so I was almost certain the opportunity would serve as good practice for her to brush up on her skills.

“Sure. I don’t see why not.”

“And here we are. This is the smithy.”

“Nn.”

“Are you sure you don’t need any help?”

“Sure. Because secret techniques.”

“My apologies! I understand, I won’t pry any further!” said the chief, enthusiastically.

Fran nodded. She'd decided to get to work the moment the banquet came to a close, so she'd decided to spend the night in the home that belonged to the former blacksmith. Looking inside, we confirmed that it had all the tools we needed.

"We've kept the place clean, but that's it, so feel free to use it however you wish."

"Thanks."

"Princess, please! You've no need to thank us. In fact, we should be thanking you!"

We got to work as soon as the chief left. Since we had the blacksmithing skill, we were able to do everything we needed to do quite smoothly. Our first task was converting everything irreparable back to ingots. We'd already finished sorting through everything before actually arriving. We'd handed everything that could be made usable after a bit of maintenance over to the villagers. They'd already begun the mending process, so I was sure they'd have all sorts of usable gear in the near future.

All the stuff we brought with us either required a lot of work to fix, or was flat out beyond repair. And again, everything was already sorted. The plan was to melt down the stuff that was beyond repair and use it to fix the stuff that still had a bit of life left in it.

"Alright, I'll get to work. Feel free to sleep, Fran."

"No need."

"You sure? Well, works for me I guess. Let's get started together then."

"Nn."

And so, Fran and I worked the forge together until she started nodding off.

A Sword Makes Swords

I had telekinetically swung my hammer so many times throughout the night that its methodical, rhythmic ring had become almost natural for me to hear. I was so immersed in the tempo that I could immediately discern when any sound, hammer-related or not, was off beat. And it was for that exact reason that I was able to pick up on the fact that there was a bit of an odd knocking interfering with my sense of flow.

“Hey Fran, could you get the door? It seems like we’ve got a visitor.”

“Nn.”

Luckily, Fran had already gotten out of bed. She was about as far from a morning person as could be, so she would have appeared half asleep if I had to wake her up to open the door. And if that happened, we would’ve been hard pressed to explain why the forge was running so smoothly even though she’d yet to fully awaken. We would’ve had no choice but to play it off as a case of sleepsmithing. You know, like sleepwalking, but with a forge.

“Who?”

“Good morning Princess! It’s me, the village chief!”

Fran opened the door to find the man in charge of the village with his body already bent into a deep bow. He was holding a basket with a few pieces of bread poking out the top; he had come to deliver Fran her meal.

“I’ve brought you some breakfast. I hope it’s to your taste.”

“Thanks.”

“The pleasure is mine. Oh and are you holding up alright? It seems like you’ve been smithing all night.”

Uh, whoops. Hopefully the forge didn’t keep anyone up all night.

“Too loud? Sorry.”

“Don’t you worry about it, milady! If anything, we’re grateful that you stayed up all night for us! We’re so blessed by your actions that we don’t even know how to express our thanks!”

We talked with the chief a bit and exchanged our schedules. We told him that we were going to be at the smithy for the rest of the day, whereas he informed us that most of the villagers would be practicing either their swordplay or magic. The older black catkin would begin cleaning up the equipment in the meantime.

“Don’t need to force to learn magic or swordplay.”

“Oh, no no no, we’re not forcing anyone, princess. Everyone’s just really eager to join in!”

It seemed that the whole village wished to cast magic. Everyone wanted to harness its mysterious power for themselves; the fact that they’d learned methods to acquire it had made them highly motivated.

At this rate, black catkin mages are bound to pop up in no time.

“I’ll be heading off now, but please let me know if you ever need anything.”

“Nn.”

We went back to focusing on our work as soon as the chief left. Specifically, I started to make blades out of the ingots I’d spent last night creating while Fran focused on fixing up shields and armour.

The best part about this world was that its skill system allowed me to gain knowledge seemingly out of nowhere.

Though I had never done any sort of smithing before, the maxed out blacksmithing skill I had taught me everything I need to know about forging a blade. The most common way they were made nowadays was through casting. Molten metal would be poured into a mould and hammered into shape afterwards if need be.

I vaguely recalled something about most western-made swords being cast, whereas most Japanese swords were made in a forge. If I were to track these methods to their roots, I assumed that they likely only deviated due to the differences in resources and the knowledge of how one processed them. Of course, that was only a guess, as I had no real knowledge of how blacksmithing worked back in my world.

This world didn't require those that wanted to use Japanese swords to go through a complicated folding process. Blacksmiths could easily use magic-infused metals and magically enchanted tools to create sturdy Japanese-style blades through a typical casting process.

Magically infused metals were strong from the start. Hitting them with hammers while dousing them in magical fire would only enhance them even further. Thus, there was no need for one to go out of their way to fold a blade over a thousand times. Of course, one could go through a typical forging process if they wished, but that kind of treatment was reserved for high quality luxury goods. The common weapon had no need for such an intensive process.

Thus, I began by casting all the blades I wanted to make.

I combined parallel processing and telekinesis to cast, hammer, and polish different blades at the same time. I functioned as a one man factory and somehow managed to mass produce a whole slew of regular swords. Though I paid very little attention to each blade, my maxed out blacksmithing skill ensured that they were still of a decent quality.

But needless to say, none were good enough to surpass their maker. Of all the swords present, I was still by far the most powerful.

“Alrighty, that’s a whole 50. Should be enough for now, I guess.”

If one were to count the undamaged weapons that we'd looted, there were about 80 swords in total. All 80 were of a fairly standard make, so they weren't too difficult for the black catkin to use even though they were all beginners.

I'd saved a few extra ingots so I could experiment and attempt to make a few weapons that packed a bit more of a punch. The first thing I wanted to try was to make a blade that was folded several times and forged from beginning to end.

I followed the steps my blacksmithing skill imprinted into my mind, heated up an ingot, and began hammering at it once it started glowing red. It took a while, but I eventually managed to get the weapon to take the shape I wanted.

The skill was telling me that the product was complete, so I checked it over. All in all, it was surprisingly okay. It wasn't terrible, but it wasn't great either. It was just mediocre, which couldn't really be helped given the material it was crafted from. The biggest difference was that, unlike the blades I'd casted, it wasn't an Iron Sword, but rather a Low Grade Steel Sword.

It was the best thing I could make given my current materials and skills. Or at least it would be if I continued with my current, straightforward approach.

I decided to change things up a bit as I forged the next blade. The materials themselves were lackluster and couldn't actually hold that much magical energy, but the quality of the blade was still likely to improve if I packed it with as much as it could take. I made use of the bones of some of the monsters I'd planned to use for stock and burned them to ashes before mixing them into the metal. Though the monsters they came from were weak, they were still monsters nonetheless. Since the bones contained a bit of mana, I hypothesized that adding them would serve to increase the amount of mana the weapon could store.

Keyword: hypothesized. I had no clue if it would actually work out the way I was expecting.

“Huh, it actually turned out better than I thought.”

It took even longer to make than the blade that I’d forged, but the end result was indeed a bit better than the last. The change in materials had actually ended up leading to my hammer’s destruction, much to my surprise.

The third type of blade was a Low Grade Magic Steel Sword. Though I hadn’t managed to get rid of the “Low Grade” tag, I’d at least managed to create magic steel. Though it was minuscule, I could indeed feel a bit of magical energy emanating off the blade. Its magical conductivity was also a good bit higher than all the others, as it sat at an F+ as opposed to an F or F-. In other words, the third type of blade had the potential to hit creatures with ethereal bodies. That said, it would likely take hundreds upon hundreds of swings to actually slay one given that the weapon had only the slightest bit of magical energy.

The stats of each type of weapon were as follows.

Name: Iron Sword

ATK: 88

MP: 0

Durability: 300

Magical Conductivity: F-

Skills: None

Name: Low Grade Steel Sword

ATK: 114

MP: 1

Durability: 380

Magical Conductivity: F

Skills: None

Name: Low Grade Magic Steel Sword

ATK: 124

MP: 10

Durability: 390

Magical Conductivity: F+

Skills: None

Given that, I decided to make all the remaining swords into Low Grade Magic Steel Swords.

And for comparison's sake, Old Man Gallus' swords had the tendency to look much more powerful. I recalled one of their stat pages as I worked.

Name: High Grade Steel Longsword

ATK: 398

MP: 5

Durability: 600

Magical Conductivity: F

Skills: None

The thought reaffirmed the fact that Gallus was one hell of a smith.

Fran approached as I lost myself in thought. Her expression seemed somewhat distorted, and one of her hands was rested on her stomach.

“Master.”

“What’s up?”

“Hungry.”

“Woof...”

“Oh crap, is it lunch time already?”

I was so lost in thought that I’d totally forgotten that food was even a thing; it was long past noon.

“My bad. I’ll make something real quick.”

“Thanks.”

The reason the village chief hadn’t supplied lunch was because Schwartzekatze’s villagers didn’t eat it. To them, only having two meals a day was the norm despite the fact that most other beastkin had three. One could tell from that alone that the villagers were living in poverty.

We should probably come back again some time after meeting Gallus. Preferably with lots of seeds and saplings in tow.

“In fact, I’ll even serve curry to make it up to you guys.”

“Really?”

“Woof?”

“Yup, and you can have as much of it as you want.”

“In heaven.”

“That’s an exaggeration if I’ve ever seen one.”

“Curry heaven, I shall soon be upon thee. For I will now depart for the promised land,” said Fran. She was so happy that she recited something that sounded like a poem.

Well, I’m glad she’s in a better mood, at least.

The only problem was that our curry supply was actually starting to run a bit low since we’d more or less served it en masse every time something happened. I was highly concerned that Fran’s mood would plummet if we ran out.

“Tasty.”

“Woof!”

And it went without saying that I would feel bad for Fran if she wasn’t allowed to eat her favourite food. Fortunately, the place we were in now had a private kitchen in which I could work. Thus, I decided to spend the rest of my spare time making as much of it as I possibly could.

Editor’s Thoughts: Hey guys. Sorry I haven’t introduced myself. I’m Joker. I’ll be editing for the boss until he decides that either he doesn’t like my work, or I start asking about my payment. ☺ Let me know what you guys think about this little blurb, by the way. If you would like to hear about the trials and tribulations of being a translator’s editor... I probably wouldn’t be the right guy to ask. I mostly proofread it. Heh. But if you don’t like and want to just have the story, I’ll keep them out and put them in the comments. Maybe. If I get around to making an account for that. ./ Anyway, about this current arc, I actually find myself in the minority opinion and enjoying it greatly. I love the world building arcs, as well as my favorite characters getting their moment in the spotlight. Something about the hero's hard work being acknowledged has always struck a chord with me. Anyways, hope you guys enjoyed the chapter! I'll see you next time!

An Evening Centered Around Fran

Three nightly parties in a row seemed a bit too overwhelming, so we spoke to the village chief and asked him to refrain from organizing yet another banquet. Instead, Fran spent the night telling the villagers about her journey.

It all started because a few of the children, who'd finally grown accustomed to Fran, approached her and asked about her adventures. She promptly began spinning her tale, albeit in her usual way. She wasn't all that great at exaggerating things or spicing them up, so her stories ended up being much more realistic than they were heroic. But the villagers, both young and old, gathered around her nonetheless. All it took was a few moments for the whole village to rally to her side. She told them of the lich, described her exploits in Ulmutt's tournament, and then finally summed it all up by telling them what had happened on the ship.

"Then saved by Leviathan."

"Woahhh!"

"That's awesome!"

The entire village took a collective breath as she wrapped everything up. Every last member of its populace was so tense that they'd started sweating. But none had noticed until she was done. That was just how much attention they paid her.

"What happened next!?"

"I can't wait to hear more!"

“Mmph.” Fran frowned. She had basically told the villagers all she was willing to, so she was at a loss as to what to say. After a moment of deliberating, she decided to talk a bit about mythology.

Specifically, she decided to talk about the reason the black catkin were unable to evolve, as she decided that there likely wasn’t going to be any harm in telling her tribesmen about their curse.

“Hard to imagine now. But in past, black catkin high status.”

The black catkin seemed to sense that Fran was about to dive into a whole different type of topic, but they perked up their ears and listened with interest nonetheless. The more she said, however, the more their expressions changed. They slowly realized the gravity of the tale they were told, so they began to regard her lecture from a more serious standpoint.

Though they weren’t quite at the level of being solemn, they stayed quiet. They made sure not to speak so they wouldn’t miss a word. They learned that the Black Cat Tribe had, at one point, ruled over all the other beastkin as the Beast Lord, that their ruler had lost control after discovering a method to absorb the evil god’s strength, and that divine punishment was the reason they’d lost the ability to evolve. Through Fran’s words, they came to understand that their fetters existed for the sake of atonement. They needed to kill evil beings to make up for the sins committed by their ancestors.

“Nn. That’s all.”

This time, the black catkin stayed silent even after Fran finished speaking. They were having a hard time digesting all the information they’d just been fed.

The first to move was the chief.

“Thank you. Thank you so much for telling us about our past.” He kneeled as he spoke to her.

“Nn.”

“We must learn from this!” The chief turned towards the villagers as he raised his voice. “Listen, my kin! Our ancestors have committed a grave, deadly sin, one that we can’t waste our time lamenting! We have to move forward while making up for all they’ve done to prove to the gods that lenience was the right decision! It may be tough, but the path of recompense is not without benefit, it is also the path that will lead our tribe to evolution. We can finally change! We no longer need to be weak kittens abandoned in the dark! We can stop aimlessly running around, living in solitude, and enduring unjust violence! We must follow our own paths! We must carve them with strength, dignity, and honour! We black catkin must become more powerful! We have to get strong enough to make up for our sins! I hereby declare that the village will support the effort no matter the cost! While I won’t force you, I will encourage you to at least try! Let us all work towards redemption, together!”

Damn dude, I can see why the village chief got his position. Really gotta give to him, he’s good at getting people totally fired up.

The whole village remained silent, but the residents’ intentions were clear. Their eyes burned with the very same fiery passion the chief had just ignited in their hearts.

And it was for that reason that the silence only lasted an instant.

The whole village shook as a thunderous roar of sound blasted through it. Every single black catkin had stood up and started to clap.

“I will evolve! I swear it on my name!”

“It’s a shame. I’m far too old to try evolving myself, but that don’t mean jack! I’ll make sure I give you youngsters all the support I can!”

“And I’ll use my skills to inscribe the princess’ words in stone! I’ll even make a monument and set it up in this very plaza!”

Every last villager acknowledged and accepted at least some part of the chief’s speech. Though not all of them decided that they themselves would seek evolution, they at least agreed to contribute to the effort, one way or another. The fact that they were both atoning and working towards their own personal goals at the same time served to drive the ball home.

Wow. I really didn't think that they would believe us so easily. They're not mad at the gods either. That's a full set of expectations down the drain right there. I mean like, holy crap, talk about devout. They totally seem to think that it's their fault, and that there's nothing to blame the gods for. Though, I guess it does make sense seeing as how the gods here actually exist.

The adults began celebrating the newfound policy by breaking out the alcohol. I didn't want Fran to drink, so I had her join the rest of the children for the time being.

"I'm glad they believed us."

"Nn."

"It looks like the black cat tribe's full of kind-hearted, trusting people." I wanted to follow up the statement by telling Fran that there was nothing wrong in making the choice to stay, to remain in Schwartzekatze, even if it was just for a little while longer—

"Leaving tomorrow."

— But she cut me off before I could.

"Already?"

"Nn. Everything wanted to say already said."

"You sure you want to leave already? This is pretty sudden."

"Can't stay. Too comfortable here. Need to leave."

"I mean, isn't that all the more reason to—"

"Decision final. Tomorrow."

Looks like there's no convincing her.

“Alright. I guess we can always just come again some other time.”

“Nn!”

It’s not like Schwartzekatze is going to just up and disappear, after all.

Night fell, the party ended, and peace returned to the village. Like Schwartzekatze’s residents, Fran and Urushi were already sound asleep—or at least they were. The two suddenly got up in tandem.

Are we under attack!? Can’t be... I don’t sense anything, and Fran’s movements had a bit of lethargy to them, so I doubt it’s that...

“What’s wrong?”

“Nn...?”

“Woof...?”

Neither of the two understood the reason they’d suddenly awoken. They couldn’t identify what they’d reacted to. They looked around and tried to find the source of the disturbance.

“Well?”

“Don’t know.”

“Ruff.”

But their conclusion was exactly the same as mine: nothing was out of the ordinary.

The heck? Was there an earthquake somewhere or something? Er, wait, right, earthquakes aren’t as common here as they were back in Japan so everyone would probably be kicking up a much bigger fuss if there was one.

We decided to take a look around the village just in case a monster had snuck in through the use of a stealth skill.

But again, we weren't able to find anything too far out of the ordinary. All we saw were plastered drunks passed out on the side of the road. We had no idea as to where each one lived, so we couldn't carry them all the way home, but we at least made sure to move them onto grass as opposed to just leaving them face first in dirt.

Though our search proved to be in vain, I highly doubted that there could be as big a coincidence as Fran and Urushi suddenly waking up at the same time for no real reason.

"I know we haven't found anything yet, and that it's already late, but let's keep looking."

"Nn."

Hey, guys! Joker here. Well, another day, another chapter of Master and Fran. This time, they appear to be starting a cult of cat people. Can't wait to see where this leads. Haha. Also, very mysterious circumstances surrounding the ending. Wonder what's going on. Hmmm. Also, as of the writing of this comment, I'm now almost completely done with my second full playthrough of Persona 5. And honestly, it was just as much fun the second time around. 140 hours so far on the save file, and I have created essentially what is the Persona equivalent of God Himself. Absorbs all elements except fire AND blocks physical. Oh, and he's strong against fire, so all that can hurt me are Gun skills. OP Persona, plz nerf, am I right? All right. Enough rambling for now. See y'all in the next chapter!

293. An Incident To the North

Chapter 293. An Incident To the North

An Incident To the North

Editor: Joker

Though we didn't discover anything no matter how hard we looked, neither Fran nor Urushi could quite calm down. Both the catkin and the wolf had better senses than me. I trusted their instincts and deduced that something had gone awry.

"Whaddya say we try taking to the sky instead? Might be easier to figure out what's wrong that way."

"Nn."

"Woof."

With Fran on his back, Urushi kicked off the ground and rapidly ascended. The three of us then used the artificial vantage point to examine our surroundings. Or at least we tried. The skies were overcast; clouds blocked out both the moons and the stars. It was far too dark for us to make out any significant detail.

"Hmm..."

"Don't see anything." Unlike me, Fran could see in the dark, so she was at least able to scour our surroundings.

"What about you, Urushi?"

"Whimper..."

For some odd reason, the wolf seemed adamant about tracking down the cause of his unease. Urushi continued to look around even though his eyes had failed to detect anything. He stayed on guard and even tried sniffing around, but he still couldn't find anything, as he had no idea what he was supposed to be sniffing for.

And that was when it happened. A single sliver of moonlight momentarily shot through the clouds and allowed me to catch sight of something.

“Woah...”

“Master?”

“I think I just saw something move over there...”

“Over where?”

“Er, my bad. It was to the north.”

It happened several kilometers away from us. At a glance, it looked to be somewhere near the most barren part of the forest. There wasn't anything obstructing my line of sight. I would've been able to see everything if it was still day, or if there weren't as many clouds. But alas, we had no choice but to work under the existing sub-optimal conditions.

The distance made it so not even Fran could see anything, despite having night vision.

“Could you get us a bit closer, Urushi?”

“Woof!”

Urushi sped through the sky. He moved us straight north with all the precision of a compass. The moon peeked through the clouds for another second about halfway through Urushi's journey.

“Master, saw?”

“Yup, clear as day.”

“Grrrrr...”

Though I only caught a glimpse of it, I was confident in what I just witnessed. A large group of monsters was slowly marching straight south. The group's scale was entirely blown out of proportion. It was far more than just a single nest or pack's worth. There were so many that the wasteland itself had been obscured from view. There were only monster, monsters, and more monsters as far as the eye could see. It was a veritable army.

I didn't know its final destination, but at this rate, it was going to collide with Schwartzekatze.

"Shit! We need to get closer and make sure of what we saw!"

"Woof!"

"What and why?"

"I don't know, but either way, we've got one hell of a situation on our hands!"

It took Urushi another five minutes to get right above the horde. We were now at close enough a distance for us to see them with the naked eye, even without the moon's aid. I didn't need to count to know that the army was at least ten thousand heads strong.

Their march was rigid and steady. It was clear that they were being controlled. I didn't know the extent to which the monsters were being manipulated, but at the very least, whoever was responsible for them had enough of a grasp on them to keep them silent as they moved.

"What now?"

"It'd be pretty hard for us to take all these out with just us."

"But villagers can't fight."

"Yeah, I know. Honestly, something like this calls for an army, if anything."

"Nn."

“First things first, we need to get back to the village and have all the villagers evacuate.”

“Got it. First, preemptive strike?”

“Let’s not. There’s too many of them. We can’t check to see how strong each one is, and there might be something too strong for us to handle mixed in with all the trash mobs.”

We would end up having to run if there really was anything that strong. The only place to retreat to is the village, and leading a strong monster there would be a disaster and a half in and of itself.

“I know you want to fight, but we should probably wait until we’ve at least emptied out Schwartzekatze first.”

“Got it.”

“Alright Urushi, head back to the village! Full speed ahead!”

“Woof!”

“Hurry!” added Fran.

“Woof woof!”

Our first stop was the chief’s house. Urushi barked and howled to grab his attention as we approached.

“Chief! Open! Now!” Fran jumped off Urushi’s back and began knocking on the door the moment he landed.

“W-What is the matter, Princess?” The wolf had succeeded in waking him, so he answered the door immediately, rubbing his tired eyes as he did.

“Emergency!”

“W-What kind of emergency...?”

“Horde of monsters. Headed for village.”

“W-What!? Enough for even you to be this panicked, milady!?”

“Nn. In wasteland right now. Huge group. Need army.”

“W-What!? They’re just to the north!? I’ll go wake up the guards right away!”

“Evacuation. Need to start soon.”

“Understood, milady!”

“What’s all the noise, chief?” A few of the black catkin, awoken by Urushi’s voice, joined us right before the chief set off, so he immediately roped them in and got them to help. The process went far more painlessly than it would have anywhere else. All the black catkin trusted Fran, so they immediately believed the warning the moment they heard that she was its source.

“Listen well! The Princess has found a huge army of monsters marching right for us! There are so many of them that they fill the entire wasteland!”

“What?”

“S-Seriously...? What the heck!?” A couple catkin began to panic, but the chief stopped them before they totally lost their minds.

“Stay calm, don’t lose your cool! They’re close, but they’re not on our gates just yet. We’ve got enough time to organise an evacuation so long as everyone does their part! Wake everyone up and have them get ready to leave! Split up so you can wake everyone up as quickly as possible.”

“G-Got it!”

“Sure thing, chief!”

“Thank you. I’ll go wake the guards in the meantime.”

The black catkin moved quickly. According to them, they were quite used to this. Running away was the one thing they excelled at.

Many lived as wanderers before settling down in Schwartzekatze. They polished their ability to escape by running from the monsters and bandits they encountered on their travels. In fact, evacuation drills were apparently a part of everyday life in Schwartzekatze. They'd hold training roughly once a year.

"Where are we supposed to evacuate to?" One black catkin voiced.

This time, however, was a bit different. Normally, evacuation was simple because all the black catkin had to do was find another nearby village. But this time, they didn't really know where to go. Schwartzekatze was among the sturdiest of the villages in its vicinity. No nearby settlement had walls large enough to withstand over ten thousand monsters.

"We'll probably need to head to Greengoat," answered the chief.

The villagers were good at escaping, but that didn't mean they could outpace monsters. They needed to get all their stuff ready to go right away so they could get as early a head start as possible. But still, many doubted they would be able to make it all the way.

The chief's reply to their concerns was calm and rational. "It doesn't matter, we've got to make sure the information propagates. We'll have to scatter and send people all over. We'll both warn the other nearby villages and have our people head to Greengoat to tell the army what's happened."

"Nn," agreed Fran.

Though the battle had yet to start, it had already devolved into a race against the clock.

Editor's Note: Hey guys! Joker here. Another chapter of Sword-bro down. Seems like there's some machinations happening behind the scenes. Could be interesting to see how Master, Fran, and Urushi handle this. Wonder who, or what, could be behind it. Have to say, I'm going to miss the relaxing mini-arc we had in the village, but I guess plot has to happen sooner or later. No rest for the wicked, or rather, the Web/Light novel protagon. Haha. Well, I'll leave it here for now. See y'all in the next chapter!

“A-Are you sure!?”

“Did you just say an entire army!?” A pair of panicked guards asked the equally flustered chief to confirm his claim the moment they heard it.

“You heard what I said! The Princess saw it herself!”

“Look, I know what you’re trying to say, but we can’t just...” As they were soldiers and not black catkin, the men in charge of the city’s defense didn’t trust Fran’s testimony nearly as readily as everyone else, but the chief talked them down and convinced them that there was a need for concern.

“Enough of that! Just hurry! You need to get to both Greengoat and all the surrounding villages and let them know the news!”

“Sir, please understand. We just have to make sure of it first. We can’t just be going around reporting whatever we hear.”

Yeah, this isn’t working. Looks like we’ll have to step in a bit.

“Is truth. Don’t believe?”

“That’s not really what I’m trying to say here...”

“Will handle responsibility. Hurry. Move.”

Fran activated her Intimidation skill as she spoke to the guards. For the record, she wasn’t threatening them. She was simply making them understand their place in the metaphorical food chain. As beastkin, the guards respected those that were stronger than them, so she was only doing the most natural thing and putting on a show of her strength to emphasize that they should listen to her.

“I-I understand.” And surely enough, they were immediately rendered obedient.

“We’ll get on it right away. In fact, I’ll head out right this instant.”

“Will go to Greengoat myself,” said Fran.

“W-will you really?” asked a guard.

“Nn. Faster that way. Will leave you responsible for evacuation. Nearby villages.”

“Yes Ma’am! We’ll make sure it gets done.” The chief was so full of energy that he promptly responded in the guards’ places.

“Then going now. Urushi.”

“Woof!”

We already knew exactly where Greengoat was relative to our current location, so we soared through the sky and made a beeline straight for it. We had to get Urushi to push himself a bit beyond what would’ve otherwise been his limits to get there in a timely manner, but it was well worth it. We managed to cut the journey, which had taken us over four hours the first time around, to less than a quarter of that; sixtyish minutes was all it took for the Urushi Express to transport us to Greengoat.

A part of me had been tempted to just have our wolf companion ferry us right to the governor’s doorstep, but I ultimately decided against it. Dropping in uninvited is a terrible idea. We’d have a lot of explaining to do and not enough time to carry any of it through.

With no other choice, we suppressed our fiery emotions and stopped by Greengoat’s gate.

We didn't bother making Urushi shrink. He approached the gate with us while in his larger form. Naturally, having a massive wolf close in on one of the city's entrances in the middle of the night sent the guards into panic mode, but it really couldn't be helped. It was an emergency. We needed every last second we could get.

"I'm Black Lightning Princess. Need to talk to governor. Emergency. Let through now."

"S-Sure, I'll get right on it!"

He's doing a pretty good job of keeping his cool, but I'm totally convinced that he's in full blown panic mode on the inside right now. This whole scenario's hella blown out of proportion. Like, this dude was casually going about doing his night patrol, only to suddenly have a giant ass wolf drop in front of him. If I was him, I would've been expecting to die. And that's not even it. Next thing he knows, he sees a pretty girl riding it, only to find out that she's the Black Lightning Princess. And that she has business with someone way high up the chain of command. If this scenario isn't nerve racking, then I don't know what is. Must suck real hard to be him right now.

His surprise was clear. The man was so shocked, in fact, that he readily agreed to our request without so much as asking a question. He simply nodded as he opened the gate in a hurry.

"Thanks."

As today was a bit of a special case, Fran didn't dismount Urushi. She rode him through town and had him fly above the buildings it was comprised of. The wolf flew straight as an arrow and made it to the lord's house, the manor that lay at the town's centre, in a mere matter of moments.

"W-what!? A wolf!?" shouted one of the guards. His partner made a similar remark.

"This. Governor's house?"

“Huh? Wait, might you be the the Black Lightning Princess herself?” The bolder man stepped forward and began to speak with Fran.

“Nn. So? This, governor’s house?”

“Y-Yes ma’am! That it is!”

“Need to meet him. Urgent.”

“P-Please wait just a second. I’ll have someone let him know immediately!”

“In a hurry. Will enter myself if takes more than ten minutes.” Knowing that Fran was dead serious, the man went pale. He immediately had the other guard get a move on. Unlike his partner, he remained to keep an eye on Fran, but I wasn’t sure if he really was up to the job. It looked like he’d been scared stiff. “C-Could you please tell me a bit more about this urgent matter of yours?”

He was intimidated to the point of stuttering, but he managed to do his job nonetheless.

“Will tell governor.”

“A-Alright, I understand.” The guard knew not to stick his nose into the confidential, so he promptly dropped the topic.

“This city, has knights?”

“We do. There’s an order serving directly under the governor’s command.”

Good to hear. I’d imagine that this country’s knights would be pretty damn strong.

The guard’s partner returned right as we were about to ask him about the number of knights present. Woah, that was quick. It only took him like five minutes.

“O-Our lord says that he will meet with you immediately! Follow me!”

“Nn.”

I was expecting the guard to lead us to an audience chamber, but he instead brought us to a smaller building placed not too far from the manor’s entrance, one apparently built to receive guests of a more noble background.

The lord, Marmanno, was already awaiting us within. His bulky, muscle laden frame lay exposed under his thin, translucent nightshirt. The sight of him in what was basically a negligee contrasted his muscular image to such an extent that I likely would’ve laughed uncontrollably had we not been caught up in an emergency.

“Welcome, Black Lightning Princess. I’ve not seen you around these parts for a whole four odd days.”

“Nn. Thanks for agreeing to meeting.”

“It’s no big deal. Any request of yours that I am able to complete is a request I’m willing to at least consider. And meeting with you, even at this hour, is nothing particularly troubling. Personally, I would’ve preferred if I was to be properly dressed, but I decided not to waste your time after hearing that you only came at the behest of an urgent matter.”

So he only decided to meet with Fran right away because of who she was? Damn, that reputation of hers sure has been coming in handy lately.

“Not problem. Looks good on you.”

“Your words are too kind. But anyway, enough pleasantries. I’m sure you wish to get right down to business. What’s this urgent matter that the guards have been telling me about? Did you perhaps find out more about the assassins?”

“Not that.”

“Hmm... I’m out of ideas then. I can’t say I’m capable of imagining anything else too realistic.”

“North. Whole army of monsters approaching.”

“Did you just say an entire army?”

“Nn. In wasteland north of Schwartzekatz. Headed south.”

“How many of them are there?”

“Nn...” Fran tilted her head to the side as she tried to figure out how to convey her thoughts. “Enough to fill entire wasteland.”

“T-The entire wasteland...!?” Marmanno’s eyes went wide. “Surely this is not something you’re speaking in jest, is it?”

“Not jest. Truth. Swear on my life.”

“T-That’s going a bit too far, Fran!”

Holy shit, talk about going overboard.

“Is truth, so not problem.”

“You’ve got a point, but that’s not what I’m trying to get at here. Don’t ever say that you’re going to swear anything on your life ever again, alright?”

“Nn? ...Okay?” She didn’t quite seem to understand what I was saying, but she trusted me, so she agreed nonetheless.

“Is it a stampede...?” The governor began muttering his thoughts on the matter as I convinced Fran to place more value on her life. “No, that can’t be right. The area has no dungeons.”

Marmanno’s doubts were justified. I understood exactly where he was coming from. He was Greengoa’s lord, so there was no way he wouldn’t have known if there were any dungeons nearby, even if they’d only existed in the past. It wouldn’t make sense for the invasion to be the cause of a newly spawned dungeon either. Fresh dungeons didn’t have the means to produce tens of thousands of troops.

“Any other things in north?”

“I cannot think of too much worth mention. There is the Kingdom of Eldia to the northeast and Bashar to the northwest. However, the uncharted mountain range to the north functions as a natural barrier. I doubt either country’s troops could cross it.”

According to Marmanno, the only creatures that lived in the mountains were monsters that had adapted to it. Its climate was far too harsh for humans and beastkin to withstand. It was for that reason that the country deployed very few troops to the north.

Wait, but then... Just where the hell did all those monsters come from? Hmmm. Oh, wait, right. That’s not important right now. We need to figure out how we’re actually going to deal with all the monsters first.

“Need army.”

“...”

Marmanno frowned and scrunched up his brows. The look on his face was one of dismay.

“I am very sorry, but the army cannot be immediately deployed.”

The words that left his mouth were the exact opposite of the ones that we’d hoped for.

Editor’s Note: Hey guys! Joker here. Another chapter of Sword-Dad down, and we’ve got an issue. They need the army, but it can’t be ‘immediately’ deployed. Supply issue maybe? If so, hopefully Sword-Dad can help with it, even if it means revealing himself to the lord. After all, you’ve got thousands of lives on the line, you can’t really be worrying about keeping a secret like that. Or maybe the army is somewhere else, in which case... uh oh. Fran might have to work for her curry this time around as well. Or maybe, and this is a guess way out of left field, so I doubt it’s actually the case, maybe the entire army is under the control of someone who wants to help the black catkin evolve, so all of them will just stand there and let the catkin kill them. Now wouldn't that be a twist? Sadly, I don't think M. Night Shyamalan is the author of this story, so that probably won't happen. Still, food for thought. But, in the end, there's only one way to find out, and that's to wait for the next chapter. So, you all know what to say, so say it with me: See y'all in the next chapter!

“I am very sorry, but the army cannot be immediately deployed.” Marmanno spoke in a strained tone. He wanted to help and almost seemed mortified at the fact that he couldn’t.

“Why?”

“The Basharian army engaged our own near our country’s southwestern border only three days prior.”

Damn it. I guess that means they got their hands full.

“More than half of Greengoat’s soldiers have been dispatched to serve on the war front.”

“But still some here?”

“The forces we have remaining are just shy of what’s needed to match an army of ten thousand monsters.” Marmanno cast his gaze downward and frowned.

“I’m sorry. All I can do is pray that the villagers are able to escape and make it all the way here, to Greengoat. This city’s walls are the only ones sturdy enough to ward off a literal army of monsters, and I will be needing my troops to defend the city when the time comes. I can’t afford to have them march. That’d be no different from telling them to cast their lives aside.”

Oh, I get it. He’s thinking about letting the monsters siege the city since he doesn’t have enough troops to face them head on, and he can’t exactly keep turtling without the numbers to fight the damned things off.

“Any earth mages? Can make big wall to stall.”

“The only man in this country capable of making a wall big enough to stop an entire army has already taken his place on the Basharian front. I doubt we’d be able to get him to respond to our calls.”

“Okay.”

“But at the very least, I’ll get in touch with all the other governors immediately and check to see if they have any troops to spare. I’ll confer with the army as well, just in case.”

“How much time to arrive?”

“A few days at the very least...” Marmanno frowned. “We’ll have to wait till they’re here to march. We can’t have our troops losing their lives and exhausting themselves before we’ve amassed our forces.”

I understand that Marmanno’s not throwing his troops at the army right away because it’d be a huge waste of lives, but I can’t really bring myself to accept the notion of abandoning all the villages. I know it’s ultimately a choice that’ll save more lives, but he’s practically just leaving them to burn. Not that I’m trying to blame him or anything. As a governor, his choices made sense. Each village only has a few hundred people at best. Numerically speaking, it makes much more sense to focus on protecting the tens of thousands that live here in Greengoat. I had nothing to say. There was no fault in his logic.

Fran also understood the lord’s grievances, so she immediately stood up and got ready to leave.

“Got it.”

“T-Thanks for understanding.” He heaved a sigh of relief. “Where are you headed now?”

“Finished business here. Next, Adventurers’ Guild.”

“W-What do you think of spending a few more days in Greengoat?” Marmanno would benefit greatly from having Fran remain. The widespread knowledge of her might made her mere presence enough to relieve the townsfolk of their concerns and boost the soldiers’ morale, not to mention that she would be able to contribute drastically to the city’s fighting force. There was no doubt that she would strengthen its defenses.

“No. Will not abandon my tribe.” Fran turned to him and spoke with purpose, blunt and concise as always. It was ironic. The two were effectively working towards the same goal: protecting their people. And Fran’s tone reflected just that. There was no malice in her voice, only conviction.

Marmanno, however, failed to catch her drift. He seemed to think that her ironic statement was meant as a critique of his policy. The goatkin promptly got to his feet as his expression twisted in frustration.

Oh shit. He’s pissed. Or so I thought.

“I’m... sorry.” Contrary to my expectations, Marmanno wasn’t actually angry. He was frustrated, but not irritated by Fran’s actions.

“As a man and a warrior myself, I respect your decision. I would do the very same if I was in your shoes. Saving those in need is none other than my creed, the pillar atop which my pride rests. But as lord of this land, I cannot act.”

Rather, he was vexed by his own inability to take to the field and save all that he could.

“Nn.”

“Please, Black Lightning Princess, go in my stead. Save the villagers to whom I’m unable to extend my hand!”

The goatkin’s body quivered with emotion as he bent his hips forward and bowed as deeply as he could.

“Got it.”

“Thank you. I can’t possibly express just how much this means to me.”

Fran charged out of Marmanno’s mansion and made a beeline straight for the guild. Greengoat was as large as one would expect of a city in which several major trade routes converged, so it took her a good bit to make it all the way over.

“Hellooooo?” Fran called out as she entered the guild to get as quick a response as she could.

“Good evening, Black Lightning Princess. How many I help you?”

“Emergency. Need to talk to Guildmaster. Let me meet right now.”

“Yes ma’am.” Again, Fran’s reputation came in handy. She managed to get the receptionist to do exactly as she wanted with no questions asked whatsoever. She disappeared for about three minutes to get permission before returning and leading Fran to her destination: The guildmaster’s room.

The man we ended up being shown to was an old mage with a long, white beard. Like Fran, he had evolved. He was pretty damned strong.

“What brings you here today, Black Lightning Princess?”

“North. Army of monsters incoming.”

“Come again?” The old mage’s eyes went wide.

Fran immediately filled him in on the details. He first reacted to her query with shock, but soon got ahold of himself.

“You say that this army contains over ten thousand members?”

“Want adventurers to help.”

“Of course. I don’t see any reason for them not to, but...” The guildmaster as he pressed a fist against his chin.

“Problem?”

“We lack our usual numbers. About half of our adventurers have already gone south.”

“Adventurers joining war too?”

Wait a second. Aren’t adventurers supposed to be exempt from conscription? I could’ve sworn I saw something like that in the rules back when we first joined up.

After a moment of pondering, I soon recalled that adventurers were often people that didn’t wish to be tied down to any particular state. They travelled all over and often operated outside their country of origin. Thus, they lacked patriotism. Most didn’t want to be pulled into international conflicts. I’m pretty sure there’d be far fewer adventurers affiliated with the guild if they didn’t have the anti-conscription clause in place.

In fact, the guild had signed many an international treaty that guaranteed its members freedom from conscription. The guild was responsible for taking care of bandits and monsters, but that was it. Of course, like all treaties, the guild’s contract was not respected by all. The Reidosians had blatantly ignored it and conscripted adventurers in the past. All those that attempted to defy them were deported and banned from the country. And yet, despite their underhanded douchebaggery, the Reidosians were still completely and utterly defeated. The Reidosian Adventurers’ Guild was shut down, and the country itself was rendered almost completely devoid of the profession’s practitioners, even to this day.

The Reidosians were both the first and the last to ever attempt conscripting adventurers. Countries still do try forming contracts with specific adventurers with clauses that mention cases pertaining to war, but that’s pretty much it these days. The only people who accept those contracts are people who are passionate about the countries they live in, like Amanda and Jean.

Consent had become the key word—forcibly recruiting adventurers was just a flat out no go.

“All of those who went did so of their own accord.” The guildmaster smiled. “This country is made by Beastkin, for Beastkin. The knights and soldiers that serve in the military are not the only ones that wish to protect it.”

Ohhh. Right. I forgot. This country’s a bit special. The Beast Lord used to be an adventurer, didn’t he? I guess his policies must really support people that share his background in that case. Huh. I think I can see why so many of this country’s adventurers are willing to fight.

“So we’re short on hands. I doubt you’d be able to get enough people to fight off an entire army, even if we went around recruiting from all the nearby towns.”

“Want as much help as can get.”

“Got it. But do keep in mind that it’s possible we might not be able to gather more than just what’s needed to keep Greengoat defended.”

“Nn...” Fran frowned, but nodded regardless. “Got it.”

“Will you fight to your last?”

The guildmaster cast his gaze on Fran as she got to her feet. His eyes seemed to be telling her that he wanted to say it was better for her not to go, but a single glance at her face silenced him. He knew. He knew her people lay to the north. And from her eyes alone, he’d determined her stance.

“Bye.” Choosing not to answer, Fran left his question unanswered.

“Farewell. May the tides of battle surge in your favour.”

Editor’s note: Hey guys! Joker here. Man, Fran can’t seem to catch a break, can she? First the army is gone, now the adventurers? It’s all because of that battle. I'm starting to think the opposing side is the one controlling the monsters, wanting to have them attack all the underdefended towns and villages. My isekai sense is tingling is tingling in that regard. But I guess I'll have to wait to find out, sinc I can't read any Japanese. Should probably get on learning that so i can help the boss more. But... eh. We'll see. All right, everyone. See y'all in the next chapter!

296.Resolve and Preparation

Chapter 296.Resolve and Preparation

Resolve and Preparation

Editors: Sebas Tian, Joker (Editor's Note Only)

Fran and I discussed our course of action as we got back on Urushi's back and sped away from Greengoat.

Neither the army nor the adventurers were able to act, at least not right away. But we couldn't just sit around and watch until we finally had allies at our backs. Schwartzekatze's inhabitants had the tendency to be fairly proficient in the art of escape, but there was no way they could outrun a literal army of monsters. The villagers were sure to be devoured by the still marching horde if left alone.

Something had to be done.

We might be able to get the younger ones out if we stick 'em on a carriage and get it moving asap. But all that really means is sentencing the rest of Schwartzekatze to death, and that's a choice Fran isn't willing to make. I knew the young black catkin well enough to understand that Schwartzekatze was effectively the embodiment of one of her many aspirations, a literal dream come true. There was absolutely no chance of her abandoning it. It doesn't really matter if the village itself burns down. Everything can be rebuilt and restored so long as the villagers are saved.

"Things are looking a bit tough this time... I'm not actually sure we'll be able to do too much." I muttered to myself telepathically as I brooded over my thoughts. I don't really want to let Fran down. But let's be real here...

"Master? Something wrong?" The catgirl perked her ears up as she caught wind of my voice.

"Listen closely, Fran. The only way Schwartzekatze's citizens are going to make it out in one piece is if we fight. All by ourselves. There aren't any reinforcements standing by behind us. It's all you, me, and Urushi."

"Nn."

"You do understand how much danger we'll have to put ourselves in, right?"

"Nn. I know." Fran nodded. Her expression was a serious one and her resolve was clear as day.

"I know what you're going to say, but I'm just going to go ahead and tell you this anyway. I don't think you should fight. You need to get the hell out of here, fast. In fact, I'd even go as far as saying that we should leave the Beastkin's Country."

"Sorry, Master. Will fight. Won't change my mind." Fran's reply was instant. She didn't even stop to consider my advice. It was clear that she'd set her sights on a goal, and she wasn't going to stop until she achieved it, even if that meant fighting to her last breath.

"No matter what?"

"Nn!"

Yeah, I figured as much. She's not the type to abandon her tribesmen. I mean, it doesn't hurt to try, but god damn. She's so committed to this that I'm starting to worry that I'll lose her.

"Alright then. Sorry 'bout trying to stop you. Don't worry about it, just me being silly old me." I mean, who am I to question the extent of Fran's resolve...?

"Not problem. Master not silly. Amazing sword."

"Thanks." Right. Right... How could I've forgotten? I'm Fran's sword. My job is to cleave through her enemies and support her in all her goals, not make her decisions for her. "My bad there, had a brain fart. I'm all good now."

“Thanks, Master. I know. Thinking about my safety. But won’t focus on safety. Will save other black catkin. And will need your power.”

“Got it. You have my blade.”

“Nn!”

“But that said... I highly doubt that we’ll be able to take out all of those monsters by ourselves.”

“Nn. I know.”

We might’ve been able to handle it if it was just a massive ass horde of goblins, but life, being the bitch it was, threw us for a loop. I knew for a fact that there were much larger monsters mingled into the army. It’s probably better to plan for the worst and assume the army’s got a couple A and B ranks mixed into it.

“Alright, first things first, we mess with the vanguard and throw it into a state of disarray. It doesn’t matter how many troops they have. They can’t keep moving forward if they’re stuck in traffic.” I said, conclusively. Er wait, that’s not true. They could just step over or trample their peers and keep walking. We’ll have to find a way to actually slow down the army. Oh, I know! Maybe we could build a wall...

Figuring out a way to stop the army was important, but thinking about the steps we’d take after were even more so. The entire army’ll probably turn on us and attack us the moment it realizes that we’re getting in its way.

We’ll need to figure out what we need to do to keep the army occupied for as long as possible. Ideally, we’d want to confuse the shit out of the person in control and have them make the monsters retreat, but I don’t really see that happening. And once we lose the ability to hold the whole army back, we’ll have to switch to killing off everything that heads in the direction the black catkin are going to be headed. A part of me doubted that we’d be able to fight off all the foes that came our way while also protecting the tribe.

Fran and I were pretty good at going on the offensive, but neither she nor I knew much about playing the part of a bodyguard. Not even we knew how well we'd be able to fill the role.

"Doesn't matter. Need to do it, so will do it."

"Point taken." I agreed. Again, it was my role to give her desires form, and I wasn't about to let her down.

"Villagers spotted."

"Oh, nice. It looks like they've already started to evacuate." The black cat tribe was moving as one huge lump. It looked like the entire village had moved in tandem. We got down from the sky and landed right in front of them.

"Welcome back, Princess! I'm very glad to see you." The chief, one of the members leading the group, greeted her the moment Urushi's feet touched the ground.

"Nn. Everyone here?"

"Of course."

Seeing her had brought a look of relief to his face. It seemed that her absence had caused him undue stress, likely in part because he was anxious as to whether or not she was safe. Wow, they're fast. I didn't think they'd have gotten this far already. Hell, a part of me even thought they might still be back at the village.

It turned out that the entire village had actually finished packing up not too long after we informed them of the situation. They'd grabbed all the stuff they could carry and set out before the crack of dawn with a few days worth of food in tow. The group travelled with the children encased between groups of adults such that they could stay safe in the case of an attack. Wow uh. They really are used to this.

That said, their overall pace was still painfully slow. They had no choice given that there were children and old timers amongst their ranks. At the very least, it'd take them a few days to make it all the way to Greengoat.

“Can’t escort you. Will still be okay?”

“We’ll be just fine, Princess. We’ve armed ourselves with the weapons you so graciously granted us. We’re ready for anything,” said the chief.

“All this gear is great,” added another black catkin. “We’re not the greatest of fighters, but you know what they say, fine feathers make fine birds. With these in hand, even we can handle the monsters that pop up around these parts!”

“Everything here’ll be okay, so you do you, Princess!” said a third.

Every last grown man was armed. They were still quite weak, of course, but they were motivated and at least capable of holding their own against the area’s wildlife.

“Will go now.”

“Please, be safe,” said the chief.

The chief didn’t ask Fran where she was headed. Nor did any of the villagers. They already knew. They knew that they wouldn’t be able to escape unless Fran engaged the monsters in combat. They knew that she was going to fight with everything she had and put her life on the line. For them.

And that was why they remained silent as they watched her go. They didn’t even try to stop her from going. They held her resolve in far too high a regard to disgrace it.

We parted ways with the black cat tribe and headed north.

Schwartzekatz soon came into view. It was quiet and still as could be, like a candle with its flame extinguished. One night was all it took to turn the lively village into a veritable ghost town. It was impossible to tell that, just a few hours prior, it'd been a lively place filled with song and laughter. Now, the only sound I heard was that of the wind, whooshing by its empty houses.

“...Have to protect everyone.”

“That we do, Fran. That we do.”

“Woof!”

“Just flat out charging in is way too reckless, so let's take a bit to figure out a plan and get everything ready.”

“Got it.”

Though I wanted to stop before initiating, I didn't want to keep us for too long. It would be best for us to initiate an attack before the army managed to march its way past the plains. It'd be a whole lot easier to keep the whole army pinned down if we had a good sightline. The area beyond the plains was forested and the trees were sure to obstruct our vision.

Of course, there was no such thing as a free lunch. Fighting them on the plains also meant exposing ourselves. That said, we would still be susceptible to surprise attacks from stealthy monsters even if we did decide to make use of the forest, so there's really more benefit than harm in fighting on the plains.

“Yeah, it pretty much looks like the monsters mostly headed straight south.”

“Need to hurry.”

“Woof!”

Chapter 297. Paper Mache

Paper Mache

We contemplated our plans before engaging the enemy army. Specifically, we looked into slowing them down and figuring out if we could make our lives easier through some sort of preemptive action.

“What now, Master?” Fran asked. “Make walls? Dig holes?”

“Hmmm...” I stroked my figurative beard as I contemplated her suggestions. They were legitimate options. In fact, the best case scenario would be one in which we built a wall capable of keeping the black catkin safe and the monsters out. The ideal wall would also come armed with a nice deep moat, and make it so that it would be impossible for any monster, weak or strong, to cross it.

Of course, creating such a structure was but a pipe dream. Neither Fran nor I had the mana or ability to do such a thing. The only mage in the country that could was on the Basharian front.

The largest hole we could possibly make was only three meters wide, three meters deep, and five meters long. Of course, it was possible for us to use the spell over and over, but crafting something in such a manner would take hours, hours we didn't have. The army was sure to arrive before we finished. That said, I wouldn't have suggested such a flawed method even if we had enough time to actually carry it out. Creating countless large holes would exhaust both Fran and I, and draining oneself of magic right before engaging in a large scale battle was naught but a fool's errand. And that's not even factoring in the fact that it could just end up splitting the army in two. Having the two halves each assault a different place would be bad. Really, really bad.

I recalled my old world as I thought about the many strategies we could potentially employ. I barely knew anything about the military tactics they used back there. The only military-like word that I knew off the top of my head was guerrilla warfare—the tactic in which a smaller group wore down a larger group through the use of traps, ambushes, and other similar techniques. The tactic was powerful in the sense that it was able to slow the larger group's movements by forcing them on guard. Soldiers on the receiving end of the guerrilla tactics would become anxious. They would fear the fact that they could be subject to an attack around every corner, and through said fear, lose their morale. Or at least that's how it tends to go in novels and movies.

But again, the option was unavailable to us. Our trap creation skill was too low a level to mass produce anything useful. We could go around dropping pitfalls everywhere, but I have a feeling that'll cause more harm than it'll prevent.

It was impossible for us to remove every single hole we created, especially if we camouflaged them by covering them with dirt. In other words, we were bound to leave at least a few lying around and anything we failed to clean up would be to the black catkin what landmines were to the vietnamese. Yeah, can't have that. Gotta learn from history's mistakes, not repeat them.

“Well. It looks like our only real choice is to dive right in. We'll probably need to start with something flashy so we get the army's attention.”

“Got it.”

That said, we weren't about to actually just march right on in. We were still going to do something, and I had just the thing in mind.

“Alright Fran, Plan B.”

“Nn.”

The two of us began casting the Stonewall skill over and over to produce a series of large, rocky blocks. They were a bit flimsy because we traded thickness for overall size, but they more than served our purposes.

“Master, good enough?”

“Yeah. The whole thing’s got a pretty good feel to it. You can even see the windows.”

“Nn.”

“Alright, I’ll handle this next part,” I said, as I activated Earth Control.

I used the skill to maneuver the stony walls and close the gaps between them. Before long, we had ourselves a makeshift fortress. Located in the middle of the forest north of Schwartzekatz, the building was large enough even to be seen from afar. Its gate was so large that it almost seemed to resemble the Arc de Triomphe. Appearance wise, it was perfect. But durability wise, it may as well have been made of paper mache. The entire construction was hollow, through and through.

Still, it was good enough. It didn’t need solid defenses. We hadn’t planned on using it as a point of defense. It was a weenie, a landmark. The whole point of it was to tower above the forest such that it could be seen from afar.

The monsters would be unable to leave it alone. They would have to attack it else risk getting flanked after they passed it by. In other words, it provided us a method to predict their actions. I’m not actually sure how effective it’ll be, but they should at least notice it. And if they notice it, they’ll probably at least be wary of it.

“That’s that.” All the building needed now was a couple soldiers. Of course, I didn’t actually have any soldiers under my employ, nor were there any nearby willing to risk their lives in a fort doomed to fall. The only solution was therefore to make them ourselves.

I retrieved ten corpses from my inventory. I didn’t look for anything in particular. I just chose the ten humanoids in the best condition, so there ended up being goblins and stuff thrown into the mix.

“Alright Urushi, do your thing.”

“Woof!”

The wolf cast spirit magic and instilled force and will into the lifeless corpses laid before him. All ten reanimated bodies soon rose to action and immediately readied themselves to receive his orders. I grabbed a couple random worn out bows and handed them to our makeshift soldiers such that they could fire arrows at any monsters that neared. As I only had five, I armed the remaining undead with broken swords and spears.

Silhouette wise, they looked exactly like soldiers, and the monsters would likely be deceived so long as they continued moving around atop the fort.

And with that, our preparations were complete. Everything was perfectly in order.

“Fort’s done, Fran.”

“Then, let’s go?”

“Yeah. Let’s go.”

We enchanted ourselves with all sorts of support magic before flying off into the sky yet again. As we didn’t want our enemies catching wind of our actions, we made sure to climb until we hit an altitude at which they would be unlikely to spot us.

“Ugh.” I groaned as I looked down on the army. “The way they’re swarming is kinda gross.”

“Looks like garbage,” added Fran. I know, right?

“Alright, let’s do this. Let’s hit them hard and make it as flashy as we can while we’re at it. Once we’re done with that, we’ll charge right in. You ready?”

“Nn!”

298. The Start of a Battle

Chapter 298. The Start of a Battle

The Start of a Battle

Editors: Sebas Tian

We got ready to launch our pre-emptive strike as we watched the army of monsters beneath us.

“Alright, I’m ready. What about you, Fran?”

“Also ready.”

“Woof!”

There wasn’t much holding us back now that all three of us had gotten our preparations in order, so we had Fran give us the signal.

“Awakening!”

All three of us began raining spells down on the army the moment Fran awakened. The battle was sure to be a long one, so we didn’t go as far as activating Brilliant Lightning Rush. Its suicidal downsides made it difficult to use given the circumstances.

“Ekato Kernauros!”

“It’s showtime! Kanna Kamui!”

“Aroooo!”

Fran’s thunderbolts, which rained down over a wide area, caused rampant destruction. The monsters subjected to the attack howled in pain as their bodies were torn apart by the magical lighting. Likewise, my Kanna Kamui, which had landed right in the middle of the vanguard, swallowed well over a hundred monsters, ending them before they could even make a noise. Urushi, the only one of us not to cast lighting magic, had gone with a bit more indirect approach. He had unleashed a toxic mist into our surroundings, one that caused the monsters that inhaled it to convulse as they were subject to an intense pain.

“Gyaaaoooo!”

The monsters began to howl and squeal in confusion as they attempted to figure out where the sudden attack had come from. Confusion quickly spread through their ranks. Operation Pre-emptive Strike success.

“On with the plan!”

“Nn!”

Urushi began running in circles above the army as I pulled rocks and trees out from my inventory and dropped them on the monsters below. Likewise, Fran also followed up by firing magical, flaming arrows.

We used to have a whole swamp’s worth of toxins at our disposal, but we’d used most of it to create delicious food back when we were in Barbra. Even the last little bit that remained had already been converted to water with restorative properties.

Most of the giant rocks we gained when the floating islands fell apart were gone. I’d dumped all but five of them into the stomach of a midgard wyrm. They wouldn’t be able to cause too much widespread destruction because they were few in quantity, but that didn’t mean I was going to skimp out on dropping them. Sure, they won’t really kill too many, but I’m sure it’ll probably either confuse them or scare them shitless. I mean, just look at how big they are. Besides, our goal has always been just to stall them, and they’ll make for some pretty good obstacles.

The tactic ended up being quite effective. Some monsters ended up so confused that they panicked and started running around like headless chickens, screaming all the way.

“Next, we crush the vanguard!”

“Nn!”

“Ruff!”

We landed right at the front of the army and dialed our bloodlust up all the way to eleven.

“Gya, gyagya!?”

“Gii!”

The immense pressure that Fran emitted caused unrest to spread through their ranks. The vanguard, the only part of the army that had eyes on her, took a step back in fear, only to be pushed back towards her by the poor, unknowing saps that stood at the rear.

Most of the monsters that populated the vanguard were weak. They roughly fit into four categories: evil beings, beasts, scabies, and undead. The evil beings, that is, the orcs and goblins, weren't nearly as well equipped as the ones that had attacked Schwartzekatz just a few days prior. Their appearances were much more typical of their species' norms. They were pretty much limited to just rags and wooden clubs. Wait, are all the weak monsters up front so they can act as meatshields or something? I really hope not. That would mean that the mastermind has got a good head on his shoulders, and I sure as hell don't want to have to deal with any crazy tactics.

“Haaah!” Fran dived right into their ranks and began cutting down every goblin and wolf that she neared.

Her actions were precise and efficient. She instantly judged the strength of the foes around her before removing the weaker ones by going for their cores and smashing the stronger ones' heads. Truth be told, we didn't actually need to go after any monster cores whatsoever, but there wasn't any need not to, and as Fran only went after them in the case that they wouldn't dull her efficiency, I had no qualms with her methods. It's not like any of these monsters are particularly rare or anything anyway. Yeah, this'll work. If we stack enough corpses together, we might be able to create a pile large enough to slow down the rest of the army by making it take a detour or something.

“Take this! Blast Flame! Gale Hazard! Thunder Web! Blast Flame! Gale Hazard!”

With a strategy in mind, I focused my attention on creating as many corpses as possible. All the spells I launched were of the same type. They had large areas of effect, but they were weak. I bolstered their power a good bit by putting more mana into each cast, but there was nothing I could do about the spells’ natures. Each cast was about strong enough to kill a goblin, leave an orc half dead, and take off about a fifth of an ogre’s max health.

All the monsters that we used the spells on were weak, but they had to be eradicated nonetheless. They were sure to attack any evacuating villagers they happened to come across if we let them advance or scatter. Dismantling the swarm as a whole was much more important than eliminating its strongest members.

Of course, not all monsters were susceptible to magical damage. But those that resisted my attacks were torn to pieces the moment they approached either Fran or Urushi.

Urushi’s primary role was to function like something along the lines of a shortstop. He covered Fran’s blind spots and attacked everything that went after her with his venomous fog. I couldn’t help but be impressed by the sheer toxicity of the spell. Its poison was potent enough to permanently cripple a goblin, if not outright kill it upon exposure. The only problem is that it’s a bit too strong. We can’t use it near allies or if we’re in town.

It was so potent, in fact, that it was even capable of damaging Fran should she inhale it. Fortunately, the wolf was prudent enough not to fire it off in her direction, and I covered for him by blowing away any that did drift over with my magic. Of course, it was still a bit risky nonetheless, but we didn’t have the liberty to really care. We had to exterminate as many monsters as we could as fast as possible.

“Haaaaah!”

“Thunder Web!”

“Woooof!”

And so, the battle continued. We were surrounded on all sides, but we kept slaying our enemies nonetheless. Our methods were effective. The army had halted. It stopped advancing in order to focus on moving us out of its way. They only ever moved past us in order to better surround us. Thank god.

The only problem was that casting spells nonstop had taken quite a toll on my mana. We would soon have to shift into a different style of battle.

Of course, I had been making liberal use of Magic Absorption. I wrenched everything I could from our enemies each time my blade struck them. But it still wasn't enough. My consumption far outweighed my intake.

“I'm going to stop casting for a bit and focus on support instead.”

“Nn.”

I continued to drain everything she slashed of its magic each time she swung me. It would take a good bit for me to recover all my mana given the weak nature of the monsters we were currently locked in combat with, but it would eventually recover. And that was what mattered. Losing time was something that just couldn't be helped.

We had to be at our best if we wanted to be able to take down the army's more powerful members.

The monsters began to approach with more vigour when they realized that they were no longer going to be pelted with spells on their way in. But even so, Fran remained unharmed. The weaklings before her were simply unable to cause her any damage.

“You holding up okay?” Still, I was concerned. The catkin was unharmed, and I had been restoring her stamina with my magic throughout the battle, so I knew that she felt no real physical load. But the same couldn't be said for her mind. She was sure to grow tired eventually, and there was really nothing I could do about any sort of mental fatigue.

“Nn. Fine.”

Her reply, however, indicated that my worries were needless. I could tell that she wasn't just putting up a front, that she was actually perfectly okay. As far as she was concerned, taking down the enemies that had appeared before her was as easy as a walk in the park. Wow. She really has grown. This kinda thing used to exhaust the hell out of her back when we were helping Jean raid that one dungeon.

Of course, a walk in the park was still a type of exercise, and Fran had indeed accrued a slight bit of exhaustion. Her breath had started to get ragged, but that was basically it.

“We've still got a ton of battles lined up for us, so don't push yourself too hard just yet.”

“Nn!”

299. Strong Monsters

Chapter 299. Strong Monsters

Strong Monsters

Editor(s): Sebas Tian, Speedphoenix, Joker

We continued to engage the army of monsters in head-on combat.

I managed to recover most of my mana after a good bit of skirmishing, but it was still a bit shy of full. But of course, there was no way the monsters would know that, let alone work with us to make things more convenient.

“Grrrr!”

“Big ones coming.”

“I guess that must mean the show’s finally on the road. Alright. Let’s kick it up a notch.”

“Okay.”

A group of monsters with numbers in the tens moved through the crowd and began attacking Fran. There was a four meter tall lizard, a huge lion with green fur, and a high ogre with an iron club amongst many others.

It seemed that the mob had finally realized that it wouldn’t be able to defeat Fran with just small fry. She could cleave through hundreds of them without breaking a sweat.

The stronger monsters that approached ranked in the D to E range. Each was capable of crushing an entire village all by their lonesome. Of course, we were far superior. None of the monsters could pose any sort of threat to either Fran or Urushi in a one versus one scenario. But there were far too many of them for us to treat the battle as a leisurely stroll. We had to remain vigilant.

And of course, the weaker monsters hadn't just up and disappeared now that their superior counterparts had come around. Those that were capable of it were still providing long ranged support.

"Listen up, Urushi! Sink into the shadows and start sniping them one by one. Your goal is to thin them out as much as possible."

"Woof!"

"And be careful out there. Make sure you don't get yourself surrounded. I'll make sure we don't get hit by projectiles. Fran, you focus on destroying everything nearby."

"Nn!"

Fran fearlessly plunged into the mob. She slipped under a monster whose legs were as thick as her hips, and danced around another that tried to stab her with a horn that was as thick as a telephone pole.

The monsters she fought were as strong as the ones that I'd only barely managed to defeat not too long after my reincarnation. She and I had both gotten much stronger. While we weren't able to slay each enemy in a single hit, we were still able to take them down with ease.

Agitation spread through the monsters' ranks as their army's members fell one by one. They didn't seem to understand how the tiny little thing that stood in their way was anywhere near as powerful as them, let alone much stronger than they were. They looked at her as they would mere prey. But her attacks and spells were both much more lethal than theirs could ever be.

At first, they'd just blindly charged in. But now that they had calmed down a bit, they came to understand that she was much more powerful than she appeared.

Their eyes filled with fear. And from that fear, I finally came to understand the gravity of the situation we were dealing with. The fact that the monsters were afraid meant that they weren't being manipulated. They were following orders. Whoever had amassed this army was powerful enough to make ten thousand monsters follow their commands. I really hope that they haven't gathered under someone purely because that someone happened to be overwhelmingly powerful. I really don't want to have to even imagine how strong anyone capable of that would be. They'd have to be A rank tier, at the very least.

Lost in my thoughts as I was, I was still actively participating in the battle. The reason I was able to manage all these thoughts while fighting was because I had activated Parallel Processing and dedicated one of my mind's newly found branches to considering the status quo.

The situation was honestly not looking all that great. Magic wasn't the only long ranged attack we had to avoid. We also had to somehow dodge corpses. The monsters were throwing their dead companions without a care in the world. They didn't even mind the projectile's final destination. They would still throw them at full force even if they were at risk of hitting an ally. This recklessness of theirs made their attacks incredibly hard to predict.

The number of monsters engaging Fran in combat gradually began to shrink. Unfortunately, our resources had suffered a similar fate. My MP, which we had oh so painstakingly worked to recover had once again been reduced to only half its maximum value. Fran was very clearly exhausted as well. She was panting heavily, so heavily that her shoulders would heave with every breath she took.

I had already healed her back up to full, but she had spent a good bit of the fight covered in wounds of all shapes and sizes. Her face and clothes were all stained by the sheer amount of blood that she had been soaked in. Not all monsters had the same coloured blood, and mixing it all together had eventually caused the stuff that coated her to turn black.

As it impacted her ability to see, I made sure to clean the stuff off of her face every once in a while, but my efforts were fruitless, as it didn't take very long for her face to once again be dyed a shade of black.

That was just how intense the battle had been. Being as exhausted as she was was only natural.

“You still good to go, Fran?”

“Nn!” Fran gave herself a light shake to get back into the zone before glaring at the monsters around her. The overwhelming aura that radiated off her body caused them to momentarily freeze in place.

Again, the monsters were made to recognize that Fran was no pushover, that she was more than what her form suggested.

Whoever was in control of the army seemed to come to understand that it was time for a change in strategy, as the monsters began to fight in a bit of a different manner. I guess they really are watching, then. Hmm.. they might even be somewhere in the middle of the crowd. Or maybe there’s a commander or something that was taught a bunch of different strategies ahead of time. That might be possible too. And just how are all these orders being issued in the first place?

The only thing I knew for sure was that the monsters were moving to support one another. They were working as a team.

“Master.”

“Yeah. Looks like this’ll be a pain in the ass to handle.”

The monsters around us pulled back as would a receding wave as five monsters of an even higher power level stepped forward. These guys are probably this army’s most powerful monsters.

All five were C ranked threats; each was strong enough to fell Grengoat on its own. The fact that there were five of them gathered meant that the country as a whole would have met an unprecedented amount of trouble had we not discovered them.

They would have had to fight a war on two fronts. The Basharians would have been attacking from one side, while this army attacked from another. And it all just happened to occur while the Beast Lord was away. Does that mean that this monster army is something the Basharians put together? Man, I just don’t know. But alright, enough thinking. I need to focus.

The biggest problem was that each of the five C ranked monsters was of a different type. The largest was a multi headed snake known as a Graphite Hydra. Its scales shown with a black lustre, as could be guessed from its name. Each of its six heads were wide enough to swallow Fran whole, and all in all, the oversized snake was at least twenty meters long. It had the ability to rapidly regenerate, but that wasn't all. It was capable of spitting breaths of fire, poison, and darkness.

Beside it stood a Crimson Wolf, a canine with deep red fur capable of casting flame magic. It seemed like it was more or less the same species as Urushi, except that its primary element was fire as opposed to darkness. Its stats were the most well rounded of the five.

Like the second, the third monster was also a type of beast. Namely, a Steel Titan Bear. The ten meter tall mammal had skin as hard as steel covering its entire body. It didn't really have any special skills, but its stats, especially its defenses, were incredible. Its strength sat at a whole 1286, meaning it could output even more brute force than the Graphite Hydra.

Next to the bear was a giant bug known as an Adamantite Beetle. It basically looked like an eight meter long hercules beetle. Its exoskeleton was absurdly hard, and it even had level 8 magic resistance. Its High Speed Flight skill made it look like it would be extremely difficult to deal with.

The last monster was a humanoid with jet black skin, a demon. Its species labeled it a Demonic Baron, meaning it was weaker than the Demonic Earl we'd fought back when we first started adventuring. Its stats weren't as good, but it had skills that seemed to cover all its weaknesses. It looked like it would be harder to deal with than the Demonic Earl we'd fought back then, but only because it didn't need to protect an idiotic dungeon master.

Even just a single one of the five monsters that stood before us was enough to pose a threat on its own. And to make matters worse, the army had once again started to move. It looked like it was planning to advance while Fran struggled with its elites.

Fortunately, I had managed to glean a bit of information. Demons were a type of monster that could almost never exist outside of a dungeon unless very special techniques were employed. In other words, the monsters were likely the product of some sort of labyrinth.

“This is looking bad.”

“What now?”

“Let’s see... We’re not going to be able to keep the army in check if we’re going to have to take these guys on, so...”

It was just far too dangerous. We wouldn’t have a fighting chance unless we went all out and focused all our resources on the opponents we had before us.

“Then will just win quickly.”

“Yeah, seems like our only choice. Welp. Let’s do this!”

Editor’s note: Hey, guys! Joker here. Another chapter of Sword-bro done and out, and it looks like the big boys are stepping up to play with the little girl that had been making a fool of their entire army. Can’t wait to see Fran (hopefully) mop the floor with them and continue crushing the army. Whoo, the looks on their faces when she’s doing that? Priceless, I’d say. Heck, in Skyrim, I made a character named Fran and made an OP sword using mods and called it Sword-dad, so you could say I’m a fan of this series. XD All right. Not a lot today, I’m afraid. The earlier Jingai Musume (which, if you don’t know, is another series we do here at Cardboard Translations. Feel free to check it out. We picked up the series from the beginning and are working on catching up as we speak. Shameless plug is shameless, yes.) chapter really sucked my mojo. See y’all in the next chapter!

300. A Successful(?) Preemptive Strike

Chapter 300. A Successful(?) Preemptive Strike

A Successful(?) Preemptive Strike

Editor(s): Sebas Tian, Joker

We calmly observed the five C ranked monsters that gathered around us and attempted to look for openings. They had us surrounded, so we needed to remain vigilant. There was a chance that the horde, the army that had continued to advance, would disperse if we sat around for far too long, and it would be much more difficult to annihilate them if they weren't all gathered in one spot.

And if we failed in our extermination, the many villagers, black catkin or otherwise, would be attacked. They wouldn't be able to evacuate all the way to Greengoat.

Letting our guard down and diving right in would be an act of suicide. We wouldn't be able to defeat the five enemies before us unless we remained calm. And so, with my mind restored to a state of serenity, I quickly devised a plan and informed Fran of its contents.

"Urushi. Can you keep the Crimson Wolf at bay?"

"Woof woof!"

Kin to the God of Wolves, one of Urushi's titles, provided him with the ability to intimidate other wolves. Thus, it seemed likely that he would have a paw up on the Crimson Wolf, even if the two were the same rank.

"Fran, focus on the demon. He's going to be the most troublesome of the bunch. Don't hold back if you think it'll get you in trouble. Feel free to use Brilliant Lightning Rush at your discretion."

"Nn!"

I don't really want to deal with any trickery, and its magic lets it support its allies too. Yeah, definitely bringing that thing down asap.

Fran pulled the Phantom Pyroxene Blade out from her inventory and equipped it. While the two of them were holding off their respective opponents, I would be defeating the final three.

The monsters kept us surrounded and stared in anticipation of our actions. Fran's actions, the drawing of a brand new weapon, had caused them to raise their guard even further. It was precisely their excessive caution that allowed me to gather up enough magical power for my next action.

"Let's go!"

"Nn!"

"Kanna Kamui!"

There was a minor bit of delay before the spell activated, in which the magical aura radiating off my body drastically beefed itself up. The monsters reacted to it and immediately launched an assault.

But they were too late.

A giant white thunderbolt larger than even the Graphite Hydra, the largest of the five, descended from the sky and swallowed the jet black snake whole. Its ability to regenerate would be far too obnoxious if left alone, so I'd slammed it with as much burst damage as I could muster. Kanna Kamui's light soon faded. And with it went the multi headed serpent's corpse. The attack had burnt even the very concept of the monster to dust. Not a single bone or scale remained. All that was left was a large crater situated right where it had been just moments ago.

The aftershock, a heavy burst of wind, assaulted the remaining four monsters. The force was so great that it threatened to knock each of the four massive beasts off their feet and sweep them away if they didn't take care to keep themselves firmly planted in the dirt below. That said, all four had gone completely stiff. Seeing the instant death of their ally had frozen them solid.

Their response, or rather, their lack thereof, proved that they were still unused to combat and its intricacies. Freezing up in the middle of a battle was a huge mistake, one that proved fatal for the Steel Titan Bear that had been by the Hydra's side.

"You're mine!"

"Roarrrrrrrrrrrr!?"

I teleported behind the metallic ursine and drilled straight through its back with a telekinetic catapult. Its inability to react allowed me to land a critical hit; I destroyed its core with a single blow.

If it weren't so taken aback, the bear likely would've been able to detect the attack and, at the very least, move to protect its vitals. But as it was now, the bear lacked the capacity to even so much as fathom that I, a sword, would be able to move on my own and reap it of all it had.

The only one of the four remaining monsters to react, the demon, had been unable to alter the bear's fate. Fran had already engaged it in combat and locked it down.

Still, the bear's heavy defenses were impressive. My intent had been to impale it through and through, but I was only able to barely reach its core, once again showing that it had been no small fry.

And of course, the same trick wasn't going to work a second time. All three remaining monsters already knew that I could move on my own. The sight of me killing one of their allies had practically been seared into their minds. They weren't going to let their guard down again.

I tried to give the monsters yet another shock by shoving the bear's corpse into my magical inventory, but much to my dismay, they didn't freeze up this time. Still, I didn't particularly mind. I had done enough to better our situation. Two of our five foes were dead. Relieved at my success, I returned to Fran's side.

"Alright, just three left. Let's do this!"

"Got it."

"Woof!"

Urushi provoked the crimson wolf with an attack before dragging it somewhere a bit further away so they could engage in a duel. The scarlet canine seemed to have been paying extra attention to Urushi, which was a given since the two were the same type of monster, so it accepted his challenge immediately.

"And now all we have to worry about is the demon and the bug."

"Nn!"

Fran grabbed me and got ready to fight. She made sure to keep the tip of my blade pointed at the demon in order to cut its obnoxious spells out of the equation as quickly as possible. Unfortunately, the black skinned humanoid had already retreated a fair distance away and started to throw spells at us to keep us in check.

Our explosive offenses had made the creature wary, which was unfortunate. I wanted it to draw closer so we could finish it off with a single high powered strike.

We would've been able to quickly eliminate the demon if we had Urushi at our side, but he was stuck in a stalemate with the other wolf.

Urushi was stronger from a magic standpoint, but the crimson canine outranked him when it came to physical prowess. All in all, the two were roughly equal. The black dog lurked about in the shadows and launched darkness magic from afar, while the red one ignored even the very concept of defense and instead focused on rushing in to deliver a single, critical blow with its flames.

It looked like their duel would continue for quite some time; we were on our own.

Both the Adamantite Beetle and demon were extremely fast, and their mobility was only further emphasized by their ability to take to the air. To make matters worse, they were working together. When we chose to attack one, the other would go on the offensive and force us off its partner.

The Adamantite Beetle's attacks ended up being a pain in the ass to deal with despite it not having the best offensive stats. It was able to use its mana as thrusters by firing it out from behind, which in turn allowed it to gain an explosive amount of propulsion.

We couldn't even avoid it just by keeping an eye on it. We had to carefully observe the flow of its mana and put everything into evading the incoming attack the moment it began getting ready to charge.

And of course, the demon didn't allow us to focus as much attention on the beetle as I wanted.

It came at us with a blade the moment we looked away from it, one made from poison magic. It used that very same element to fire a spell as it closed the gap. Watching Urushi fight had allowed the demon to deduce that Fran didn't have the best defenses against poison based attacks. The attack wasn't too quick, so Fran dodged it and avoided damage.

Or at least that was what was supposed to happen.

“Guah!”

“Fran!”

The massive insect charged at Fran the moment she glanced at the demon. She realized the moment the creature began to accelerate, and readied her defenses, but they were easily broken.

It turned out that the beetle was capable of not only using its magic as a propellant, but also condensing it around its horn in order to up its damage.

The force of its blow was able to tear right through the barrier she threw up.

Both her right arm and right leg ended up bent the wrong way. Her head was bleeding pretty heavily as well. But that wasn't even the worst of it. The whole right side of her gut had been wrenched out by the beetle's horn.

I immediately threw out a Greater Heal, but the spell wasn't strong enough to close the wound.

"Fran! Use Instant Regeneration! Right now!"

The only response I got from her was a cough.

"Can you hear me, Fran!? You need to use Instant Regeneration!!"

My second shout got through to her, as she nodded while wincing, her face distorted in pain. Her wound then quickly began to close. Luckily, she had made it just in time.

The only problem was that Fran was a humanoid. Unlike a sword or a slime, her body wasn't made up of a series of simple, easily definable features. To that end, the skill ended up being inefficient as far as cost went. It had ended up draining a massive portion of her mana.

"Are you okay?" I asked her as I put up a barrier.

"Nn..." She managed to squeeze out a reply between ragged breaths.

"What happened?"

"Came out of nowhere."

I nodded my metaphorical head in agreement. She and I had seen the same thing. The attack the beetle had launched didn't feel like something that had caught us off guard because it came from a blind spot. It felt more like the attack had just suddenly appeared out of thin air.

For a moment, I suspected that the beetle had teleported, but it didn't have the skills to let it do so. I was certain of it. It did have the Espionage skill, but its level was far too low to be of relevance.

“Well, that’s a high ranked monster for you. Damned thing has got a few tricks up its sleeves.”

“But will win.”

“You betcha.”

Though she had been on the verge of death only a few moments prior, Fran’s spirit had yet to wane. She was still all for going in and giving it everything she had. But that was only to be expected. Fran’s resilience had always been her most notable trait.

“Alright, let’s keep our guard all the way up and do this!”

“Nn!”

Editor’s note: Hey, guys! Joker here. Boy, Sword-dad really caused that Hydra to just STOP, didn’t he? But that’s fine by me. Multiple heads and uber speed regeneration is too much of a pain to deal with. Though it seems like he should’ve focused on the beetle over the bear, since it seems to be a sneaky sunuva bitch. I dunno, that beetle’s giving me weird vibes, personally. Especially since it managed to critically wound Fran like that. Damn beetle, who gave you the right? Sword-dad needs to erase both you and your species from this world for what you did to our precious, curry-loving catgirl. I’m sure he can make curry out of beetle meat, provided it’s actually edible. Demon, you just need to surround it and beat it down, I feel. The beetle will be the problem. All right, I’ve gotta head out. Got an appointment to keep with Nintendo. See y’all in the next chapter!

The Terror Wrought by an Illusion

“Baruooo!” The demon screeched as it attacked us right before we could prepare ourselves for another one of the Adamantite Beetle’s attacks.

“Hush,” said Fran.

The oversized bug once again came crashing into us the moment the demon drew our attention. But this time, we weren’t caught unawares. I used a combination of telekinesis and a barrier to prevent Fran from taking a direct hit, but we were subjected to a powerful shockwave nonetheless. I reflected on the attack and its workings as I healed Fran’s left arm, which had once again been shattered.

We were unable to detect it right up until to the very moment it was about to hit us. I highly doubted that we would be able to avoid its attacks unless we were able to focus on them.

“Sorry Fran, but I’m going to be cancelling the Haste spell for a bit.”

“Got it.”

“You’re probably going to have to manage on your own for a little bit.”

“Nn. No problem. Brilliant Lightning Rush!”

I had been using haste, a space/time spell in order to accelerate our thoughts such that we would be able to better deal with the monsters, as they happened to have high agility stats. While that sounded all fine and dandy, the spell did have its demerits. Slowing down our perception of time distorted the sounds around us. Our sense of hearing wasn’t the only sense it distorted either. It messed with most other senses and even dulled the effects of Presence Detection.

It did nothing but get in the way in cases like the current one, in which we needed our detection skills to be fully functional. I had wanted us to keep holding Brilliant Lightning Rush for the time being. The skill was more suited to shorter battles than it was to longer, more drawn out ones, but we didn't have much of a choice. We wouldn't have been able to defeat the two monsters before us without Haste if we didn't bolster our agility.

The demon once again began attacking us despite the change in Fran's aura. The catkin raised me in an attempt to block the monster's blade, but it didn't work. The toxic sword slipped right through me and landed a blow right on Fran's body.

It proved itself worthy of its rank by momentarily empowering the blade with additional magical energy such that it could pierce through the barrier.

The wound she received from the attack was honestly not that big of a deal. The larger problem was that she had been subjected to its poison. It was clearly causing her a large amount of pain, as her movements immediately dulled in response. The beetle came in for round three, but Fran had already seen it perform that same attack twice. She wasn't about to let herself just take a third hit without any sort of retaliation.

It came from behind and aimed its horn straight for her heart, but she reacted. She spun her body just enough to avoid a fatal blow. The bug still got her right shoulder and tore the whole arm off, but she bore with the pain and jammed her left hand into the creature's right eye.

A loud crack resounded as she jammed everything up to her elbow into the beetle's eyesocket and retaliated with a spell.

“Lightning Blast!”

“God damn, that thing's resilient!”

The direct attack on its brain caused the insect to screech and writhe. But, although it suffered several heavy burns, the Adamantite Beetle lived on. It was still moving.

“GAGGGGGIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIII!”

“Uwah...”

“Fran!”

The creature’s violent thrashing caused Fran’s arm, which was still in its body, to be torn straight out of its socket. The hard pieces of its shell had acted like scissors and snipped her limb in two.

“Greater Heal! Antidote! Greater Heal!”

I cast several healing magics on Fran, who’d lost both her arms, while keeping her standing with telekinesis. She facilitated the process by using instantaneous regeneration, so she managed to restore her body to its usual state. But unfortunately, doing so had taken quite the toll on her. Much of her mana had been drained, and her physical stamina with it.

I continued to reflect on everything that had just happened as I healed Fran up. There was something wrong. Neither the Adamantite Beetle’s charge nor the demon’s blade seemed quite... right. There was something unusual going on.

The demon was a caster whose sword arts skill was only level six. It didn’t make sense for Fran to be unable to defend against its attacks, even if she did have to deal with another enemy at the same time. Given that, I decided to appraise the demon a second time.

“Wait! It all makes sense now! That damned thing’s got Illusion Magic!”

The level four skill was likely much more effective than I had been giving it credit for. I suspected that there was a good chance it was messing with more than just our sense of sight.

This was our first time fighting against a foe capable of distorting our senses, so I ended up underestimating just how terrifying the magic could be. That said, I should probably affirm that my hypothesis is correct before jumping to conclusions.

I popped all my detection skills and observed the demon's movements as it moved for another strike and confirmed that my suspicions were on point. The demon had hidden its real arms and produced another set with illusion magic.

The most terrifying aspect was that the demon's real arms were impossible to detect through standard means. I couldn't even feel their presence. And to make matters worse, the fake arms could produce sound. I could hear them carving through the air as the demon moved to attack. It had Fran totally fooled. I, however, was not. I immediately used telekinesis to redirect myself and block the demon's strike.

"Master?" Fran asked, curious as to why I had suddenly started jerking about.

"I'll focus on defense, you focus on offense!"

"Nn!"

We executed the plan. Fran launched an onslaught of attacks while I warded off whatever the demon threw at her.

As demonstrated back in Schwartzkatze, I was no match for either Fran or Urushi in terms of intuition. My instincts weren't nearly as sharp as theirs were. But I could make up for it with my ability to see through illusions like the one we were faced with just now. Things that distorted the five senses weren't nearly as effective on me as they were on my companions, as my senses had been of an inorganic construction from the start. I didn't have eyes to see with, I barely had a sense of touch, and not even I really knew exactly why it was even possible for me to hear. And those were all the senses I had. I had no sense of taste. I had no sense of smell. I could only see, feel, and hear.

“Giiiiiiiiiii” The demon screeched as it went for another blow.

“Nice try, but I can see right through you!”

The demon’s spells were extremely effective at not only creating illusions, but also concealment. And that was precisely the trick behind the beetle that was coming out of nowhere.

Knowing the trick was half the battle. Understanding it allowed me to develop a mechanism by which I could cope. The beetle’s body was shrouded by an illusion. But that didn’t mean it wasn’t there. The air around it would still shift as it dashed. I could detect it, even if Fran remained none the wiser.

I launched a spell in the beetle’s direction the moment it started to move. It had magic resistance, so I didn’t bother with anything offensive.

“Turn Shield!”

I instead cast a spell meant to alter the paths of enemy projectiles.

The Adamantite Beetle was massive. But, by imbuing the spell with as much mana as possible and then combining it with telekinesis, I was able to redirect it just enough to alter its destination.

Of course, I didn’t expect the beetle’s attack to instantly end the demon. My goal wasn’t to have that happen. All I wanted was an opening, which is exactly what we got.

And Fran, being Fran, wasn’t the type to overlook an opening.

“Haaah!”

The demon leapt backwards in panic in order to avoid the beetle’s rush. Fran chased it down and delivered a heavy blow with her blade, splitting its body in two.

“It’s over!” shouted Fran. She then twisted me around and used me to destroy the demon’s core in an instant. The battle had devolved into a simple sword fight, one in which she held an overwhelming advantage.

The beetle immediately judged that the situation had turned dire, so it charged us down with more speed than it had demonstrated to date. It seemed to have activated some sort of trump card and intended to skewer us alongside the demon's remains. I had to compliment the beetle. Its judgement call wasn't too bad despite it being a literal insect.

But the loss of its support meant that it was no longer a threat. I destroyed the incoming bug by teleporting above it and impaling it with a telekinetic catapult.

We hurried over to Urushi after defeating the Adamantite Beetle and the Demon in hopes of providing backup, only to discover that our help was completely unneeded.

The battle was practically over.

Urushi’s offenses weren’t as great as the Crimson Wolf’s. In fact, he was notably weaker from a physical standpoint, period. However, he had still managed to do his foe harm by slowly using poison to shave away at its health.

The large red dog’s eyes were filled with purple specks. Its fur had fallen off in patches; bald spots were visible all over its body. Its breathing was shallow and it would even cough every once in a while. It was obvious that its insides had been heavily damaged with a fast acting poison.

Urushi was injured too. The entire right half of his body was covered in burns. In fact, his right eye had vanished altogether.

Despite their injuries, both wolves were glaring at each other and snarling. It was clear that each still wished to kill the other.

Although Urushi looked closer to death, he was in fact faring much better than the Crimson Wolf. The latter vomiting blood was a sign that it was already too late to treat him. The poison had won. Urushi had won.

The black wolf made use of the red one's weakness. He cast a spell that led the shadows to bind the other wolf's feet before lunging at it and tearing out its throat.

And so ended the battle. The crimson wolf wheezed one last time before falling over on its side.

Urushi placed his paws atop his enemy's corpse and howled to declare himself the victor before also collapsing on the spot.

I hurried over to the wolf in panic and began to heal him. I managed to fix most of his wounds, eye aside. He had the ability to regenerate, so he was sure to get it back in time, but we were on too tight a schedule to sit around and wait until it did.

And since it was probably best to have him in peak condition, I used one of the high grade potions we had on hand and sprinkled it over his eye, which promptly regenerated over the course of ten odd seconds. Man, are we lucky we managed to get our hands on these.

"There, all better. How are you feeling, Urushi?"

"Ruff."

"Whew. Good to hear."

"Good boy."

"Woof!"

Truth be told, I would have liked to give both Fran and Urushi some time to rest, but we just didn't have any to spare. Thus, I decided to do to Fran as I did to Urushi and had her drink a potion. It wasn't going to help with her mental fatigue, which in fact was much worse than her physical fatigue, but we were going to have to make do for the time being.

"Alright. That took a good bit. We'll have to hit the gas if we want to catch up to that army."

“Nn!”

“But first, I should probably absorb this monster’s core. Assuming you don’t mind, Urushi.”

“Woof!”

It was technically his prey, so I made sure to get his permission before jabbing my blade into the mana-filled stone within the Crimson Wolf’s heart.

Being a C ranked monster, the wolf was worth a wealth of core points. And with me being close to a level as I was...

Self evolution has occurred.

“Boooyaaaah!” Woo! I called it! Man, that’s lucky. Now, I’ve not only got all my mana back, but I’ve also even got a couple self evolution points to work with. This’ll hopefully make all the upcoming battles a lot easier.

“Master? What happened?” Fran asked me curiously in response to my sudden shout. Oops. Let myself get a little bit too excited there.

“I ranked up!,” I said excitedly. “My MP is all the way back up to full, and I’ve also got us a whole 70 self evolution points. Just in case.”

“Woooooow,” said Fran, extending the word to demonstrate that she was impressed.

“Oh and by the way, you’ve both leveled up three times.”

We’d defeated a number of enemies, especially powerful ones, so I wasn’t sure if I was supposed to be complaining that they’d only gain three each, or rejoicing given that levels weren’t all that easy to come by to begin with. I was leaning towards the latter, given that many adventurers found it hard to make their way all the way up to level 40, even in their middle ages.

Besides, levels weren’t all we gained. Fran had gotten a new title: Annihilator of Monsters. Its description read as follows.

Annihilator of Monsters

A title granted to one that has defeated over a thousand monsters belonging to at least 100 distinct species. This title increases the title bearer’s stats when in battle with one or more monsters. The bonus is proportional to the number of monsters and their strength.

“Hmmm... now what do I put points in? Oh wait, this isn’t the time for that. Let’s chase after that army. I’ll figure all this point stuff out along the way.”

“Nn.”

I put the Crimson Wolf’s corpse into my inventory as Fran mounted Urushi.

“Alright boy, chase!”

“Woof!”

We pursued the army, which had already gained quite a bit of distance on us. We talked about my newfound points and the manner in which we would use them along the way.

“Anything you want in particular, Fran?”

“Magic Mastery?”

“Hmmm, yeah, that’s a good one.”

Turning Vigour Manipulation into Vigour Mastery had drastically boosted the power of all our physical skills while shortening their cast times.

It only made sense for Magic Mastery to provide a similar effect. It was sure to be extremely useful if it worked exactly as we expected.

“Master? Want to point anything?”

“I, for one, want mana absorption.”

It was a very important skill, one that would let me sustain myself as I cut through the horde of monsters we were about to face. We had left it at level 9 because we didn’t have the points to push it any further. I was certain that level 10 would come with a boost in functionality worth the expenditure.

Thinking about Mana Absorption sparked a related thought that ultimately led to interest in one of the skills we had just gained in our recent rampage amongst the enemy’s ranks: Life Absorption. It sounded like a skill that would allow Fran to use Brilliant Lightning Rush more frequently and for longer periods of time with greater ease. It seemed like a skill we could put to great use, especially combined with Mana Absorption.

“Alright, we’re running out of time to think about stuff, so I’ll just point everything I just mentioned for now, since we’re pretty much guaranteed to use them as soon as we make contact with the enemy.”

“Got it.”

The first thing I did was dump five points into Magic Manipulation. The skill only evolved a single time, but the effect gained from the change was incredible.

“Amazing!”

“I know, right?”

Fran’s eyes widened as she felt a change occur in the skill’s effects. It not only bolstered our magical offenses, but also increased our ability to perceive magical energy. Drastically, at that. It was almost as if our eyes had finally been opened, or like someone had pulled the plugs out of our ears. The world itself seemed to have become a different, more vivid place altogether. Magic Mastery’s effects exceeded Vigour Mastery’s by far.

“Okay. Next, Mana Absorption.”

Mana Absorption has reached its maximum level. You have obtained the Mana Thief skill.

Oh nice, a new skill. I’ll figure out how to use it later. After I finish pointing stuff.

Life Absorption has reached its maximum level. You have obtained the Life Thief skill.

Huh. So that one got upgraded too. I wonder what it does. Maybe just boost the amount of stuff I drain?

Magic Manipulation had eaten five points, Mana Absorption two, and Life Absorption eighteen, for a total of twenty five points consumed. In other words, I had forty five remaining.

“Now, what do I do with the rest...?”

“Magic to restrain enemies?”

“Hmmm....”

Yeah, that sounds like it'd be pretty useful. But which element should I focus on...?

Editor's note: Hey, guys! Joker here. And with that chapter, the big 5 of that monster army comes to its rather pathetic, and honestly predictable, end. But don't worry, guys. Your sacrifice is not in vain. You gave our heroes some much needed level ups and self evolution points, after all. So don't feel too bad in the afterlife. Haha. And nice. Leveled up quite a number of useful skills. Now they're looking for magic to restrain enemies? Man, if only Rir from Jingai Musume was there to give them Everchanging Chains. I'm sure that magic would come in handy for sure. If not, I'm sure Ice magic would work, if I'm drawing upon all my RPG knowledge. Ice is always good for binding enemies, after all. But I guess we'll have to wait and see what they pick. See y'all in the next chapter!

Chapter 303. Great Wall

Great Wall

Editor: Joker

Fran and I spent a bit of time figuring out which skill to point.

“Flame Magic?”

“Hmm...”

Flame Magic was our second highest level magic, and it seemed rather suited for the situation given that it was great at wiping out mobs of weaker enemies. The only problem was that we were in a wooded area. We couldn't just go flinging flames around willy nilly else risk burning down the whole forest. Accidentally setting the whole thing ablaze and therefore killing the people that were evacuating from it was counterproductive.

“It's not a bad choice, but we'll have to be really careful with how we use it.”

“Then Storm Magic? Large area of effect.”

That suggestion's not too bad. Storm spells do generally seem to have a pretty decent area to them, but I'm not really sure going with Storm Magic is the best idea. There was no doubt that I would pick either Flame Magic or Storm Magic if all we had to do was eliminate a large number of monsters, but our current situation was a little bit different. The whole point of us going into battle was to protect the people escaping the area's villages. Our victory condition was just for everyone to safely reach Greengoat. The number of monsters we killed in the process was completely irrelevant.

We couldn't just carelessly bombard the army with spells. It was possible that many of the monsters we failed to kill would escape and scatter into their surroundings. We had already defeated the more powerful monsters, so we were more prone to letting our guards down and allowing our prey to escape.

It wouldn't be easy for us to chase each and every single specimen down, which meant that there was a good chance that a number of them would end up attacking the evacuees.

"Mmrph."

Fran crossed her arms as she contemplated her options, and I did the same.

Wait, that's it!

"How do you feel about Greater Earth Magic?"

"Greater Earth Magic?"

"Yeah. Leveling it will let us build bigger walls and dig deeper holes."

Marmanno had told us that only one of this country's mages was capable of using Greater Earth magic to keep such a large number of monsters at bay. In other words, there was a Greater Earth Magic spell somewhere out there that made it possible to slow down a large number of foes at once.

"Nn! Good idea."

"We've got enough points to max it, and if we're going to mess with it at all, now's probably the time."

"Okay." Fran nodded to vocalize her consent.

"Alright. Here goes."

"Nn."

I spent four points on Earth Magic, which led Fran to gain the Earth Mage title, and me to gain both Greater Earth Magic and Sandstorm Magic. Oh, I get it. Earth and Wind makes Sandstorm because that's what you get when you kick up a bunch of dust.

That said, I decided to ignore the latter of the two skills for the time being and instead began investing points in the former.

I started by leveling the skill four times. We didn't end up getting the spell we wanted, but we did get a couple other powerful ones instead.

Only after leveling it up another two times did I finally find a spell that resembled the one we were looking for. I only had 25 points left, but it was worth it.

"I think I finally got it!" The level six Greater Earth spell was called Great Wall, and it allowed us to create both giant walls and giant moats, especially if we invested a large amount of our magical energies. "This'll let us slow that army down for sure."

"Nn!"

The army had already started to spread out after entering the forest, likely so that they could assault the villages within it more efficiently.

"Oh no! This is looking bad!"

"What now? Attack?"

But that was all they did. For some odd reason, they suddenly stopped moving and didn't so much as take another step. Only then did I finally remember something that had totally slipped my mind: we had set up a "fortress." The army had moved a bit such that they were more spread out around it. It looked like they were standing by and awaiting the order to assault it. Well, that idea worked much better than expected.

The fortress had more than done its job; it bought us every last bit of time we needed to confine our foes.

We landed behind the building and gave birth to a wall beginning from our location.

“Let’s start with just one, for test’s sake.”

“Nn.”

“Great Wall! Full power! Let’s go!”

“Wooooah.”

“Woooooooooof!” Both Fran and Urushi reacted with surprise. I likely would have done the same if I wasn’t so focused.

The spell had, in an instant, created a wall fifteen meters tall, five meters wide, and fifty meters long. And best of all, it’d used the dirt right in front of it to do so, which meant it was accompanied by a massive pit that shared its dimensions.

At full power, the spell ate over a hundred points of mana. But that was fine. With our powers combined, Fran and I could still manage to make it over a kilometer long. Even the average high level mage should be able to manage something around 300 meters long.

The only downside was that the wall the skill generated wasn’t infused with mana, which in turn meant it was incapable of repairing itself. It was literally just a wall, and anything that could destroy a wall its size would. Powerful mages and monsters were its bane.

Fran and I were both capable of blowing a hole right through its center. At best, it would could maybe hold a D ranked monster. Most of the D ranked monsters came at us when we dove into the army’s vanguard earlier in the day, so there probably shouldn’t be all that many left. The only things this army’s got should be monsters that are more on the quantity end of things than they are the quality end. They shouldn’t be able to break through. Sweet. It looks like lady luck’s finally on our side.

“The monsters are on guard after seeing us make this wall right here, so we’ll have to make a whole bunch of different walls all in one go if we want operation Build a Wall to work.”

“How?”

“We’ll have to use Parallel Processing together with Chantless in order to get a whole bunch of walls to pop up all at once.”

“Got it.”

Chant Condensation is a great skill, but it still requires us to speak the spell’s name in order to cast it. Chantless, however, might make it so we don’t have to do that. Which means combining it with Parallel Processing just might be exactly what we need to get our Great Wall up in time.

“I’m not one hundred percent sure it’ll work out though. You sure you want to try?”

“Nn. Not problem.”

“Then let’s do this!”

I used 10 skill points in Chant Condensation and obtained the Chantless skill, just as planned. Its effect was exactly as I had anticipated. I then invested the last fifteen points we had into Parallel Processing, which promptly evolved into Concurrent Consciousness. The evolved skill far surpassed my expectations. It was ridiculously overpowered. It could allow for ten different simultaneous streams of thought without breaking a sweat. It felt like I could probably even cast several simultaneous Kanna Kamuis with the potential it had unlocked. The only downside was that Fran had an extremely hard time using the skill. Just activating it caused her to immediately crouch while holding her head in pain. It seemed to push her brain way past its limits.

“Mmrph.”

“Don’t push yourself, Fran.”

“Nn...” She reluctantly agreed.

“I’ll build the wall. You keep watch, okay?”

“Got it.”

“Then here we go! Great Wall!”

I activated several instances of the spell at once and immediately created a massive wall and accompanying moat. The structure had no trouble living up to the spell’s name. It was great as great could be.

Concurrent Consciousness had proven overpowered as all hell, but using it even just once had given me a better idea of its downsides. It resulted in a significant drop in my overall efficiency. Each spell consumed more mana than I had anticipated. Their potency had been lowered as well. Moreover, it was impossible to stop any of the spells following their activation. Improper use of the skill would likely lead me to run my mana pool dry.

Great Wall had a few weaknesses to it as well. The spell could only lay out walls that were straight, and none of them could bear any sort of complex design. The whole point of the spell was just to make giant walls. Nothing more, nothing less.

The massive walls, which had appeared out of thin air in the middle of the night, had an overbearing presence to them. I moved around and repeated the casting in order to create a series of walls in the shape of a horn.

My structures extended for two hundred and fifty meters in both the east and west directions for a total length of five hundred meters. At the centre lay a gap only fifteen meters wide. In other words, I had created a narrow, artificial path. A bottleneck.

I was grateful that it was nighttime. The lack of light made it such that it was impossible for the monsters to tell just how far east and west the walls extended. It made much more sense for the monsters to attempt to break through the visible barrier than it did for them to attempt to wander around until they found an alternate path that might not even exist. They would, at the very least, avoid attempting to find a shortcut right off the bat.

Of course, some of the monsters would be able to see in the dark, and I had no way of knowing their skills' efficacies. However, what I did know was that not even Fran's Night Vision skill allowed her to see as far as where the walls ended. I was sure that I could rely on them to drive the monsters to act as intended. All we would have to do was prevent them from passing, the very same way Zhang Fei had held off his enemies during the battle of Changban. [1]

My backup plan, in the case that the monsters decided to go around the wall, was just to seal our hole off and give chase. There was nothing stopping us from fighting a bit and then just blocking off the hole and giving chase to the part of the army that had left.

The most troublesome scenario would be the one in which the army split into three parts, with one going west, one going east, and another heading straight through the corridor. If that were to happen, then we would have no choice but to go all out and totally destroy either the eastern or western subdivisions.

Oh well, no point thinking about all that now. In the end, it all depends on how the monsters choose to move.

“All the setup is done. You ready to attack that army?”

“Nn!”

Editor's note: Hey, guys! Joker here. Well, it's almost 6 in the morning where I am at the time of writing this. Editor hours are killer, no joke. Pls have mercy, ST-senpai. Not to mention this damn cough I have, keeping me up. Probably only had 10-12 hours of sleep in the last 36-ish? I dunno.

Well, another chapter of Sword-dad down, another couple of OP skills added to the roster. Now we get to see what the army will do in response to the Great Wall that just got put in their way. See y'all in the next chapter! I need sleep...

Chapter 304. An Abrupt Change

An Abrupt Change

Editors: Sebas Tian, Joker, Speedphoenix

The monsters were immediately faced with a series of large walls. A few moments of unrest followed, as they looked to each other to determine their next course of action, but they soon picked up the slack and began flooding towards the sole exit we had constructed. I'd been a bit worried that they wouldn't be able to find it, so I placed a small flame next to the corridor's entrance to help show them the way.

Of course, we went above and beyond just the application of petty tricks. Awaiting those that entered the corridor was Fran. We had refrained from having her clean herself up in order to make her appear more exhausted than she really was. It had to seem like the incoming troops had a chance at victory.

I wasn't sure if it was because they saw her in her "wounded" state, but our enemies charged at Fran. The fifteen meter wide hallway we had setup was literally overflowing with them, and every last one was blindly advancing towards its guardian.

The reason the term guardian had remained single was because I was just one of the catkin's equips, and her companion, Urushi, wasn't present. He was off on a different mission: hunting down the monsters' recon unit. Of course, his sudden mission wasn't without reason. Our foes had somehow managed to confirm that our paper mache fort was just a bluff, all while doing nothing but standing by. Based on their actions, it was only reasonable to assume that they had some sort of unit in charge of reconnaissance. The army would've either remained more vigilant of the fort or just attacked it head on had they lacked troops specialized in gathering intel.

It was always possible for said recon unit to determine exactly how far our walls ran while Fran was busy fighting off her attackers. Hence, it was absolutely necessary for Urushi to take out their scouts and thereby disrupt their lines of communication. Of course, there was always the possibility that such a squad didn't exist. But that wasn't an issue. It was still better for Urushi to be off on his own, as there was a higher chance that the monsters would attack Fran if he stayed away.

Fran roared her battle cries as she decimated the enemy lines. She was unstoppable. The monsters up against her were far too weak to pose any sort of a threat.

Magic Mastery had powered up Magic Perception, which in turn allowed me to scout out the entire army and judge their strength based on their magical readings. I was certain that there were no remaining monsters that ranked in at C or higher. It had seemed like a D rank or two was possible, but I highly doubted it. I suspected that everything we had to fight was ranked in at E or lower.

Still, the angry mob was so large that it was a threat in its own right. There was also always the chance that there were stealthier monsters lurking about, so we needed to remain vigilant, even though we were up against inferior goods. And on top of all that was a need to restrain ourselves. There was a good chance they would just give up on getting past Fran if she totally dominated the battlefield. We had to hold back or else risk encouraging the monsters to search for another path.

To that end, we kept the magic to a minimum. Fran focused on swordplay, while I made sure that there weren't any holes in our defense of the corridor. The only spells I cast were ones that were absolutely necessary for finishing off the enemies that slipped past us.

"Khhhh!" Fran grimaced as she let a goblin land a blow on her armour.

“What the heck, Fran!? I know you’re trying to make it look like they can win, but you don’t have to go as far as to let them hit you!”

“Not a problem!” she said. Fran knew what attacks she could and couldn’t take, so she always made sure she never tanked anything fatal. Everything she was hit with landed on her armour and the resulting bruises could be healed right off. Still, I can’t say I think it’s a good idea...

Despite my suggestion, the catkin continued to repeat the action, taking hit after hit just to cajole her foes into rushing her down. She had no intention of stopping so long as her actions continued to provide the black cat tribe with the time they needed to escape.

Fortunately, both the Mana and Life Thief skills were extremely powerful. They allowed me to absorb both health and magical energy from every creature in an area around me. In other words, they were the AOE variants of the Mana and Life Absorption skills. Their only major drawback was that they were indiscriminate. Everything inside their effective area would be subject to their effects regardless of friend or foe, save for Fran. She didn’t count as a potential target because I was technically one of her equips. Fortunately, we were in a position where that wasn’t much of a concern.

Their effects were significantly weaker than their predecessors, but they proved to be effective so long as there were three or more enemies within their radii. In fact, keeping Mana Thief active had allowed me to restore all of the mana I had expended in building the wall. Each enemy would provide 30 MP at most, but the radius was large enough for there to be a whole 30 enemies in its effective range at a time.

We continued mowing through the monsters for about an hour. I’d expected them to split up and search for clues before long, but they never did. They continued charging at us until dawn broke.

Only after sunrise did they finally come to an abrupt halt. There were only about half of them remaining; we’d killed so many that I had accrued almost enough monster core points for another level up.

“What now?” I suspiciously narrowed my metaphorical eyes, but allowed Fran to continue charging forwards regardless. Wait!

A shiver ran down my blade, so I immediately used Short Jump and teleported us a few feet away.

There was a loud roar; several arrows had nailed themselves into the spot Fran had been standing only a few moments prior.

“Thanks, Master.”

“Don’t mention it,” I replied. “More importantly, we should probably focus on tracking our attackers down.”

The only thing I knew for sure was that the attacks had come from somewhere behind the monsters we were engaging. But it couldn’t have been some sort of support unit. That just didn’t make sense. The arrows had a lot of power behind them. No goblin archer would’ve been able to launch anything with that much force. There was no doubt that they would have broken through our barriers and done some serious damage had we not relocated.

And so, I searched for our assailants’ presences—

—Only to end up gaping in awe.

I had no idea when or how they’d gotten there, but there was a brand new division of monsters behind the remaining forces. Their bodies were radiating with mana. Even the weakest amongst them was an E level threat. More than half ranked in at D or higher.

And there were a whole thousand. All neatly lined up and ready for battle.

It was a veritable army, a well disciplined, well equipped army. Their spotless, silver armour glimmered in the morning sun. Adding to the effect was the way they were standing in perfectly straight lines. A glance at the extent of organisation was enough to tell me that there was trouble. There was no conceivable way they could remain as organised as they were without a commander, and the fact that they were all wearing the exact same equips made it obvious that they belonged to the same unit.

This new army put the old one to shame. Compared to the well organised troops before me, the monsters we'd defeated had been nothing but a ragtag militia. Had its members not been evil beings, casting my eyes on them likely would've caused me to sigh in wonder and admiration.

And that was the problem. Every last member of the army was an evil being. There were hobgoblins, high orcs, and minotaurs amongst their ranks, but every single one of them was wearing an identical set of equipment.

"You've gotta be kidding me... Come on... This has to happen just when we finally removed enough of our foes for me to think of cutting down the rest as a feasible task."

"Lots of enemies."

"Yeah... Wait. Was everything fought so far just a part of the vanguard? Is the actual main force...?"

"Lots of strong foes."

"You got it. You still ready to do this?"

We'd come so far, only to discover that our progress had been an illusion. A part of me had been worried that Fran's spirit would break. But more of me had been expecting her to reply in the exact way she had. This is Fran we're talking about, after all.

"Point taken."

"Nn!"

We cannot fall. For the Black Cat Tribe's sake.

"Let's..."

“Win!”

Our wills in sync, the two of us once again began to engage our foes.

Translator’s Note: TSKD has been licensed. To that end, this is the last chapter I will ever do. It’s been a good run, and I’m very happy to see Seven Seas pick this up and help show the world what Tanaka Yuu (the writer) can do. I have put a list of answers to frequently asked questions below. This includes the whole “but this is a WN, and the LN was what got licensed” argument and what I’m planning to do next, so make sure to take a peak if you’re curious. And with that, I guess I’m done. I’m finally free to read the rest of TSKD myself since I’ve been holding back to prevent myself from losing motivation. I don’t really have much else to say other than what’s listed in the FAQ. So without further ado: ST, signing off.

Editor’s note: Hey, guys. Joker here. Can’t really be excited right now, since we’re finally dropping TSKD. I’m torn. On the one hand, I’m glad it got licensed. On the other, I won’t see what happens to Fran during this for another 3 years at best. And that’s not even considering the possibility that Seven Seas drops this series since it’s not selling well or something. I don’t know. It’s a day one buy for me, as i’m sure it will be for a lot of you, but I can’t help but worry. It’s been a fun run, guys, even if it ends super early. I guess I can only help out with JM now, plus whatever series the boss picks up. This is a departure from my usual ending, but since I WON’T be seeing y’all in the next chapter, all I can say is this. Thank so much for sticking with us on this journey. I hope you guys are looking forward to our future projects. We probably wouldn’t be doing translating if it weren’t for you all. Thank you from the bottom of my unthieved heart. (Yes, Joker as in Persona 5). See y’all in the next series. Godspeed, Fran. Godspeed. (Also, just putting it out there, if you guys send messages [KIND AND RESPECTFUL PLEASE. I DO NOT CONDONE ANY ANGRY MESSAGES] to Micromagazine begging them to allow us to continue translating as long as we have a link to the official release or something, there is a chance, however small, that they’ll allow it. Just saying. A small chance is all Fran needed to get this far. Who’s to say we’re any different?

[This message is not endorsed by Supreme Tentacle in any way, shape, or form. This is all from Joker]]

Editor's note: Hello to all from Sebas Tian. The series has been pretty fun and interesting so far and I'm glad to have spent my time on it. Hope you all have enjoyed the series as well and that as the LN releases more volumes that you continue to enjoy it. I also look forward to whatever other project ST might pick up later, but if he decides to get caught up on JM first I'd be fine with that. Please give ST and the Seven Seas your love and all that jazz to support the series as it moves forward with the adventures of Sword Dad and Black Cat Girl.

Editor's note: Hey everyone this is Speedphoenix. It's been really fun reading this until here, a shame it has to end. It was especially refreshing to see the evolution in everyone's attitude on the discord channel and in ST's style when translating. Now I just need to learn Japanese... Hopefully Jingai Musume let us enjoy for longer before it gets licensed, we'll see you over there!

F. A. Q.

Q: The LN was licensed. Why are you dropping the WN?

A: All of the rights belong to Micromagazine, who licensed the LN rights to Seven Seas. Yes, this is correct. However, it's very easy for the LN localizers to do this thing called give the people with the WN rights a phone call and ask them to throw out a DMCA or C&D. It's in both their best interests, especially in TSKD's case in which there is very little change between the WN and LN. And even with all that stuff aside, there's the whole matter of respect. Translating something that has been licensed is not a good idea. Period.

Q: Will another translator pick this series up?

A: They probably shouldn't. Like, seriously. Picking up licensed series is a scummy move. The point of translating a web novel is to share something you love with a broader audience. Translating something that is licensed is effectively scumbagging the author out of sales. It doesn't make sense to harm the person producing the thing you like. So if you see anyone else translating this series, please flame the hell out of them. Unless you hate TSKD.

Q: Will you pick up any other series?

A: Not for the time being. I'm planning to at least fill the JM gap before I consider picking up anything else. And even if I do pick something up, I'd probably prefer something that's never been TL'd into English before.

Q: How do you personally feel about TSKD getting licensed by Seven Seas?

A: Pretty good. I'm hoping that the established fanbase is part of the reason they're picking the series up, because that would mean I've done my job as a fan translator. I've heard that Seven Seas' localizations are pretty decent, so I'm expecting good things from them. My personal favorite localizer is probably JNC though.

Q: Will the existing chapters be taken down?

A: I'm not sure yet. I intend on it, but I'll fire Seven Seas an email or something first and ask whether or not they mind.

Q: Can you translate the rest of the arc at least?

A: Sorry, but no.

Q: Should I send emails asking for permission for you guys to keep doing stuff?

A: Please don't.

Chapter 305. War Maiden and the Headless Knight

Suddenly, an army of evil humanoid beings arrived.

Seeing them standing there lit up our fighting spirit. However, something bothered me.

(“How did they come here?”) – Fran

Right, how was such a majestic army able to come all the way here without us noticing it?

『I didn't feel their presence...』

(Nn.)

『Then again, we were in the middle of a fierce battle with the magic beasts. There's a possibility we simply didn't notice them.』

Or perhaps, it was some kind of art or skill. We carefully observed the army of evil beings.

Hobgoblin Spearers occupied the front row, holding their pikes ready. Behind them, I could see Hobgoblin Archers and Hobgoblin Magicians. Followed by High Orc Warriors, High Orc Shileders, High Orc Bladers and High Orc Snipers. Further behind were Minotaur Soldiers and Minotaur Lancers. These seem to be the main army members.

Hobgoblins are threat level E. Orcs and Minotaurs threat level D. However, situated in a place even further behind were even stronger beings, one might consider to be commander's personal guard.

Minotaur High Magician, Minotaur High Swordsman and Minotaur Axe Masher are supposed to be threat level D, but are much closer to being a C than a simple D level beast.

After all, High Magicians can use high-level magic such as Flame Magic and High Swordsman possess Sword Master Arts.

In the group of minotaurs stood, for a head higher from everyone else, a perfect example of a threat level C – Minotaur Dark Paladin. An incredible skillful opponent that uses Axe Master Techniques, Shield Master Arts and Darkness Magic. It was a spectacular sight witnessing four of them lined up like that.

However, none of them was the commander. Inside the wall of minotaurs was the commander, the one I believed shot from the bow. Next to the commander was what I assumed to be its adjutant. Even though I was a sword, once I appraised them I felt a sensation similar to my back muscles tensing up.

It was already troubling enough that they could lead an army of high-ranking evil humanoids, but to make matters worse, the ability of the two was far above the rest.

In fantasies, races such as Valkyrie and Dullahan were considered to be among stronger ones. They both had a status of and surpassing threat level C. Valkyrie is B, and although Dullahan is a bit weaker, he is one step into B category, too. On top of that, they are both very balanced.

Valkyrie’s power was especially terrifying. Her appearance was that of a long, blond haired beauty. Sparkling in the morning sun, her golden armor was giving of a solemn impression. She did not look like a monster at all and I would even say she had an air of divinity to her. Despite her looks, I could feel a great sense of intimidation even at this distance.

In contrast, the Dullahan with his large build was clad in jet-black full plate armor. Unlike how Dullahans were often depicted with their heads held under one arm, this one had its head on its shoulders as every normal person would. Although, I do not know if it could come off or not. I couldn’t discern its facial features nor its gender either, since its entire body was completely covered without a single crevice or gap.

What’s more, they both possessed terrifying abilities. Valkyrie’s inherent skill “War Maiden”, supporting martial arts skills, reaction speed increase could be said to be plain, but are all very powerful skills. Furthermore, her title “Advancing War Maiden” hides a tremendous power.

Advancing War Maiden: a title given to war maidens who have met all the conditions.

Effect: When leading an army of 100 or more soldiers, all skill effects from the stealth and mobility system possessed by the war maiden extend to the whole army. The effects greatly decrease if not under direct command.

This is it, the reason behind why the evil army was able to appear so close without us sensing it. What’s with this broken ability!

Since there's a note about them not being under direct command, that means as long they are recognized as a subordinate, there will be an effect on them even if the army is away. Was there an effect on the magic beast army too? It would seem that we were able to detect it thanks to the effect greatly decreasing. However, if that effect didn't exist at all, perhaps we would've been able to discover it earlier.

Dullahan's "Headless Knight" title provides regeneration enhancement and an increase of the absorption group skill effects. It's simplistic, but makes him difficult to destroy.

I said that Valkyrie was a B threat, and individually that may be true, but taking into consideration the ability to command an army, it may as well be an A threat. Well, it depends of its subordinates, too.

"Hmm. You have quite fast reflexes. Though small fry, you were able to hold back this number of magic beasts all on your own. You also avoided my arrow even if it's the first time you've seen it. "

They must be using wind magic. Valkyrie's voice reached us all the way here.

"Who?"

We also used wind magic in the same manner and tried to ask a question.

"You can also use magic. Well all right. I am Murellia-sama's servant. A war maiden who controls the army."

"Murellia? Is that the mastermind behind this?"

"Well now, who knows?"

"... .. Why are you doing something like this?"

"I really don't know anything. Whatever the case may be, it has nothing to do with the likes of you who will perish here. If you peacefully surrender here, I'll let you die without suffering?"

“That’s my line.”

“You, who is exhausted after fighting magic beasts all night, think you can win against Us?”

“I think. Easily.”

“Fuhahahaha, I like it! It was worth coming out here just for this! It’s great when the prey struggles! Now amuse Us to the best of your abilities!”

I thought she was a battle enthusiast, but she seems to be more of a hunter type, I guess? The type that likes fighting battles that it can win.

“Archer unit! Release the arrows!”

Cheh. I wanted to talk more and get some more information, but that seemed impossible now!

However we did find out the name of their boss, presumably the dungeon master, Murellia.

Following the Valkyrie’s order, the evil beings who held a bow pulled the bowstrings simultaneously in an orderly manner. Then, they released the arrows at the perfectly same timing. And with that, the life or death battle had begun.

『We need to close this up first!』

I entrusted Fran with the defense against the arrows while I plugged the gap in the wall by using Great-Wall. It was impossible to fight off the magic beast invasion while dealing with the evil army. So I wanted to prevent them from going any further, but...

“Hellflame Great Arrow!”

Valkyrie released an arrow that struck the wall a little bit away from us, making a great explosion and leaving a massive hole in it.

『Cheh! 』

“Hahahahah! Hellflame Great Arrow!”

I used the Great-Wall once more to make another wall, but it was just destroyed again by the Valkyrie’s arrow. This is bad, we won’t get anywhere like this.

Magic beast started marching towards that opening. In the meantime the evil beings kept attacking from a distance. No good would come from us defending against their attacks and simultaneously fighting the magic beast. Is there no other way but to give up on the magic beasts.....? No, I can’t do that. It would be against what Fran wishes to do.

Isn’t there something I can do? Anything?

I used simultaneous processing to the fullest and searched for the optimum course of action. As long as the Valkyrie was here, the wall could not be closed. If that was the case, then we should decrease the number of magic beast as much as possible. Annihilating them all might be the best option in the end.

The attack with the widest area of effect that I currently had was Ekato Keravnos (TN –“100 lightning” in Greek) which could summon 100 lightning bolts from the sky. If I were to release them consecutively over a vast area, it would definitely bring down a great number of magic beasts. One lightning can take down one low rank magic beast and also has a paralyzing effect on the surroundings.

However, it is a high tier magic spell. If we use it ceaselessly to destroy over 3,000 magic beasts, we’ll run out of MP in no time. After that, we’d be in a disadvantage against the evil army. Or rather, we’d be insta-killed.

It would be good if I could absorb some magic stones in order to accumulate a bit more magic stone points... A way to absorb magic stones and make a wide range attack...? Such a way doesn’t—.

No, it does. The way I am right now, I should be able to pull it off? I focused and tried using transformation. I was able to manipulate my blade better than expected. This might work!

But before that, let's use up the MP. It will be completely restored when I rank up anyway. I used Ekato Keravnos one after the other.

『Haaaa! Eat this! 』

Nearly 500 lightning bolts rained down on the rear of the magic beast army. I didn't have the time to aim, but with how many of them there were, it was bound to strike quite a few of them. I could see magic beasts who were directly hit being blown to pieces and others being charred by the strikes that nearly missed them.

Furthermore, I shot one on the evil beings, too. It was more to blind them than to do any significant damage. It would be great if it could take down a few though.

I purposely attacked the magic beasts in the back rather than the ones who were near us. I deliberately left them so that they could become my feed.

『Fran, endure the arrows for little while! 』

“Nn!”

Good, I could concentrate fully this way!

『Haaaaaaa! Magic stones, give them to meeee! 』

I activated transformation with all my power. However, I didn't transform my blade as I usually would do, since it would be dangerous for Fran if she lost her weapon. The thing I manipulated were the braids hanging from my hilt. From the very start, I always used my blade when transforming, but both the hilt and the cord were also a part of me. They also get repaired when I use restoration after all. That being the case, I should've been able to manipulate them, too.

Magic Control, Energy Control, Simultaneous Processing. Using them to the maximum, my transformation reached levels incomparable to anything I had previously done.

The braids responded to my will and changed their form into 10 steel threads. Then, they stretched through the sky like tree branches, and kept spreading sideways further and further while ramifying themselves even more. Of course, they devoured everything in the way, piercing right through the magic beasts' stones.

『Kuh, I'm reaching my limit....』

It seemed that the limiter was my processing power rather than magic power. Although I didn't have a brain, it felt like my head was burning. No, maybe it was because I didn't have a brain that I felt that way, anyway it was dangerous.

『But.... It's here!』

It was the second rank up of the day! Because I absorbed a lot of magic stones, the number of magic stone points jumped at once.

Hello,

I hope you were able to somewhat enjoy this translation. I'm not sure how much I'll be able to continue this project, but I intend to finish the fight at least. It might take some time though...

Translation style: since I'm not too fond of localisations, I opted for a more literal translation approach and trying to keep the number of sentences to a 1:1 ratio as much as possible. I wanted it to preserve that "Japanese feeling" when reading a novel, but as a result the text can be a bit clunky at times. Although there isn't much dialogue in this chapter, I also decided to keep all the honorifics (-san, -chan, -sama...). Also, I think I'll leave the sword's name as "Shishou" rather than "Teacher/Master," but I'm not sure about that yet.

About TNs, I could put my in the end if you think that they're too much of a bother in the story. I personally prefer them next to the place where the translator feels the need to clarify something, that way I don't have to scroll all the way down and lose my momentum. Feel free to inform me if you disagree. I plan to keep the number of them to a minimum, though.

If you have any complaints, suggestions or you simply want spoilers, feel free to leave a comment or contact me here: <https://twitter.com/FShishou>

Chapter 306. Supersonic Arrow

Alternative titles: High Speed Arrow; Arrow of Great Speed

I obtained 75 self-evolution points after ranking up for the second time today. But we still had to exterminate the magic beasts.

『Cheh... it's going to be difficult maintaining transformation any more than this.』

But I'll fire one last shot and blow them up!

『Haaaaaa!』

Going through my thread-like extended braids, I released about 50 Stun Bolts simultaneously. Because of that, even the beasts that weren't pierced by my threads fell to the ground paralyzed.

Ekato Keravnos consecutive attacks, steel-thread attack and in the end, wide range Stun Bolt attack. We defeated nearly a 1000 magic beasts thanks to this series of attacks and another 1000+ fell to the ground unable to move.

『I did it somehow...』

(Shishou, you alright?)

『...y, yeah』

I felt like strength was leaving my entire body. It was a sensation I haven't felt since I had become a sword, something similar to despondency and great fatigue.

Was it a reaction to me exceeding my limits by activating multiple skills and spells? Perhaps I relied on Simultaneous Processing too much and now it was taking a heavy toll on my body. If this was the case, I'd like to inspect the skill a bit more into detail, but...

『But now is not the time to be saying something like that. I have to use everything I have at my disposal, without showing that I passed the limit.』

Otherwise, Fran would be the one to force herself too much.

“GyaGyaUu....”

“Hiinn...”

“BARoOoOo....”

Eliminating the magic beasts from Fran's vicinity left a wide area of empty space. However, the remaining beasts just wailed in fear and refused to approach. They would even start withdrawing the moment Fran would do so much as look at them.

It would be difficult for us to attack if the remaining magic beasts pulled back too far. Was there no other choice but to strike them with magic once more?

“As expected! Even someone as Us is a little surprised, you know?”

Although the beasts were destroyed in one shot, the Valkyrie wasn't fazed at all. Was it because we did insufficient damage to the evil beings? However, she did seem to be a bit enraged. It was just that the rage was directed towards her allies – the magic beasts, and not Fran.

“You weaklings! You are nothing but disappointment! Though mere outriders, your exhibition of cowardice and weakness is a disgrace unbecoming of Murellia-sama's followers!”

The magic beasts shamefully hung their heads after hearing Valkyrie's merciless words.

“No one has any expectations of you anymore! At least, let your deaths not be in vain and oppose this formidable enemy in your last moments with all you’ve got! Do it for the honor of Murellia-sama!”

Those were cruel words demanding of its subordinates to die. However, the magic beasts were not upset, on the contrary, they raised a loud war cry filled with determination. Apparently, it was in reaction to the “honor of Murellia” part. There was an evident change in their presence once they heard those words.

Their eyes were now filled with preparedness to die and bore a strong hatred towards Fran.

“GOOOooo!”

“GyaUUUuu!”

“BRAAaaaa!”

The magic beasts headed towards us all at once. We attacked the vanguards with magic, but their advance didn’t stop even for a moment. Their resolve was so strong that fear wasn’t about to numb their movement and slow them down.

They surrounded us, nearing closer and closer, and then came at us in one go. They were rushing in blindly, perhaps intending to crush Fran to death just with their sheer numbers.

We were cutting them down while using Teleportation and Sky Jump to move around. If it were only the magic beasts, we’d be able to deal with them one way or another, but...

But that’s where the evil beings started their arrow barrage. As expected from superior races, their wave of arrows packed quite the punch. What’s more, they were shooting both Fran and fellow magic beasts. It seems they were trying to use them as obstacles to slow Fran’s movement.

“Haa!” – Fran

『The barrier is weakening—FRAN! 』

“Gaa—!”

While cutting down the rain of arrows coming from the evil beings and mowing down the magic beasts, something struck and blew away both the torso of the beast that was jumping at us and Fran’s left shoulder.

“UGUu...” – Fran

『Cheh!! 』

I immediately used telekinesis to catch her left arm that was blown away and activated teleportation to take us away from there.

『Fran, I’ll heal you right away! 』

(What, was that?)

『The Valkyrie’s arrow! 』

The Valkyrie released an arrow using the beast to blind our view. In addition, the arrow didn’t arch, but flew in a straight line. Despite piercing nearly 10 beasts on its way through the battlefield, the arrow’s speed did not decrease one bit. It was so fast that we were almost unable to react to it.

But Fran promptly managed to shift the point of impact. The arrow that targeted her heart barely missed and hit her shoulder. Shit, how many times has this already happened today!

『That was a good reaction from you! 』

“.....it just happened somehow?”

Fran’s instinct was as amazing as ever. However, this was bad news. If arrows this fast were to be shot in succession, we’d be riddled with holes from a distance unable to even approach them.

While I was diligently activating Dimension Shift and Teleportation to prevent the Valkyrie from aiming at us, I suggested something to Fran.

『Fran, let's raise our sensory skills. If we don't improve our reaction speed, we'll be killed unable to do a thing. 』

“Nn. Leave it you.”

『 You're okay with me deciding which skills to raise? 』

“Do as you wish, Shishou”

All right, as one would expect, maintaining Dimension Shift with its massive mana consumption made it impossible to have a thorough consultation. I quickly chose the skills and spent the required points.

I maxed Danger Sense by spending 16 points on it. That also gave me the Sense Enhancement skill. Then, I spent 12 more points on Vigilance and maxed it, too. They were both skills that detected the approaching danger.

But that wasn't all. I used another 18 points on the Lv1 Reaction Speed Up, the skill I obtained just recently from the Crimson Wolf. I ended up with only 29 points, but was able to get the skills I was expecting.

Ultra-Reaction skill, the same one that appears when Fran uses Lightning Flower Flashes[1]. My strategy to deal with the arrow was to use leveled up sensing abilities and the ultra-reaction skill.

『 I can see it! 』

Immediately after, I used telekinesis and successfully knocked down the Valkyrie's arrow. I still had to focus quite a bit, but it was nowhere near the level of just a few moments ago where I simply couldn't see it at all.

With this, it finally felt like we stood on the starting line.

『Counterattack, commence! 』

“Nn!”

[1] 閃華迅雷: Flash Flower Thunderclap/Lightning

Lightning Flower Flashes – Previously known as Brilliant Lightning Rush. I didn't want to straight up just use the effort of the previous translator so I tried translating it myself. Basically, just imagine a bunch of firework bursts/flashes in the shape of flowers made out of lightning... yeah, I know...

Personally, I'd like to use "Brilliant Lightning Rush" since it sounds cooler and everybody's already used to it. Mention in the comments what you prefer to be used in the future.

Hello again,

Let me first thank you for all the comments and the support last time. Thank you very much for pointing out the things that needed improvement and for a few very interesting discussions. I truly appreciate all feedback.

Feel free to leave any critiques, opinions and thoughts that you might have about the translation and/or story itself.

Regarding my schedule, I think I'll be able to post a chapter every 5-10 days (weekends most likely), but it greatly depends on what happens irl.

I'll post any updates on my side and news regarding the franchise on twitter: <https://twitter.com/FShishou>

For those who can understand some Japanese, there's been a new manga chapter update: <https://comic-boost.com/series/86>

Also, there has been a drama CD bundled with Vol 5 LN and is still up on YouTube if you wanna check it out. The voice acting (especially Fran!) was perfect imo: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LYjyoG-oksw>

That's all and take care~

Chapter 307. Shield of Iron

「I thought I got you there! You've got guts!」

「Likewise」

「You can still talk like that even after I cut your arm off? I hope you're not just acting like a hotshot. Keep it up! It will be boring if I win unilaterally!」

Valkyrie smugly taunted us, then began to shoot her arrows continuously; not just the Arrow of Godspeed, but also an arrow which would explode on contact, an invisible arrow, and an arrow that could change its trajectory in a large arc. None of these arrows are simple to avoid, and if Fran was hit by any one of these arrows, she would suffer immeasurable damage.

Since Valkyrie only intermittently shot those Arrows of Godspeed, it was still extremely dangerous, but she was able to land a solid hit on Fran or me, but at the same time, I couldn't easily attack her either.

Although neither side was making any progress, if we continued to just defend, Fran would fail sooner or later.

『Sorry for making you wait!』

I couldn't waste the time Fran had earned for me any longer!

『— Devour them! Kanna Kamui』

I didn't originally intend to use a Chant, but I shouted inadvertently. Maybe it's because I am all fired up; I know what I have to do! With all my heart and mind and strength, I attempted a second Kanna Kamui.

However, it seems that two simultaneous Kanna Kamui was still unattainable, and just like when I used Transformation inordinately earlier – No, this cold feeling attacking me now is even more horrible than the last time.

『Ahhg...g!!!!』

Nonetheless, I clenched my teeth—enduring the terrible sensation, and concentrated my consciousness on the task at hand. No matter what, I must release Kanna Kamui. Although the opponent was far away, with the help of Magic Control, I was able to expand my attack range; I believed I would be able to target her from here.

As I succeeded in launching the attack, a massive bolt of lightning rained down on Valkyrie's head. I planned to attack her with the lightning at the moment when she fully drew back her bow, even if it only managed to stall her a little.

However, the Dullahan was behind Valkyrie. Compared to Valkyrie, who was about 5 ft 2 in., the Dullahan was more than 6 ft tall. Because of his height advantage, if the Dullahan raised a big shield over Valkyrie's head, it was more than enough to cover her completely.

But just as the Dullahan lifted its shield to the sky, the Kanna Kamui swallowed them both.

Killing two people in one breath— well, sure enough, it's not at all possible. With the augmentation of the Shield Master Arts, Magic Resistance, an Anti-Magic Steel Shield, Anti-Magic Steel Full Body Armor, and the Barrier Ring, the Dullahan's durability was appalling. What's more, the Dullahan also had the Lightning Resistance attribute, making him a perfect match against us.

The situation now is totally different from what it was in the past; since the martial arts event, my use of Kanna Kamui has improved a lot. I am more familiar with the use of Lightning Magic and also obtained the Magic Control skill. Lightning Magic, the Magic Control skill, and Kanna Kamui have perfect synergy. Plus, didn't I just fire off two at once?

At the martial arts event, when I combined Kanna Kamui with Black Lightning Summoning I was able to defeat Fermus, the user of Strings. Obviously the power this time should have far exceeded that combination. Moreover, before I fired the attack, I was confident that Valkyrie could be killed if it was a direct hit... But now, the power seems to have been diminished by the Dullahan; the damage done to the surroundings was small, and no explosion occurred.

『Damn it! Why was it so weak—』

「Shishou, look.」

『Hum?』

Fran seemed to have noticed something. I looked in the direction she was pointing and saw that the Minotaur · Dark Paladins and High Orc · Shieldsmen were all charred and collapsing. All of the High Orc · Shieldermen were dead; two of the Minotaur · Dark Paradins died, and the remaining two were also on the verge of death.

What happened? The attack was fully concentrated on the Dullahan; why would it affect them? Furthermore, the other Orcs and Minotaur were not harmed at all.

『The damage may have been transferred.』

Although I didn't know what the mechanism was, Kanna Kamui's bolt seemed to have been transferred to some of the Evil Beings. The number of troublesome enemies was cut by more than 100, but unfortunately, the Supreme Magic that I worked so hard to release didn't achieve the desired result.

「Fu, FuHa, FuHahaha. No way, you even used a Supreme Magic technique! How pointless!!」

「... 」

In a cold sweat, Valkyrie cackled, but her mocking laughter seemed calculated to disguise her fear. The Dullahan stepped aside, then reached out to the nearby Magic Beasts.

「Gyo~o? Gaia...!」

The Dullahan seemed to be absorbing magic power in some way. He continued to reach out to another Magic Beast. Yikes, if the Dullahan has a Magical Absorption skill, then he can use all these Magic Beasts like magic fuel tanks. In my case, if I blindly continue launching Kanna Kamui and use up all our MP, Fran won't be able to continue attacking.

Not to mention it is already difficult to hit the target with Kanna Kamui.

Unlike their previous combat strategy, Valkyrie and the Dullahan were no longer staying put in one spot. The mechanism for firing a Kanna Kamui's consists of the triggering of the operation, stockpiling power, and the final launch. Once Kanna Kamui was released, it would be difficult to evade for any enemies. After all, it was lightning.

However, once I finished triggering the operation, the power stockpiling still took a little time, so it was not impossible for the opponent to escape. Fran and I could do it, so Valkyrie and Dullahan should be able to do it too. Even though Kanna Kamui is a Supreme Magic in terms of power, it was still difficult to hit the small opponents who tried to flee.

『Too far right now. Need to get close; arrows less effective that way.』

(Got it)

Fran began close the distance bit by bit so that Valkyrie would not notice our advance.

Then we charged towards her, using Teleportation to dodge the attacks of Evil Beings and Valkyrie's persistent arrows.

For opponents of this level, they probably have strategies to deal with frequent Teleportation, so I don't want to use it too often. However, it is essential for dodging Valkyrie's arrows while evading the attack of Evil Beings, so I can't completely abandon this strategy.

That said, if we could approach the opponent and launch a melee attack, she shouldn't be able to use her arrows, and even if she can use the arrows, it should not be as dangerous as her ranged attacks. I'm not sure how much chance we have of winning in close combat against an enemy of this level, but we don't stand a chance in a ranged battle so we'll have to pin our hopes on it.

I considered the possibility of using points to acquire some new non-lightning magic techniques, but in this situation, it was really too reckless to use precious self-evolution points for gambling.

If possible, I should probably choose a sword-related skill. No, wait a minute; can't I raise the level of Sword Lord Arts again? I thought it might work, but no dice. When I tried to upgrade it, I heard a stony-hearted announcement:

Apparently a more powerful version of Sword Lord Arts exists, but it seems I'm unable to obtain it. The only other option is Divine Sword Techniques... guess we'll have to go with that.

Valkyrie's previous attack was supposed to be a Divine Bow Technique. If that's true, then Divine Sword Techniques are worth looking forward to.

Fran agreed with my suggestion; she seemed to be thinking about the same thing.

「Okay」

This is it.

Annoucements:

《Divine Sword Techniques has been improved to LvMax. Sword Techniques Enhancement has been acquired》

《Condition requirements satisfied: Unique skill – Sword Lord Techniques has been acquired. All Sword Techniques skills will be integrated into Sword Lord Techniques》

《Sword Lord Techniques and Sword Lord Arts were obtained. Unique skill – Sword God's Grace acquired》

《Fran obtained Sword God's Grace. Class – Sword King was liberated》

With a stupendous vigor, the announcements rang out. Although I missed some of them, the most important one was probably the acquisition of Sword God's Grace.

I could instantly feel that Fran's swordsmanship had significantly improved. It felt like she had become one with the blade as if we were fused at my hilt. Only a sword itself could fully understand the difference, and as a sword, I was confident that Fran's swordsmanship had truly reached the next level.

Sword God's Grace: When holding a sword, the wielder will get blessings related to combat.

Makes sense. Anyway, the point is that this skill can provide enhancements during battle. Although I don't know to what degree, I am still very excited. After all, this is God's Grace, its power can't be too low.

「What happened? Why have you suddenly improved so much?」

「Haa!」

「Everyone, bring down that girl!」

Now it seems that Valkyrie is surprised and starting to panic.

「Divine Sword Techniques · Circle · Impact」

With this skill, we can turn on the spot to attack all the enemies around us. A similar Sword Technique exists, but after being integrated into the Divine Sword Techniques, its speed of rotation, range, and power were all significantly improved.

The Sword Technique Enhancement also made a huge difference. Now I could kill almost 20 Magic Beasts with a single slash.

「Sword · Sonic!」

This is the upgraded counterpart of Sword Technique's Sonic · Wave. It's the same attack, but the range is extended. The shock wave generated hewed its way through the dense Magic Beasts, creating a path. The remaining Magic Beasts rushed over to occupy the clearing, but Fran is faster. Dashing through the gap, Fran broke through the Magic Beast troop in a flash.

The army of Evil Beings stood before us.

『All right, we've got this!』

「En!」

Wielding me, Fran accelerated her charge.

Chapter 308 part1

Translator: Makisima

Unedited

Fran killed HobGoblin, who surrounded her. No matter how powerful these HobGoblin were, they were no match for Fran yet.

Although these HobGoblins were nothing of Fran's opponents, –.

『These guys are so annoying!』

「Gya Gyō!」

「Ge Gya Gya!」

Evil Beings surrounded Fran and started to crow. But the sound was obviously not like that the ordinary Goblin and Orc would make, that was to say, it was not a meaningless crow.

Although I didn't understand why they crow, no matter how I look at that, they were trying to communicate and trying to carry out coordination. Among those evil beings, although the power of each was weak, the dexterity of their coordination was extremely surprising.

Even in the presence of overwhelming Fran, those Evil Beings also felt no fear. And the Evil Beings around Fran began to attack us after they got cooperation. They withdrew when Fran advanced and once the Evil Beings behind us seized the opportunity to stole on Fran, the frontal Evil Beings would assault Fran with their spears. All in all, they never launched the offense alone.

Moreover, at the moment when they judged that they were going to be killed and couldn't be saved, they would jump over in desperation to tackle Fran hard. The reason they did this may be because of the existence of Dungeon Magic Beasts, perhaps because of their dexterity of coordination, or maybe for the effect of Valkyrie's Vigour Rage skill. In order to kill Fran, they seemed to look upon death as going home.

In addition, the attacks of Evil Beings using Spear Techniques and Bow Techniques were extremely fierce, and Fran had to apply the Mana and Life Thief skills to them continuously. As a result, I and Fran's mana were suffering. Since Fran's body continued to suffer from the fine scratches made by the Evil Being's attack, Fran had been in the process of repeated use of Life Thief skills and Heal from the beginning.

「Tsu!」

「Nice avoidance! It seems that the reaction speed is increasing!!」

Despite the small number, Valkyrie's arrows would still be able to attack through the narrow gap. Those arrows were aimed at us from the platform created by Soil Magic. Although we wanted to try to counterattack, Valkyrie was always guarded by Dullahan.

Most of our attacks could be defended by the opposite side. So, we were just doing meaningless consumption here.

「Hum. Slowly, the damage we receive will become more and more awful. It seems that we should really put our whole heart into it?」

So far, I knew that Valkyrie was just passing by. But now it seemed that it finally coming? Valkyrie did not release the arrow but began to speak gently.

「But why, you have to fight till now?」 — Valkyrie

「?」 — Fran

「Even if so many Magic Beasts are eliminated, why do you have to fight cost your life? Who has hired you? But what puzzles me the most is that I don't understand the reason why you launched multiple attacks from the front. Moreover, you still seem to have the intention to make every effort to annihilate us.」 – Valkyrie

「No thoroughfare!」

「Umn?」

「Everything! I protect.」 — Fran

From the short words of Fran, Valkyrie suddenly understood something, nodding vigorously.

「That's it, all is the Black Cat Tribe.」

「...En!」

「In order to buy time for the escape of the consanguinity, you even defy death to stop our offense, it's so heroic and moving! Kuhahaha」

Contrary to what she said, Valkyrie showed a mocking expression. Then, Valkyrie said something even more shocking.

「Naa, although you are a subordinate of Murellia, do you really think that these desperados are all my support?」

「Kukuku, in addition to the troop I lead, there are another two troops marching south from east and west. Their target is Greengoat. Although their strength is not as powerful as mine, there are still excellent commanders coming through countless fights in charge. Hope they have not caught up with your partners ~ 」

「Tsu!」

「But anyway, the army they sent there are shock troops, whose number of soldiers is small though, it is a Fast Movement Corps centered on the cavalry beasts after all.」

At this moment, I felt Fran's impatience was being conveyed to me from her hand holding the hilt. Oops, what the guy said did cause Fran's restlessness. Once Fran fell into disarray, she would blunder into Valkyrie's trap!

(Shishou, what the guy said...)

『It is true. She did not lie. However, we must calm down now! No matter which side, we can't help! It's better to pray that the national army and adventurers have already arrived there than fall into disarray! On the whole, no matter how fast I am, I am unable to catch up with the shock troops!』 – Fran

(We still have time.)

Anyway, I could only say this to appease Fran.

「Got it. Only I can defeat you in a short time, I'm able to help them then.」

『Fran! That's exactly what they want! It is just to make your attack reckless that she has told you this!』

「Well, it seems that even so, you still want to buy time? Ah, I remember it. If you still attempt to rely on the aid of the national army, perish the thought. Unlike our army, which feeds on magic, your human army needs a lot of things to support your survival. Now, I think your national army should have not started off yet.」 – Valkyrie

「... Kill you, protect everyone!」 – Fran

「Just do it if you can!」 – Valkyrie

Damn, she completely triggered Fran's switch! As thus, it's impossible to stop Fran! To what extent can I support Fran...!

「Brilliant Lightning Rush!」

Oops, Fran was really planning to launch a swift attack on the enemy! But the Mana and Life Thief skills cannot be always out of stock.

(Shishou! Teleportation!)

『Got it!』

Chapter 308 part2

Translator: Makisima

Proofreader: Quarn

Then, we teleported right over the group of guys. However, at that moment, Fran was penetrated by Valkyrie's arrow. Can they perceive the fluctuation of space? How could they predict our teleportation destination in advance?

However, as expected of me. Dimension Shift skill was triggered at this time, together with the augment of Crisis Detection, Vigilance, and Reaction Speed Increase.

While facing Arrow of Godspeed that I have not been able to perceive until now, I could handle it with Dimension Shift skills. However, if I used it blindly, my mana would run out soon. This skill cannot be used so frequently, at least if it was a protracted war. But it was just because of Fran's preparation for a blitzkrieg that I could use Dimension Shift without hesitation.

「Haaaa!」

「It is really difficult to deal with opponents who can use Space/Time Magic so freely!」

「Sword Lord Techniques · Sky Broken」

With sword Lord Techniques, I could probably only launch one shot. It should be enough.

Both in speed and power, Sword Lord Techniques · Sky Broken definitely surpassed the godspeed slash. And more importantly, Sky Broken seemed to have a time-accelerating effect. But that's not an effect of Space/Time Magic, More like, because my potential ability was stimulated at that instant, my reaction speed was abnormally increased, so the time-acceleration was triggered.

I didn't use Reinforcement skills yet though, only the power of Sword Lord Techniques had made my whole body tremor.

I could feel that this attack will be a decisive one. I felt Dullahan's line of sight shifted and his arm suddenly moved. Probably, to shelter Valkyrie, he wanted to do something. However, our speed was so fast that they lost the lead.

I had been sucked into Valkyrie's shoulder, cutting off her collarbone and approaching her heart.

「Crack...!」

Easily, I cut the heart of Valkyrie in half. Then, with lightning speed, I slashed diagonally from her shoulder. At that instant, I obviously felt that I had reached her magic stone, but I didn't know why. I couldn't absorb the mana of her magic stone. What was the problem?

After a short doubt, an incredible scene emerged. Somehow, the wounds of Valkyrie, who had been cut down on the ground, recovered in an instant.

Now Valkyrie was unable to use the Instant Recovery skill. In any case, since the heart and the body were divided into two, it was definitely impossible for Valkyrie to recover so fast...

At the same time, two meters outside, the Minotaur Dark Paladins spurted blood. In the next moment, a lot of mana poured into my body. But the mana was not from the magic stone of Valkyrie. Instead, it seemed that I was absorbing the mane from the magic stone of Minotaur.

Apparently just now, Valkyrie used the mysterious magic which could resist Kanna Kamui and transfer damage! And it seemed that not only Dullahan, but Valkyrie could also use that skill. What a hell gimmick it was!

「Ku, Kuhahaha. Sword Lord Techniques! You Have guts! You really scared me! It's so horrible!」

Valkyrie laughed while she distanced herself from us! However, as she said, her face showed a hint of fear. Perhaps it was because she was almost killed, her expression was obviously different from when she was shocked by the power of Kanna Kamui. It seemed that she really felt fear.

However, what kind of skill could make her recover instantly. It's hard to seize such a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, but in the end, it just scared her a little? Damn it! The Minotaur Dark Paladin was killed though, the game was not worth the candle!

In order to allow Valkyrie to heal her wound, Dullahan screened her and began to retreat, while the Evil Beings began to attack Fran all together.

『If we pulled away, they will attack us with the arrow violently!』

「Get out of my way!」

「GeGyaGya!」

「GyoGyoGya!」

Even under Fran's intimidation, the Evil Beings still did not retreat. They guarded Valkyrie desperately and stood together to form a wall.

The minutes ticked away.

「AhAhAhAh!」

Chapter 309

Translator: Makisima

Proofreader: Hylidahlia & Quarn

The battle between Fran and the Evil Being Army has taken on a new meaning

On one side is Fran, who wants to quickly destroy the Evil Beings and rescue the Black Cat refugees, and on the other, Valkyrie, who wants to obstruct Fran.

「Beat it!」

「Gyagya!」

「Gyoaa!」

Fran, who has Sword God's Grace, slaughters Evil Beings with surprising speed while maintaining her course directly towards Valkyrie. With the simultaneous use of Teleportation and Brilliant Lightning Rush, Fran is now much faster than Valkyrie and on several occasions, she got very close.

Although Fran's attacks are usually large-scale and powerful, the Dullahan is successfully blocking most of them. Worse still, as the Dullahan is shielding her, Valkyrie seizes the opportunity to pull away from Fran.

This situation makes Fran even more anxious. To make matters worse, gaining distance give Valkyrie an opportunity to attack. Fran is managing to dodge all Valkyrie's lethal arrows, but the rate is clearly increasing.

「Grr! Bastards!」

『Fran, calm down!』

(Sorry.....But!)

If Valkyrie hadn't used Damage Transfer, this would have been a quick fight...

I still haven't figured out the mechanism of Valkyrie's Damage Transfer. It seems to be triggered whenever Valkyrie takes damage. This mysterious phenomenon may be related to their Shield Techniques.

When appraising Valkyrie, I didn't discern any items or skills to transfer damage, so it must be an effect of her title, or some kind of martial art. If it's a skill that needs mana, it should have shown up during Appraisal.

As far as the current situation is concerned, the Shield Techniques and Divine Shield Techniques are the most suspicious ones. So far, in Valkyrie's forces, Minotaur Dark Paladins using Divine Shield Techniques and High Orc Shielders using Shield Techniques have always been the ones taking damage. Since shield skills can protect the companion, it's little wonder that it can shoulder the companion's damage.

And in fact, Minotaur High Swordsman and High Orc Warrior, who had died from shouldering Dullahan's fatal damage, also held Shield Techniques.

But once the conjecture (about the link between damage-shouldering and Shield Techniques) stands, the battle waiting for Fran will be bound to be a tough long haul. After all, half of the remaining Evil Beings hold Shield Techniques. For them, I don't know what level they need to be able to use Shield Techniques to shoulder the damage, but shouldn't the rest of them can all shoulder the damage? If it's really so, for how many rounds of attacks on earth can we defeat Valkyrie?

Let me put aside the case that depending on ordinary Word Techniques, Fran can kill dozens of Evil Beings at the same time. But it shouldn't have been so absurd that only one or two enemies who shoulder Sword Techniques damage could be killed as it is now.

Although I had intended to eliminate all Evil Beings, Valkyrie and Dullahan would never allow me to do that. And Valkyrie took every moment we take eyes off them and launched continuous devastating attacks.

We're really being chased by them. And even though Fran has been using Life Thief Skill and Heal to the best of her ability, her HP Recovery is far less than the damage she suffers. Even if giving up using Brilliant Lightning Rush can save her a lot of magic, but it's very likely that the balance between Fran and Valkyrie will be broken once Brilliant Lightning Rush is dismissed now. Overtaxing though, the use of Brilliant Lightning Rush has to be kept.

However, Valkyrie's dad-blasted attacks are becoming more and more violent. Damn, and Dullahan also unfolds his attack to Fran. Worse yet, Dullahan's damage is constantly being transferred to other Evil Beings. But Fran now has been affected by the big explosion caused by Valkyrie's arrows, badly beaten.

From a distance, Valkyrie conqueringly watched Fran, who stands up and square off in a flash.

「Ahahahaha! You are irritated, aren't you? And it's likely that your companions have been killed while you are fighting against heavy odds!」

『Fran, it's a provocation! Don't listen to her!』

「.....Gu」

Gnashing the teeth in anger, Fran scowls at Valkyrie, I could even hear the crunch. If it goes on like this, Fran will really go berserk.

No way out now, I have to resort to my trump card, Skill Taker. Directly deprive their skills. But what confused me is that of which skill I should deprive. After all, the basic specs and skill balance of Valkyrie and Dullahan are terrific. To be frank, no matter what skills I deprive them of, it can't disable them.

Even so, it might Valkyrie's Divine Bow Techniques and Dullahan's Divine Shield Techniques can still be on the shortlist. Skill Taker can't disable them though, it should be able to weaken them to a large extent. And then Fran can make a final bid for victory in the chaos in which their skills are deprived. As for those Evil Beings who shoulder the damage, we will attack them until they can't do it anymore.

『The problem is... whose skills should I deprive?』

Just as Fran and I were discussing which skills to deprive...

(Shishou, something's coming!)

『Yeah, I can feel it, too!』

At this moment, from the southwest, a shadow with great mana is approaching at a high speed, which seems much faster than Urushi's Sky Leap. Could it be Valkyrie's reinforcements? However, it does not come from the north but from the southwest.

Valkyrie and the others seem to be waiting and seeing, and since the powerful magic captured their attention, they began to grow restless as well. In some way, the shadow doesn't look like her reinforcements.

「Here it comes!」

『Overhead!』

As the two sides paused to attack and assumed a defensive posture, the shadow alights from the sky.

「Kuooo~o~o~on'n!」

「Wyvern... No, it's not. Could it be a Dragon?」

As Valkyrie muttered, that shadow is a Dragon with red scales. Its height is almost 2 meters, and its wing length is about 7 or 8 meters.

In the air, the Scarlet Dragon flutters its wings, looking down on the whole battlefield. Its golden pupils gleams with a sharp light as if it is hunting prey.

At the sound of the dragon's roar, Magic Beasts shrink timidly. And Evil Beings are also caught up in a riot and stops the previous offensive. But even so, they quickly regain their morale and come out with a ground-to-air formation.

The Scarlet Dragon is a little smaller than an adult dragon. And for the status, its threat level is only C. However, its sense of existence is extremely strong. But now, there is something more threatening than it that must be kept on the lookout — Dullahan, and Valkyrie.

However, neither I nor Fran is overly wary of the dragon. Instead, Fran wears a smile on her face.

Because...

「Reduce them to ashes! Llinde!」

「KuOOOOoo!」

The Scarlet dragon spraying flames at Evil Beings and people riding on it seem familiar to me.

「You seem to have a tough fight, Fran! Are there any reinforcements?」

「Mare!」

Author's Note:

I'm sorry that I Was a Sword When I Reincarnated is not animated, but I'm really happy to hear that you all hope it can be animated.

If it can be animated, whom do you want to be the voice performer of Fran and Shishou?

As for Fran's, I hope her voice will be cute and pure, but it is a little difficult to find a child's voice.

I think I can only dream and drink. LOL

「Seems a tough battle, Fran ! Any reinforcements?」

「Mare!」

The Scarlet Dragon suddenly appearing in the battlefield was attacking the Evil Beings. The people riding on the dragon back were the mysterious girl and her maid follower, Kuina, with whom Fran parted not long ago since they had encountered in the Scorpion Lion Forest. And, the scarlet dragon was called Llinde, a dragon that dwelled on Mare's Monster Weapon.

On Mare's command, Llinde spewed scarlet flame from its giant mouth. And wherever in that fire's power, more than 20 evil beings and magic beasts were burned to ashes in an instant.

At this moment, I saw Valkyrie watching her army suffer losses, she was about to shoot an arrow aiming at Llinde. It seems that she wants to shoot down Llinde, the powerful threat to the Evil Beings.

「Shishou!」

『It will be fine.』

Valkyrie and Fran didn't sense the fact that the arrow couldn't hit Llinde though, I was never doubtful about that.

「Such a grand way to come on stage, but also such a pity! You're exiting now!」

Shouting that, Valkyrie released the arrow, which shot toward Llinde directly. And then, Valkyrie who believed the arrow must hit Llinde flashed a reassuring smile.

To her surprise, however, brushing past Llinde, the arrow flew in the wrong direction, which shocked both Valkyrie and Fran.

「Wh... What?」

(Illusion)

『Yeah. Illusion Magic, Illusion Magic of high level.』

Fran and I used to be tortured by the Illusion, but now it seems more powerful than before. And Mare, using the Illusion, shouted with a triumphant expression:

「Fran! Let me help you!」

「Mare! I can handle the situation here for the time being! You can stop the detached force of Evil Beings!」

Although it's true, I couldn't believe Fran was pleading with Mare. I never thought that Fran would make such a cry. But Mare laughed away Fran's worry.

「Hahaha! Don't worry! If the detached force you said is the two troops going south from the east and west, then I have eliminated one of them! And as for the other troop with a larger number of soldiers, it has been solved by someone else!」

「Really?」

「Yes, just make yourself easy about that! The Evil Being troop in the west has been transformed into my EP. And thanks to that troop, I could improve my level. Look, and Llinde's figure became larger than before because of that troop.」

「Cool!」

「And we have sent a message to the Lord of Greengoat, asking him to dispatch security force to protect the refugees. They should be joining forces with Greengoat's force soon!」

Hearing what Mare had said, Fran finally gave a sigh of relief. Although it's inappropriate to use the Principle of Falsehood to Mare, I don't think she is lying. Because what she said has inexplicable credibility, or maybe a reassuring power?

So, since Mare says everything is fine, then we can believe that what she said was true.

After all, in such an emergency, there's no reason for Mare to lie. And with Mare's party's power, it's easy for them to eliminate all detached forces.

And meanwhile, on the other side, Valkyrie's triumphant look blanked gradually. She seemed to sense that what Mare said was not a lie.

「No, it's impossible. How could you defeat the Evil Beings troop dispatched by Murellia Sama? Isn't the troop of the west led by Dullahan, a powerful leader, and demons? 」

「So it is. That troop was extremely powerful indeed, but with the joint attack of the two of us, they are still at a disadvantage after all.」

「Two of you?」

「Ah, yes, we two.」

At this moment, however, I happened to find the girl, who was behind Mare with a fearless smile, disappeared. She was riding on the back of Llinde before, but now where has she gone?

「Is this OK? You, the Battle Maiden. How could you be so careless as to be defenseless...」

Valkyrie cried out before Mare finished her words.

「GuGaaaaa!」

No one knew when, a figure appeared next to Valkyrie in a flash, and then, a sudden sting blew Valkyrie. That figure's hand had pierced through Valkyrie's chest.

「I'm Lady Mare's maid, Kuina. Nice to meet you. By the way, it's so mysterious that you can still be safe and sound like this even being pierced through your heart.」

It's Mare's Assassin Maid, Kuina. We haven't even sensed her appearance. But, I knew what she has done. She should have combined Illusion Magic with her Innate Skill — Phantom Dream Matrix. And the one that created the illusion of Llinde and Mare should also be Kuina.

For those who have never seen the illusions, they are not able to recognize those illusions created by Kuina, who is such an adept. A perfect K.O., now it is Valkyrie's turn.

However, I can feel that Kuina's mana is decreasing. Although she looks unruffled, the blow just now should have been a mortal blow. Even if she fails to make a mortal blow, she still stays cool, calm and collected, which shows that she is not ordinary.

No, wait a moment! The scene is the same as when we met Kuina in Scorpion Lion Forest, she looks cool though, she is in panic in her heart now. In the face of this enemy, not only do we not know how to deal with it, but in fact, Kuina is also anxious.

「Haha! You are really worthy of the Assassin Maid! Unmoved by the loss at all! An annoying guy in normal times though, but reliable you are in the battlefield!」

Kuina appears to be calm. No! Totally can't figure out. Even on this occasion, Kuina gracefully saluted Valkyrie and then distanced from her.

「Damn! Don't cause me trouble!」

「Hahaha, so pity! Since you have hurt my rival, I can't let you get away with that!」

「After all, Fran is the only friend of My Lady.」

「"Only" is so superfluous! And, we are not friends! We are rivals!」

「My Lady is still so aggressive... But it's really annoying in the face of Ms. Fran, who has occupied the title “Black Lightning Princess”, My Lady still can not accept the fact that her favorite color, black, is preempted. So, My Lady can't help harboring mixed feelings to Ms. Fran.」

「You shut up! But preempt my favorite color by the Black Lightning Princess title is too cunning!」

「But no matter how hard My Lady try to deny, the title such as White Flame Advent, Rough Beast (White) and White Abarenbo, are all terrific.」

「...Is that a compliment to me? Are you not dissing me?」

「Sorry, My Lady. But it all truly comes from my heart.」

「All pretext! But just forget it. Anyway, I'm the only one to defeat my rival, Fran! I must fight you, troublemakers! 」

「Dares to hold such language!」

「Cut the crap! I'm coming!」

Then Mare jumped down from Llinde.

「I'm going in!」

Mare jumped off Llinde, descending from high above. Although it appeared as though she landed gracefully, her landing actually presented quite a few defensive openings. Fortunately, with the ever-present threat of an attack from Fran, Valkyrie dared not move recklessly.

At some point, I don't know when, Mare's true body had replaced her illusion and, rising from where she landed, she glared at Valkyrie with blazing eyes.

「If you come clean about your purpose there's a chance I'll show you mercy.」

「Don't delude yourself, that's impossible!」

「How unfortunate. But if that's your answer, I'm getting serious! Fran! You ready?」

In the current situation, Fran wasn't so foolish as to try to go one-on-one with Valkyrie. She seemed far more invested in fighting alongside Mare and nodded enthusiastically.

「Kuina, you need to subdue Dullahan now!」

「Actually, I'm not very good at tackling heavily-armed opponents.」

「You need to do it now!」

「Words fail me. Is it really okay for me to tackle such a tough enemy? I just hope I don't cause Miss Fran any trouble.」

Kuina, urged on loudly by Mare, saluted gracefully and launched an attack on Dullahan. Although, at first glance, Kuina appeared to be running normally, her speed was astonishing, it seemed that she was using a unique footwork technique.

「Llinde, you also try to restrain the Evil Beings over there. Remember not to push yourself too hard.」

「Coollll!」

Roaring, Llinde, who was in the air, dove towards the army of Evil Beings. Llinde deftly avoided Evil Beings' arrows while simultaneously spraying flames at them. As a result, the Magic Beasts fled helter-skelter when they saw Llinde coming.

「Next, we two shall begin our attack as well. Valkyrie has brought disaster to my people, does she really think she can leave with a happy ending?」

「Ha? Who do you think you are? Do you think you are a member of the Royal household? How dare you speak like that?」

「Well, it seems that I can only convince you by showing my true power. In that case, I'll show you now!」

With that, Mare twirled her coat, raising her right hand to the sky and jumped up.

「In this moment, I have become The Swordswoman of Beauty !」

I had thought she would do something special, but she just made an extravagant pose. Then, she shook her left arm and changed another pose.

「Now I'm The Girl Who Manipulates the Giant Dragon!」

Next was a pose No. 2, Rider Shapeshift. The forms of Mare's Shapeshift poses were becoming more and more exaggerated. I mean, can't she just say it already? Why does she have to pose over and over again?

「However, my true identity is.....!」

Finally, she puffed out her chest, arms aloft. However, just as she was about to announce it, a torrent of explosive flame burst out of her mouth, as if she was performing fire magic.

「The eldest daughter of the Beast Lord – Rigdis Narasimha, Nemea Narasimha!」

No, wait. In this sudden revelation, Mare is actually the Lord's daughter?

Mare is Nemea Narasimha?

Although my Appraisal has been blocked, I'm sure she's not lying because she hasn't triggered the Principle of Falsehood all this time.

Not only that, but in terms of her behavior and manner, the shadow of the Beast Lord is evident. Either judging from her appearance or from her temperament, it's not in the least bit surprising that she is the daughter of the Beast Lord.

「Let me show you just the tip of the iceberg. Awakening—」

With a fearless smile, Mare released her power.

After Mare's Awakening, much like Fran, her appearance didn't change much. The only difference is that Mare's body has begun to radiate fire. Wait, her hair has gained volume and stands up now? Looks like lion's mane. Ok, fine, I think it just means that Mare is a girl. In addition, her teeth and nails have stretched a little longer.

「Mare, You're so cool!」

「Hahaha! I know, right?」

「So... you are the daughter of the Beast Lord. It's said that the daughter of the Beast Lord is born white-haired, seems the rumor is true.」

「Yes, it's me. I have to keep this secret because my white hair is too conspicuous. After all, people will talk. But even so, there seems to be a lot of rumors about me.」

「Indeed, you certainly do possess pretty wonderful mana.」

As Valkyrie said, I can feel fairly powerful mana hanging over Mare, whose power seems to be on a par with Fran using Brilliant Lightning Rush.

「.....What!」

Shocked by what she saw, Fran stared at Mare in bewilderment.

Mare, hearing Valkyrie's murmur, showed a fearless smile. And then, she leaned back and laughed.

「Kukuku」

「You think this is all my power?」

「What?」

「I said I would show you all my ability, didn't I?」

Howling again, Mare struck another pose. This time, her pose was exactly the same as the normal 3rd pose of shapeshifting.

「Golden Flame of Extinction!」

With that, a storm-like, golden fire burst out from Mare's body. It was the innate skill of Red Catkin's high breed, Golden Flame Lionkin: Golden Flame of Extinction. Mare, now covered by the golden flame, was exactly the same as the Beast Lord Rigdis from before.

It seems that, like Fran and the Beast Lord, Mare has also reached the level of the Ten Original Tribes, which greatly surprised Fran. Because they are both Magic Beasts, Fran seemed to know Mare was evolving immediately and, after witnessing Mare's evolutionary posture, Fran also figured out Mare's race type, Golden Flame Lionkin.

The way I see it, Mare, who is now using Golden Flame of Extinction, has an absolute advantage in both Magic and strength. If an average person faced her, it would probably be impossible for them to stand their ground. Moreover, in the face of such an extraordinary existence, ordinary people would either be prostrate, petrified or may even lose consciousness. Whatever the outcome, it would impossible to maintain one's composure.

「Now, that we've come this far, I won't show you any mercy. Suffer my punishment! 」

In that instant, Mare roared, pouncing on Valkyrie with deafening roars and terrifying momentum. Mare's bloodlust, intimidation and magical force merged into an invisible pressure that made straight for Valkyrie.

「Damn.....!」

Facing oncoming, irresistible pressure, Valkyrie was about to speak up, but then she drew her bow, aiming at Mare and released the Arrow of Godspeed.

「Will you keep coming? 」

Despite being released instantaneously, Valkyrie's Arrow of Godspeed was easily disintegrated by Mare's Golden Flame, it seemed to be how auto-defense of Golden Flame of Extinction worked.

The arrow, containing power strong enough to penetrate dozens of magic beasts' bodies, that tormented Fran and me, was instantly burnt to ashes before it broke the Golden Flame barrier of Mare, despite containing no less malevolence than before.

Despite its power, however, Mare wasn't left unscathed, there was a shallow wound on her face. Sure enough, Mare isn't as powerful as the Beast Lord, but even so, I've no doubt that Mare's power is comparable to Fran's. Mare certainly is an invigorating reinforcement.

「Get ready to suffer my punishment War Maiden!」

「En!」

「Fran, you come and support me!」

「.....Roger that!」

Fran seemed to understand Mare's intentions. She breathed a sigh of relief and discharged Brilliant Lightning Rush. This was because Mare, who belonged to the same skill system as Fran, had understood that Fran's use of Brilliant Lightning Rush was beyond her limits.

Thank God. If Fran had continued to push her limits, then I would have had to discharge the Brilliant Lightning Rush myself.

And so, the fierce battle between the two girls and War Maiden began.

Author's notes:

The Publishing House decided to republish the cartoon of the Magic Sword.

Thank you for your encouragement and support!

Gee, I've been worrying, is it really okay to print so much at first? What if it can't be sold out.

I'm so glad, however.

Express my thanks to Mr. Maruyama again!

「ToAhaaa!」

「Haa!」

「Ku!」

Raising their swords aloft, Mare and Fran charged towards Valkyrie. Defending with her spear, Valkyrie frowned and retreated, giving ground. Although Valkyrie's spear technique was excellent, she couldn't hold back the simultaneous charge of both Mare and Fran.

Gradually, the damage Valkyrie suffered became more and more serious.

Meanwhile, the other Evil Beings that had, thus far, been suppressed by Llinde, and Dullahan, who had been tied down by Kuina, also attracted my attention.

From my vantage point, I could also clearly see Llinde's combat abilities, it certainly was fortunate for us that he was on our side. His airborne combat speed was amazing, not produced by his wings but rather his mana and skills. Thus, as he was flying through the Evil Beings, his acceleration and deceleration totally ignored the laws of physics.

After flying at top-speed for a time, Llinde suddenly halted, then produced another sudden burst of acceleration, seemingly with no warning whatsoever. The ability initially appeared to be performed using Flame

Magic as a propellant, but it was more than that, the key to it seemed to be that the magic was released from his wings.

Also, due to Llinde's substantial intellect, his actions were planned out strategically. He never stepped into the attack range of an Evil Beings' pike, instead just sneaking up on them and only breathing low-level flames to provoke them. In addition, in order to avoid being targeted by arrows, he never stayed in one place and was always moving unpredictably to avoid being surrounded and becoming a sitting duck. Not just this, but whenever the Evil Beings and Magic Beasts tried to recover, he would roar and sow chaos in their ranks.

Despite the relative infrequency of his attacks, the guerilla tactics he was employing were excellent. His objective wasn't to kill enemies, just to support his allies and allow Mare and Kuina to be the main force.

Now, thanks to Llinde's support, Fran and Mare could focus on Valkyrie without being bothered by the Evil Beings.

「Flame Sword!」 – Mare

「Quartet Slash!」 – Fran

「You damn little girls!」 – Valkyrie

「Fine, I'll show you true fear, War Maiden!」 – Mare

「Fuck!」 – Valkyrie

「Humph, too late!」 – Fran

「Damn it...!」 – Valkyrie

Little by little, the converging attacks of Mare and Fran had cornered Valkyrie. Although most of the damage Valkyrie had initially suffered had been transferred to the Evil Beings, it was gradually being transferred less and less frequently. This was because Valkyrie was constantly taking damage during the battle. This, in turn, caused the damage she could transfer to be far outstripped by the damage she was taking, causing the wounds she suffered to become more and more serious.

「Haha. I was thrown off by her wound recovery before, but it looks like she was just using a strategy based on Shield Techniques.」 – Fran

「What do you mean?」 – Mare

「Shield Techniques is a skill which allows the user to assume a portion of the damage that is suffered by allies. However Divine Shield Techniques is a skill which can transfer the damage the user suffers to their allies.」 – Fran

「Oh, I get it.」 — Mare

As we had reasoned out, Valkyrie had indeed been using Divine Shield Techniques. But now that her allies, Dullahan, and the Evil Beings, were caught up in the fierce battle, she could no longer use the skill to its full potential.

For now, we decided to give up on using Skill Taker. This was because in future battles we would likely need the skill to deal with the mysterious figure pulling the strings behind the scenes, that of Valkyrie's boss, Murellia, so we had to conserve skill usage as much as possible.

What's more, Valkyrie's arrow had already proven it couldn't pose any threat to Fran and Mare and Dullahan's Divine Shield Techniques had also been completely blocked by Kuina. So, in circumstances like these, there really was no need to use Skill Taker.

During the continuous offensive, I found that, compared to Fran's thunder skill, Valkyrie suffered more from Mare's flame skill.

「It looks like, compared to your powerful but fleeting thunder, Valkyrie is more afraid of my relentless, destructive flames.」 – Mare

「Oh I see!」 – Fran

「You even have the time to chat!?!」 – Valkyrie

「Of course, we have!」 – Mare

「Indeed, we do!」 – Fran

「Damn!」 – Valkyrie

Valkyrie couldn't hold back her anger anymore when she saw Fran and Mare were even chatting while avoiding her attacks. What she didn't know was this was also a part of Fran and Mare's tactics.

It seemed as though the two were planning to repay all the damage Valkyrie had inflicted on them, with interest. Moreover, because of their provocations, Valkyrie's attacks had become rushed and messy out of anger, presenting easy openings for Fran and Mare to avoid them. Because of this, neither of them had any intention of stopping the provocation.

「Hora Hora! Weren't you oh so confident before? Why have you gone all quiet!?!」 – Mare

「If you're having a hard time, just let me know!」 – Mare

「Fuck, shut up!」 – Valkyrie

Now that the tables had turned in our favor, we could afford to talk amongst ourselves. Valkyrie, however, had been pushed to the extent where she couldn't even stop to talk.

「It's time! Go in now!」 – Fran

「Gaaaaa!」 – Valkyrie

Finally, one of Fran's slashes broke through and cut off Valkyrie's left arm. This time, the wound made by the slash didn't recover and the detached arm flew through the air.

「I did it!」 – Fran

「KuA–Ga!」 – Valkyrie

Then, with a lunge of her Flame Sword, Mare cut at Valkyrie's body. The fire wrapped around the sword and charred the wound, instantly turning it black.

「Well, now! Changed your mind? If you tell me what I want to know, I'll give you a painless death!」 – Mare

「...」 – Valkyrie

Valkyrie knew very well that she couldn't turn things around. Disarming herself, she got up slowly. Even though she didn't have a skill like dimensional storage, it seemed as though she could still use some sort of ability to arm and disarm herself.

「So d'you feel like talking now?」 – Mare

「AhAh, I give up, I will tell you everything I know ——」 – Valkyrie

Muttering, Valkyrie began to pull out an object, it was a black spear from which waves of black magic arose. I had seen the same kind of magic wave long ago, it was the same sort of magic used by the Master of Evil Arts Rynford and the Half Evil Being Zerrosreed. After using Appraisal, Valkyrie's spear was displayed as [Evil Stone Imbued Spear].

「—— Impossible! I'll never tell you anything!」 –Valkyrie

Still being forced back by Fran and Mare, Valkyrie suddenly lost all semblance of control. She roared and veins throbbed on her forehead.

「UGaaaaa! Unforgivable! I will kill you all right here, right now!」 – Valkyrie

Then, from the spear in her hand, an evil specter burst forth.

「Even I can't control it! It will destroy everything until it completely devours my soul!」 – Valkyrie

In her rage, Valkyrie's face had now lost its previous beautiful façade. Her expression had turned distorted, almost demonic.

Chapter 313 part1

Rising from the Evil Stone Spear in Valkyrie's hand, the evil specter almost equaled the size and ferocity of the gigantic Master of Evil Arts, Rynford.

『Fran! Stop her before she can make her move!』 — Me

「En!」 — Fran

「Not if I can help it!」 — Valkyrie

In the instant when Valkyrie, holding the Evil Stone Spear, moved to attack, Fran and Mare leapt forward. However, their swords were blocked some sort of barrier surrounding Valkyrie. The barrier seemed familiar to me and looked somewhat like Rynford's but I wondered whether there were differences between the two, despite appearing to be the same magic.

「I had planned to release the power of my spear in Greengoat, but now it doesn't matter! Your country would suffer an even greater loss if I kill the two of you! At least you'll get to die together!」

While she roared, Valkyrie's wounds started instantaneously healing in a manner quite different from when she was sharing her damage with the Evil Beings.

Roaring, Valkyrie's wounds were healing in an instant. But it was not in the previous way that when her damage was shared with Evil Beings.

'Squelch.' Something was squirming, bursting out from inside Valkyrie's open wounds and filling them with new flesh. The reborn flesh seemed to be covered in rugged, black nodules, showing that the new exterior had been regenerated into Goblin skin.

'Bogo Bogo,' something were squirming and bursting, then her wounds were filled with new flesh. The reborn flesh seemed to be covered by some rugged black nodules, which appeared that only that part was regenerated from Goblin skin.

After an Appraisal by Fran, we found Valkyrie's race had become "Half Evil Being", and "Evil God's Slave" was newly added to her titles. In addition, every one of her statuses was improved and Evil Arts had been added to her skill column.

This was probably caused by the Evil Stone Spear, right? Due to the vague description Appraisal provided, it wasn't possible to learn any further details about the Evil Being or the Evil Stone Spear itself.

That probably caused by the Evil Stone Spear? Due to the vague description in Appraisal, however, any details about either the Evil Being or item of Evil God System was unknowable.

「Evil Stone! Devour my soul and destroy everything!」 – Valkyrie

Magic rose from Valkyrie's body, gradually becoming contaminated by the evil specter. Eventually her magic had been completely replaced.

「Damn it. Fran! We've got to give it another shot!」 – Mare

「OK!」 – Fran

「——Inferno Burst!」 – Fran

「Ha!」 – Mare

This time, Mare and Fran cast their Flame and Lightning Magic from a middling distance however, once more, the attack was reflected by the barrier.

「UGaaaaaaa!」 – Valkyrie

Valkyrie charged us in a flash, her eyeballs dyed pitch black and an ominous, groan-like roar leaking out of her mouth. We could no longer feel any sanity from her whatsoever, it seemed that her evolution into an Evil Being was progressing all too rapidly.

「Gaaa!」 – Valkyrie

「Damn you!」 – Mare

Using her sword Mare stopped the, now markedly more powerful, stab of Valkyrie's spear and retreated a large step backwards.

With her sword, Mare stopped the spear stabbed in full swing by Valkyrie, whose power had improved a lot, and retreated a large step back.

「Mare!」 – Fran

To support Mare, Fran also joined the attack. It looked like Valkyrie's barrier didn't have the ability to auto-guard so Fran, positioned behind her, easily broke through by slashing at Valkyrie's back, cutting into her spine.

Fran's slash had shattered her backbone and cut deeply into the underlying flesh, however her opponent's recuperative abilities had drastically improved. Any wounds were rapidly filled by squirming black skin and, worse yet, Valkyrie seemed to be completely unperturbed by the damage and didn't slow down her movements one bit.

「Gaa!」 – Valkyrie

「Watch out! 」 – Fran

Valkyrie's front kick broke through the Golden Flame's defense and Mare was blown backwards. However, as one would expect, Valkyrie's lower leg from the knee downwards had been charred by the searing flame. Moreover, the impact had completely smashed the charred limb to pulp. However, no sooner had the damage been done, with a strident "Guju Guju" sound, new flesh began jutting out from her knee and the leg regenerated. After several instances of this healing process, Valkyrie, who had once had a beautifully feminine appearance, became covered with patches of melted, ugly Goblin flesh, the sight becoming increasingly grotesque with each passing second.

At that moment, Valkyrie quickly spun the heavy spear around in her hand and switched her grip, attempting to stab Fran who was behind her.

「UGaaaa! 」 – Valkyrie

「Damn! 」 – Fran

『Fuck! 』 – Me

Chapter 313 part2

While simultaneously attacking my opponent, I used Telekinesis to ward off the spear. At the same time, Fran used Divine Sword Techniques to counter Valkyrie, who, leaning sideways to dodge, lost her balance. Throughout the exchange, Mare's flames continually burned Valkyrie's body, however Mare herself had barely managed to stop Valkyrie's front kick with her sword. The situation had quickly become alarmingly dangerous.

「She's so tough to deal with! Our attacks don't seem to be affecting her at all!」 — Mare

With a grave expression, Mare bemoaned their desperate situation. Even if we attacked Valkyrie, she couldn't feel pain and any wounds we inflicted would recover straight away.

「GuRooooo!」 — Valkyrie

「Shit!」 — Mare

Mare, who was once again hit by Valkyrie's fist, saw that the burnt flesh began to regenerate, just as it had done before. If we continued like this, there really was no hope of victory. There was just no end in sight.

「Fran! I want to try a more powerful technique! Could you keep her busy for a while?」 — Mare

「OK!」 — Fran

「Right!」 – Mare

Mare retreated while Fran drew Valkyrie away. Despite not using Brilliant Lightning Rush, Fran tried her best to keep Valkyrie at bay by herself. With the improvement of Valkyrie's status, her fighting power had spiked considerably, however this was balanced out by the absence of Dullahan and the Evil Beings' assistance.

『Haa!』 – Me

「Fu!」 – Fran

Fran fought valiantly against Valkyrie and, little by little, backtracked until she circled back to Mare.

Although Valkyrie's fighting power had definitely increased, her intellect had all but disappeared. Thanks to this, Fran and I had a very easy time baiting her in. What was most worrying, however, was that Valkyrie's movements were getting faster and faster.

Did this mean she was previously in some form of incomplete state resulting from her forced transformation into an Evil Being? Was this why now, as her changed body and newfound strength began to align, she was so improved? If so, she has the potential to become even more dangerous. I suppose we can only hope that the technique Mare has up her sleeve is enough to put her down for good.

「Impact Slash!」 – Fran

The next instant Fran blocked Valkyrie's stab with her Divine Sword Techniques, using the force of the collision to put some distance between them.

Using this opportunity, Mare came forward. Despite it being the first time they had worked together, Fran and Mare managed to cooperate through eye contact, even their breathing seemed to be the same. Although she had appeared behind her, Mare's presence had provoked no meaningful response from Valkyrie.

「Haaaaa! Golden Interception Flame!」 – Mare

Mare now carried the Dragonblade Llinde, the sword she had previously been using, sheathed on her back. Instead in her hand was a shining sword. The iridescent sword she held seemed to be formed from the tight compression of her own Golden Flames. It was probably a technique that could only be used when the Golden Flame of Extinction was active, similar to Fran's Black Lightning summons.

「Nuooo!」 – Mare

「Ga...Ga...」 – Valkyrie

Mare's burning sword ran straight through Valkyrie's back, charring her body from the inside. Valkyrie's eyes and mouth began to erupt with a torrent of searing flames.

「GuGiaOOOoooo!」 – Valkyrie

Valkyrie was gradually enveloped by the inferno, forming a golden pillar of fire that rose straight up into the sky. Without the dark shadow screaming and struggling at its center, it would have been quite the picturesque spectacle.

「GuGaGaaaa!」 – Valkyrie

(ShiShou!) — Fran

『Finally!』 – Me

Now that Valkyrie was submerged in the intense flames, Fran had the time to release a major attack. I thought that Fran would use her Sword Lord Technique, Broken Sky, but it seemed that it wouldn't activate in her current state. Without Brilliant Lightning Rush, Broken Sky seemed unable to launch.

『UOooooo! 』 – Fran

Fran used Godspeed Slash and swung me at near light-speed, cleaving the air while using Transformation to explosively enlarge my blade to a gigantic size.

The moment I touched the Golden Flame, my blade began to dissolve. Fortunately, Flame Resistance prevented me from evaporating instantly. Only by combining Instant Recovery with Godspeed Slash could I bear the flames. Sure enough, the Beast Lord's Golden Inflammation could not be so casually touched. Nonetheless, before I even had time to react, I had already lost part of my body's blade.

In spite of everything, the moment I cut into Valkyrie, I finally felt her magic stone being absorbed. Strength flowed into me; this time, we'd really done it!

『I felt it work this time!』 – Me

Our relentless determination had finally paid off!

Chapter 314

The golden flame from Mare's Golden Interception Flame gradually died down.

By the time the flame had completely disappeared, the previous Valkyrie was gone, all that remained was her charred and blackened body, cut in half from her head down.

Gazing at the remains, I confirm the skills I acquired by devouring the Valkyrie's magic stone; Devine Bow Techniques, Divine Bow Arts, Resistance to Madness, Light Magic, Morale Boost, Troop Assistance, War Maiden, and other skills, all of which are fairly rare.

I was able to acquire a lot of skills this time, but the battle was the most dangerous so far. Right now though I don't have the time to go through them all, ill just have to count them once the battle is over.

The only problem is Evil Arts, it can't be helped if I obtain a bad skill, all I have to do is not equip it and hide it. Is what I thought...

『I can't find Evil arts anywhere. 』 – Me

Valkyrie possessed Evil Arts, but I did not inherit it. Could it be because I don't have the title of Evil God? If so, that's a relief!

That being said, there is another problem. I swallowed up Valkyrie, but I got very little Magic Points. In Valkyries case, I thought I could get more than 300 Magic Stone points but... The result was only 5 points. Even the Magic Stone Points of the evil being was much higher than that. Was Valkyries Magic Stone consumed by the fierce fighting? Well, there are still a lot of things I don't understand.

「We... did it?」 –Fran

「En...」 – Me

That isn't the only problem either, burned by Mare's flame, Magic Stone being swallowed up by me, the Valkyrie surely died. However, black smoke is still rising from her body.

Mare, who just reversed from her Awakening state, did not relax her vigilance and kept staring at Valkyrie's body.

『No, it's impossible. But I do feel specter from Valkyrie's body...』 – Me

『No, that can't be, but, I do feel an evil aura emanating from Valkyrie's body...』 — Me

No, something's wrong, the source of the aura is not Valkyrie, it's from the long spear that she still clutches with a burnt hand. A powerful evil aura flows from the spear into Valkyrie.

「——Fire Javelin ! 」 –Mare

『It's the spear!』 – Me

「Mare, Spear!」 – Fran

「Indeed! I see!」 – Mare

『Devouring!』 – Mare

「——Fire Javelin ! 」 – Mare

「Haa!」 – Mare

Lightning Magic released by Fran & I and Flame Magic released by Mare hit the Evil Stone Spear, but are blocked by its barrier, not able to destroy it.

Then, the Evil Stone Spear radiates a strong black light that begins pulsing faster and faster.

From the split halves of the Valkyries body, tentacles begin to gush out. They intertwine with each other, working to mend the two halves, and Valkyrie's body begins to wobble and stand. Fran and Mare look with disgust as the body twists at the joints into impossible angles.

「Fire Arrow」 – Mare

「Haa!」 – Fran

Sure enough, Fran and Mare's Magic is repelled by the barrier.

「GaGa.....Ga.....」 – Valkyrie

Valkyries open mouth begins to emit a harsh radio static, and then her body starts to swell from inside, as if a monster was writhing within her, suddenly a part of her body begins to protrude rapidly.

Conversely, the body begins to emit a strong evil aura, and it is so fierce, only the leaking part even makes me feel horrible.

Fran frowns and Mare turns deathly pale as they resist the evil aura and stare at what had once been Valkyrie. This is not just an evil aura, it's more like a miasma.

Appraisal confirms that it is no longer Valkyrie, but an Evil Stone. It's race being the Evil God Beings, and currently, it's in a state of evil deification. The title is now 'The one endowed with the power of evil god.' Exactly the same as Rynford, the giant Master of Evil Ats who fought with Barbra.

The evil aura within the Evil Stone grows stronger and stronger.

「GaGaGaGa——」 – Evil Stone

It's dangerous to let it continue, we have to do something now.

『Fran, don't be merciful! Do your best to eliminate it!』 – Me

「En! Mare, do it now!」 – Fran

「Copy!」 – Mare

Mare agrees with us, and together with Fran they take some distance from the Evil Stone and begin to focus. Without knowing the structure of the barrier they can only attempt to break it with their most powerful attacks.

「Brilliant Lightning Rush!」 – Fran

「Pale fire.....!」 – Mare

『Ooo——! 』 – Me

Mare has just removed Awakening status by using the Golden Interception Flame. She isn't able to trigger it again in a short span of time. But she seems to have other tricks.

Unlike the previous golden flames, Mare's body is engulfed by pale flames unlike any seen before. She emits a distinct atmosphere that is accompanied by a sense of authority and sacredness.

Is that the power of Golden Flame Lionkin? Or is that just Mare's skill? Well, judging from the enormous magic I feel, it's really a very powerful skill, I'm looking forward to it.

『Charge! Haaaaa!』 – Me

I prepare Kanna Kamui in a chain, to be honest, even now a bitter cold attacks my spirit, threatening my sense of awareness. This is too much for me, however, I am in a scenario where I have to continue.

「Black Lightning Summoning!」 – Fran

「Destroy my enemies! Pale inferno!」 – Mare

My Kanna Kamui and Fran's Black Lightning, plus Mare's Pale Flame, hit Evil Stone directly.

Indeed, even Evil God's Barrier seems unable to defend against such a powerful attack. Although Kanna Kamui was briefly blocked, the Barrier was immediately swallowed up by Black Lightning and Pale Flame.

A huge explosion erupts from where the attacks connect.

「WTF?」 – Fran

「En...!」 – Mare

Despite their distance, Mare and Fran were almost blown away by the blast. They used multiple wind walls in succession to avoid being hit by the ensuing strong blow and debris.

Where the evil stone had once been, there now was a huge hole. The strike zone created a crater, more than twice as large compared to when I used Kanna Kamui alone.

「It's really a terrible explosion...」 – Fran

「En」 – Mare

「Such a power, even I was scared.」 – Mare

Fran and Mare stepped close to the edge of the crater.

「How about it?」 – Fran

「Where is it?」 – Mare

『I can't feel it.』 – Me

It seems that our attack succeeded. It's great to kill the Evil Stone before it rampages.

「What the hell, such horrible magic..... I got goosebumps on my skin.」 –Fran

「Probably from the Evil Stone Spear」 – Me

「Evil Stone... was it related to the Evil God?」 – Mare

When Fran and Mare were discussing, something suddenly came to my mind.

『The sword Dullahan had was called Evil Stone Sword...』 — Me

「Danger!」 – Fran

「What's wrong, Fran?」 – Mare

「Help Kuina now!」 – Fran

「Yes, indeed. Although I don't think Kuina will lose, It'd be better to get rid of Dullahan as soon as possible.」 – Mare

Kuina and Dullahan are still fighting. For now, it seems that Dullahan's Evil Stone Sword has not mutated... Anyway, it's better to go early to help Kuina.

『Is it all right? We have to deal with that broad-edged sword.』 – Fran

「En!」 – Me

Chapter 315

Fran and I appraise Dullahan as we rush towards Kuina, who is currently engaging her in fighting against Dullahan. Dullahan's weapon is indeed the Evil Stone Sword but his race is that of Ghost, unlike Valkyrie who was Evil God in name and race.

According to what Valkyrie said, it seems as long as one holds Evil Stone, it will devour their soul. Isn't it like a state of berserk? Well, not just the Evil Stone but, most times, Evil God-related anything can make the wielder go berserk. So if that's the case then we have to approach the Evil Stone Sword with caution.

But now, Dullahan doesn't appear to have gone berserk [2] at all. He's been fighting Kuina in complete silence, most likely due to the fact he is a Ghost now but... is he really going berserk?

No, something's wrong. Dullahan is a Ghost so perhaps the Evil Stone can't absorb his soul, after all, Ghosts are soulless creatures.

If I recall back in the floating island dungeon, the necromancer Jean talked about Ghosts. During that time, I knew little about soul-related things then.

Anything related to the soul is classified within the realm of God, and tends to be impossible for humans to manipulate them. If a creature dies, its soul is recalled by divine will. In layman's terms, it ascends to heaven.

At first glance, the Ghost Magic seems to manipulate the soul, however, it is not. The thing, that is manipulated by either the intense resentment rose from the remnants of magic or the magic stone controlled by the remnant spirit of the dead magic beast, is nothing more than a corpse, therefore, the Dullahan we are facing now should be soulless too. As for why the magic stone can manipulate the corpse, I think it must have something to do with the soul-like stuff created by the necromancer.

For that reason, the soul that can be devoured by the Evil Stone never been there, so Dullahan should not have gone berserk.

『So... if Fran and Mare are cut by that sword, wouldn't that be disastrous?』 – Me

That kind of weapon was able to turn Valkyrie just by her holding it, if Fran or Mare is cut by it, its aura would flow into their body. If that happens, wouldn't it swallow their soul up?

Even so, as long as the Evil stone's aura doesn't enter the body, the host's soul won't be dominated, right?

No, perhaps I'm too optimistic.

(ShiShou...)

『Fran, did you notice something as well?』 — Me

Around Kuina, an evil aura is perceived. The appraisal about Kuina showed that she had been infected by the evil aura. And on her shoulder, the extremely small wound is beginning to stain black.

I tell Fran what I just discovered, and remind her to be careful.

『Fran don't let the Evil Stone Sword touch you, otherwise you might be eroded from within like Valkyrie!』

(Understood!)

I don't know whether Recovery Magic or Purification Magic can clear the evil aura. Fran lets Mare know what I passed onto her and reminds her to be careful, but as I was contemplating whether to tell Mare about Kuina has been influenced by the evil aura...

「What! Kuina has been... by that sword? NuOo! I'm coming now, Kuina!」 — Mare

『Ah-, she's off.』 — Me

Well, can't be helped, we just have to help.

『Fran, as you saw, Mare's power is enormous. Let's leave the offense to her and in-turn we will provide support.』 — Me

Brilliant Lighting Rush will be needed for the final blow against Dullahan's the Evil Stone so I want to avoid using it right off the bat.

「Got it!」 — Fran

Mare has already cut into the battle between Kuina and Dullahan.

[Kuina! I've come to help!] — Mare

[My Lady, be wary of that sword, everytime it cut me, I could feel my body being affected by something.] — Kuina

[I know, just act as support!] — Mare

[Yes!] — Kuina

Upon hearing Mare's words, Kuina steps back obediently. This is not just a master-servant relationship between a princess and a guard, I can clearly feel Kuina's trust in Mare, She has no doubt as to Mare's ability to protect her.

「It's a Ghost, it can't feel pain. Now, my illusions can't affect it. It's different than fighting a person.」 — Kuina

「Yeah, you are quite incompatible with Dullahan.」 — Mare

「Didn't I say that from the start?」 — Kuina

「Nevermind that, just give me some support!」 — Mare

「Understood!」 — Kuina

Just as you would expect, their coordination is excellent. Mare releases her flame, while Kuina moves to Dullahan's blindspots to attack. Mare's attack never gets in the way of Kuina, and similarly, because of Kuina, Dullahan's balance is off, unable to attack Mare.

「Dorya!」 — Kuina

「——」 — Dullahan

Kuina sneaks behind Dullahan who is too busy with Mare's flame to notice her, then, unbelievably, she manages to grab and swing Dullahan with just one hand, effortlessly.

Dullahan's body rises in the air shortly before crashing back down, and without missing a beat, Mare unleashes a flame explosion, blowing him away again.

Kuina skillfully evades being caught by the explosion and retreats out of its reach. What flawless coordination.

Dullahan slowly rose, unable to determine whether he took damage. Even though he was much weaker than Valkyrie in terms of fighting, his durability was still formidable and he is wielding the Evil Stone Sword. It would be best to team up with Mare and it seems like she has the same idea, already she's begun to cover herself with the pale flames, all-the-while instructing Kuina and Fran.

「We have to go all out again, can you handle it Fran?」 — Mare

「Un!」 — Fran

「Kuina, you block his shield!」 – Mare

「Understood!」 — Kuina

Everything plays out like last time, Mare uses Pale Inferno, Fran uses Kanna Kamui, and I use Broken Sky from the back. As I'm thinking the tactics...

「Fran!」 – Mare

「En?」 – Fran

「Is it okay to let me destroy this guy? You killed Valkyrie last time, didn't you?」 — Mare

Come to think, Mare is also improving her EP to get stronger. Just like Manticore, Mare is more interested in EP than materials (refers to magic stone).

「Will the one who strikes the final blow get EP?」 – Mare

「I don't know! But the winner will obviously get a lot of EP.」 – Fran

「Then... I'll give you the magic beasts and evil beings, can you leave this one to me?」 – Mare

「What? You such a greedy fellow! Fine, I'll give you, no point arguing over it.」 — Fran

「Thanks.」 – Mare

「Don't mention it, as the older one, I have to act the part.」 – Fran

Seems like it's easy to pull her strings if you bring up acting like a senpai.

While Fran and Mare were talking, Kuina was able to rid Dullahan of his shield. She created an opening with illusion magic, grabbed the shield, and threw it far away,

「That's it! Destroy the enemy! Pale Inferno!」 – Mare

「Haaa!」 – Fran

Following Mare's Pale Inferno was Fran's Kanna Kamui. Fran strained to release and as such was only about half as powerful as my Kanna Kamui.

Still, since the Evil Stone we fought before required a lot to defeat, in fact, this kind of attack would be overkill for normal ordinary enemies. And even though we agreed to let Mare finish it off, I'm still hoping the magic stone isn't evaporated.

Going all out was the right choice. The Evil Stone Sword, persistent to the end, unleashed a barrier to protect the shieldless Dullahan, but even then, the combination of Kanna Kamui and Pale Inferno crushed the barrier and struck Dullahan directly, resulting in an explosion.

Before the explosion and flames could settle, Fran rushed straight towards Dullahan, raising me above her shoulders.

『Sword Lord Techniques · Broken Sky』

「——」 – Dullahan

Mare's flames engulf my body as I cut through Dullahans armor. I slice through the thick armor easily, as easy as cutting tofu, ripping Dullahan apart. Is this the power of the Sword Lord Techniques?

However, after killing Dullahan, spider web like cracks began to appear on my blade. Sword Lord Techniques seem to cause a tremendous load on it. But I could heal instantly even while I was melted by Mare's flames, so this damage is just a piece of cake. If I was a normal sword, however, I would've turned to a fine powder before even hitting the rival with that technique.

The impact of this time totally can't be compared to the time when Fran used Broken Sky on Valkyrie. The previous attack is at best half as durable as it's now, but this time's attacking power almost gets me into a devastating crisis, Maybe it's due to the fact that I'm not very proficient in the Sword Lord Techniques. Still, it's strange that only Fran can exert my actual strength.

The terrible splitting and cracking sounded, and the fissures on my blade expanded. Even so, I did feel the feeling of shattering Dullahan's magic stone. The magic power was flowing.

The terrible sound of metal splitting and cracking resounded, and the cracks on my blade expanded into fissures, but even still, I felt the shattering of Dullahan's magic stone while the magic power was flowing into me.

『Gotcha! Magic Stone!』 – Me

Chapter 316

Translator: Makisima

Proofreader: B.D.

My name is Kuina, I serve the Beastkin's Country as a palace maid.

When I was two, I was brought to the nursery for maids within the palace but I can't remember anything before then. The nursery gathered orphans for education, those qualified would be chosen as maids while those who could not meet qualification by a certain age would be assigned to other departments.

The training was so harsh that it was not uncommon to die, but even with poor performance, as long as you stayed alive, you wouldn't be abandoned. If it was an orphan shelter, it would be considered kind.

The qualifier to become a maid is combat power, and thanks to my talent in fighting, I was chosen to become one. I trained with my predecessors until the age of 14, whereafter I was introduced to my lady. I will always remember the first time I was introduced to the newly born lady.

The feeling I felt was indescribable. It wasn't just her loveliness nor the feeling of nervousness that I felt, although those were present.

It is well known that the children of the Red Cat Tribe have gold or red hair and yellow-tinted skin, and their eyes are mostly gold, silver, cyan, and brown, this includes members of the Royal Family.

However, my lady's hair and skin are snow-white and her eyes red. When we first met, I couldn't tell her race for a moment. It was surreal.

I didn't know at the time, but my Lady was a rare variant called White Shrine Maiden[1].

Everyone present was happy while gazing at the newly born girl. Those born White Shrine Maiden gain special skills or abilities at birth, and the white flame held by my lady is a strong unique skill bestowed by the gods. According to scholars who came to study the skill, it surpasses the golden flame in power.

With such power came high expectations and annoying people. There were those who wanted her to use that power to destroy the Kingdom of Bashar and others who want my lady to use the power to help themselves.

Those with malicious intentions began to spread bad rumors about the Kingdom of Bashar in hopes to infect my lady, but the Beast Lord, despite being a muscle head, thought of my lady's happiness and came up with a plan so as not to crush my lady with expectations.

In response, my Lord arranged Bodyguards[2] for my lady and also granted her freedom outside the palace. I was the only one entrusted to accompany her outside and despite the dangers, my lady gained freedom, and a life better than being stuck inside the palace.

Here, she grew up healthy and my lady who had been spoiled when she was born, turned out to be an exceptional fighter. By the time she turned 13, she had become strong enough to crush a dungeon.

When it happened, I was amazed. My lady was still not proficient in controlling her skill and accidentally made the skill go berserk. That E-rank dungeon, in just a short time, was annihilated.

This all happened in a dungeon near a small town. The local adventurers guild discovered Magical Beasts preparing to stampede, and my lady, who had been taught it was the nobles duty to protect her country, rushed to their aide.

Upon entering the dungeon, we encountered a stream of magic beasts rushing to exit, here my lady unleashed her skill. I told her she could withdraw and leave it to the adventurers, they could have handled it, but she was still in a rebellious phase at the time.

Just a bravado, my lady unleashed her skill, which spread and swallowed the entire dungeon. From the entrance, all the mid-level magic beasts inside were engulfed by the white flame, and the size of the dungeon worked to my lady's advantage as the corridors were tight. In the face of the White Flame, even beasts ranked E and D could do nothing to stop her.

Although all adventurers survived in the end, the dungeon core was ruined, completely dead, so it was all in vain.

Through this event, my lady earned a lot of experience and gained her evolution, and with it a new title; Not Dungeon Traveler, but Dungeon Tyrant. You could feel the gods' influence in that.

My lady's eagerness to help would sometimes cause trouble for people, but at the end of the day, things turned out ok.

The only problem I could see was that she didn't have friends her age. Well, to begin with, she's too powerful when compared to those her age and her royal status would make those around her treat her with a sense of dignity.

Despite all that, my lady finally found someone who could be her friend.

We came across the rumored Black Lightning Princess in our travels. Since hearing the rumor, I had been wondering if she would become my lady's friend. Ah but to suddenly start fighting... my illusion of my lady with a friend began to crumble and it was a little hard to take in.

Fran was as fond of fighting as My lady and they got along well, but when I brought up that they were friends, they got angry and called themselves rivals instead. Honestly, it's hard to know what goes on inside the brain of a meathead.

After parting ways from Fran, we headed south to join the war against the Kingdom of Bashar but were rejected. Well, that was to be expected, with the Beast Lords' absence, they could not afford to send someone from the royal family to the front lines, lest they were prepared to bear full responsibility.

Since we couldn't join the front lines, we ended up helping around at a supply base near the back.

My Lady's mood gradually deteriorated and I did my best to appease her, but the moment I brought up following Fran, she instantly lit up. What a simple girl, perhaps I can use this in the future?

Although we immediately headed north, there were no signs of catching up to Fran. It was during our journey we found out she had been involved in a riot for unknown reasons but when we arrived, we only heard that she had already left.

Finally, once we had a clear idea of where they would be next, we sped up, and even triggered Awakening, however, Fran's Demonic Wolf's[3] speed surpasses what we expected, and just as we were catching up...

We found something terrible at the location.

The place, Greengoat, was in a major panic with its people rushing to leave. According to the lord, a large number of Magic Beasts were approaching from the north.

Could it be a riot? If so, perhaps the Kingdom of Bashar is involved, it seems like Fran and other adventurers had been attacked by assassins so perhaps the two are linked. I wouldn't put it past them to send out assassins but if that's the case, shouldn't the adventurers be heading south not north?

Most of the adventurers in this country are battle-hungry and would take the double payback to the enemy. As a result, most of them were heading for the Kingdom of Bashar, leaving the rear undermanned.

Well, no matter, My Lady was in high spirits and after we learned that the remaining adventurers headed north, we set out immediately as well.

Along the way, we discovered two more groups apart from the one we were aware of.

One of the groups had already been intercepted, it seems there were some powerful foes, but the adventurers were good as well. We could join but would that be overkill? Instead, My Lady and I headed towards the last group that was a bit smaller.

The most shocking thing we encountered was the large number of magic beasts and evil beings riding them all wore similar equipment and were led by their commander, Dullahan. They were even able to properly follow orders and form battle tactics, however, even with all that they were no match for us. After we took out their Dullahan, the rest of the forces were easily dealt with.

After we finished wiping the remaining magic beasts, we continued north, trying to investigate the source, and as we proceeded, My Lady grew along with Llinde, and things became easier.

However, what was supposed to be a simple investigation turned out to be something more urgent. What we found was Fran surrounded by a large number of Evil Beings, holding them back on her own.

Of course, My Lady wouldn't be content with just investigating, and she would not let Fran fight alone so we joined the battle.

But, why did my opponent have to be the heavily armored Dullahan? To be honest, the kind of enemy is hard to beat with my skills. The main problem is that I don't have a way to end the fight. My fighting style revolves around assassination and pinpointing the enemies weakness, but that doesn't due to well against tanky ghosts.

However, since My Lady told me to do it, there is no reason to refuse.

「My lady has requested me to stop you.」

「——」

「Ok, fine. This silent ghost is so boring.」

「——」

「Whatever, guess it can't be helped, maybe I'll take this chance to learn to fight quietly.」

My life's motto is cut corners whenever possible but, in order to live up to my lady's expectations, I will go all out.

Chapter 317

After devouring Dullahan's magic stone, I receive a huge number of points. I think this confirms that the reason Valkyrie didn't have a lot of points was that her soul had been consumed and the result weakened her Magic Stone.

I was able to get enough points, enough so that I was almost at another evolution, and I also got a lot of skills. Most of the skills came from the evil beings and I was able to get Mental Abnormalities resistances.

「Well then, let's take care of the remaining enemies, Fran, this time let me provide support.」 — Mare

「Copy that!」 — Fran

「Alright, I'll leave it to you.」 — Mare

「En!」 — Fran

「I can't awaken anymore, but these kinds of small fries will still be a piece of cake.」 — Mare 「1」

「My lady, use this.」 — Kuina

「An Awakening Potion?」 — Mare

「Yes, I Figured something like this might happen so I came prepared」 — Kuina

Kuina hands Mare what seems to be a magic potion, just where did she pull that out from?

If I'm not mistaken, she took it from under her skirt, that thing is so mysterious.

「An Awakening potion.」

Looks to be a potion that allows one to use Awakening again. Normally, Awakening in exchange for power forces a heavy strain on the body, using it multiple times is tough, and it's even tougher if one is already physically tired, but that potion removes the strain caused by Awakening allowing one to use it again.

However, sounds fishy to force Awakening, I wonder what other side effects there might be.

「Does it has any side effects?」

「It's ok to drink it once. The only thing that happens is your sense of smell deteriorates for a few days.」

I guess if you were a Magic Beast that would be kinda bad, but then again, the upside is being able to Awaken again, so I guess it's actually a good trade.

「The Magic Beasts are scattering.」

Just as she said, the Magic Beast have begun to flee, despite that, the remaining Evil Beings are still willing to fight. If possible, we should wipe them out here before they can escape.

Even if a security force has been sent to protect the refugees, their power is still not enough to take care of that many Magic Beasts. 「2」

『We can't let them get away.』

The Ramparts we built with Great Wall are still relatively intact, there are a few holes that were made by Valkyrie but those can be repaired, and once that's done, we can use the wall to destroy the Magic Beast.

Using magic, we drive the Magic Beasts and Evil beings into the walls we build to restrict their movement. They rush towards the bottleneck, trying to break through, but of course, that's blocked.

Magic beings get pushed to the wall and a large number of them fall within a ditch. Before they can climb out, we bury them inside with earth magic. So far, things are going as planned.

In the first place, the Magic Beast has fallen into utter chaos. They have been attacked by Fran and me, pressed by Llinde, and saw their commanders slain.

And now, driven by Mare and Frans magic, the Evil Beings also fall into chaos and join the Magic Beast in ramming the wall.

「Good job Fran! This way it's easier to deal with all of them!」

Thus, Mare begins her slaughter.

Those within her reach she slashes with her sword, and for everyone else, she uses Fire Magic. Llinde also provides support from the air, similar to how Fran and I coordinate.

「KuOoooo!」

『What shall we do.....』

(Just be Mare's support)

『Of course but can't we kill a few?』

Mare would probably get angry if we go too far, but the Magic beast's stone is so tempting. Ok, destroying all the Magic beasts is a top priority, for now, besides, we can't be sure of victory yet, there's still that Murellia who commanded Valkyrie, so best save our strength.

We erect another Great wall, further pinning and surrounding the Magic beast who are trying to escape. I'm a little reluctant to use magic, but it's more important to destroy the current Magic Beasts.

「Haaaa!」

『Transformation!』

Fran and I kill those Magic Beasts near us and use Mana and Life Thief Skills to recover, then we continue caging the remaining Magic Beasts.

『Okay, that's it!』

「En!」

It took some time, but we manage to enclose the Evil Beings and Magic Beasts with Great Wall, now all that's left is to help Mare finish them off.

However, that may not be necessary as I can sense a large source of magic gathering inside the Great Wall.

Mare seems to be using the Golden Flame of Extinction, but there are also traces of white and gold enveloping her body so she's probably also using pale fire.

『Looks dangerous...』

「Think it will hit us?」

Fran and I stand above on the Great wall looking down on the Magic Beasts when Kuina rushes past us and warns us to run away.

「It's going to hit everyone! We have to get away!」

It seems even Kuina, who has been fighting alongside Mare, is wary of the powerful technique. Above, I also notice Llinde retreating high in the air.

『Fran, we have to run away now!』

「En!」

We follow Kuina in a hurry, then....

From the other side of the Great Wall, a huge pillar of fire rises, from far away, it resembles a volcanic eruption.

The wall itself can't sustain the level of power and heat from Mare's attack and with a 'Buku Buku' sound, it begins to crumble and melt.

『Waa.....』

If we hadn't moved, either the explosion would engulf us or we would be swallowed up by the Magma from the wall melting.

「Mare is really energetic today. Such an attack is beyond imagination.」

「She went too far.」

Fran Kuina and I managed to get away and are now watching the gold-white pillar of fire continue to rise. A Maelstrom of heat ravages the wall, and neither Magic Beast nor Evil Beings are likely to survive. Truly there is no better word than 'Annihilation'. What should have still been over 1000 Magic Beasts have been wiped with one blow.

「Will mare be ok?」

She'll be fine but may become a bit tired. Her flames cannot harm her but that's what led her to be a bit careless. Since she can't hurt herself, she has little disregard to her vicinity and has caused problems, perhaps I should properly "educate" her later.

That's seriously scary, I sure hope Kuina's "Education" gets through to Mare, but for now, the battle ends at last and finally, we can take a moment to relax.

TL's Notes:

「1」 In Ch.314 – Evil Stone, Mare had exhausted her Awakening status through her use of the Golden Interception Flame and so wasn't able to reuse it again.

「2」 In Ch. 310 – Mare and Kuina Join the Battle, Mare has sent a message to the Lord of Greengrass, asking him to dispatch security force to protect the refugees.

「My Lady, do you have any excuses for getting us involved?」

Kuina complained quietly to Mare, who rushed to Fran triumphantly after wiping out magic beasts and evil beings with her overpowered flame attack. Well, preaching is also fine.

「Well, that... I knew you would make it out. You aren't hurt anywhere right?」 — Mare

「We almost got swallowed by the wave of lava.」 — Kuina

「Er, that...」 — Mare

「To begin with, was it necessary to launch such a powerful attack? Ms. Fran took the trouble of trapping them, wasn't there a more efficient way to annihilate them?」 — Kuina

「About that...」 — Mare

「Besides, please look here」 — Kuina

Kuina pointed gently to her cheek.

What! It still the same as usual. Mare also had no idea what Kuina was talking about, tilting her head.

「Hmmm?」 — Mare

「Please, take a closer look.」 – Kuina

「Yeah, I'm looking...」 – Mare

「There's some dirt!」 — Kuina

「Who cares! Isn't it natural to get dirty in battle?」 – Mare

「The fact that it was caused by an ally and not the enemy makes it worse don't you think?」 – Kuina

「Alright fine, what a sensitive person! Let's discuss how to move forward.」 — Mare

Mare tries to change the topic, and Kuina, seeing Mare properly flustered, seems satisfied and goes along.

「Well, tea first.」 – Kuina

「Hey! Ain't this a battlefield?」 — Mare

So quick to adapt! Rather, why tea within this battlefield? That even took Mare by surprise, but Kuina still responds calmly.

「I believe you should take a break whenever you can.」 — Kuina

「Hmmm.....makes sense.」 – Mare

「Yes.」 — Kuina

She was convinced?! Kuina pulls a table from nowhere and lines up several teacups with grace. Then, she pours hot, black tea from a teapot. Mare takes a seat and relaxes on a chair that also appeared out of nowhere.

「I expected something like this might happen, so I prepared Beast Flower Tea. Its magic effect will alleviate the burden of awakening.」 — Kuina

「Ahm that will help greatly. As expected.」 – Mare

「Ms. Fran, won't you join us? We have scones.」 — Kuina

「Sorry, I've got to deal with the detached force.」 — Fran

Fran turned back after rejecting the offer, but after a few steps, her body began to shake, showing signs of collapsing.

『H-Hey! Fran, are you all right?』 – Shishou

「En.」 – Fran

Although Fran nodded to affirm she was alright, she looked pale. The tension of the battle and her willingness to save her people caused her to forget fatigue, and her body is approaching its limits. I should have noticed.

「If you fight like this, you won't be able to exert your power.」 – Kuina

「The tea is imbued with fatigue recovery effects, and it will also lessen the necessary time before you can awaken again, please give it a try.」 – Kuina

『Fran, take a break. Even if it's just 10 minutes, I myself feel a little tired as well, don't you?』 – Teacher

「.....En. Alright.」 – Fran

Fran complies with my proposal reluctantly, and Kuina brings out a chair for her. Once settle to take a break, the black tea and snacks catch her attention. She sniffs the sweet scones with great interest.

The scattered remains of charred magic beasts surround us, and the ground is still smoking from the lava in this battlefield, yet here is a tea party. Am I the only one who finds this crazy? After all, Fran, Mare, and Kuina all hold their tea cups as if it's natural.

Not only that, where did the tables, chairs, and black tea come from? I saw it with my own eyes they came from her skirt but... that's not where the potion bin came from. There is no space to even put these.

「Kuina, how did you get this?」 – Fran

「It's a skill. An innate skill of talented maids, 『Maid's Prudence』」 – Kuina

A skill similar to dimensional storage, however there are limits to what can be taken, those being only items that are indispensable in the line of work of a maid. Moreover, that has to be judged by the person themselves, but if one believes it is relevant to the work of being a maid, then it may be taken in. A good skill to have, but Dimensional storage makes it unnecessary.

Despite the drawbacks, it also has its advantages, one being that its a system skill rather than a Space/Time Skill. This means one can use it even when Space/Time Magic is being blocked.

「Among the royal maids, being able to store items is the first sign of mastery for a maid. Being prepared for all kinds of predicaments is what is the measure for a maid, and their reason to live.」

Their reason to live... The dedication of a maid is clearly evident.

「I almost forgot, I haven't formally introduced myself yet. My name's Nemea Narasimha, Princess to the country and an adventurer rank D. and the Golden Flame Lionkin.」 – Mare

「En. I am Fran, from the Black Cat Tribe. Adventurer rank C, and the Black Heavenly Tigerkin」 – Fran

「And this is my follower Kuina, and my companion Llinde.」 – Mare

「KuOOO!」 – Llinde

Llinde floats down, and looking closer, Llinde is really big. Even though his body is smaller than Urushi, his Wingspan makes him larger.

For the Dragonblade Linde to create such a huge dragon, it can't be a normal magic sword. It seems Mare had similar thoughts about me.

「By the way, Fran.」 – Mare

「En?」 – Fran

「What kind of sword is that?」 – Mare

Mare's bright eyes focused on me behind Fran.

「It's not just a magic sword, is it? What's the name?」 – Mare

「En.....」 – Fran

「Is it a divine sword?」 – Mare

What should we do? We could make up a lie but, I would like to be honest with someone who might become Fran's friend. Fran hesitates to answer and Mare continues speaking.

「Ah, hold on, It's not fair if only you tell me your secret, so I'll share mine as well. Then you can tell me yours, how about that?」 – Mare

「Secret? About you being a princess?」 – Fran

「Not that, something more amazing.」 – Mare

(ShiShou.....) – Fran

『Even if you ask me.....』 — ShiShou

Fran seems to want to tell Mare, but if Mare finds out, her being a member of the royal family might pass the information to the Beast Lord....

(Shishou, can't I?)

『.....Haa. It can't be helped.』

(Thanks)

How could I say no if she pleads like that? Well, I was hiding my identity to protect Fran from being targeted by others but if she feels its better to tell her, then theres no reason for me to object.

「Got it. Deal.」 – Fran

「Oh! Thank you very much. Well, first of all, start with my secret!」 – Mare

「My lady, Is that really okay?」 – Kuina

「Of course, Fran is trustworthy!」 – Mare

「Well my lady's intuition has always been spot on, so I have no objections.」 – Kuina

Kuina let out a sigh as she finished speaking, and I can't help but feel a little sorry for her. The secret of Mare being a princess is not something one would just tell freely, so I doubt she doesn't mind.

「As for the Dragonblade Llinde.....」 – Mare

「En」 – Fran

Mare's sword also holds a secret so I'm also curious, she takes it from her back and places it on the table.

「The original name of the sword is Violent Dragonblade · Llinde Wurm. It is one of the swords whose fame resounds throughout the world.」 – Mare

「!」 – Fran

And just like that, Mare tells Fran her secret.

「Violent Dragonblade · Llinde Wurm is the sword's true name. Its fame as one of the Divine Swords is known throughout the world.」 — Mare

「!」 — Fran

「Ha ha. Surprised?」 — Mare

「En!」 — Fran

Fran nods enthusiastically, how could one not be surprised? Appraisal only shows Dragonblade Llinde, however, that might be because it is such a high-rank item that Fran can't detect it. So, naturally, appraisal can't work on a divine sword and Mare is brimming with confidence.

「It's true. However, due to a lack of ability from the user, the true power of this divine sword can't be fully released.」 — Mare

A divine sword is not something that can be wielded half-assed. That's probably why Mare can't fully exert Llinde Wurm's true power.

But still, it's so unbelievable. I mean, that's a divine sword, a superweapon, a legendary sword that can destroy a whole country and now said the sword is in front of my eyes. It's still unbelievable.

In the first place, the ability isn't as shocking. Well, compared to a magic sword, it's on another realm, but not the same realm I imagine a divine sword. It just looks very adorable at the moment.

「It's true. I've had the Divine Blacksmith take a look at it.」 — Kuina

Kuina added. Her words remind me that this country has its Divine Blacksmith, so that means this sword is indeed a divine one.

『Really? It's a divine sword?.....!』

(Awesome!)

Truly this secret trumps Mare being a Princess. This information would affect the balance of the military balance of the world. It's surprising she would tell us so casually, guess that shows how much Mare trusts Fran.

『If that's the case, we have to be honest with you too.』

「Hm? What's that? Whose voice was that just now?」

Both Mare and Kuina appeared shocked upon hearing my voice.

「It was Shishou who spoke just now.」 — Fran

「Shishou? Do you mean your Shishou? Where is your Shishou now?」 — Kuina

「Are they invisible? I can't feel his aura at all.... What an astonishing skill」 — Mare

「Shishou is here.」 — Fran

Imitating Mare, Fran pulls me out and places me on the table next to Llindee, then begins my introduction again.

「This sword is Shishou.」 — Fran

「The sword your Shishou?」 — Mare

「Shishou is an Intelligent Weapon. A super sword.」 — Fran

『Nice to meet you. As the introduction goes, my name is Shishou. Just think of me as a talking sword.』 – Shishou

「Ooooo! Is the sword in front of me really talking?」 – Mare

「Amazing!」 – Kuina

Mare stood up in excitement, while Kuina remained calm as usual but still showed interest.

『Well, how's it going?』 — Shishou

「I'll be! Kuina, it's amazing! Is it truly an intelligent weapon? Ha ha ha!」 – Mare

『Well, I'm glad you're amazed but aren't you too surprised for the holder of a divine sword?』 — Shishou

「What do you mean? An intelligent weapon is something straight from a fairy tale you know?」 — Mare

『Yes, yes, but aren't divine swords the same? Besides, it's a mythical superweapon despite appearances.』 — Shishou

「It is true that divine swords are very powerful. However, while we don't know the exact amount, there are 26 confirmed in the whole world, meanwhile, an intelligent weapon is something that hasn't even been confirmed yet!

Original translation from dreampotato

Even if you say that it's hard to say I'm "Rarer" since divine swords surpass me in performance.

「En. Shishou is amazing.」 — Fran

「Yes. Even Kuina was shocked.」 – Mare

「Yes. To be honest, I am more surprised than when I first met Miss Fran.」 – Kuina

Her face remains expressionless, but Kuina's cheeks are a bit red and she seems excited.

「So what's the story behind your encounter with each other?」 — Kuina

「It was when I was a slave——」 – Fran

Fran begins recounting how we first met, and Mare seems touched. She uses a handkerchief Kuina hands her to wipe the tears and snot on her face.

「I see, I see! Fate brought you together. Zubi!」 — Mare

Note: Zubi – original text is 'ズビー', the sound of nose blowing.

Since the cats out of the bag, I also tell Mare about how I grow stronger by absorbing magic stones, how I don't know my origins, and that perhaps that Divine Blacksmith might know more about me.

「Know it all makes sense! I was wondering why Manticore's magic stone disappeared completely.」 — Mare

「Shishou absorbed it.」 — Fran

『Exactly!』 – Shishou

「But it's a really intelligent weapon. You even can grow.」 – Mare

「Llinde grew, too.」 – Fran

「Llinde was able to access more of its power as I got stronger. Technically, I'm the one who grew, but Shishou is truly getting stronger. You're so powerful now, becoming a Divine Sword is just around the corner.」 — Mare

The divine sword is the goal, isn't still too early? For that, we would need to annihilate the magic beast several times stronger than today's foes. Fran answers back confidently to Mare, however. If fond of I Was a Sword When I Reincarnated (WN), follow it in discord:

「Of course. Shishou is the best sword. And one day it will be the strongest.」 – Fran

「Ha ha ha! Let's see who comes first then. Me fully exerting Linde's power or Shishou growing to a sword that surpasses a divine sword.」 — Mare

「Huh! Of course, I will be the winner.」 – Fran

「Don't count me out yet! One day, as the legend tells, Llinde will grow to the form of a giant dragon capable of smashing a whole castle.」 — Mare

A whole castle? Its gotta be a dragon hundred of meters long. A water dragon just bigger than a ship is already threat level B, I would imagine a dragon hundreds of meters long must be above A. The amount of power required to summon such dragon must be amazing, truly deserving of its status as a divine sword.

But Fran believes I can surpass said sword. If that's the case, I can't give up before it starts. I will meet her expectations, this will be my new goal!

「Where did Mare obtain Llinde?」 – Fran

「I'm not like you. Our encounter wasn't very dramatic.」 – Mare

「Simply in testing my own power and exploring an excavated remains, I happened to find a hidden room that had not yet been discovered, where Llinde was.」 – Mare

「After that, because I thought it was a special sword, I asked the Divine Blacksmith to appraise it and found out that it was a divine sword.」 – Mare

Surely Mare was called out by the sword. She may think it was luck but maybe she was chosen? Kuina seems to agree, meanwhile Mare proudly recounts her story to Fran about how she got the divine sword.

Chapter 320

Translator: Makisima

Kuina faces Fran while Mare is recounting the time she met the divine sword. Kuina who was recently under the Evil specter's influence now appears energetic.

『Hmm? Oh, wait a minute. Is Kuina okay?』 – Shishou

「What's wrong?」 – Mare

『Just now, shouldn't Kuina still be in the evil specter's drunkenness?』 – Shishou

「Oo! That's right, I almost forgot about that! Are you okay?」 — Mare

「I'm all right, no problems. This evil specters drunkenness, I've heard of it before, but it's my first time experiencing it.」 — Kuina

Kuina seems to know the evil specter's drunkenness.

「The evil specters drunkenness is an abnormal status that occurs when one engages in a long battle with a powerful evil specter opponent, like those who are Kin to the Evil God. It's like having a hangover, but I'm not a heavy drinker so is this what a hangover feels like? Why people would bear onto themselves this state of pain is beyond me, drinkers are indeed fools.」 — Kuina.

It's not that everyone who drinks gets hangovers! Alcohol is just so delicious that some people drink a tad bit too much.

「Although its bad if left alone, now the source has been cut down, it will leave on its own. In fact, after my lady and Miss Fran took down Dullahan, its effects disappeared.」 – Kuina

As a matter of fact, when we used Mare's white flame and Frans Kanna Kamui to wipe out the evil stone sword I felt something. However, compared to the evil stone spear, the evil stone sword seemed much weaker in its effect, perhaps it was because it didn't absorb the soul of its host?

Just as I was thinking about the mystery of evil stone, Mare suddenly said.

「Speaking of which, why was Shishou left in that place, seemingly in the middle of a forest right? Did the blacksmith who created you place you there?」 – Mare

『No, it's not.』 – Shishou

I made sure to tell Mare and Kuina about my time being immovable and waking up within a pedestal inside the forest of exhaustion. I also told them how I used telekinesis to overthrow magic beasts until I fell back into the forest of exhaustion after tiring, but it's hard to explain being a reincarnator, besides its no more strange that what I am now, and I doubt its believable.

「As for the pedestal on Maookami Plains...」 – Kuina

『Do you know anything?』 – Shishou

「Dunno!」 – Kuina

So sad. Although Kuina has heard a little, she still doesn't know much about that. She had never even been to the Kuranzeru Kingdom, so it was reasonable for her not to know that place.

「By the way, Mr. Shishou is still very human as you even put yourself in a vegetative state due to your complacency.」 – Kuina

Ooops, Kuina is really sharp. Well, if one thinks about it more, they would come to that conclusion no? While I am inorganic as an intelligent weapon, I am able to think and communicate. And while I am not exactly the same as a human being there are similarities.

And if I evaluate myself objectively, I think I am very similar to human beings. Then, I can't help but wonder, was it really necessary to be forged like this?

「Shishou was a former human, so of course, he would think like one.」 – Fran

Fran, excuse me? Telling them even that? However, the thing about being a reincarnation would be too difficult to explain so let's leave it as the soul of a human sealed in a sword.

Nonetheless, the truth still surprised Mare and Kuina. Mare was struck dumb with astonishment and even jumped out of her chair in surprise.

「Is that true?」 – Mare

「En.」 – Fran

「The soul belongs to God's jurisdiction. That is to say, it is impossible to seal human souls in swords unless it is the god or the existence of god's level.」 – Mare

「Hmm! It seems Shishou is more than just a magic sword!」 – Mare

Really!? Well, we can't count that out. After all, I was reincarnated from another world, but could it really be the will of God? Well, if it isn't, it would be disgraceful to say it happened by accident. And if it is the case I would feel self-conscious.

「Well, Shishou can bestow skill onto Fran, and still use them, right?」 – Mare

『Why do you think so?』 – Shishou

「I've heard before about the so-called skill was just the power of the soul. So since Shishou possesses the soul of a human being, you should also be able to use your human-soul skills besides the Telepathic Communication and Telekinesis attached to the sword.」 – Mare

『Ma, I can use them indeed.』 – Shishou

「As expected! I can sense that the time gap of Fran's magic and skill use is unusual. I've been wondering if there's any secret in it.」 – Mare

Actually, the fact is that during the interval between Fran's launch of Sword Techniques, I kept releasing magic without a chant.

Without Accelerated Thought and Parallel Processing — No, even if one sued that, it would be impossible for a human to do it. Mare took note of that during the battle and assumed it was a special skill.

「So the flurry of blows was a result of multiple magic techniques right? Were those your skills Shishou?」 – Mare

『Ah ah.』 – Shishou

「That's so amazing! At first glance, it appears that only Fran is moving, but in fact, its both Shishou and Fran using Supreme Magic together. To be honest, even now you could be considered a quasi-divine sword...」 – Mare

『Ah, but I didn't do it in the mock battle with Mare. She just borrowed my skills.』 – Shishou

「I knew that. We (Fran and Mare) are two of a kind! Even if Shishou offered to help, Fran would not agree.」 – Mare

Mare knows! Is that so-called common sense between two battle junkies?

「After all. We are very similar. Our age is close, we are Lion and Tiger, and we both hold powerful swords and crave for battle, don't you agree Fran?」 – Mare

「En. Yes.」 – Fran

「Well, there you have it, it is that!」 – Mare

「En?」 – Fran

Mare was a little confused and began to talk about something inexplicable. And she suddenly began to be flushed. Faced with Mare now, Fran turned her head askew, at a loss.

「You know, that!」 – Mare

Fran is confused. What on earth did Mare want to say?

「My lady, I know you're embarrassed. But Ms. Fran won't understand you if you don't make it clear. Since you are very close to each other, it would be better yo just come out and say your friends.」 – Kuina

「What! What are you talking about!?!」 – Mare

Aha, Fran and I get why Mare was getting bashful. Despite our short time together, we knew that Mare's tsundere would get in the way of saying such things. So, Kuina definitely said that on purpose.

So Kuina was just teasing MAre to help her expose her intention. The ratio is 6:4 with Kuina mostly teasing.

But before Mare opens her mouth again, Fran spoke first.

「We fought together so that makes us friends.」 – Fran

「F, Fran...!」 – Mare

Friend or comrades? Well, comrades-in-arms are also kind of friends.

「So that's it? We are friends?」 – Mare

「En.」 – Fran

「Ah ah, my lady finally graduates from being a loner.」 – Kuina

Mare and Kuina appear touched, well, it's our pleasure as well, its good for Fran to have one more friend.

Chapter 321

CHAPTER 321

The New Evil

“Now then, our strength should be about recovered. Shall we get moving?”

“Nn. Will go to the detachment force.”

“I agree that they shouldn’t be left alone, but wouldn’t it be better to check out where the monsters appeared to the north?”

But Fran shook her head.

“Will do later. Everyone’s safety is first.”

“Fumu. Then we’ll deal with the detachment first.”

“Then, please wait a moment.”

Kuina stores the table in her skirt like some sort of magic trick. If the skill is similar to Dimensional Storage, shouldn’t she be able to store it on the spot?

“Why do you go through the trouble of putting it up your skirt?”

“As a maid, it’s a matter of taste.”

I don’t get it. But I do know there’s something weird about that.

“Shall we get going? Come, Linde!”

“KUOOOOOOOOO!”

“If it’s at your current strength, you should be able to carry 3 people!”

“KUO!”

If we ride on Linde’s back, who is capable of moving at high speeds, we should be able to cover a lot of ground quickly.

“The battle is over, isn’t he acting kind of weir- !?!”

“Nn!”

Immediately after being summoned by Mare, Linde cried out in alarm. We all simultaneously turned our gaze to the northern sky. A huge magical presence. A magic signal so strong we understood exactly how ridiculous it was even from this distance was heading straight towards us. It’s moving at least as fast as Linde.

“Somethings coming!”

“Nn!”

This ridiculous presence is going to reach us in no time. This aggressive and intimidating magic power was strong enough to prick our skin.

“Hey, hey... seriously?! This presence makes the Valkyrie seem adorable....”

Fran and Mare are practically breathing in magical energy at this point. But in that moment, the magical presence instantly changed. The magic that was so strong it scared us shitless was suppressed to a bearable level.

It’s as if the gods of evil themselves had appeared, such a deeply frightening evil. The Evil Lord was there, standing in the sky. To its left and right were multiple shadows, which seemed to be followers.

Though, the most surprising thing wasn’t the overwhelming evil presence. This angry Evil Lord was a pretty girl. And besides that, don’t they look kinda familiar?

“... A black catkin.”

Yep, just like Fran, the mysterious girl that was bleeding evil had the distinct characteristics of a black catkin.

“If you are so weak as to be defeated by a mere 3 people you are useless to me. No matter. At least serve as my sustenance.”

As the girl declared such with a strange sounding voice, the corpses of the monsters around began to shine. Strangely enough, the light given off by the corpses didn't cast a single shadow.

As it turns out, a huge amount of magic began flowing into the girl. Apparently, she was using some sort of method to absorb the magical power from the monsters and Evil Beings. I could feel that her magical power had increased slightly.

It's important to note, I say “slightly” because she had an immense amount of magic power to begin with, but to us it was a huge amount of magic power. If you have 10 billion yen, you might not think much of getting another million, but for most people it's a ton of money. Such is the comparison.

It seems the magic stones I absorbed and the materials we put in Dimensional Storage weren't absorbed. That was the only good news.

The girl began to descend from the air as if she was on an invisible elevator. On both sides of her, two beautiful women of an unknown age materialized, and behind them are two huge knights wearing full armor. The girl's magic power was overwhelming so it was hard to notice, but her followers also had tremendous power. As I looked closer, I can see that the two women are Valkyries and the two knights are Dullahans.

I was struggling with the appraisal results. Because they were actually stronger than the Valkyrie we fought. The Dullahan's ability is almost equal to it. Numerically speaking, compared to the army we just destroyed, they were far fewer. But in terms of power, the army couldn't even compare.

Fran typically never talks. Unless she is prompted to, she usually never even speaks a single word. But it can't be helped. The enemy is too strong.

“ ... Who?”

Even if she isn't yelling, I'm still on edge. It seems like the encounter with the Beast King gave her resistance to fearing the strong, the cat girl in front of us is on a whole different level compared to him.

“Ohoho. My name is Murellia! You didn't know?”

“Nn, knew.”

“Oh? Is that so?”

As Fran says so, Murellia smiles happily. Murellia was the name of the master named by Valkyrie! Is this her? I tried appraising her, but didn't receive a result.

“Ufufu. Isn't that a bit rude? Could you stop trying to Appraise me? It's no use~”

Damn, she has Appraisal Detection and Appraisal Block at a level that invalidates my Eye of Empyrea? Really, who is this girl?

“I wonder where you heard my name from~?”

“Heard from Valkyrie.”

“Ah... so that was it.”

Apparently, Fran's answer wasn't the one she wanted. She was clearly disappointed. However, Mare seemed astonished and stared at Murelia.

“Murellia the black catkin??”

“Oh? Has that young lady over there heard of me?”

“Are you telling the truth?”

“Well now, I suppose that depends on which Murellia you’re talking about~”

“ ... the princess obsessed with the Evil God.”

“ Bingo!”

“Mare, who?”

There’s no other asshole it could be. When I heard Mera’s explanation, I knew beyond a doubt.

“She’s the one that caused the black catkin tribe to be punished by the gods 500 years ago.”

Chapter 322

CHAPTER 322

Murellia and the Royal Family

“She’s the one that caused the black catkin tribe to be punished by the gods 500 years ago.”

Did she just say 500 years ago? In that case, this girl has been alive for all this time? Even if she’s awakened, her lifespan shouldn’t be anywhere near that long...

“Ah, if you know my story, please regale her with tales of my greatness!”

Murelia sucked in her chin as she said so.

“... I’m not sure how much of it is legend and how much is truth.”

Mare mutters, and tells Fran and I the story of Murellia. Apparently the story was passed down in the form of tradition, so she was unsure how much of it was accurate.

Even if she says that, almost every tradition and book related to the Black Catkin Tribe were erased by the previous Beast King, so the credibility of anything remaining would be quite low.

“Do you know why the Black Catkin Tribe was punished by the gods?”

“Tried to use Evil God’s power.”

We haven’t heard the whole story, but we at least know that the tribe tried to get the blessing of the Evil God.

“That’s right. But, there’s more to the story; It’s said that the only reason the Beast King at the time drove the Black Catkin Tribe to do such a thing is because Murellia pushed him to do so.”

500 years ago, when the Beast King that was ruling the Black Catkin Tribe at the time tried to harness the power of the Evil God, it seems that he wasn’t actually trying to grant its power to the whole tribe in the beginning. At first, they only intended to harness its power solely for the royal family in order to further solidify their rule.

During this period, it was Murellia that ignited the king’s ambition. At the time, she was a B Rank Adventurer known as the Thunder Emperor who gained power that was in no way inferior to an A Rank as a result of gaining the blessing of the Evil God. Though, it was said that her abilities went far what ought to be capable of a mortal.

The Beast King, who bore full witness to the fruits of Murellia’s transformation, became obsessed with bestowing the same abilities to others in the Black Catkin Tribe. With the backing of the Beast King, Murrelia wielded her authority to force countless Black Catkin into accepting the power of the Evil God. At the same time, she executed Black Catkins that spoke out against the royal family and began to actively suppress the other beast tribe races.

“As a result, the name of Murellia has been cursed and despised, and has been passed down through the royal family as a dangerous person for generations. That’s all I can say for certain.”

In other words, she’s the one who pushed the royal family into invoking the wrath of the gods, and who left legends of various misdeeds and atrocities. Why the hell is such a person here in the first place?

Murellia listened attentively as Mare recounted her legend. Despite all the slandering and bad mouthing involved in it, she actually doesn’t seem to care that much. However, partway through the story her expression dropped. Soon after Mare finished, she opened her mouth.

“My version of the story is a bit different, but no matter. Rather, are you a Red Lionkin tribal chief?”

“Indeed I am.”

Mera seemed to feel something in the tone Murellia used, and answered carefully. No, if you think about it, it's a given that Murellia doesn't have benevolent feelings towards Mare.

After all, when the Black Catkin Tribe earned the wrath of the gods and were wiped from history it was the current royal family, the Red Lionkin Tribe, that erased their existence and took their throne.

There isn't a reason in the world for the two of them to get along. Rather, if this goes on much longer they might go for each other's throats.

“I guess that's true... Fufufufu.”

“Are you really the Thunder Emperor Murellia?”

“Of course. Indeed, I am the second princess of the Beast King, the Thunder Emperor Murellia.”

“I'm afraid you're wrong there. The time has long since passed when you were royalty.”

“Wrong. The Krishna family still retains its royal standing. Rather, it's you throne-snatching imposters that have overstayed your welcome.”

Well, I figured it'd be like this. While Murellia and Mare enthusiastically exchange insults Fran asks Murellia a question.

“Why did you do this?”

“You, has anyone ever told you that you don't use enough words? Well, I know what you were trying to say. It goes without saying that my goal is to get rid of the usurpers, and restore the prestige of the Black Catkin Tribe! And to once again create a paradise for our kind!”

I have to admit, I was a little thrown off when I heard her say that. Didn't the legends regarding her write her off as wicked and malicious? I could've sworn she was an enemy of ours...

Is she trying to save the persecuted members of the Black Catkin Tribes? Sure, she forced the residents of Schwarzkatz to evacuate, but we don't have any proof she was planning to attack it to begin with...

It seems that Fran is thinking along the same lines, and asks Murellia more questions.

"You want to help Black Catkin? But, now Beast King and Black Catkin are allies."

"What do you mean by that?"

The answer comes from Mare.

"The persecution of Black Catkin among the beastmen is coming to an end. And, thanks to Fran, they now know the method to evolve."

"Hmm..."

Even as the two of them explain it, Murellia only tilts her head.

"So?"

"You did this to save Black Catkin?"

"Oh, I get it. You're wondering why I tried to attack the Black Catkin Village."

"Nn."

"Ufufufu. It goes without saying that the worms that have lost their pride and fell to living with the other tribes have no right to call themselves Black Catkin any longer."

"Wh-"

She said something like that. The only comparison I can think of is going out of your way to exterminate pests that have already left your house, where's the logic in doing that? No, besides being an enemy, it seems like she has a few loose screws flying around.

“B-But, no point in paradise if you kill all Black Cats?”

“Gahahaha! Something as trivial as that, as long as you use the power of the dungeon, you can do anything!”

Come to think of it, we did hear that there was a dungeon involved somewhere in this mess. But using a dungeon requires tremendous resources. Exploiting one would be no easy task.

“... Really tried to attack everyone?”

“Yes, yes! But you are different!”

Murellia exclaimed as she pointed at Fran.

“You managed to evolve marvelously, and you're still growing! If you follow me, I will guarantee your safety and your life!”

Even though the lives of Fran, Mare, And Kuina were all just threatened I don't feel the slightest bit upset. I don't feel like we can lose here. Rather, my sight is rather clear right now.

In reply to Murellia, who believed with full confidence Fran would take her hand, Fran offered these words.

“Sorry, die.”

Chapter 323

CHAPTER 323

The Difference Between Us

“Sorry, rather die.”

Fran flatly refuses Murellia’s friendly offer with a cold voice. As soon as those words were spoken, Murellia’s face changes completely.

“Haa? Do you understand what you’re saying? I’m saying I’ll let you become my slave. You’d refuse that? Are you sane?”

Even in the face of Murellia’s wrath, Fran didn’t budge an inch. Right now, we’re up against an angry opponent with an unbelievably overwhelming amount of power, there’s no one who’d blame Fran for being scared right now. Even so, after being told that Murellia planned to kill the entire village, Fran was far angrier. Even if she didn’t appear frightening, at this moment Fran’s anger could swallow Murellia’s whole.

The Valkyries flanking Murellia began to react to Fran’s fury.

“Quite a feisty little cub, isn’t she?”

“She certainly seems to be struggling with her feelings quite a bit.”

“Really. There’s nothing quite as unsightly as the struggling of a small fry.”

“Girl. Shouldn’t you be begging for your life right about now? If you struggled against our talentless little sister, there’s no way you can beat us.”

“That’s right! If you beg for our forgiveness right now, I’ll forgive you after only 3 days of torture!”

3 days of torture, huh... If these guys are serious, it might actually be better to just die, like Fran says. These women are absolute sadists.

But, talentless little sister? Are these two related to the Valkyrie we fought earlier? Fran’s questioning confirms my thoughts.

“Mm, that’s right. She wasn’t even worthy enough to receive a name from our lord.”

“Being the sister of someone like her though, it’s kinda embarrassing...”

“Can you believe that she got destroyed by this tiny runt after complaining to Lord Murellia and leaving the main army? Talk about shameful...”

“Aren’t we three sisters such a mess?”

As they said while they were bantering, these Valkyries not only had racial names, but individual names as well. Sigrun and Rossweiss. It’s quite similar to Urushi’s circumstances. If they were named by someone as powerful as Murellia, their power would be equivalently raised to new heights.

That should be the case, but when I appraised the two of them earlier I only briefly glanced at their status and some of their skills. My memory isn’t good enough to compare the difference between them and Valkyrie we fought earlier. I really want to check it again, but Murellia has appraisal detection. I can’t carelessly appraise or I’ll get caught...

All I remember is that they seem to have higher stats and skills than the one we fought, and I confirmed that they have that troublesome War Maiden skill...

“I wonder if this brat can even comprehend the difference between our power? I wouldn’t want to make such a small fry one of my servants.”

“No, Lord Murellia. It seems that, unfortunately, she refused your offer in spite of knowing the gap in power between you two.”

“Huh? Then why?”

“I am unsure. Normally, if Lord Murellia made someone such an offer, it would be only natural for them to shed tears and be happy...”

As expected as one of the Valkyries, she’s dead serious. It seems that their loyalty towards Murellia borders on fanaticism.

“Hmm, then, maybe I should show off some of my strength? Fufufu, girl! Gaze upon my terrifying powers and tremble!”

Upon saying so, she began suddenly chanting. It seems that she at least doesn’t have Chantless or Silent Casting. But that aside, I know this spell. It’s one that I’ve cast many times. Which is exactly why I couldn’t ignore this.

[Fran! Mare! Stop her! She’s casting Kanna Kamui!]

“Nn! Hah!”

“Ku-!”

It seems that Fran noticed and started taking action even before I sent out the warning. Mare was also moving to cut down Murellia.

“Oh~? You’re familiar with this spell?”

“It seems that they have a better knowledge of magecraft than we thought?”

“Though, that doesn’t mean we’ll let you disturb our Lord.”

Fran and Mare jumped out towards Murellia, but were immediately intercepted by the Valkyrie sisters and the Dullahans. As we suspected, we weren’t going to be able to get through them instantly.

But that isn't a big problem. While we occupied her escorts, Kuina slipped behind us and was approaching Murelia. This was a surprise attack that used Illusion Magic at a level that I couldn't even detect her movements.

"Tch, a barrier."

However, Kuina wasn't able to penetrate the barriers surrounding Murellia and was repelled. It seems that, as I thought, we weren't going to be able to go straight for the boss from the get-go.

At this moment, the chanting that was being woven from Murellia finally reached completion.

"-Kanna Kamui!"

In response to her invocations, the heavens split open and poured out a screaming white light... Wait, isn't something a bit strange?

Normally, it would make sense to think that she would such a spell quite a bit away away from us. After all, she was using it as a threat.

The problem was that the white lightning was... strangely underwhelming? There's no doubt that she used Kanna Kamui, but isn't it completely different from the one I cast?

For starters, when I use Kanna Kamui, a thick white bolt of practically living lightning descends from the sky and rampages in the surrounding area. But Murellia's Kanna Kamui is less than half of the size of mine when I cast it.

At first, I thought the difference in magnitude is because she didn't put that much magic energy into it. But as I thought more about it, that didn't make any sense. There's no reason she would threaten us with it if she was going to make it seem so weak. Furthermore, rather than a distance far away from us, the white lightning stabbed into the ground 15 meters from where we were standing, confusing me further.

DOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!!

The deafening sound of the explosion snapped me out of my train of thought.

[It's completely different from mine...]

As I thought, it's not a difference in magical energy. I can see that now that I've seen how its impact performs. Even though the spell landed in such close proximity to us, the explosion was overwhelmingly smaller than I expected. If you were ready for it, you could definitely take steps to avoid it. But that didn't mean it was weak at all.

The white thunderbolt looked thin as a result of Murellia converging multiple Kanna Kamuis as tightly as she could. As the lightning bolts struck, it drilled straight into the ground as opposed to forming an impact crater. The hole it formed then served as a funnel, which channeled the explosive energy of the strike straight back into the sky.

If you were to compare it to my Kanna Kamui, it covered less than a tenth of what mine was able to. However, conversely, any enemy caught in the path of Murellia's Kanna Kamui was likely to suffer several magnitudes more damage than if they were caught in mine.

It's impossible for me, who has their hands full just casting the spell. We're using this magic at the lowest possible level, while Murellia is capable of adjusting the number and power of the lightning strikes. Who the hell does she think he is? Is this what mastery of magic is? This has to be rigged...

What Murellia just did is completely different from something like converging Fire Arrows in order to increase the power behind it. Even more difficult than simultaneous activation. It's impossible unless her control of magic power is several magnitudes higher than ours, not to mention her proficiency with thunder magic.

“Well? How was it? Do you have a grasp at how different we are now?”

Even after accomplishing such a thing, Murellia stood before us, calm and undaunted, with a condescending tone.

Translator's Note: I've decided that, due to the irregularity of my update schedule, I'm going to put estimations on when I'll be done with the next chapter at the end of all future updates, pretty much in the same location that this note is. Furthermore, because I know how heart-rending it is, I'm also going to try to refrain from leaving large gaps in updates if a chapter finishes with a cliffhanger.

Lastly, I've been reading the comments on the previous chapters, and I am deeply thankful for all the positive feedback you have left. Thank you for all your kind words.

Next chapter in 4-6 hours.

Chapter 324

CHAPTER 324

Failed Negotiations

Fran takes a shocked breath, seeing Murellia's perfect control of Kanna Kamui.

"Fufu. It seems you're wise enough to understand what I did just now."

"..."

"Well? Will you die here, or will you become my slave? Ah, the girl from the clan of usurpers and her maid will be killed here no matter what you choose. Don't do anything unsightly."

Although she's laid back while speaking to Fran, as if another person, she shoots a murderous gaze at Mare and Kuina. The speed at which she switches faces is just creepy... Even if she's over 500 years old I guess she still has the spiritual youth and instability that comes with being a kid.

Although, there's no doubt we'll be given the same murderous look if we reject her offer again. It'll be just as furious as the look she's giving Mare, if not more so.

Fran knows that too. But her answer doesn't change.

"Nn, said earlier, but would rather die than accept."

Yeah, even it earned us time to act or some opening for an attack... acting is really annoying.

As soon as Fran gave her response, Murellia's eyes narrowed. We were instantly bathed in her murderous intent. It seems she's finally recognized us as a proper enemy.

"I see... then die."

Upon her command, the Valkyrie and Dullahan immediately advanced towards us. It seems they were infuriated with Fran's attitude with Murellia, and wanted to kill her before Murellia even gave the order. Especially from the Valkyrie sisters, there was a clear aura of fury leaking out from them.

It's pretty clear they had a plan of attack in mind to kill Fran. They were way too quick to attack her. Well, since we're confirmed enemies now, I can fire off appraisals!

"You denied Lord Murellia's generosity! I'll kill you!"

"Die in regret of your foolishness!"

Y'know, I thought Valkyries had a much more noble image... You sisters are giving off a totally different vibe than you should. Well, in the end, they're both monsters, and Murellia's their master. I guess it can't be helped.

Both Sigrun and Rossweiss' status names them as 『Valkyrie · Nemesis Lancer』. Their levels are 67, only one level higher than the previous Valkyrie. But all their stats were over a 100 points higher, especially their agility stat which was over 200 points higher.

They don't have any archery skills, but they have Lv6 in both Divine Spear Techniques and Divine Spear Arts. They also both possess Storm Magic, and the level of their Light Magic is higher. Overall, they seem to be more specialized versions of that Valkyrie that have eliminated all unnecessary skills.

In regards to titles, Sigrun has 『War Maiden of Punishment』, while Rossweiss has 『War Maiden of Annihilation』. Each of them seems to raise individual fighting power, and causes ones subordinates to go mad.

In any case, are these guys really so overwhelming superior to that Valkyrie from before? Yeah, their personal fighting power is pretty high, but their archery skills are pretty low level, and their army commanding abilities aren't that great either. Depending on the circumstances, they may not even be able to make use of their full abilities.

In the Dullahan's case, they seem to be pretty much the same as the ones we fought before. However, instead of a shield, they used an axe and a sword respectively. It seems they're much more attack-oriented than the one we fought before was.

The battle matchups seem to be that Fran and Mare are fighting the Valkyries sisters, and Kuina and Linde are facing off against the Dullahans. It seems the most dangerous one of the mix, Murellia, is just watching from the sidelines. I guess she doesn't want to dirty their own hands by disposing of us herself. Or rather, maybe she's taking measure of our abilities?

It's a bit underhanded, but we may be able to take advantage of the fact that she's not participating. Frankly, we have no chance in hell of beating Murellia as we are now. So, we need to get the hell away from her. We can steadily gain some distance from her while fighting the Valkyrie. Then, in the middle of the fight, if we can Dimensional Gate away and hop on Linde, we should be able to make a clean getaway.

Or at least, that's what I was thinking...

"Ah yes. I suppose I ought to ensure you won't try to run."

So Murellia says and slightly waves her hand. Out of the air, a semi-transparent black dome with a radius of around 100 meters materialized around us.

"It would be rather awkward if you were able to escape with Space-Time Magic. Ah, but rest assured. It only blocks transitions with magic, and so..."

She materialized a spear from thin air and lightly tossed it. As the spear made contact with the barrier a deafening roaring sound reverberated through the air as the spear broke through the barrier and disappeared into the distance. I guess the barrier is a type of monster?

“Well, as you can see, it doesn’t obstruct physical objects. So, if you desire, you can attempt to break through it and run away.”

That’s all well and good, but why did you bother to create a barrier that only prevents magical transitioning? Is she looking at our status? If so, does she know I’m an intelligent weapon? I try to watch Murellia’s expression, but I can’t tell where her gaze lies.

If she could see my status, there’s no doubt she’d be looking at me... I guess I’m being too self-conscious, aren’t I?

[Anyways, we need to escape the Valkyrie and get out of this barrier somehow. And it really doesn’t seem like there’s any escape option other than teleporting out of here...]

If we all stick to our one-on-one battles, and Murellia chooses not to interfere, there is a very good chance for escape. In fact, Fran and Mare have already started to gain the upper hand against the Valkyrie. Fran is more skilled than her opponent, and she has me for support. She was handling the Valkyrie’s spear well, in fact, she’s been able to deal quite a few decent hits to her opponent.

Mare seems to be somewhat disadvantaged in terms of skill with her weapon versus her opponent, but her Golden Flame and White Fire defense is melting the Valkyrie’s spear whenever it approaches her. Apparently the Valkyrie is able to regenerate the spear, but it just melts whenever she tries to attack again. In such a situation, Mare has an overwhelming advantage.

Kuina seems to be more than equal to her opponent. Linde is struggling a bit, but since he can fly it doesn’t seem like he’s in trouble yet. It should be fine.

“Keh! What is this amazing amount of skill!”

“My spear-! You little brat!”

Apparently, this wasn't the outcome Murellia was anticipating. She was watching each battle with arched eyebrows. However, she's wearing an invincible smile on her face.

"Hoh? Isn't that something... Even though Rossweiss' spear is flame-resistant. And also... my cute little cousin's sword, please permit me a closer look."

I got a bad feeling hearing that, and sure enough, magic power began concentrating in Murelia's eyes. She's definitely using some kind of skill.

I can feel it. Something is watching me. A sharp and deep-seeing eye observing my entire being, as if it was seeing through my very existence.

To the bottom of my soul.

Chapter 325

CHAPTER 325

Kin of the Goddess of Chaos

Murellia concentrates magical energy in her eyes and probably activates some kind of skill. As she was staring at me, I began to feel something strange.

“Ufufufu! This is amazing! What in the world is this? An Intelligent Weapon? And it’s not just Space-Time Magic, but Dimensional Magic?”

What the hell are you doing Appraisal Block! Apparently all of my disguisal skills have been seen through. Murellia, with her eyes shining with a brilliant light, pushes her wicked palm towards us.

[Fran! Murellia found us out! She’s trying to do something! Stay sharp!]

“Nn!”

We probably won’t be able to escape anymore. We’ll have to rely on Fran’s superhuman reaction speed. However, what happened next was beyond any of our imaginations.

“Come.”

[Wh-?]

The next thing I knew, I was in Murelia’s hand instead of Fran’s. I tried to figure out how she could’ve done it. Maybe some skill? I don’t think it was magic since she has already demonstrated she doesn’t have Chantless or Chant Annulment.

“! Master!”

“Master? Ah, this sword’s name. Isn’t that a strange one.”

Fran, who had me swiped out from under her nose, was furious.

“Fran! Don’t show an opening!”

“Keh-”

Fran was blown backwards by Valkyrie’s kick. She didn’t suffer much damage because of the defensive barrier she has up, but it was a big hit, I’m still worried.

[Fran! This is your chance!]

Murelia, who possessed immense power, drew me.

[I’ll let Murellia equip me, you have to attack in the opening that creates! Don’t worry about me!]

[... Understood.]

I managed to convince myself of my words, and Fran took out another sword and turned to face the Valkyrie.

“Aw, what’s wrong? Your movements suddenly got a lot worse! Can’t fight without your magic sword~?”

“Shut up!”

The number of hits Fran landed started to decrease and the amount of hits she took began to increase. Skill sharing is still active, but I can’t offer any support, and I can’t afford to make a careless move right now. That being said, I can’t miss this opportunity. I choose to believe in Fran for this chance to land a serious blow on Murellia.

“[Sigh], well then...”

Ding dong!!

The moment Murellia attempted to do something, and electricity enveloped her body. If I had to guess, she probably tried to equip me. This is what I've been waiting for! The moment you show any weakness, I'll assault you with magic and a telekinetic catapult!

However... that opening never arrived. Murellia is still holding me as if nothing happened.

"Hm? What was that tingling?"

That's it. There's no way that's it, right? She's not awakened, and thunder damage is still neutralized? No, as long as she's a Black Catkin, it wouldn't be strange for her to have high resistance against thunder damage. Or is she strong enough for it to not work at all? Both are equally likely.

In any case, the fact remains that she tried to equip me. In other words, she has some sort of interest in me. When it comes to this high leveled of an opponent, no opportunity should be passed up. Even if it's a shitty bet, you should take it if you can.

[... Are you going to equip me?]

"Ahaha! This is amazing! I got one! It's not like a person at all! I could've sworn I saw a soul, but I didn't think it'd actually have one! I want it! I want this sword!"

She's like a kid when she's frolicking like this. However, this sort of personality means she may take the bait.

"Divine punishment awaits if an unworthy person attempts to equip me. This time around was the Punishment of Lightning. Though, if you endure the punishments, you become worthy to equip me."

Encourage equipping me while tickling her self esteem. Casually tell her about the punishment for equipping me. If Murelia tries to equip me at this point, the punishment will surely be far worse. Although the lightning strikes were prevented, the god's death punishment can't be prevented by Murellia. In the worst case scenario, it'll do an incredible amount of damage to her.

"... Heh? Divine punishment? You don't say. Well, you don't have to be equipped then I suppose!"

Tch. You were thinking more calmly than I thought... I thought you would equip me to keep the momentum going. I guess I have to switch strategies.

"Are you afraid? How disappointing. I guess I was wrong. I should've figured you wouldn't be able to equip me."

This time, I tried to provoke Murellia. She seems to be strangely prideful, and there's a chance she could get provoked into equipping me.

"I've already received divine punishment. I hate the gods, but I don't underestimate their power any longer. But even so... divine punishment you say?"

[... Indeed.]

"Hmm, perhaps you are a sacred sword, or are affiliated with some god? No, I wonder if talking about divine judgement is just some sort of defense mechanism, as I was just talking about how our tribe was cursed... I'm sure it's something interesting. My goodness, is it alright if we talk a bit more? It's my first time speaking to an intelligent weapon."

Ah. The provocations failed. But there still might be a chance for her to equip me. Let's see if these words will do it.

[You wish to speak with me? Of what?]

"I wish to know who made you. Was it a divine blacksmith? Or was it another human?"

[I don't know. I do not possess memories of that time.]

"Is that so, well then`"

[If you please, it is my turn now.]

“Oh? Isn’t this interesting? What do you want to know?”

[Are you a dungeon master?]

“I am not.”

[What? Then, what-]

“Stop. Isn’t it my turn now?”

[... Go ahead.]

It looks like Fran has regained her composure and is still fighting with the Valkyrie. Then, maybe I should start gathering some information. Since we’re on the subject of asking each other questions it should be a good opportunity to do so.

“You mentioned that you don’t remember when you were created, but how far back do you remember?”

“My memory only begins recently. From just before I encountered Fran, my wielder.”

I didn’t want to take a chance lying, as Murellia may have some kind of skill that sees through lies. It was highly possible that she possessed some sort of lie-detecting skill as she accepted it without question when I said I didn’t remember being created.

It’s risky to give this information, but if I get caught in a lie, she might not let me continue asking her questions. In that case, it’s better to accept new information even if that means I have to give up knowledge in return.

“Hmm, does that mean you were only recently built? Or is that the seal on your memories was only recently unlocked...”

[It’s my turn now. You said you’re not a dungeon master? Then who are you? I recall you earlier saying that you could use the power of the dungeon...”

“Do you really want to know? Well, it’s because I’m a dungeon sub-master. This allows me to spend the master’s points.”

[Sub-master? Points?]

“Let’s remember the order. Next is me. What’s with your name?”

Is she making fun of me... Well, it can’t be helped. I’m used to it now, and I’m actually rather attached to it, but at first I thought it was a strange name.

[It is the name given to me by Fran. I previously had no name.]

“Just a moment, you had no name?”

[It’s my turn now. What does ‘point’ mean?]

It was a word that Murellia used, so I’ll pretend I’ve never heard it. Though, I still use self-evolution points.

“Why do you want to know that? It’s okay, but you can’t tell anyone, okay? They are points given by the Goddess, so-called GP. As they are bestowed by her, you can use points to extend the range of the dungeon or to summon demonic bea- Huh? What’s going on?”

Murellia, who was in the middle of an explanation, was surprised for some reason. After an awkward moment, she continues her conversation.

“Well, anyways, there are many ways to get points. For example, killing creatures that are inside your dungeon. And the stronger and more experienced a killed individual is, the more points you get from them. There is the option of drawing magic from the ground to convert into points, but it is hardly efficient.”

As Murellia explained this to me, she opened her eyes as if she was surprised. No, wait, she actually is surprised.

“I knew it! I can talk about it after all! Hahahaha! Why?”

Murellia suddenly exclaims with a joyful expression. I'm having a hard time understanding.

"Hey, you have something to do with dungeons, don't you?"

[What?]

"Hmm, it might not be surprising if you turn out to be a Godblade... Are you kin with the Goddess of Chaos?"

[Well, that's something I would like to know as well.]

I was told that I was related to the Goddess of Chaos before, but I didn't receive any further explanation.

[Why do you think I am?]

"People who are affiliated or bound by dungeons are restricted in their actions. One of these restrictions is the ability to speak of the dungeon to other people."

Now that she mentions it, Rumina was saying something along the same lines. But she's able to talk about it normally with me. Maybe it's that she didn't reveal anything of a level worth omnining? But her description was quite detailed.

Rumina wasn't able to talk to me about the details of a dungeon. But now that I think about it, Fran and Urushi were also there, maybe she was restricted for that reason?

"I wasn't originally a member of a dungeon. A few years ago, a combination of the power of a dungeon and a human sorcerer named Linford summoned and bound me to his will with the permission of the Evil God. Linford, that annoying geezer! That wicked man ruled over me as a maiden of the Evil God, and then forced me into being a Dungeon Submaster! He made me dedicate myself to the hateful gods that destroyed us! I can't rise up against that usurping small-fry's clan just by being a dungeon submaster, but I also can't resist the dungeon's contract! However,

I can talk to you about it for whatever reason! If I can understand why, I might be able to worm my way out of the dungeon's contract!"

Woah woah woah, I might be crazy, but a name I definitely can't ignore came up! Did she just say Linford? He's an old sorcerer, and his name is Linford, this can't be just a coincidence.

"Is your sorcerer named Linford Laurencia? He possessed monstrous powers and was over like a hundred years old?"

"Oh? Do you know him?"

"Pretty sure the guy you're talking about died after we fought him on another continent."

"Aa! I knew it! Fairly recently, the power that tied me to the world suddenly weakened, I knew I wasn't imagining it! Ahahaha!"

I didn't expect to hear Linford's name in this country. In other words, I guess that means he was scheming in this country before coming to Barbora.

[If you don't mind me asking, what exactly was Linford trying to do?]

"Ufufu, since I'm in an especially good mood right now, I'll enlighten you!"

Author's Note: They talk bout how typing has started to hurt their fingers, so they tried writing this chapter using speech-to-text, and apparently that's why this chapter was so long (he goes on to say that even this lengthy chapter was heavily summarized and cut-down compared to it's original length).

Translator's Note: I'm fairly confident in this chapter's translation up until Murellia's long paragraph near the end about Linford, as it was somewhat difficult to translate. Apologies for any errors in translation.

Chapter 326

[If you don't mind me asking, what exactly was Linford trying to do?]

“Ufufu, since I'm in an especially good mood right now, I'll enlighten you!”

Murellia starts talking, clearly in a brightened mood. I checked back up with Fran, but her situation hasn't changed too much. I'll probably have time to chat with her for a few minutes.

“The beginning of this story can be drawn at the time Linford came to this place. Apparently, that crusty old geezer knew that there was a fragment of the Evil God sealed away in this country.”

[What? Is there really?]

“Mm. It is the same piece that I used on my tribe. Linford aimed to reach that fragment in order to communicate with the Evil God.”

Though, of course, he didn't find it. The Gods probably sealed it even tighter than it was before after Murellia had her way with it. But this didn't mean that Linford gave up. A kingdom known as the Bashar Kingdom which occupied the area adjacent to the Beastman Empire, was being crushed.

“Linford was unable to find the fragment of the Evil God, though he did find something else.”

[Something else?]

“Indeed. He found a new dungeon that had appeared on the Bashar Kingdom's side of the Boundary Mountains.”

Linford and his subordinates were, of course, able to conquer this newly formed dungeon.

“Upon arriving in the boss’ chambers, they threatened the Dungeon Master and forced it to obey them. The purpose of doing so being to use the magical power accumulated by the dungeon.”

Even if this dungeon was basically a newborn, it was still a dungeon, and so it had a fair amount of magic power accumulated within it. Twisting this energy towards his own ends, he used the power within the dungeon to initiate a ritual, a certain summoning ritual. There exists a certain summoning technique known as Hero Summoning that calls past heroes and binds them to the summoner’s bidding for a certain period of time. Even things like evil spirits and wicked beings are able to be summoned through such a technique, as apparently even followers of the Evil God are counted as followers of a divine being.

“During this ritual, the one summoned was yours truly. Though, my body was incomplete.”

It seems that during this summoning, only a fragment of Murellia’s consciousness was summoned, as Linford didn’t believe he had the capabilities to control a completed Murellia.

Through the information extrapolated from the summoned Murellia, Linford was able to locate the seal that bound the fragment of the Evil God. Even so, he was unable to break it. Though I’m not sure how he thought he could unravel a divine seal.

“Though, Linford was horribly stubborn.”

Then, Linford had an idea. By sacrificing a huge amount of souls in the name of the Evil God, Linford would be able to give the Evil God enough power to somewhat weaken the seal. By doing so, the Evil God could summon enough strength to speak to Linford by using Murellia as a medium, as she was technically a priestess of the Evil God.

[... So that’s the reason the war.]

“Indeed. War is by far the fastest way to gather a significant amount of souls.”

Conveniently, the Beastman Kingdom where the fragment of the Evil God was hidden and the neighboring Bashar Kingdom were in the middle of a tug-of-war. Moreover, when Linford examined the politics of the Kingdom, he discovered that though King Bashar was an open-minded moderate, behind the scenes of it all he was a member of the beastmen exclusionist group. He contacted the political heads of the Kingdom, and established cooperation with them.

“Contrary to what you’d believe, many more people were willing to work with Evil Beings than they were to do so with beastmen. Though, if you think about the history between the two countries, that’s only obvious.”

No matter what they felt in their hearts, Linford’s group and the Bashar Kingdom came together to join hands.

“A pincer attack using the joined forces of the entirety of the Bashar Kingdom and the forces of the dungeon discovered by Linford. Such was the plan.”

If what Murellia is saying is true, then this war had been in the works for years. Apparently the reason that the Bashar Kingdom decided to ride on Linford’s coattails is because they weren’t even really a threat to the Beastmen Country otherwise.

The only reason that the King had decided to adopt a moderate policy as opposed to an aggressive one, despite the fact that he was part of the beastmen exclusionist’s group, was because their force’s military power were so vastly contrasted that even a skirmish could lead to the kingdom’s downfall. On the inside, the people of the Bashar Kingdom felt over-repressed, and the buds of the anti-beastmen movement had been long blooming.

“Now, I certainly hate the other beast tribes, but their human supremacy has gone way too far. It has become a bit of an awkward situation for me.”

As such, the possibility of finally razing the Beastmen Country delighted the nobles of the Bashar Kingdom. After many years, their desire would finally come true.

“It was also around this time Linford fully summoned me using the remaining energy in the dungeon and the souls of the slaves provided by the Bashar Kingdom.”

Although it is true that Linford normally wouldn't be able to control Murellia's vast power, a complete summoning that was powered using the sacrifice of hundreds of souls allowed Linford the ability to control her, to an extent. Even though Murellia's power wasn't as perfect as it had been, it was nearly so, and so she was still incredibly powerful.

Since the power of the dungeon was also used to summon Murellia, the percentage of control that wasn't afforded to her by the sacrificed soul was achieved by binding her as submaster of the dungeon. No matter how strong Murellia was, she couldn't escape the contract of the dungeon which was sealed by the Goddess of Chaos.

[In that case, Mistress Chaos Goddess, please descend and smite this girl again...]

So I wished, but I doubted it could be done. In the first place, the gods' punishment was imposed, and the Black Catkin who became corrupted by the Evil God's power were completely destroyed, including Murellia. And now, she's bound by a dungeon submaster contract by the Goddess of Chaos. It's not like all evil beings are subject to being destroyed by the gods, if that was the case, Rumina wouldn't have been able to spawn Evil Beings like Goblins and such in hers. It seemed unlikely that the gods would descend and wipe out Murellia again.

“And because I'm a dungeon submaster, I'm unable to resist either Linford OR the true dungeon master.”

Oh? Apparently she had to obey not only Linford, but the dungeon master too? Though I doubted they had more control than Linford. Nevertheless, this also allowed Murellia to use the power of the dungeon to create her Black Catkin paradise.

“It’s incredibly frustrating, but the power of the dungeon, I can create the dream I’ve longed for.”

And so, Murellia begrudgingly cooperated while having no small amount of hatred towards Linford. And that was Linford’s plan in its entirety. In essence; start a war, collect souls, sacrifice them to the Evil God. With that, he would be able to contact and receive the blessings of the somewhat re-empowered Evil God through Murellia.

Though, the power of the dungeon had been basically spent by using the energy to summon Murellia. The next stage was to extend the dungeon’s reach to include part of the Beastmen’s Country, and to regather the strength that was expended in the summoning.

It seems that summoning monsters and controlling them outside of the dungeon consumed points. Though, if you don’t need to specify it, you can set it up so that a magic circle will summon a random monster at regular intervals.

To achieve that, it was as simple as killing hundreds of slaves from the Bashar Kingdom while they were inside the dungeon and absorbing their power. The dungeon master was a former young bandit who was unwilling to oppose either Linford or the Bashar Kingdom, and followed this strategy to the letter.

Linford continued to research a way to weaken the seal of the Evil God’s fragment, letting Murellia manage the war’s progress as he traveled to do so.

And the rest, we already know. As Linford was conducting his research in Barbora, Fran and I eventually destroyed him. Is it possible he didn’t even want to keep the Evil Beings he created in Barbora for as long as he had, and had eventually wanted to relocate them to the Beastmen Country as forces for the war? If he had, it would’ve been no joke, this war would’ve gone a whole lot worse.

“Kufufufu, I thought it might of been possible because of how weak that slug was, but he really went and died! Hahahaha!”

Although I’m glad that we defeated Linford, it gives me complicated feelings that doing so pleased this woman...

Even before Linford died, the dungeon master rarely gave orders to Murellia, and now that Linford was dead, and his power over her gone, it seemed that she can even move around quite freely!

“The binding of that pile of manure has been lifted. His power over that accursed dungeon is lifted. And soon, even the rule of that Goddess of Chaos will be lifted!”

Next chapter in 1-2 days.

Chapter 327

Chapter 327

Rule of the Evil God?

Murellia shouts with ridicule.

“Now that I’m no longer being controlled by Linford, all I have to do is seize control of the dungeon, and I’m basically free!”

[What do you plan to do with your freedom?]

“Naturally, I will use the power of the dungeon to create my true paradise! Unlike what I’ve been limited to doing so far due to that shitty Linford shoving me away in the corner of the dungeon!”

So it was that after all. I was really hoping that she would disappear quietly but... Like I thought, this woman should never be free.

“And so, allow me to use your power, I won’t let you refuse.”

Damn. What should I do? If I specifically refuse her here, Murellia will immediately attack me and Fran. Maybe I should try to employ a bit of subtle implication here? Maybe there’s still a chance that she’ll try to equip me-

As I was pondering the dilemma, she began to move. Black viscous magical power escaped from Murellia’s body with incredible speed. Like a jellyfish tentacle, it slowly began to worm its way up my hilt and blade.

“Fufufu!”

[Dammit!]

I tried to fly out of Murellia's hand with all my might, but it wasn't enough. What monstrous strength...

[Get away from me!]

“Ahahaha! It's no use, no use~!”

I quickly activated a bunch of lightning magic, though it's nullified once again. Seems she has immunity to lightning damage after all. I also tried out Flame Magic, and used 『Inferno Burst』, but it still isn't strong enough to Murellia's Barriers.

Space-Time magic isn't any good either. Considering the fact that I could still use Dimensional Storage, it seems that only the activation of transportation type Space-Time magic is hindered by the barrier made by Murellia.

[God dammit!]

“Ufufu. Is it frustrating?”

Murellia taunts my futile attempts while making a sadistic smile.

“Is it painful~? Is it scary~? Do you want me to stop~?”

...Huh? No, it's not particularly painful or scary. My durability value hasn't changed after all. Though I was confused, Murellia didn't wait for a reply and kept ranting with a smug face.

“Don't you want to be freed from this pain? If you ask me to, I can't refuse~! Kukuku. No one with a soul can escape the rule of the Evil God!”

Huh? What does that mean? Is something supposed to be happening? I'm pretty sure she's referring to the evil tentacle things but... But nothings happening, you know? Or rather, have I lost control of my body?

“Now, submit to me!”

[...]

No, it seems like I still have control. I can refuse just like normal, and I don't really feel like my soul has been hijacked...

“What's wrong? Submit to me!”

I don't really get it but... I guess I'll pretend she's taken control of me?

[Uhh, Master Murellia?]

“Is that it? Even if it has a soul, I suppose a sword is still a sword. Well, I'll be flying now, fly by yourself.”

[Understood.]

As she commanded, I tried using telekinesis to move around a bit. Yeah, there's really nothing wrong with my body at all. I'm moving around as expected. I moved left and right, and I even allowed myself to fall for a few moments.

I'm not really sure why, but it seems that the 'Rule of the Evil God' that Murellia tried to impose on me really did fail. Though, Murellia herself doesn't know that, and orders me around with a confident look on her face.

“It seems like you were trying something, but I suppose you can't disobey now that you're my servant? Ah, it seems that you have a Control Immunity skill, but it's useless in the face of the Evil God's power! Fufufu, I wonder what kind of face that girl will make when she's attacked by her own Intelligent Weapon? Now, pierce that eyesore!”

Murellia commands me, as she points towards Fran. It was a crystal clear order, but I didn't really feel compelled to do it after all.

Though, Murellia isn't wary at all against me since she thinks that she's completely subjugated me. This is a big chance! I simulated different attack patterns to see if there was a way I could take advantage of this. Do I simply attack Murellia while her guard is down, or do I pretend to be controlled and return to Fran?

However, even if I go back to Fran, I'll just be stolen back by whatever ability she used to take me away in the first place. Rather, maybe this is the first time I've had an actual opportunity.

Then, how should I go about this? I obviously can't use one of my most powerful attacks, 『Kanna Kamui』 since she clearly has Lightning Nullification, or something extremely close to it. I don't know if I'd be able to finish her off with Telekinetic Catapult either. I've been trying to figure out where her magic stone is, but I haven't been able to figure it out yet. Actually, I'm not sure if she even has a magic stone in the first place.

She was originally a Black Catkin. She may be an Evil Being now, but it's entirely possible she doesn't have a magic stone. If she does, the head and the heart are possible targets, but even if they were there, would I be able to pierce them? Even that was doubtful.

What do I do! Think! I take full advantage of Accelerated Thinking and Parallel-Processing. Murellia will become suspicious if I take too long to complete her order. I need to decide now! What is the best way I can take her down!

What spell can I cast other than Lightning Magic that can be optimally boosted with Sorcery? In the end, doing this is probably the best option I have that can deal decent damage to Murellia.

Since we don't meet certain conditions and therefore can't evolve Swordsmanship skills, I think I can safely take physical skills off the table. I don't have the confidence that I'll be able to get past her defences without Fran's help.

In the end, it has to be magic, but I only have 11 Self-Evolution points left. The candidates are either Flame Magic or Earth Magic. I double-checked to make sure these were the only choices, but it seems I also gained not only Light Magic, but Nature Magic and Sandstorm Magic in our battles today as well.

Actually, wait a moment. Is there a possibility that I'll be able to take out one of the Valkyries by pretending to attack Fran? If I try to use the logic that being dominated also increased my ability to reason, it would be within possibility that my attempt to attack Fran ‘accidentally’ got the Valkyrie involved as well. I’m pretty close to gaining a Self-Evolution level, so killing her might be able to get me the points I need. If I get enough, I’ll have more options for being able to attack Murellia.

Though, if I took this approach, I’m not sure whether I’d be able to get this close to Murellia again. And I’m pretty sure if I started attacking indiscriminately Murellia would probably decided to intervene and make the whole thing fail anyways. If that’s the case, should I just attack now?

Damn, what should I do?

Then, I figured it out. While I was desperately skimming through my skills to see if there was anything that could help, I found something miraculous.

It was one of the skills that was added to my list of skills that I can buy by spending points, like my Appraisal Block and Demon Beast Knowledge. Maybe I got it because I reached Self-Evo Rank 15. It seems that I unlocked various other skills at that time too.

『Smite Evil』 : Doubles damage against the Evil God and its subordinates. A skill used to banish Evil.

[『Smite Evil』 ... an Evil Being specialized skill?]

Rather than raising the level of some magic skills, this was clearly a better candidate!

TN: Very sorry for the wait, please enjoy the next few chapters.

Next chapter in 1-3 hours.

Chapter 328

[This skill... is obviously the best choice!]

I've decided on the skill I need to break out of this situation. Get this skill, attack Murellia, get Fran and the gang, and then get the hell out of here!

Rather than invest in some random magic skill and hope for the best, it's much better to invest in a skill that I know will definitely be of use. I spend 5 Self-Evo points and gained the skill.

《Skill: Smite Evil has been acquired.》

Next, it's important to see whether I can evolve this skill further. If I can, it will become a surefire powerhouse.

《Self-Evolution points will be consumed to increase the level of Smite Evil. Please confirm.》

Yes! It looks like the skill can be leveled up to Rank 5 at the highest. I pumped all of my remaining points into the skill in order to max it out!

《Evil's Bane has been acquired. Fran has earned the title Evil Slayer.》

Evil's Bane: The power to defeat and seal the Kin of the Evil God.

What? The explanation of this skill seems really vague... No, thinking about it, most Unique Skills have weirdly fluffy descriptions like this. I think it was the same way for Sword Lord. Kinda the opposite of what you'd expect.

“... Hm? The sword has a weird feeling all of the sudden...”

Uh oh. Murellia was able to sense the acquisition?

“Oh? I can no longer see its status?”

Maybe it was an Appraisal skill, but some Evil God-like spell that Murellia was using to look at my status. Just looking at these immediate effects, I’m already praising Smite Evil in my heart.

While she still isn’t totally suspicious of us, we have to launch our attack!

[Fran! Mare! Kuina! Linde! I’m launching an attack on Murellia, use the chance to get out of here!]

They aren’t going to have a lot of time to process it, but it’s better than nothing. After shouting the plan at Fran’s group I immediately spin my blade’s tip towards Murellia and used my Telekinetic Catapult. I invoke the full power of Evil’s Bane and weave it into the attack.

[HAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA!]

“Huh? Did my domination fail? To try and attack me again even though you know it’s useless~!”

Moments before I make contact, Murellia puts up a full-powered barrier. If it was before, I would’ve just bounced off without even rattling her. But now...

It was so easy that I was shocked. I flew right past the barrier like it wasn’t even there.

Murellia’s proud look is immediately replaced by agony. I buried my blade deep into her stomach, and the concentrated power of her Evil God’s energy drastically decreased. This is probably the sealing effect of Evil’s Bane.

[Take this!]

“Geh-! You dare-!”

In order to do more damage, I released flame magic inside of Murellia's body. Though, it seems like the power of Evil's Bane isn't as strong with magic as it is with physical attacks. Even though the amount of power she had decreased in comparison from before, she was still able to mitigate the harm I could do. I burned some of her wounds, but I wasn't able to do much damage otherwise. Though, regardless of that, Murelia doesn't have the chance to speak. She was too busy mitigating said damage with her remaining evil power.

"Y-You... You still had a hidden ability up your sleeve...? Ghaa!"

[Surprise!]

This time, it was my turn. Murellia grabbed my handle and pulled my out with her monstrous strength. Then, she flicked her fist into my blade. Even though Evil's Bane was protecting my entire body, it wasn't enough to stop such an attack. My blade was broken in the middle, now half length.

"This... This damn sword! You will submit to me!"

Murellia flew into a rage after being wounded by me. She wasn't paying attention to her surroundings. Without catching her notice, I was secretly lengthening the decorative chain that dangled from my hilt.

[Whoops, sorry about that!]

"GYAAAAAA!"

My chain splits into countless thorns and stabs into Murelia's back. They aren't as powerful as my earlier attack, but under the effects of Evil's Bane each one cleanly pierces her body, ignoring Murellia's barrier.

Arching her back, Murellia screams with pain. Was her concentration broken due to the severe pain? After all, Immediately after I initiated the attack, the dome-shaped barrier that inhibited transportation magic practically melted into the air.

Alright! This should be enough to escape! I instantly return to Fran's hand with Short Jump.

"Master!"

[Fran! We're getting out of here!]

"Nn!"

Though, as we were preparing to escape, multiple shadows rushed towards the battlefield faster than we could flee. Apparently a large group had been hiding their presence just outside of the barrier. There were about 30 of them. My first thought was that they had been with the enemy, but I could detect the presence of the Evil God with them.

The figure at the front of the group released a burst of magic power and accelerated to a speed that even I couldn't catch. They ran straight at the Valkyrie that was fighting with Mare, leaving an afterimage of black lightning.

"Haaaaaa!"

"Wh-? Where did y-!"

Caught by surprise, the Valkyrie turned towards the figure dashing straight at her, but it was too late. A sword pierced cleanly through the Valkyrie's chest, and released an incredible burst of black lightning into its body.

"This can't beeeeeeeeeee!"

Such were the last words of the Valkyrie named Rossweiss. Only black charcoal was left behind.

"Hmph. Careless."

"M-Master Kiara! What are you doing here!"

Mare screams in half surprise and half joy. The identity of the mysterious figure was apparently, Kiara, who seems to have evolved!

The tall, masculine facial expressions are all the same as they were when we met her at the capital. However, if you looked closely, you could see a change in her hair. Her long gray hair from before was gone, and was now striped gray and black, like a tiger's stripes. Indeed, it was a testament to inheriting the power of the Heavenly Black Tiger.

I appraised her status and... it's tremendous. Originally, Black Catkin obviously become stronger than their unevolved state due to becoming a Heavenly Black Tiger, and also because of learning Brilliant Lightning Rush.

However, even Fran, who's stats were raised from my assistance were a far cry from Kiara's current power. The difference was such that it couldn't be understated. Kiara, the source of all that power, whispered to us with a subtle smile.

"Sorry, Mare. I ruined your duel."

Next chapter in 1-3 hours.

Chapter 329

Our ally appeared and charged into the battle as soon as Murellia's barrier disappeared. Valkyrie, who was fighting Mare, was quickly defeated by the newly Awakened Kiara.

But Kiara wasn't the only help that came along. Everyone else that had been fighting individually received reinforcements too.

For Kuina who had been fighting the Dullahan received the assistance and support of Kiara's maid, Mia.

"Kuina, I'm lending my support."

"Is that Mianoa? Well then, I'll be depending on your support."

"Understood."

The two maids begin their cooperation with no change of expression or pace. Mianoa is a small girl who's main charms are fluffy and curly pink hair and dull, sleepy eyes. However, as she joined the fight, she changed into an impactful figure.

"Awakening."

The tips of her elbow are enlarged in an instant, as if the arm of a huge, different creature had been attached there. The surface of the skin is covered with large gray scales with an arrowhead shape, the tips of her fingers are sharp with thick nails resembling the horns of a bull. Since the other parts of her body remained human, the unusualness of her arms stood out. I was surprised when I appraised her.

Mianoa belongs to the Gray Mountain Tribe. Their awakened form is probably something like a pangolin beastman form. Her arm strength and defensive power are high, and her inherent abilities are increased to about double, giving her an instant boost to her strength. It's a completely physical-specific ability apparently.

While Mianoa directly attacks the Dullahan, Kuina sneakily weaves in phantom attacks in perfect synch. Due to the nature of their strategy, the Dullahan was unable to make any moves against them.

While the Dullahan's arms were grabbed from behind and twisted up, it also receives a kick to the back of one knee, making it kneel down. It was a textbook subjugation. Even if the undead don't feel pain, the forces exerted on it's joints inhibited it by controlling the flow of its movements.

Then, with pinpoint accuracy, Mianoa drove a nail with full force into the Dullahan's torso.

“Haa!”

“..”

The sharpened nail drove right through the Dullahan's armor and body both, creating a large hole in its body.

The nail that went straight through the Dullahan stops short just before Kuina's body. Despite almost being skewered, Kuina doesn't move. They clearly had each other's full trust.

Kuina, who is proficient in mostly trickery and disturbing the opponent's flow while having low attack power, and Mianoa, who isn't the fastest, but makes up for it with enough power to score a one-shot. They make a pretty good team.

“Mianoa, you got some blood on me.”

“Senior, please don't tease me.”

“I suppose your arm must be getting dull.”

“That is surely not the case.”

Supporting Linde was a familiar large figure. The skin peeking through the gaps in their armor is gray, rugged hard skin.

“Shockwavee!”

This was the samurai beastman, Guendalfa, who had also evolved at some point. Compared to Goldalfa who we fought at the martial arts tournament, he’s pitiful, but he’s much stronger than when we said our goodbyes at the capital.

Guendalfa released his Innate Skill 『Shockwave』 which releases waves of force from his entire body, and in combination with the bombardment of blows with the blackiron sword finished by an upper swing, knocked the Dullahan into the sky.

“KUOOOOOOOOOOO!”

Linde mercilessly barrages the Dullahan, who is unable to evade while in midair. After blasting it with a breath of flame, Linde uses its tail to smash the Dullahan back towards the ground with his tail.

The Dullahan had already taken significant damage from that attack, but Guendalfa didn’t give it time to recover and immediately followed up.

“HOOOOOOOOO!”

“KUOOOOOOOOOOOOO”

Guendalfa struck downwards with his swords as the Dullahan smashed into the ground while Linde descended from the sky with incredible speed and delivered the finishing blow with its tail.

“Tch, I’m going to be the one to crush it!”

“KUOO!”

Guendalfa and Linde continuously rain down blows on the without stopping, and finally manage to finish off the Dullahan.

You can really feel the difference in level from Mianoa, who managed to defeat their Dullahan in a single blow. Although Guendalfa has indeed evolved and gotten stronger, they haven't quite reached Mianoa's level yet.

“ALRIIIIIIIIIIGHT!”

“KUOOOOOOOO!”

And after a long battle, Fran also received her long-awaited help.

“Garuru!”

“Urushi!”

Rushing out of Fran's shadow, Urushi bit deeply into Sigrun's ankle, who finally returned after leaving the scouting unit.

“Tch, that damn wolf. From where-”

“Got you.”

“Dammit!”

Though I thought I had perfectly penetrated her magic stone, Sigrun vanished without a trace.

“It's troublesome for me if I lose your strength.”

“My apologies, Master Murellia...”

Murellia had teleported Sigrun beside her. It seems that she's recovered from the damage I dealt from my attack. Still, her Evil Power has reduced a ton in comparison to before.

“Woof!”

“Welcome home, Urushi.”

“Woof!”

Urushi rushed to our side as we stared at Murellia. Apparently Urushi had also had his hands full fighting when he was away. A painful-looking scar runs the entire length of his body, telling us how intense his battle must’ve been.

With how much the wound has closed, Kiara’s group probably used a ton of healing magic and potions on him. But his wounds were so deep that they weren’t able to heal them completely.

In particular, the scar that ran his entire body on the right side of his stomach was so large that honestly I was surprised it hadn’t been fatal. The scar can be clearly seen since the fur at its location has been peeled off. He also had several other wounds that could be spotted due to scarring, so I was able to get a very good idea of the seriousness of the injury.

[Hang on a second. Greater Heal!]

“Here, little extra.”

My magic and Fran’s healing potion began to heal Urushi’s visible scars. Although a bit of it was still visible, Urushi was much more recovered compared to before.

Though, there was one wound that we weren’t able to get rid of.

[Wow, Urushi got a cool one.]

“Nn, looks strong.”

“Woof!”

From between Urushi’s eyebrows to under his left eye ran a cool-looking scar. Seriously, it looks like it’s straight out of a movie. The power of Urushi’s scary face has reached new heights for sure... Before this point, only kids cried when they were scared by Urushi, but at this point, even adults might not be safe anymore...

Maybe the scar was made by some sort of special attack? It seemed that even advanced potions and healing magic weren't able to get rid of it.

"So, you're making light of me, are you..."

Murellia roared and glared at us with infuriated eyes. Although it's been diminished, she still has a huge amount of evil aura that far exceeds us. Even so, when we were faced with her wrath, we were prepared.

Even if our reinforcements didn't know who she was, they were probably able to understand how dangerous she was in a single instant. Kiara looks up at Murellia with a serious expression.

"Well now, you're a bit more than I expected."

Even if she's intimidated, the fact that Kiara and our friends are still standing here, ready to fight is impressive. In fact, all of the adventurers that came to the battlefield as reinforcements with Kiara seemed to be running away, and it wasn't long before they had all disappeared.

Next chapter in 1-3 hours.

Chapter 330

“Hahaha, I hope you all don’t think you’ll be going home today~”

Even as she laughs, Murellia releases a wave of pure intimidation and anger. It’s an overwhelming force that even me, with Evil’s Bane, can feel. Looking around, I can see even Kiara and Mare changes their expressions ever so slightly.

All of the beastmen adventurers that showed up with Kiara were sobered up by her terrifying power and are standing on the sidelines. It’s not that they were weak, all of them had strength superior to a D rank adventurer. But they were all under no illusions. They knew they didn’t have the strength to so much lay a finger on Murellia.

All of the reinforcements that were still here - Kiara, Mianoa, Guendalfa - all enter their awakened state. It reminded me of a certain prince’s quote, “Super #aiyan Bargain Sale”, but retracted that thought when noticed that some of the people that were supposed to be strong weren’t evolving.

“Hey, aren’t those women maids of the royal palace?!”

“No way, two gods of death are over there?”

“Outside the royal palace?”

“Why are such top tier fighters here...”

A lot of the adventurers are fighting to get a look at Kuina and Mianoa. Gods of death, huh. And top tier fighters besides that? Apparently the palace maids are more famous and feared than I thought. I suppose it’s only natural if all of them are as strong as those two?

“I’m going to tear all of you people to shreds, but I’ll let you go if you pass me that sword right now.”

“...”

Looks like Murellia is still obsessed with me, but Fran only looks on silently.

“Mm. You’re a passionate little girl, aren’t you.”

Murelia changed her face a bit and held out her right hand. At that moment, something glinted on the surface of my blade.

“Huh?”

[Careful, she just did something.]

“Why are you...! I’m telling you to come here!”

Murellia pushed out her hand again, clearly irritated. But once again, a bit more clearly this time, my blade shone black for a short moment.

“What in the world...?”

It looks like she tried to steal me again. However it looks like the effect of Evil’s Bane is demonstrating its usefulness now. Murellia squints and me and makes a frustrated face.

“No matter I suppose, I’ll just take it from you.”

“Don’t say whatever you like.”

“Hah... That sword already belongs to me. I’ve decided so.”

“Won’t give to you.”

Fran’s grip on my hilt tightens.

“Fufufufu. Then, I suppose I’ll just take it by force! Sigrun, you watch from up here.”

“Understood!”

“Will regret that.”

Murellia extended her arm towards Fran and a black bullet formed from her power and shot out towards Fran at a high speed. It’s abnormally fast, probably as fast or faster than a bullet. I guess she prioritized speed over power.

However, Fran easily intercepts its trajectory and simply swats it away with my blade. Even if she prioritized speed over power, it should still pack quite a punch, but there isn’t a single scratch on my blade.

Everyone else in the group immediately kicks into high gear.

“--Fire Javelin!”

“White Blaze!”

“KUOOO!”

“AWOOOO!”

“We’re going too!”

“Yeah!”

Kiara begins chanting with no hesitation. I’m not sure whether she chose fire magic by chance, or if she already knew that lightning magic wouldn’t work against Murellia.

Mare and Linde’s attacks quickly followed, with a myriad of spells and arrows barraging Murellia shortly after.

“Ku!”

Murellia puts up her barrier with a strangely impatient expression. However, she made an obviously relieved expression when she saw that the barrier had invalidated all the attacks. Murellia instantly puts her proud face back on.

“Oh, hahaha! Useless!”

Apparently, she had been worried that her power was weakening because of my successful attacks against her earlier. Though, I guess blocking 20 attacks simultaneously had helped her to regain her confidence.

However, Murellia’s defense had been foreseen by Kiara. From the beginning, we had been aiming to limit her sight.

“Rolling Black Thunder”

Kiara’s body immediately blurred as she disappeared and reappeared behind Murellia, as if she’d teleported. To those watching, it’d probably looked like she’d teleported. It was only me and Fran, who’d barely noticed, that she had overcome the gap with sheer speed rather than transfer magic. Kuina and Mianoa might’ve noticed too, but I couldn’t read their unchanging expressions.

Just how fast has she become now? Rather than the black lightning wrapping her body, it was as if her body had become black lightning itself.

Even if Fran uses Black Lightning Advent and increases her speed with skills and magic, she wouldn’t be able to get anywhere near that speed. Plus, “Rolling Black Thunder”?

Maybe it’s a technique that can only be used while in an awakened Black Heavenly Tiger state, similar to Black Lightning Advent? But we’re not able to use it...

Murellia’s reaction to Kiara was delayed since she was focused on me and Fran.

“Hah! Impact Slash!”

“Gah! Now you’ve done it!”

Amazing! Kiara combined a sword skill with her fire magic and successfully injured Murellia. I guess no matter how strong you are, if you’re attacked without any protection, you’ll take damage regardless of the gap between you and the attacker. For Kiara though, it seems that her full power strike was only a scratch to Murellia.

“Well well well! Isn’t this amazing! Hahaha! There’s three Black Heavenly Tigers here! This is amazing! It’s been 500 years since a meeting like this!”

“Hmph, it seems you’re one as well.”

“Indeed I am. A Black Heavenly Tiger and Kin of the Evil God! In other words, I’m as strong as both of those combined!”

“I see. Rolling Black Thunder!”

“Tch.”

There’s that technique again! But seeing it makes me sure. As far as Black Heavenly Tigers, we still have a long way to go. Just as I have a long way to go to master Kanna Kamui, it seems Fran still has a long path of mastering Black Lightning ahead of her.

Kiara may have only just evolved, but she’s already accumulated a ton of battle experience by killing and battling every day, and she has an amazing enough battle sense to receive the blessing of the God of Fighting. Taking that into account, it wouldn’t be strange for her to be able to acquire and properly use the abilities she’d only just acquired.

“Haah!”

“You-!”

The two of them were locked in a fierce one-on-one, to be honest, Murellia had an overwhelming advantage. Neither of their Black Lightning techniques are nullified due to the nature of Black Heavenly Tigers, and Kiara's attacks only inflict negligible damage. But if Murellia's attacks land even once, it's game over.

Though, that doesn't stop the battle-crazed Kiara from trying to cut her opponent to pieces.

[Fran, I'll assist you!]

“Nn.”

Even in the middle of her fight, Murellia has been wary of Fran and I on the sidelines. Even Fran slightly increasing her grip on me increased the tension to new heights. Despite that, Fran jumped into the fight.

You'll probably get mad at us later, but first, we need to take care of Murellia.

Once again, sorry for the wait on these chapters.

Chapter 331

[Let's go!]

“HAA!”

Fran propelled herself with a jump with the intent to kill as she slashed at Murellia. Normally in such a battle, Fran would have the advantage due to her ridiculously high skill with the sword. However, in this battle where Murellia had the ability to fly, the odds became less clear. In this scenario, it resulted in a battle in which each attack towards both sides had been prevented. However, Murellia's ability to fly is pretty shabby in comparison to before I poked her with Evil's Bane. I guess that confirms that I managed to seal away some of her evil power. There's a clear delay in when she invokes skills and when they activate. This is our chance.

She can probably already tell from my earlier attack that her barriers won't stop me. As such, Murellia began to completely ignore Kiara's attacks and set her attention solely on Fran. Even though Kiara had managed to penetrate Murellia's barriers, I guess the latter had decided the damage was negligible.

“HA!”

Before we knew it, Mare had jumped into the three-person battle alongside us. Sparing a quick glance at the ground, it looks like she was thrown by Mianoa. We just didn't notice her approach until she was right on top of us because of Kuina's illusion magic.

At first, Murellia just ignored Mare, but it wasn't too long before she adopted a defensive posture. It seems that any Danger Detection skills she had were firing all cylinders. Looks like we're finally getting a bit of an edge in this fight. If Murellia starts trying to prevent Mare's attacks with her barrier, she'll inevitably begin to fail at preventing Fran's attacks. Suddenly, Murellia's figure disappears and reappears more than a dozen meters away.

Ah, she's running.

[She's running!]

"Geh. Annoying!"

We immediately give chase and continue our assault. Most of our attacks are going to be prevented, but that's part of the strategy. While Murellia is busy trying to stop my barrier-ignoring blade, if Mare is able to get in a good hit it might be able to decide the battle.

"What, running already? 『Flare Cannon』!"

Shooting straight out from Mare is a beam straight out of a sci-fi movie. Apparently, if she utilizes both her golden and white flame and condenses it, she can even do something like this. If her golden bonfire that destroyed the Valkyrie from before was her ultimate melee attack, this would for sure be her ultimate ranged attack.

Murellia, with her focus on Fran and I, wasn't able to respond to the attack in time. As the platinum swirl of energy completely destroyed her lower body.

"Geh-"

That was an attack with all of Murellia's power behind it. I guess even Murellia's barrier hadn't been enough to stop such a thing. She visibly trembles in pain from losing half of her body. I guess she doesn't have Pain Resistance.

"You piece of shit! I'll tear you into shreds!"

Murellia's power immediately pulses as muscles and flesh almost seem to worm their way out of her wounds and regenerate her. At the same time, an evil mist-like aura begins to seep off of her. As we approach it Danger

Detection begins blaring. It looks like she's trying to salvage her power and protect herself with this fog. But sorry, it's not enough to stop us.

Fran raises me above her as we approach. Upon contact with the mist, everything around us appears to slow to complete standstill as Fran unleashes her attack.

『Sword Lord Technique - Broken Sky』

As she invokes the technique, Fran calmly takes a deep breath; our surroundings slow to a crawl as her concentration increases to the breaking point.

And as she swings my blade, the evil energy in front of us fragments into countless pieces.

“Y-YOU!”

Through the aftermath of our attack, we catch a glimpse of Murellia's figure. Her body, or what remained of it, had been torn from her left shoulder to her right side. Her organs begin spilling to the ground beneath her, as unlike Mare's attack ours didn't cauterize her wounds.

Though to her credit, Murellia is truly the toughest enemy we've had so far. She's already started regenerating her freshly received wounds. But Kiara was there to capitalize on her weakened state.

“Can't ignore me now, can you?”

“You old hag!”

Kiara instantly cuts into Murellia with 『Rolling Black Thunder』. Her blade cuts cleanly through all of the Evil Being's barriers, Murellia herself, and - with an incredible roar - straight through the earth.

Although she dealt a decisive blow to Murellia, unlike Murellia and Fran and I's combined mana pools, there's no way she should've been able to use Brilliant Lightning Rush without a tremendous burden on her body.

Immediately after unleashing her attack fell to the ground, probably exhausted, and drops her awakened state.

[Kiara's in trouble!]

“Nn.”

Fran begins to rush towards Kiara, but gets a scolding instead.

“Gah, I'm fine. Shouldn't you be focussing on the battle?!”

“...!”

Kiara's glare seals the deal. Fran immediately changes her momentum towards the downed Murellia. Even if she's used up her entire mana pool, it's Kiara, I have no doubt she'll be able to manage.

Sigrun, finally understanding that her master is in serious danger, rushes to separate us and her mistress. Upon inspection, she has a jet-black stone in a tight grip. It's probably one of those Evil Magic Stones, though strangely it appears that she's retained her reason, with the only noticeable effect being her black-stained eyes.

Her movements are incredibly more refined compared to the battle from before. It seems she's using the stones to not only boost her stats, but probably even give her skills a few extra levels. I can't even tell since she's become saturated with the Evil God's power though.

[Hey, aren't they supposed to go berserk when they use one of those stones?]

“... Why still in control?”

The Valkyrie answers Fran's question.

“Fuhahaha! Unlike my inferior sisters, I was born as a Kin of the War God! Now that I have the Evil God's power as well, there's no way I'd go insane from something like this!”

I see, so there's still some kind of relationship from when the Evil God was still considered one of the actual gods? Through her genealogy from the War God, it somehow makes her resistant- No, maybe it gives her some affinity to the Evil God?

I guess it's somewhat like the Beastmen's tribes inheriting the power of the founding beast?

“Hah!”

“Tch”

Each time Fran and Sigrun clash, the stone that's enhancing her will become a little less powerful due to Evil's Bane. Likewise, as the stone weakens, the bonus that the Valkyrie gets to her stats gets lower and lower. This is basically a countdown until Fran and I win, but we're in a rush.

After all, the more time we spend on this fight, the more Murellia recovers.

[Let's finish this up Fran!]

“Nn!”

[Alright, here we go!]

「Kanna Kamui!」

『Kanna Kamui!』

Up to this day, I don't even know how many times we've used this spell. But this is probably the first time we've used it at minimal power. Or so I say, but even though that's the case, Evil's Bane is incorporated into the attack, so it'll still do pretty decent damage. Though even saying that, with this amount of power, it'll only trip up our opponents for a second. That is, that would be the case if that was the end of the story.

I stretched my little decorative chain, slowly lengthening it until it was long enough to form a loose net. The goal here is to try and mirror Fermus' attacks against us in the 3rd round of the martial arts tournament: a tsunami of threads that attacks from all directions at once. Or so I tried, but I'm not quite there yet, at only being created a fine wave.

The disadvantage of this technique is that I don't have anywhere near enough threads to do any meaningful damage. Unless the target is an Evil Being, that damage this would do is pretty much negligible. On the upside though, is that it's very tricky to avoid. In a word, this is an extremely effective technique against Evil Beings.

Sigrun, who has made every effort to prevent our Kanna Kamui, has stopped dead in her tracks. Not wanting to miss this obvious opening, Fran and I attacked.

“GYAA!”

After our strike the threads did their work, shredding her body apart into tiny pieces. It probably looked really cool to those watching, as it looked like our single slash had resulted in over 100 cuts.

[Tch, her magic stone was barely worth anything!]

Even if she didn't go insane just from using the stone, it looks like using it had the same effect on her stone as it did to the first Valkyrie we fought. It's a shame!

Murellia watches as her subordinate is shred apart and grinds her teeth together. It seems her regeneration has just finished restoring her.

“Oho, now... now you've done it!!”

[Fran, she's in terrible shape, this is it!]

“Nn!”

Fran rushes in to cut down Murellia as she begins to take flight... just as another figure bars her way.

“Uoooo!!!”

“Who?”

[Is that a human?]

It was indeed a human. A man dressed as a knight takes a fighting stance as he assists Murellia. Apparently he had been skulking around while hiding his presence. Is he a friend to Murellia or something?

“Murellia hasn’t done anything wrong, leave her alone!”

Vice Knight of Bashar

This guy isn't half bad. Although he's nowhere near as strong as Fran, he'd still put up a good fight in a physical battle. He's not so much a violent killer as he is a guy that slinks around in the shadows and quietly takes lives.

Plus, his title is the Vice Knight of Bashar. Although I don't know the ranks of knights in the kingdom, chances are he ranks pretty high. Murellia had an alliance with the Basharian Kingdom, so it's not really strange that he's here.

Johan deflected our attack and shouted towards Murellia.

"I'll be supporting you!"

"What in the world are you doing here? Your job doesn't involve helping me!"

Even though he's helping out, Murellia yells at him furiously. Murellia has a look of rage on her face, though Johan laughs it off with a refreshing smile.

"Hahaha! My job may only be to monitor you, but you've done far too much for our country to simply watch as you're slain in battle."

"... Do whatever you want."

Murellia closes her eyes and concentrates on recovery.

"Won't let you!"

“Too eager, aren’t you.”

This guy easily keeps up with Fran’s movements. Each time she attempts to charge Murellia she finds the knight’s shield waiting for her. This is probably the effect of his unique skill. From the name, it probably simulates the effect of danger detection except displays the danger visually.

“HAAAAA!”

[Eat this!]

Even if you can see it, it doesn’t matter if you can’t prevent it! In order to throw off Johann, I start throwing out wind and flame magic in sync with Fran’s strikes.

But somehow, Johann is even able to stave this attack off. Utilizing both sword skills and shield skills, he scatters our wind magic with flicks of his sword while simply dodging the flames. This unique skill is a hell of a lot more useful than I thought.

However, it seems that his sword hand has gotten exhausted due to neutralizing all of the wind magic. Spurred on by my annoyance at Johann’s persistence, I unleashed a telekinetic catapult at Murellia while he’s distracted. The purpose being to put pressure on Murellia with ranged attacks while keeping the knight occupied with melee attacks.

“Dammit, dodge this!”

Johann put up his shield just in time for me to slam into him, though he’s pushed back several feet by the impact. Fran jumps forward and reclaims me, twisting to slam me once again into the knight’s shield, and he’s blown away to the side from the impact.

We don’t pursue him any further, since our aim is Murellia anyways, but magic gets shot at us from somewhere to interrupt us.

『Air Slicer!』

Nearly 20 blades of air come hurtling out of the sky around us. Each of them is quite powerful, probably nearly enough to slice a limb off. While dodging the rain of attacks, we spy the man likely responsible for attacking us, a man dressed like a magician surrounded by some knights that seemed like his subordinates. Where the heck were these guys? Right after Johann showed up I scanned the surroundings just to make sure there wasn't going to be any more surprises... was it some kind of skill?

“We'll protect Murellia!!”

“You'll never lay a hand on our lord!”

“Fuhaha! Are you trying to hide behind our benefactor?”

“If you're hiding away, it'll bring shame to the knight's name!”

The name of the sorcerer man who was screaming is Sanhawk Goldie. Appraisal says he's a 43 year old Storm Knight. Although his swordmanship is worse than Johann's, he has Storm Magic at level 4 and Chant Reduction at level 6, and he also has a good balance of offense and defense. He also possesses a skill called Group Stealth. This one is probably why I didn't notice them.

As Sunhawk began to cast again, he turned his sharp eyes towards Fran. These guys are probably ready to become shields for Murellia.

“First, eliminate the escorts.”

“WONWON!”

Guendalfa and Urushi launch themselves at the group of knights. Kuina and Mianoa are probably both exhausted, and as much as I'd like for them to help keep back the knights, I don't expect them to join in. It can't be helped.

“Let's go! We can't sit here and be useless!”

“Ou!”

“We're going to take that man's head!”

Our adventurer escorts were... pretty much useless. They must've saved their stamina and watched for an opportunity to attack. They quickly realized that they couldn't win even if they fought conservatively and waited for a chance to strike. Perhaps it would've worked if they were up against rookie adventurers, but their opponent was too strong.

“Stop! You people! Those knights are-!”

Guendalfa called out to stop them, but the adventurer's paid no heed. Before they were even able to reach the knights, black bullets shot out and pierced through the adventurers, shot from Murellia. They don't instantly die from the attack, which suggests that she only aimed to knock them out to begin with.

But, this is an opportunity. With the attack she just threw out, Murellia probably barely has any evil energy left. She's probably barely conscious right now. As soon as the knight group is distracted, we dash through the center of them. The knights probably noted something shot past them, as many of them looked back with wide eyes, but it was far too late. We were already one step away from Murellia.

[We made it!]

“HAA!”

At the moment Fran strikes out, a newly recovered Johann jumps in to intercept the attack. Apparently he sensed the attack with his unique skill. How many times have we been interrupted now?!

“Guhaa!”

“So persistent!”

Fran's thrust that should've hit Murellia pierces Johann's chest instead. But it's too soon for us to stop. Fran puts even more strength behind the strike in Johann's chest.

“I. WON'T. LET. YOU!!”

“Don’t overdo it Johann!”

Murellia cries out, but Johann doesn’t heed her.

“Nugaa!”

Johann doesn’t hesitate to stab the sword deeper into his body, just to take a step closer to us. We’re probably only a few feet away from Murellia at this point. Johann grabs the blade in his chest, hurting his hand but trying to keep the blade from moving anywhere else.

“You’ll die here.. With me!”

There is no hesitation in his words. The group of knights behind us surrounds us and dash towards Fran.

[Tch.]

We escaped for the time being. Johann sunk to the ground in a bloody heap after receiving the attacks meant for us from his friends. The attack failed but it looks like that was enough to take care of the Vice Knight for a while. We’ll reach Murellia for sure with this next attack. Fran was probably thinking along the same lines, as she readies me in her stance again.

But before we’re able to advance, we are attacked from behind from an unexpected opponent.

“Gaa!”

“Hyaaa!”

“Gaoo!”

It was... the adventurers that fell to Murellia? Their skin is a sickly color, and they’re clearly in an abnormal state.

The adventurers rush towards Fran, one after another. It looks like they’ve turned into undead.

“Ahaha! Just even if it doesn’t work on that irritating sword, the rule of the Evil God still reigns supreme!”

I see, those bullets she shot must’ve been laced with the Evil God’s influence, and now they’re under Murellia’s control.

“As of this moment, you all are--?”

Murellia, who was just starting to get back in her regular haughty attitude, apparently sensed something and turned away. Following her gaze, she seems to be looking at the to the northern skyline.

“Hang on, what are you talking about? I still have Johann of the 3rd Knights... Intruder?!”

Huh? What the hell is she on about?

“Hold on! You want me to withdraw...! Do you even see what’s going on? That’s --- Dammit!”

It seems that she’s talking to someone... And that she’s going to be withdrawing.

“My apologies, I’m going to have to withdraw. I expect you to be following behind me.”

“Haha! Please don’t worry about me!”

“Is that so.”

“This is my job after all.”

“Your job should be monitoring me! I won’t to die yet, Johann.”

Murrelia uncorked and sprinkled a life potion over Johann. We watch in awe as the knight’s flesh weaves and stitched itself back together. That must’ve been a top tier potion!

[Fran, Murellia’s running!]

“Nn!”

We immediately dash up to Murellia, and Fran unleashed a slash at her.

“Haaa!”

“Gaa! This little brat! Next time we meet will be the end for you, remember that!”

[Dammit. She’s teleporting!]

Murellia vanishes from the spot, even though her arms were cleanly severed by Fran. I can’t sense her presence anywhere around me. It seems she really did escape.

“Where did she go?”

[Listen Fran, I want to pursue her as much as you do, but we need to take care of the knights and adventurers first.]

“... Understood.”

This is going to be the trickiest part, we need to subdue these guys without killing them.

TN: Really sorry about the wait, seems like I'm having less and less time free time that I need to do these. As it's kinda obvious that the chapter estimations aren't really working out, I'm going to stop doing them as to not give you guys false hope. As on the projects page; updates may be anywhere from several times a day, to once every two weeks, though I will do my best to at least do an update a week.

Apologies again.

Chapter 333

Murellia has officially escaped the battle. All that we have left to clean up is the Bashar Knights and the unfortunate adventurers that were possessed by the Evil God.

[Kuina, Protect Mia and Kiara!]

Right after I send the warning, I blanket the entire area with lightning magic. Well, with opponents of this level, it really is just that easy. The adventurers-turned-evil probably would've run away if things had looked bad for them, but by using lightning magic we were able to paralyze them and stop that altogether.

“Guuuuuuu!”

“Uggghhh”

“Shut up.”

We finished tying up all the adventurers, but once the paralysis wore off they started screaming and moaning, trying to break free of their bonds.

“ ... ”

On the contrary though, the knights have remained completely silent this entire time. What a troublesome bunch both of them are.

“I want to return our adventurers back to sanity, but I think there's something wrong.”

“It doesn’t seem like it’s something that’ll be dispelled easily.”

Mare, who’s recovered from her exhaustion, and Guendalfa stand above the restrained adventurers with their arms crossed and worried looks on their faces. Actually, I’d already tried casting purifying magic on them, but it seems like there’s either no point, or my skill level is too low.

Actually, maybe I’m going about this the wrong way.

(Master, kill them?)

[Hmm... I’d kinda like to save that as a last resort, but I have something in mind.]

(Nn.)

[Can you touch my blade to one of them for a second?]

(Understood.)

This might work better than purifying magic. Thinking along these lines, I request Fran to put me in direct contact with one of the possessed adventurers, taking care not to hurt them. Needless to say, I wasn’t expecting it to be so effective.

“GYAAAAAAAAAAA!”

[Woah!]

The adventurer screamed and began writhing in his bonds. I watched closely, and slowly but surely, a strange black energy bubbled to the surface of his skin and boiled away into nothing. Evil’s Bane might be a whole lot more useful than I had even anticipated.

I mean, sure, the adventurer freaked the hell out. But other than that, it looks like the energy has completely. I was a bit worried about the scream, but I checked out his status and his health hasn’t decreased at all, so is it safe to call this experiment a success?

“Hey hey, what did you do to that guy?”

“Purified evil.”

Guendalfa, who doesn't understand the situation, makes a face at Fran. From his perspective it probably looked like Fran just hit the guy in the shoulder with my blade and caused him to scream in pain. That would certainly be a cause for worry.

Guendalfa walks up to the adventurer and taps his cheek.

“Oi, you alright?”

“Ugh... Where...”

Huh, looks like he's returned to sanity. He's responding well enough, and it looks like his memories cut off at the point that he was struck by Murellia's black bullets. Hopefully, this means it's safe enough to perform on the other adventurers. The screaming is a bit... unsettling though.

“Higyaa!”

“Raaaaugh!”

“What in the world...”

Guendalfa, the only one who doesn't understand what's happening, is baffled by the sight that is taking place before him. Though this time around he knows Fran doesn't mean any harm, so he's not stopping us.

Around five minutes later, all the previously brainwashed adventurers were waking up, sanity newly restored. All I had to do is touch them to expel the evil energy, pretty simple. Even then it's Fran that's actually touching me to them, so I'm doing even less work!

But anyways, Evil's Bane is amazing! To think that it was as simple as touching me to snap possessed people out of the stupor. I didn't think that such a panic spreading force such as the Evil God's influence could be banished with just a tap. This will surely be an incredibly useful skill for dealing with Evil Entities in the future.

I entrust the adventures to a very confused Guendalfa. Fran and I head over to the knights group to see if we can't get some useful information out of them.

"Alright fellas, we can either do this the easy way, or the hard way."

The knights look at Mare without even a hint of fear or intimidation in their eyes, in fact, it's almost like they're looking at her with contempt. In their eyes, we can clearly make out the gleam of determination, making clear their hatred against beastmen.

"Look, I know that you people are from the Bashar Kingdom. What is your relationship with the evil being Murellia?"

"..."

"What were you trying to accomplish here?"

"..."

Geez, tough crowd. If they're this stubborn about giving up such basic info, these guys are gonna be a pain in the ass to get anything out of.

"Can't help it. I really didn't want to do things this way but... Kuina."

"Understood."

The interrogations begin in earnest. They start by simply asking questions, then threaten them before moving to actually hurt them, and then hurting them even more. Even this wasn't enough. There isn't even a hint of one of their mouths budging.

They tried a bunch of things. They tried to say they're only trying to help reduce casualties. They claimed that they don't want to hurt the knights. They threatened them. Tortured them. Nothing worked, the light in the knight's eyes shined just as brightly as it did in the beginning. It's hard not to be impressed.

"This is the last time I'll ask. What is your relationship with Murellia?"

Even if they singled a knight out and asked questions while slowly bending all of his fingers back, one by one, they only silently screamed while violently clenching their teeth.

"Hah... These guys are the real deal, I doubt we're going to get anything out of them.

"Unfortunately, that seems to be the case."

Kuina agrees with Mare's statement, taking her hands off of the man's fingers.

"I guess we don't have any other option. Kuinda, please."

"I understand."

"What are you doing?"

"Kuina's going to go question that guy."

As I watched, Kuina walks up to a knight that's been singled out from the rest. The knight's identity is Johan Magnolia, the leader of the knight group. He was severely injured by Fran and I's attack when he used his body as a shield for an attack meant for Murellia, but he's since recovered from a potion Murellia gave him along with Fran and I's healing magic.

Still, he's not completely recovered, and he's currently lying on the ground, but that's better Kuina's purposes.

"This will go smoother if the target is not at full strength."

Kuina said, and begins activating her Inherent Skill, Phantom Dream Matrix. In addition to having Illusion effects mixed in, it also appears to have a slightly hypnotic effect. Since the main effect is the illusions, the hypnotic effect is weak. It seems that Kuina had to use every bit of MP she could in order to successfully put him in a hypnotic state.

“Now. Look into my eyes.”

“Geh-”

Johann lashes his sore body away and looks away from Kuina.

“Fufu. I lied. I don’t need your gaze to apply this technique.”

It seems the purpose of that was to split Johann’s attention away from the fact that he was being hypnotized for a brief moment by making him concentrate on something else. Johann, focusing on looking away, showed a small gap.

A considerable amount of magical energy erupts from Kuina and shoots towards Johann.

“Hmm, let’s see if it took. What is your name?”

“Johann Magnolia.”

“Success.”

334. Murellia's History

Thanks to Kuina's Phantom Illusion Matric, Johan is hypnotized. However, this effect doesn't seem like it will last for long, which means I need to quickly find out what I want to know.

"What is your affiliation!?" Kuina asked.

"Johan! Snap out of it!"

"Vice-captain! You scum!"

"Release us you wretches!" In loud voices, the other knights tried to disturb Kuina.

Kuina tried to question Johan, but the other knights interfered. From their point of view, they could understand that Johan was being manipulated.

"Shut up."

"——!"

"——!"

With Fran's Wind Magic, any sounds from the knights were cut off. No matter how much their mouths moved, their voices were unable to reach us. With this, we can comfortably Johan for information.

"I'll ask you again. Which place are you affiliated with?"

"The Bashar Kingdom."

"What is the relationship between you and Murellia?"

"Miss Murellia is the benefactor of my country as well as my home."

"Let me know more about that. Tell me what you know about Murellia."

Johan then began to tell us about Murellia's relationship with themselves. It was a story about Murellia from 500 years before, that was completely different from those told in the beastkin country.

In that time, 500 years ago, Murellia was steadily accumulating fame whilst acting as an adventurer. She bore her honor as a member of the royal family, and although she was prideful, she did not seem to have a twisted character. Rather, she was actually concerned about the beastkin supremacists and their rejection of humans, which was the mainstream ideology in the country at the time, and she even desired to regulate this discriminatory behavior towards humans. However, despite her status as royalty, Murellia had little actual influence due to being an adventurer. As such, she began to Party (team-up) with humans and endeavored to improve her public image more.

Shortly after, she had a fateful encounter, and, of all things, fell in love with a human in the same Party (Adventuring Team). Unfortunately, love between the princess of the beastkin and a human, whom were treated as slaves or worse in the beastkin nation at the time, could not be tolerated.

Murellia, who refused to give up despite these sentiments, instead decided to change the very nature of the people around her and her country itself. Retiring as an adventurer, she returned to the Royal Palace to gain status and voice amongst her people.

However, due to her human lover, the backlash towards Murellia was severe. She had become an affront to the pride and honor of the beastkin. A fool who had gone mad over a mere human. Worse, she opened herself to be exposed to even worse rumors, such as that she was a prostitute, a fallen princess, or as scum to even humans. To put it kindly, there was no beastkin around who would take her side.

In the end, Murellia and her lover were separated by the King, as the shame of the ruling beastkin tribe. That was not all. In order to sever any lingering attachments Murellia had for the human, the King arranged a female human slave for her lover and forced them to procreate. In front of Murellia.

It seems that the lover was threatened using Murellia as a shield, and had no choice but to obey....

To begin with, Murellia was only infuriated with the beastkin who were conducting unreasonable acts against humans, but after being deprived of her lover, it had become a profound and terrible hatred. It was to such an extent that one could say nothing in this world held value to her anymore.

Immediately after this, Murellia made contact with the Evil God. At that time, the royal family was managing the seal, but Murellia broke it in order to destroy the beastkin nation. However, because of the many years in captivity, she failed to immediately resurrect the Evil God. Instead, the Evil God empowered Murellia and ordered her to gather souls for itself.

It seems that Murellia had the ability to resist Evil Magic, and even with the power of the Evil God, she did not lose her reason and rampage. Murellia continued to resurrect the Evil God and take revenge. The first thing she did was to take control of the beastkin royal family. She did this simply by manipulating them with the power of the Evil God.

With the political power she gained from this, having obtained the power of the Evil God and the Black Cat tribe as tools, Murellia began to politically purge any factions which would discriminate against and oppress humanity. It was a two-bird one-stone strategy that would both exterminate the beastkin races she despised, and offer up souls to the Evil God. Unfortunately, that did not mean discrimination against humanity would disappear from the country. Rather, the resistance to Murellia, who forcibly pushed for human protection, became even more critical of humans by the day.

At that time, assassins were frequently sent to kill Murellia, as well as her lover, who many believed to be a fiend that had driven Murellia mad. As such, Murellia kept her lover, the female slave, and the newborn child born between them close to her side where she could protect them.

However, as the pressure from assassins increased with each passing day, it came to a point that Murellia finally resolved to have her lover and his family escape. The destination was the neighboring Kingdom of Bashar, a country founded by humans. That being said, they were uncertain if they would be accepted as officials of the beastkin royal family. For this reason, Murellia gave them confidential information on the southern nobles' plan to invade the Bashar Kingdom.

The Bashar Kingdom of that time was not even half the size of what it was currently. Furthermore, they had to deal with the beastkin nation, which was highly aggressive towards them. In addition, they had been defeated in the war the previous year, making preventing another beastkin invasion into their land difficult.

It was to this kingdom that they brought the military intelligence Murellia had given them. While initially doubtful, they acted on the information nonetheless, and managed to successfully defend their country. At the same time, one of the other decisive factors that lead to their victory was Murellia, who lead the Black Cat tribe and attacked the invading army from behind.

Thanks to this, Murellia believed she could offer up a large number of souls to revive the Evil God, exterminate the beastkin, and regain her lover at once. However, this was not the case.

In the end, her lover, the female slave, and the child born between the two, spent the rest of their lives in the Bashar Kingdom. The lover revived the Magnolia family with the child born from the female slave as heir, whilst the female slave became a mistress of that time's king.

In other words, the prince of the Bashar royal family and the heir of the Magnolia family became half siblings. The Magnolia family, under the protection of the royal family, continued to retain its name since, and was now known as a family of warrior masters.

"What a ridiculous story.... I don't know anything about it." After hearing Johan's story, Mia thought with a troubled expression. Of course, the fact remains that Murellia is a sinner attempting to revive the Evil God, but this story implies that her character wasn't originally broken. Of course, that was only if Johan's story was true.

"Does Murellia still intend to revive the Evil God?"

"I don't know."

"Murellia said she would create a paradise for the Black Cat tribe, but why? From what I heard from your story, she should have despised the Black Cat tribe..."

"Using the power of the Evil God, it seems she intends to recall the souls of the Black Cat tribe from 500 years ago and grant them eternal torment. She said that she would then use their power to destroy the other beastkin tribes." Johan responds to Mary's muttering in an emotionless voice.

Apparently, the story about Murellia was passed on through the Magnolia family and the Bashar royal family. Therefore, he accompanied Murellia in order to repay his ancestor's debt towards her. In addition, the king decided to ally with Lynford and Murellia as well. All this makes the likelihood of the story being true high indeed.

Not only that, but the invasion of the beast nation is, in fact, more meaningful to Bashar than territorial acquisition.

In recent years, a large gap has formed between the beastkin's military power and other countries, making even light skirmishes impossible. As a result, many misunderstand and think 'peace is coming', but the truth is the opposite. Within the country, underground beastkin discrimination groups were forming, with many among their number being nobles.

As a result, the number of young people instigating hate against the beastkin from the shadows were increasing, and the movement to reject the beastkin was quietly spreading in the country. At this rate, it was possible that civil wars or riots might erupt. However, if a war was started with the beastkin country for the sake of letting out their stress, there was the fear that they might be destroyed as well. Although the current beastkin king is moderate, Bashar's leaders were fundamentally unable to trust in the beastkin.

That being said, what if they accepted Lynford's invitation? With their combined power, it might even be possible to win the war and achieve their long cherished wish of colonizing the country of the beastkin. Even if they lose, they could still send the extremists belonging to the radical underground organizations to be disposed of. They could also make the excuse that the beastkin Murellia had used the power of the Evil God to manipulate them as well. Even if they were forced to make reparations, their nation would not be destroyed. And, of all things, the one to propose this was none other than Murellia herself.

"If we put all the responsibility on ourselves, the beastkin nation shouldn't be able to bring all their strength to bear, is what we were thinking."

"Is that the benefit of having saved the country twice...?"

"That is correct."

The knights present here are among the members of the Magnolia family who are particularly patriotic, and who also seem to have great obligation and adoration for Murellia. Their nation had given them the role of a watchdog, but in reality, they were more like Murellia's escort instead.

"Even if we are wicked, we shall not forget our debt to her."

Still, this is pretty troublesome. I don't really care if the other person has stuff like justice or circumstances. To begin with, everyone has their own form of justice. Even the enemies we've cut down so far all had their own reasons to fight our justice. It was just incompatible with our's. If there's someone worrying about things like that at this point, they shouldn't have started fighting in the first place.

I don't really know how true the story just now is anyways. In the end, it's no wonder that the story of the Bashar kingdom, which favors Murellia, is different from the beastkin nation. Both stories should be taken with a grain of salt. Though, I do think it's more likely that the Bashar kingdom, where the information remained intact, has the more accurate story.

What I found to be the most awkward part of it all was Murellia's motives. This is just what I think from my previous live's experience, but there's nothing more terrifying than the grudge of a woman's love. What's this 30 year old virgin saying, you might ask. Yeah, I personally don't have much romantic experience, but I've seen it enough at work and at school.

A girl who lynches a friend just because the boy she was in love with likes said friend. Or, a certain senior female employee who saw their love interest show kindness to a new employee, and, believing herself betrayed, curses them out of misplaced resentment and attempts to commit suicide in front of their eyes. Or, a colleague who began stalking the person their boyfriend was having an affair with, and murdered their pet cat. Truly terrifying. And they all have in common that, even after doing so many illogical things, they're still smiling and going about business as usual.

Just like them, Murellia also looks calm on the surface. However, she's someone who no one can understand what destructive actions she might take. Ordinary women might swing their kitchen knives around, but what if it were Murellia? She's someone who might cause dungeons to spiral out of control or even revive the Evil God.

To make it worse, those with emotions such as delusions and grudges don't know how to give up, even to the very end. Fueled by negative emotions, they can continue on without end. And now, she's the Evil God's Miko (Shrine Maiden). I have no idea just how twisted and insane her spirit might have become.... In that respect, Murellia is really troublesome.

335. Off to the Dungeon

After hearing the story about Murellia's past, we continued to interrogate Johan.

“To where did Murellia disappear?”

“The Dungeon Master called her back to the Dungeon.”

“I see. Then—”

Over the course of the subsequent interrogation, one of the most important questions we asked were the location of the Dungeon and its strength. Originally, it was a dungeon with an entrance to the Bashar Kingdom side of the Border Mountains, however, an entrance was also created on the side of the Beastkin country. As this latter exit was meant for the army of Evil Beings and demonic beasts, it seems it is quite large.

The entrance is cave-shaped, but the interior is practically a fortress. Fortunately, Johan says there are few traps set. The Dungeon Master is a male ex-human, but he seems to be an exceedingly vile small fry type character. His personal fighting power is nothing to be worried about though. As for the strength of the dungeon itself, Johan didn't know very much. However, it seems that a considerable number of monsters still remain.

“The dungeon, is it...? I can barely wait.” Kiara muttered on the side with an excited expression.

“Lady Kiara, your body isn’t fully recovered. Please don’t strain yourself.” Mianoa scolded Kiara, who had only just recovered enough to walk.

“Yet Murellia may not be allowed to go free, no? Neither am I able to call in reinforcements. We have no choice but to go.”

“That may be so, however....” Neither Kiara nor Mia sound confident. With a worried look, I can’t help but agree.

“What, she is the sub-master of the Dungeon, is she not? If need be, we can split into groups to destroy the labyrinth.” Kiara said.

“I do not think it will be so simple.” Mia.

“Even so, it must be done. An old woman of my station, over the fate of the Beastkin Empire? To compare the two would be impudence.” Kiara.

“.... I will accept Teacher’s resolve.” Guendalfa.

“I just wanted a reason to fight, don’t worry yourself.” Kiara.

Kiara laughed mischievously, but Mia remained solemn. Despite Kiara’s attitude, Mia probably knows that Kiara’s words were completely serious. The only one with a faint expression is Guendalfa.

“What’s wrong? Don’t make such pathetic faces.” Kiara scowled, noticing his face.

“No, Teacher, if you heard that story, then—” Guendalfa.

“Are you feeling sympathetic? How foolish.” Kiara cut off Guendalfa.

“Don’t let yourself worry about the genuineness of such stories. Besides, if you call yourself a warrior, then be more thankful.” Kiara.

“Wh-, what do you mean?” Guendalfa.

“Your opponent is a legendary figure, you know? If you’re going to fight anyways, then it might as well be a worthy fight.” Kiara.

“The only one that thinks that way is you, Teacher.” Guendalfa remarked, stunned. In this case, he’s in the minority, as almost everyone here are battle maniacs.

“Mia and Fran think so too, right?” Kiara.

“It’s more fun to challenge strong opponents than to bully weaklings.” Mia agreed.

“Nn.” Fran nodded as well.

Battle maniacs are simple. But I agree as well. Anyways, Murellia is clearly Fran’s enemy. In that case, we should just defeat her. Guendalfa, who is naive and young, seems to find it the hardest to swallow; although, Quina and Mianoa also look like they agree with Kiara.

“Don’t be so naive. Thanks to them, the Beastkin Empire is in an unprecedented crisis, isn’t it?” Kiara.

“....Yes.” Guendalfa still looked uncomfortable, but this is something he has to overcome himself. Though it might be okay to leave it be.

“Well then, next I will have you tell me about the aim of the Bashar Kingdom.” Mia turned to Johan. As it turned out, Murellia and the Bashar Kingdom have some connection with each other. I don’t know how much of it is based on truth or not, but it’s there. However, does that make it alright to work with the wicked? Even a 500 year old debt should be nothing compared to politics.

“What is the king of Bashar thinking, joining hands with such evil? Although it is aimed at clearing domestic resentment towards the Beastkin Empire, I can’t believe a sane man would do this. Is there perhaps some other reason for this?”

“His Majesty the King said he was acting upon the debt of 500 years ago.”

“Do you believe that?”

“Naturally.”

“... There’s no way a king would endanger his country for the sake of some obligation. He must be plotting something else!”

“You animals may be that way, but this is to be expected of my people in Bashar.”

Do they think nothing wrong of this king who joined forces with evil? It sometimes makes me think that these people are willing to throw their lives away to protect Murellia, so it’s kind of scary. I get the feeling that their loyalty to her is way too extreme, or maybe too blind or something.

Not all of the Bashar Kingdom’s knights are like this, right? In the first place, do the other knights know they’re working with Evil Beings? When we asked this, we found that only those of the highest authority were permitted this knowledge, much less have the chance to meet Murellia. Just as I thought, they wouldn’t let just anyone know about this matter... There isn’t any evidence anyways, so even if it’s leaked, no one would believe it.

Later, the hypnosis technique applied to Johan eventually faded and no further information could be acquired. Mia and the others looked like they wanted a little more information, but it can’t be helped.

“Shall we chase after Murellia now?”

“Yes. However, we only heard the rough location of the Dungeon. How will we get there? Not everyone can ride the Linde...” Mia put her finger on her chin and muttered in thought.

Certainly, it would take too long on foot to reach the Border Mountains. Kiara and Mia have recovered and should be able to run on their own, but that would also leave them exhausted again. Ideally, we would take a carriage, but unfortunately, we don’t have something like that lying around at the moment.

“Fufu. I thought something like this might happen, so I brought this just in case.” Seeing Kiara and Mia looking troubled, Quina reached into her skirt with her hand.

“Don’t act cool in a situation like this.” Mia.

Ignoring Mia’s retort, Quina took out a canopied carriage with a flip of her skirt. It even had a horse made of stone attached to it....

“It’s a six-seater golem carriage.” Quina.

“Senpai is amazing. To say that line in a situation like this!”

“That is because I am a maid.” Quina.

I understand Quina’s expression now. It’s a perfect doyagao isn’t it? Guendalfa and the other adventurers looked at Quina with shocked faces.

Though, it’s apparently nothing special for Mia and Kiara. They’re already getting into the carriage...

(Aren’t you surprised too, Fran?) I asked her.

(It’s the same as Dimensional Storage that’s why.) Fran responded telepathically.

(Well, yeah, but...) I trailed off. The collapse of common sense is inevitable, it seems...

“That being said, not everyone can ride. Master Kiara should—”

“I am definitely going.” Kiara.

“I already know. Will Quina, Mianoa, and Fran go as well, or shall we ask others to escort the knights?”

The captured knights can’t be left alone after all, and there’s surely more information we can get from them too. It seems that Mia intends to leave the escort of the knights in the adventurers hands. I also agree with Mia.

Even if there's more people than Murellia, if they can't resist her, they will only end up being manipulated. A small but elite force would be better instead. As for Guendalfa, bringing him along or not is a difficult choice to make, but a person struggling with hesitation will only be a burden.

"Please wait! I will go too." After we told him that, Guendalfa hurriedly replied.

".... You want to go?" Kiara.

"Of course!" Guendalfa.

"If it looks like you will become a burden, we will leave you behind though?" Kiara asked him in a warning tone.

"Naturally." Guendalfa nodded solemnly.

"Understood. Very well, then." Kiara

"Teacher, is that alright?" Mia asked Kiara. At any rate, even if he wants to go, Guendalfa's fighting ability isn't anything special.

Kiara shrugged her shoulders and sighed. "Persuading you otherwise would take too much time. In that case, you would be more useful coming along with us in place of a shield."

"Then please use me as a shield, or whichever way you like." Guendalfa.

"You damn idiot! Who would use a beanstalk like you as a shield!?" Kiara.

"No, wasn't it Master who just said so...?"

"That was a figure of speech! Can you wipe your own ass, or not? Get it?"

"Yes!"

Anyways... the ones headed into the Dungeon are Fran, Mia, Quina, Kiara, Mianoa, and Guendalfa. Also, Urushi, Lind, and I are going in as hidden members. This team would be reassuring normally, but the opponents this time are Murellia and the Dungeon. I can't let my guard down.

Chapter 336

336. Sleep

Raw: <https://ncode.syosetu.com/n6006cw/338/>

The golem carriage headed north towards the Border Mountains. It was shaking more than I thought it would, considering it's a golem made of stone, but in hindsight it's obvious. It's running out on the unpaved wilderness without any suspension. The carriage shaking is inevitable.

Still, it doesn't seem to be affecting the common sense here. Guendalfa is looking at the carriage with an impressed face. This is a carriage reserved for the royal family, after all. Apparently, it is also equipped with a magic tool devised to release the vibrations. It's still vibrating a lot, though.

In retrospect, the carriage I rode earlier might have shook this much while running along the highway. This carriage must be amazing after all.

(Fran, you alright?) I asked her telepathically.

"Nn.... I'm, fine..." She said, not looking 'fine' at all. Her eyes were blinking blearily, and her head was shaking back and forth. Come to think of it, we've been in battle since last night. She hasn't had a wink of sleep.

It seems that the vibration of the golem carriage induces sleepiness. The vibrations aren't periodic though. However, the feeling that your body is constantly swaying might be making her drowsy.

The usual Fran is the type that sticks closely to a regular sleeping schedule. Or rather, she sleeps a lot more than normal people do. Staying up all night like this must be difficult for her. She should definitely be exhausted. Fran struggled with drowsiness while rubbing her eyes incessantly.

(You don't have to push yourself. Just go to sleep.)

"Nn...."

I would prefer it if she just went to sleep, but Fran stubbornly continued to fight off drowsiness.

(What is it?)

"Kiara... talk..." Fran did her best, even though she was so sleepy her speech was broken. Apparently, she wanted to talk with Kiara in the carriage.

"Fran, we can talk later. For now, just sleep."

"Mmh... but..."

"Allowing one's body to rest is also one of the jobs of a warrior."

"Al... right..." Fran collapsed asleep.

At Kiara's admonishment, Fran nodded and collapsed into the world of sleep.

"Hm, she fell asleep."

"Th-, that was fast." Guendalfa remarked in surprise. Guendalfa seems like a sensitive person after all, so he probably has trouble sleeping. I understand him well, because I was the same when I lived on Earth.

"Even though she possesses such fighting power, she has a surprisingly innocent sleeping face."

"Well, she certainly is strong, but she is still a child."

Fran breathed deeply in her sleep, with her head resting on Kiara's lap. Kiara gently stroked Fran's head, causing a happy smile to float to her face.

"Mu!" Out of nowhere, Kiara suddenly groaned.

“Is something the matter, Master?”

Mia and the others, thinking something had happened, looked to Kiara who had suddenly raised her voice. However, Kiara’s expression was rather calm.

“No, it was just Fran’s drool.”

“Please don’t surprise me because of that.”

“Kukuku. It’s just been decades since a kid drooled on me.” Kiara smiled from the bottom of her heart.

“You don’t have to be afraid to ask Master Kiara for a lap pillow.”

“I would be happy to do so as many times as you want, you know?”

“... No, I shall refrain.”

Kiara sighed, and said, “Very well. More importantly, the rest of you should rest as well. I can keep watch.”

“Master Kiara, that would leave you tired as well, wouldn’t it?”

“At my age, the time I sleep is too short to be a problem.”

“That’s unrelated to this. There’s no need to worry. Quina is of a species that requires little rest to function, so a lookout is unnecessary with her as the driver.”

Apparently, Baku sleep less than normal people. They aren’t just about putting others to sleep, it seems. Still, I’m not sure if she will be alright with all this accumulated mental exhaustion. I should help here as well. Moving closer to Quina, I opened up a Telepathic Communication channel to her.

(Hey Quina, I can create a humanoid Clone. Do you want me to be the coachman? Even if you don’t need to sleep, you must be tired, right?)

(Ah, Shishou... was it? I'll be alright. If I take a nap later, there won't be a problem. Also, any fatigue can be taken care of with a Potion.)

(Even so, how do you deal with the mental exhaustion?)

(To begin with, I am half asleep, and half awake. Even in the driver's seat, I can rest sufficiently, and the golem carriage only needs occasional instructions, so it doesn't take much effort.)

(I see. Still, I will be on guard as well.)

(Thank you very much.)

I'm glad I was finally able to tell Kiara and the others that I am an Intelligent Weapon, but it's something I should only talk about after consulting with Fran. Though, I think Fran would easily share it if asked.

"Rest is also a warrior's duty, is it not?"

"Hm. That is what Mia said. Still, to be advised by that sleepyhead who always pissed herself..."

"Wha-.... Why are you bringing that up all of a sudden!?"

"Kukuku..." Kiara chuckled. "It's true, isn't it? Right, Quina?"

"Yes. I didn't want her to be upset, so I planned to change the bedding in secret, but in the end, it was discovered by Her Majesty. I remember it well."

"Stop!"

"Milady, Fran will wake up if you speak so loudly, you know?"

"Ugh...."

After that, everyone except Quina went to sleep. They had fought all throughout the night, talking about one thing or another, so they were tired out. I was keeping guard while recovering my physical strength using my recovery magic.

Chapter 337

Four hours after leaving for the dungeon. The golem carriage, traveling north, was approaching the Border Mountains much faster than I thought it would. Although its travel speed is slow, it can run tirelessly on any terrain, without the need for breaks.

"It's, giant!"

About one hour ago, Fran woke up from a deep sleep, and, peeking her head out of the carriage hood, looked up at the approaching Border Mountains and shouted. I would have liked her to sleep longer, but it seems she was unable to because of all the excitement. Still, it seems she's fully recovered from her fatigue, so the rest was worth it.

(It really is huge, isn't it.... I can't even see the top with all those clouds.)

It might even be taller than Everest. Though, I can't get a good grasp of the size from this distance, so I don't know the exact altitude.

The height of the mountains along the mountain range was striking.

Moreover, unlike normal mountain ranges, there are almost no plains at its base. From a distance, it just looks like a giant vertical wall. It was almost like it was a waterfall of stone, flowing through the clouds from the sky and pouring down to the ground.

Looking closer, one can see that the slope is just extremely steep. Still, it certainly looked more like a cliff than a normal mountain.

"We will be arriving at our destination soon. Kiara-shishou, how are you doing?"

"I am alright now. I drank the potion. All things considered, we arrived faster than I thought."

"Nn. In the blink of an eye."

"It's because those two spent the entire time talking, isn't it?"

Just as Mia says, Kiara and Fran have been talking since she woke up. Though, it wasn't a conversation between an elder and a child, or about fighting or how to use Senka Jinrai. Instead, it was a brutal conversation in which Kiara talked about Magic Beasts and warriors she had defeated in the past, and how to use intimidation to efficiently break the opponents spirit. I was foolish, expecting a warm-hearted conversation between a grandmother and grandchild from these two.

Still, it turned out to be an intense conversation. Senka Jinrai really does have a further level to it, just as expected. Just as Fran instinctually grasps the Black Lightningstrike, Kiara can use the Rolling Black Lightning freely. The reason Fran can't use it, is that Fran lacks sufficient combat experience, it seems. Even when I tried to show her using myself as an example, it didn't work.

"Difficult."

"It's nothing to worry about. At your age, you've already achieved it. If you don't neglect your practice, you will be able to use it before you know it."

"Nn. I'll do my best."

The topic is brutal, but Fran seems to be having fun. It seems conversation between family really is special.

"Ojou-sama." Quina, who was in the driver's seat, called out to Mia. It sounded like her normal voice to me, but it seemed that the tension in her voice was properly picked up by Mia.

"What is it? Did something happen?" While immediately preparing herself for battle, Mia asked a question of Mia in return.

"There is an abnormal situation."

Hearing that, Mia and Fran poked their heads into the driver's side of the carriage.

"That..."

"Wha.... What happened....?"

Quina is pointing in shock, and for good reason. Ahead of the carriage, a large number of magic beast remains littered the ground. That was several hundreds of magical beasts, atrociously rendered into corpses, and scattered across the land.

"Magic beasts from a dungeon? But, the way they were defeated...."

"Yes, it's abnormal."

As Quina said, the magical beasts were abnormally killed. Every last one of them was squashed flat, as if crushed from above.

Weak small fry, visibly powerful dragon-like creatures, and evil beings were all similarly pressed into the ground and crushed. Furthermore, it was over a vast area. Looking over the wilderness, everywhere else seems to be in a similar condition.

We disembarked from the carriage and began investigating the area. It wasn't just the monster corpses that were unusual.

"The ground is too flat."

"Nn."

As Mia said, the entire area was flat, as if the ground were flattened by a road roller. No, this would be overwhelmingly flatter than a highway. It would be shameful to even compare.

Examining the surroundings, I was able to spot the flat parts and the border where it meets the usual wilderness. It looked exactly like a boundary. The normal wilderness past the boundary suddenly stopped, and became a step more than one meter deep.

How should I put this....? If a giant iron box 100 meters in length and width were pressed against the ground with enormous force, something like this might be the result.

Furthermore, as I walked around, I saw many similar steps. Apparently, the creator of this spectacle performed the compression of the iron box many times. At each time, depending on the number and quality of the magical beasts to be crushed, the degree of power may have been changed slightly. Because of that, the areas where the steps overlap each other look like stairs.

Thinking there might be some materials or magic stones I could use, I started searching seriously, but there was nothing decent enough left. Everything was crushed so flat they couldn't be used, and the magic stones were shattered altogether.

Slowly lifting a large dead body, I examined it closely and found it was a lizard monster. It was almost like a cracker. Most of its adamant scales were shattered, and the remaining scales were cracked through.

When Fran knocked on the ground as a test, she found that it was compacted and as hard as rock. Even Fran or myself could do something similar, if it was over a much smaller area. However, just how much power would be needed to compress such a wide area at once?

"Just who... could have done this...?"

"You don't know either, Mia?"

"Mm. I cannot think of any common technique which could do this. Quina, do you have any idea what did this?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Kiara-shishou! Would you know what happened here?"

"Yes."

Neither Mia nor Quina seem to know, but Kiara seems to have an idea. As expected of one who has lived so long. Mia is surprised as well.

"Eh? You know what could do this?"

"Yes, there's just one person I can think of."

Note from the author 棚架ユウ:

The total evaluation has finally passed 100000 points! Thank you very much. Moreover, when I looked at the ranking after thinking it's been a while since I checked it, just who do you think was in the top 100? Well, it only just made it, lol. This is also thanks to everyone who supported this. I'll do my best in the future, so I hope you'll continue to read this work.

By the way, another serialized work, "The Tamer who Started Late's Daily Life" is, incredibly enough, the number one in the VR game category right now (TL Note: this is from a previous release, so it may no longer be applicable now.). I can't believe it....

Thank you for supporting Reincarnated as a Sword again.

Chapter 338

"Eh? You know what could do this?"

"Yes, there's just one thing I can think of."

While looking around at the disaster to the surroundings, Kiara opened her mouth and spoke seriously.

"The Rank S adventurer known for friendly fire, Asura."

"Friendly fire? Are you sure about that!?"

"I am not. However, I cannot think of any others who could do this."

Mia is shocked. They seem to be rather famous. No, that's to be expected if they are S-Rank adventurers. Anyways, why are they fighting each other? They have a rather dangerous name attached to themselves as well.

"Who? Friendly fire?"

"S-Rank adventurers. You don't know of them? The Asura of friendly fire."

"Nn. Why the strange title?"

Fran tilted her head in confusion, leading Mia and Quina to explain to her.

"It's an old story, but I heard that when they participated in wars on other continents, they would attack their allies along with their enemies."

"The enemy was exterminated, and it seems the allies also suffered enormous damage."

"That's not all. I have a number of similar stories as well."

"The reason he still hasn't been punished is because he's overwhelmingly strong, and is constantly making more money than he can waste."

"There are many rumors mixed in with the facts, so I don't know how much is true."

Even if those stories are only half true, it still paints a bad picture. After all, regardless of whether you're an ally or an enemy, one has to be careful just being closeby.

"Well, it's not that he's a bad person."

"Kiara-shishou has met this Asura?"

"Ah, a couple of times. It's just, though I say he's not a bad person, he's the type that loses sight of everything around him when he ramps up. That's why he is always wandering alone. If we encounter the Asura and I tell you to run away, you absolutely must run. Absolutely."

Kiara warns Fran and the others with a scary expression on her face. From what Kiara says so far, this sounds like a seriously dangerous guy.

However, even if we stay cautious, if we don't understand this person's ability, we won't know what to be cautious about.

"What ability does he have?"

"Oh, that's right. You didn't know. Since he's so famous, I just assumed that you knew." Mia said, scratching her head.

Is he that famous? Just what is it?

"He's a Godblade wielder. Asura-dono is known to be the owner of the Earth Sword Gaia."

Of all things, he turned out to be the owner of a Godblade! And it is the Earth Sword Gaia, as well... I sort of understand just what caused this disastrous scene to happen now.

Earth magic possesses techniques to manipulate gravity. I have become able to use several of those techniques myself, thanks to raising my level in Earth Magic to master [Great Wall].

In addition, there's also a technique to drop rocks. A Godblade that bears the name of the Earth Sword is highly likely to be able to use those abilities. I don't know if it's just gravity or being able to use rocks as well, but it's possible that these abilities could be used to crush a large area all at once.

"I've seen him create the exact same scene as this before. Through some unknown means, he created beautiful cubic boulders and used them to crush some bandits once. When I heard the screams of those being crushed, as to be expected, even I felt chills."

Apparently my prediction was correct. Still, for a guy able to spread this much destruction in battle, becoming unable to see his surroundings over the heat of battle? That's already at the level of a disaster.

"The user of the Earth Sword Gaia, friendly fire Asura. Memorized."

"I don't know if he will be up ahead or not."

Well, certainly. I don't know if he is heading to the dungeon. I was thinking about things like that, but——.

10 minutes later.

"He's definitely heading North, isn't he?"

"Nn."

After continuing onwards for some time, we came across exactly the same scene as before. The only difference, if any, is the difference in the strength of the magical beasts. This time, there were no small fry included in the dead monsters. Only mid-level and high-level monsters had been crushed and died. it

No, there was one other difference. This time, some kind of giant rock wall had been created around the flattened area. The wall was 15 meters tall and 5 meters thick, but when we looked closer, we found that instead of being one solid rock, it was made of two rocks that were stuck together. Furthermore, there was a dark red liquid flowing out from between the two rocks.

It seems that between the two rocks, there was a magical beast that had become trapped there and died. Probably, like being stuck between a pair of shears, it was sandwiched between the two rock walls. There were also eight rock objects standing by quietly, sandwiching the dead monster.

".... This is definitely him. I have seen the Asura fire off this same attack before."

It seems there's no mistake that these monsters were exterminated by the Asura. Does that mean the Asura and the Dungeon are fighting each other? If this many monsters had appeared in this place, then they'd definitely be related to that Dungeon.

"Could the reason Murellia was called back be this?"

"I see, there is that possibility. Ojou-sama, how unusually clear sighted."

"You didn't need to add 'unusually'! More importantly, we need to hurry to the Dungeon. If we are fast enough, we might be able to expect Asura-dono's assistance."

Are we going to get the Friendly Fire's help? If possible, I don't really want to get involved with that person... But if he doesn't have blood rushing to his head, he isn't likely to attack without warning.

"However, from the rumors I heard about Asura, I don't believe he will just quietly agree to help."

"We just need to hire him! In the case of emergencies, we have no choice but to do whatever is necessary, even seduction."

".... Seduction?"

"Wha-, what's with those looks!? The Asura might be a pervert that likes flat chested girls!"

"I suppose so."

"Don't look at me like that!"

It seems Asura is known to be free spirited, and won't obey others if he doesn't like them, regardless of whoever that person might be. In fact, he's even picked fights with entire countries. On the other hand, if he likes you, he will accept even dangerous requests easily. The only thing is, he seems to charge a very expensive commision. And in advance.

"I cannot pay the request fee, you know."

"Take out that money you're hiding away. I know that you're storing it with your maid."

"This is saved in case of an emergency you know? I can't use it in a place like this."

"This is an emergency, fool!"

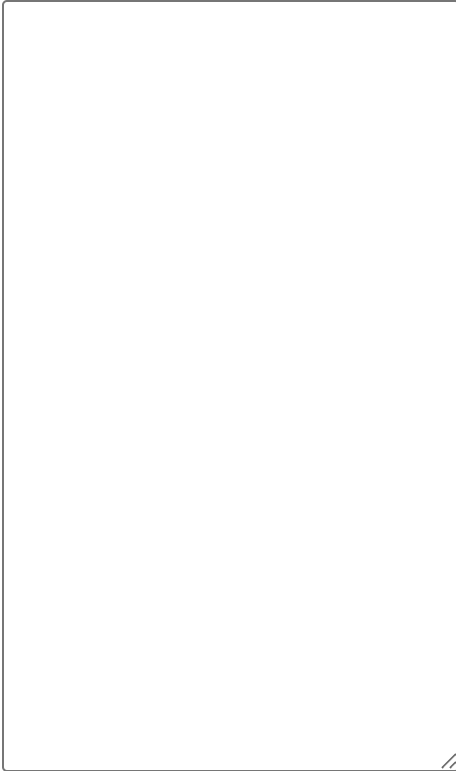

The longer I listen, the more uneasy I feel.

"At any rate, let us hurry to the dungeon."

"Right."

Chapter 339

The golem carriage continued to move North, past the abandoned monster corpses left behind by the Asura. Along the way, we encountered three more magic beast massacres. However, the situation in these massacres was different from the previous ones.

"This place looks terrible as well."

Mia muttered, and no wonder. The whole area was a sea of blood. The earth is covered in dark red blood, and the stench fills the battlefield. For the beastkin who possesses good senses of smell, this must be terrible. Along with Mia, Fran and Guendalfa were also frowning.

Here the appearance of the corpses is different from before. Rather than being crushed by a mysterious power like earlier, these magic beasts were clearly slaughtered by something sharp; this likely scattered large amounts of the evil beings' blood around, polluting the surrounding area.

"Asura?" Fran.

"I'm not sure. The Godblade Gaia he wields certainly is shaped like a greatsword, however... I don't think he would go through the trouble of killing like this." Kiara.

Kiara tilted her head in thought at Fran's murmur. The Earth Sword Gaia seems to be a greatsword. However, why change fighting styles all of a sudden? It's possible he wanted to move his body, see blood, or some other reason to suddenly fight directly.

More realistically, it's possible something besides the Asura slaughtered the evil beings. Well, that just leaves us the question of what other things could imitate the Asura like this.

"I think weapons were used here...."

"If it was a magic beast, they might be able to do this with their claws instead of weapons."

"Ah, that's right. Also, look at this corpse. I can't see a human doing this."

In addition to the butchered corpses, there were beheaded corpses and corpses which looked like something forcibly tore them apart from crotch to chest.

The way they were defeated really is different from the magic beasts thought to have been killed by the Asura, just as I thought.

"These aren't mere small fry."

"Nn. There's a Goblin General. That's a Goblin Sorcerer."

Apparently, whether it was a human or beast, whatever created this terrible scene wasn't interested in anything after killing. As such, valuable materials were left untouched without being dismantled and harvested or eaten.

Not just that, the magic stones were also left behind. I had Fran pick up the Goblin General's magic stone, and then secretly absorbed it. Though, I was only able to obtain one point from it.

(Why is this...?)

Although it's a Goblin, if it's a high ranking species like this Goblin General, I should be able to absorb a magic stone value of at least three to ten points....

(Fran, could you get some others?)

"Nn."

Fran then picked up the magic stones which looked like ones which would have reasonably high magic stone values, such as those from the Orc Mages and Goblin Sorcerers. I then obscured Fran's body, pretending to be a Dimensional Storage, and absorbed the magic stones. However, the magic stone values were still just one point each.

(Strange.)

(What's wrong?)

(I absorbed too few magic stone points from the magic stones.)

(Like the time with the Valkyrie?)

That's right. It's the same as that time with the Valkyrie, where the Evil God's Stone Spear went out of control. Is the power of the Evil God involved here, after all?

Or, the Evil God's Stone Spear could have eaten their soul. If the power of the Valkyrie's magic stone was weakened by that, it's possible that evil beings can eat souls as well.

(Fran, don't let your guard down.) Shisho.

"Nn." Fran.

I searched the surroundings, however, I was unable to find anything suspicious. Whatever did this must have moved from this area already.

"Everyone, proceed carefully from here on. There's no telling what might be lurking." Mia.

"Indeed." Kiara.

It seems Mia and Kiara have also determined that the perpetrator of this slaughter was not Asura. While scanning the surroundings with frowns, we started the golem carr again.

The opinion that we should have Quina scout came up, but we don't know what might be lurking. We decided to travel with the carriage concealment function turned on from here on out.

I remained on guard for a while, but we haven't yet been attacked. Much less the perpetrator of the slaughter, we haven't even been attacked by normal magic beasts.

Did the dungeon monsters run away last night after detecting a strong being like Asura fighting? At any rate, it was fortunate for us to avoid exhausting ourselves.

"Everyone, over there." Quina.

Quina stopped the carriage again, and called to us from the driver's seat.

"Mn? Did you find something?"

"That, isn't that the large boulder landmark that we heard about from the prisoner?"

Quina pointed at a strange rock that seemed to pierce the heavens. It was a pointed boulder that looked like a twisted dragon horn.

"In other words, that means that there must be a cave leading to the dungeon up ahead."

"Yes. I believe it is beyond that forest."

Certainly, it looks just like the landmark to find the entrance to the dungeon that we heard from Johan. According to Johan's information, there should be a dungeon beyond the forest at the end of the rock.

"Let's walk from here on." Quina.

"Right. Kiara-shishou, could you please lead?" Guendalfa.

"Leave it to me." Kiara.

"Quina will be the rearguard."

"Understood."

It makes sense to have the two experienced and battle tested people at the front and back. It's a good decision.

We walked through the forest sprawling at the foot of the Border Mountains while erasing our tracks. We advanced without becoming lost. Although there is no road, the path left by traces of many traveling monsters kept us on track. By following it, we could advance without hesitation.

However, by this point, I should have been able to sense the magic energy from the Dungeon, but there was no sign of it.

It seems to differ depending on the dungeon, but if the dungeon master is intelligent, it seems that it is more common to hide the magic energy. It seems that dungeons have various facilities and functions, and there are ways to prevent magic power from leaking out. Whether to conceal the dungeon or not depends on the purpose of the dungeon master, but this time it is definitely the purpose of hiding.

After a while, Kiara suddenly stopped and hid in the nearby bushes. As expected, Fran and the others followed suit.

"Kiara-shishou, could this be...?"

"Yeah, we found it."

Chapter 340

Chapter 340

Master Kiara, could it be that...?”

”Oh, I see it . ”

When we reached the foot of the mountain range through tall, but thin trees forming a dense forest, peculiar to the area around the Boundary Mountain Range and unsuitable for lumber, it emerged suddenly out in the open .

A large number of corpses of evildoers are scattered in front of us . And beyond that as well . A huge cave with a gaping mouth could be seen on the surface of the Boundary Mountain Range .

“I don’t feel any magic around here . ”

”Mmn . ”

It’s a pretty huge cave . The entrance alone is more than 15 meters high . It must be more than 40 meters in width . If it was near the entrance, a small village would have been able to create it .

Sometimes, with the caves like this one you have to go down the cliff to the entrance just to get in, but here is a gentle slope, I was able to approach it on foot . If it were Earth, it would make a great setting for a little exploration special .

We crept closer to the entrance to the cave . Huge mossy boulders stand near the entrance and huge stalactites hang from the ceiling in a row .

At first glance, it looks like a natural cave, but the placement of the rocks and such seemed a bit awkward . Obviously, there is a route that would be the way to go .

There are signs of quite a large army coming and going . In addition, there are some rather large footprints of magical beasts .

Kiara snorted and lightly touched the ground in front of the cave . At first glance, it looks a bit trampled, but when you're at Kiara's level, you'll be able to tell what kind of people have passed through, and how many .

"I'm sure this is the entrance to the dungeon . "

"I see . Let's go in quickly then . "

"Oh . They said there were no traps or anything like that, but watch out for them . "

"Yes . "

And so, with Kiara at the front of the pack again, we carefully steered our way through the cave .

"Mmm, that's... . "

"It's a light..."

"It smells like blood . "

Kiara stopped, and Mea and Fran each responded . Indeed, the end of the cave had been altered . The limestone cave breaks off and suddenly turns into a stone structure . The walls were set up with what looked like lamps, and it really looked like a passageway for a fort or something .

What's more, there was once again a large amount of demonic beast corpses . Over here, the evil people were crushed to death . And it's not just the floor, it's the walls and the ceiling that were covered in those spattered corpses .

This must be the work of Lord Ursulath .

”Oh, this is amazing nonetheless . Normally, a large scale attack would be difficult to conduct in a narrow passage within a dungeon... .”

Mea and Kiara looked at it and groaned . If you have a wide range of attacks, there’s a good chance you’ll get yourself involved . However, with gravity control, there is less damage to the surroundings . It must be hard to blow oneself up . If you think about it, earth magic may be easier to use within a dungeon than fire, water, or wind .

”Earth magic is strong in dungeons?”

But at Fran’s words, Kiara tilts her head .

”I wouldn’t say that in general . ”

”Why?”

”There are many places in the dungeon where there is no dirt . Unless you’re in a cavern or something . ”

Even if the dungeon walls and such are of stone, they are still under the control of the dungeon . It seemed to be very difficult to manipulate . I’ve tried it, but the skill of turning the ground into a needle consumes a lot more magic than usual .

It would be difficult to use a technique that uses the earth to attack an enemy, let alone a technique that fires a mass of earth created by magic .

If you think about it, it may be difficult to use the earth attribute unless you’ve cultivated the earth magic that allows you to learn gravity control techniques .

I don’t think it was this bad in Urumut’s dungeon, but I guess it’s different in each dungeon .

”Mmm!”

”What was that!”

”Hmm, great magic . ”

As we passed through the site of the slaughter caused by Ursulath and tried to go further, we felt a huge magic power, so massive that Fran and the others had to brace themselves . At the same time, a resounding vibration shook the walls .

”Someone’s used some big magic on you . ”

”Lord Ursulath, is it?”

”Maybe . We’ll make haste, too . ”

Along the way, as Johan had said, there were no traps at all . But halfway through, there is a sudden dead end and a staircase leading downward appears .

”Hmmm... didn’t the Beastmen Nation side say it was a single road for a while?”

”Yes, it should be . ”

To begin with, the main part of this dungeon exists on the Bashar Kingdom’s side . The part that was extended to the Beastmen Nation’s side was only treated as an underpass to invade beyond the Boundary Mountains .

”Why are there stairs like this..... . Besides, a demon beast can’t get through in this tight space . ”

Kiara was right, that staircase was completely human-sized . I think a Minotaur could pass through . It would be tough if it were an ogre .

But it’s weird . It is certain that a large army of demon beasts used the exit of the cave we used to enter as a way in and out . If so, where did they come from?

Or can it be transposed if it's in a dungeon? Then you can transfer it to the entrance side . It was strange that there were a lot of traces of magical beasts marching around here as well .

"There are so many things I don't understand..... . . But we can't turn back here, either . Quina, do you think you can take the lead?"

"Yes . I'll be with you in a moment . "

Lead the way? As I was watching to see what was going on, Quina used phantom magic to create a dwarf-like object . It looks like a kindergarten-sized mannequin .

By the way, Quina's visionary magic is as terrible as ever . I can feel the presence, even the heat . Well, let this one lead the way . I don't know if you can deceive a trap or not with it, but if it's a lurking monster, you can probably fool it well enough .

"You're as good as ever . "

"I'm ashamed . "

"All right, let's go . "

Chapter 341

Chapter 341

Beyond the Labyrinth

The structure of the interior of the dungeon was truly worthy of the name of a labyrinth . A maze of narrow, branching passageways stretches on and on . Esoteric demon beasts and traps are also plentiful .

Well, the demon beasts were mostly carcasses, although the traps had been lifted quite a bit . No, it's better to say they were disabled or activated .

Apparently, all the people who were ahead of them were trapped . Earth Wrath is a Rank S adventurer, right? I'm sure you have the skill to disarm it . Or did you create a little lead like we did and disarm it on purpose?

“That guy's way of doing things hasn't grown up at all . Maybe they sent a golem or something to kamikaze them . ” Kiara .

It seems to be a way to deactivate the suicide bomb by using the leader . Well, it's easy .

”That said, I'm sure there are some types that can detect heat... . Well, it doesn't matter if it's Earth Wrath or not . ” Kiara .

In the end, we didn't fall for one of the traps . Moreover, if you follow the Demon Beast's crushed corpse, you won't get lost .

”Even so, it's funny . I have never heard of such a great labyrinth in the information the man Johan has given us . ” Quina .

”Were you not hypnotized?” Fran .

Fran tilts her head, but Quina shakes her head in denial .

”No, it was not an act, it was fully into it . There were a few scenes along the way where emotions ran high, probably because they were asked questions about the beastmen they hated . A trance doesn’t mean that you lose your emotions . ” Quina .

”So does that mean that man didn’t know about this labyrinth, too?” Fran .

”Maybe, maybe not . I think they weren’t informed about this place . ”
Kiara .

Quina nods at Kiara’s words, but I’ve been thinking of another possibility . That being said, the dungeon may have been expanded to coincide with the onslaught of Earth Wrath .

He hastily creates a labyrinth full of traps in order to hold back the strong enemies who have invaded . It’s a common development in light novels with a dungeon master as the main character .

If you think about it, however, it also explains why Johan didn’t know and why the traces of the demon beasts were suddenly cut off and the human labyrinth suddenly appeared .

Thinking back to Murellia’s description, she said that she would use points to expand the dungeon . Plus, I’ve seen Lumina create a room in an instant in the dungeon in Urumut . Wouldn’t it be possible to build a labyrinth in an instant, depending on the points you pay?

Well, it’s only in my imagination, and even if I knew that, there’s still no development in the battle .

One hour later .

After wading through the labyrinth, the end was finally in sight . Ahead, I saw a huge door with a clearly different atmosphere than ever before . If it were a normal dungeon, you’d think it was a boss room .

Even so, I had only fought a few demons and traps along the way, but it took this long... . If everything was perfect, it would have taken many times longer than this .

While moving, there were a few times when he sensed powerful magic . It seems that someone is fighting somewhere in the dungeon . And we could sense the same magical wavelengths from the huge door in front of us .

”In a normal dungeon, other adventurers are often not allowed inside while fighting the boss...”

Kiara and Quina approached the door and examined its structure .

”There are no traps, sir . ”

”You can’t open this one if you touch it . ”

Apparently, it opens easily .

”Let’s go! Now, you may still be able to join Lord Earth Wrath!” Mea .

”Join forces? Don’t be ridiculous . He doesn’t need that . All right . I’ll tell you one thing, don’t approach the Earthers carelessly . Not until I say it’s fine . ” Kiara .

At Mea’s words, Kiara nails it with a look so serious that it’s scary . Hearing this, Guendalfa must have become afraid of Earthrath once again . Buruli and his huge body shook .

”Master Kiara . Is he such a horrible man, that he should be killed by his own people?”

”It’s a given . I’ll tell you who to be on the lookout for in this dungeon . It’s not a dungeon master, nor is it a Murellia . He has lost his way, Earth Wrath . Remember that . ”

Kiara announces in a low voice, as if to frighten everyone . No, it’s not a threat; it’s probably the truth . There was a strong sense of tension from Kiara .

”I understand . ”

”Hmm . Okay . ”

” ..... ”

Mea and Fran also nodded their heads with a mysterious look . As far as Guendalfa is concerned, he is at a loss for words . She swallowed her breath and grunted as she nodded . The maids are great here as always . It’s truly the power of the iron spirit .

”But can’t we just sit here and wait with anticipation?”

“I know . It’s not like it was decided that it was Earth Wrath inside in the first place . ”

”Well then!”

”We’re going to have to go . ”

Then, Kiara touches the door .

Gogo-go-go-go...

Beyond the earth-shaking, open door was a large circular hall . My first impression is of the Colosseum . Well, the ground is cobblestone, although the ceiling is domed .

The reason why this place reminded me of the Colosseum is because of the tense atmosphere of a huge man holding a large sword in the center of the hall, and a triceratops-like demon beast nearly 20 meters long facing him .

The demon beast had already lost three of its five horns, and its six legs were also reduced to four, with blue-black blood dripping from severed legs . Clearly harder than iron, the armor-like shell that covered its entire body was carved with several lacerations, and flesh was visible through the gaps .

On the other hand, the big man with the horns sprouting from his forehead was unscathed . On the contrary, he wasn’t even breathing heavily . It was obvious that he overwhelmed a demon beast that would be a rank C threat .

The demon beast let out a roar of anger, but did not move . No, it couldn't move . It's probably because of the exhaustion of the battle so far and also because of the deep fear of men instilled in it . His snort was also rough, and although he turned his murderous gaze on the man, he did not try to step forward from the spot .

The man who had been observing such a demon beast for a while, carried the large sword he was holding on his shoulders . Then, I point my left hand towards the demon beast .

The man muttered as his magic rapidly increased .

”Crush it . ”

”Boh-oh-oh-oh-oh-oh-oh-oh-oh!”

Immediately afterwards, I saw the demon beast being crushed from the left and right, as if it was being wrapped in an invisible giant hand . There was no movement, only the demon beast's pitiful screams echoed in the hall . Eyeballs and tongues pop out from the powerful pressure, and blood spurts from wounds all over the body . The bodily fluids are eventually blocked by an invisible wall and can only accumulate in the same spot .

A few seconds later, the beast had been brutally crushed to death by some kind of attack unleashed by the man . From the front, it only looks like a piece of wood .

I quickly examined the man – Earth – and found him to be a monster .

The status of the Earth as appraised by the Master is listed in the postcard .

Chapter 342

I was sure it was Asura . He is a true monster . He has a huge amount of first-hand skills and a lot of fancy titles .

“Well, his ability is right up there with the Beast King . ”

Crushed from left and right by an unseen force, the corpse of the flattened demonic beast slowly fell to the ground . The ground shook, bringing Mea and Guendalfa to their senses .

From their point of view, what happened in front of them was shocking . So shocking that even though it was only a matter of seconds, they had exposed themselves defenseless in the hostile territory of the dungeon .

Kiara grabs Mea’s shoulder tightly as she tries to advance . Seeing the serious expression on her face, Mea remembered what the other person was like .

“I-I’m sorry . ”

“It’s fine . But you’re going to stay here for a while . ”

And only Kiara steps forward .

Fran and her team lowered their weapons to show that they don’t have any hostilities toward him . Meanwhile, they lightly tipped their center of gravity forward so that they can move at any time . The only one thing to do is to avoid antagonizing him .

Apparently, Fran and the others became more aware of how dangerous the situation was when they saw the man who had mysteriously crushed the huge demonic beast to death with his mysterious power . Kiara hides her nervousness and speaks to the demon in a carefree manner .

“Asura, long time no see . ”

“Haa? Are you —— isn’t this Kiara? You’ve become a hag!”

“Hmm . You haven’t changed . ”

“Wahahahaha! It’s because I’m a demon . ”

“Hmm, okay for now... . . All of you, come here!”

Seems like Asura is not in a situation where he is losing sight of the situation . Kiara beckons Fran and the others to join her .

“What is this? Are you leading a field trip?”

“They may be little girls, but in their own way, they’re promising little girls . Well, I’m sort of like a chaperone for them . ”

The great sword on the back of Asura, who was conversing with Kiara, was unusually large . The crimson pattern alone might be nearly a meter long . The sword was about to scrape the ground even when being strapped at an angle on the two-plus-meter tall Asura’s back .

I couldn’t take my eyes off that sword . It’s not just big . It has a colossal presence and an intimidating feeling that radiated from within . I had to struggle to keep myself from trembling .

” ..... . This is that sword huh.....”

Name: Earth sword · Gaia

Attack Power: 2000

Magic Power: 6000

Durability: 10000

Magic power conductivity: SS

Skill:

Grant Holy Land, Earth Magic Strengthening, Earth Magic Granting, Earth Disabling, Maximum Magic Recovery, and Magic Power Control .

Without realising it, I already appraised it, and it was astounding . Even if you were to compare just their simple offensive power, it would completely overwhelm others . Moreover, as he specialized in the power of manipulating earth, with the boost given by the power of his sword, his ability soared tremendously .

Is this what they called a divine weapon? I'll admit its strength is immense . But I had a feeling that with a few good sorcerers, I could compete with it . But how did it become ground sword • Gaia? Wasn't it the earth sword? No, like Lind, his power may not have been fully released . I'm suspicious of the divine sword release that was in Asura's extra skill . If that's the case, then it will be even stronger than this when it is released .

As I was thinking about this, Asura's eyes turned to me .

“Did someone appraise it?”

I was impressed . How do you know that if you don't even have an appraisal detection skill?

“It's— It's making me feel sick . My gut tells me what to do . And I feel like I'm being watched . ”

“I'm sorry . We teach them to be vigilant in dungeons . ”

Mea and Guendalfa are surrendering to Asura's words . However, Asura's laughter, which rose immediately afterwards, softened the hard atmosphere of the place .

“Hahahahahaha! It’s fine! I’m not mad at you . I was born with this face so it can’t be helped . But I was simply checking . But still, I’m more surprised that that mad dog – no, that mad tiger-like Kiara – bowed out for someone else! You’ve become so well rounded!”

“I don’t need to hear from you, who has never grown up . ”

“You said it! Well, it’s true! I’m just saying, we don’t change that easily . ”

“Haaa... . . ”

There’s something about Kiara and Asura that makes them understand each other . I wondered what kind of monster he was, since he look so threatening before, but he was just a regular old foul-mouthed guy . Maybe it’s because he is also a demon, but it somehow reminds me of Donadrondo from the Alessa Guild . Well, Asura has a bigger body and horns than him though .

Mea ask a question after the tension has been released .

“What do you mean by “never changed”? What does Lord Asura mean I wonder?”

“Well . I’ve been doing a lot of digging to break the curse . ”

“A... . Curse...?”

Mea tilts her head . I appraised Asura first, too, and I don’t think there was any particular notation of a curse or anything like that in the state .

“Oh, it’s a blessing and a curse . I have certain unique skills .

“Demonization” . I’ve been going around the country trying to shut these skills down . ”

“What skills are those?”

“When activated, some abilities and skills rose several times, and resilience is increased by an order of magnitude . In terms of combat power alone, I’d say several times that . ”

“Eh?... . Then”

“But do you think there’s no downside to such powerful skills?”

After Asura says that, he sits down with a thud on the platform he made by raising the floor . It was Kiara who continued to speak in place of Asura, who continued to smile to himself . There is an air of pain in her eyes as she looks at Asura .

“It’s automatically triggered by repeated combat . What’s more, you can’t choose when to activate it, and when it’s activated, you will go berserk and lose your mind making you unable to distinguish between friend and foe . And yet, his wisdom on combat stays without a problem, spreading destruction . It’s definitely a curse for this guy . ”

Still, after years of experience, he can sense when it was nearly time and he acts as if he is retreating to go to the frontier where there are no allies, so he could rampage around unnoticed .

It is indeed a curse . No matter how great the skill is – no, it’s too great . But that... Just seeing his title... . It just too painful... . It’s just a reminder of how much he has killed his fellow member . But this skill, I can make it go away, can’t I?

I can take it away with a skill-taker skill . But then I have to equip it... If it turns out I can not un-equip it though, that would be the worst .

But you’ll soon see that my thoughts quickly turn out to be useless .

“Wasn’t there an adventurer who could obliterate a skill?”

“Oh . Rank A adventurer, Maleficent the Black . It has a skill called Skill Eraser, which eliminates the opponent’s skills . Of course I tried . ”

“Was it... no good?”

“It worked . His skills have been disabled for a year or so, but my unique skill, “Demonization,” is gone for... . two days . ”

“Eh?”

“Inherent skills are the ones that are most tied to a person’s existence . Whether it’s erased or taken away, it’ll come back to life over time . I’ve tried skill-eliminating skills and the ability to take away skills and stuff like that but the results are always the same . Which means it’s only a matter of time before it came back to me . ”

“I got this skill when I was an ordinary demon warrior, but for some unknown reason I was mutated into an evil demon . ”

“A mutation? Isn’t that an evolution?”

Asura answers Fran’s question . He still looks like a good-natured old man .

“Evolution is about advancing to new heights when you reach your maximum level . A mutation is when something other than the level is met and changes into something different . Well, they’re both similar, but it’s generally accepted that the mutation has a smaller pretense of ability . ”

“But the evil demons are a bit special . They are a phantom mutant whose existence has been questioned even by demons . A demon of misfortune who loses reason and destroys everything . I never thought I’d be the one to acquired it . However, considering my ability to become a mad demon, I guess that means the lore was right . ”

Moreover, he is now the owner of the divine sword . The rumor that the army had been eradicated was rather cute . Because the country could have been destroyed .

“Well, that’s why the mad demonization doesn’t go away even a little bit . In a way, it’s a skill that’s like the very definition of the existence of a demon of misfortune . You can also use the method of mutating again to erase the skill . Unfortunately, demons can only mutate once in a lifetime . So I’m looking for a way to lock in my skills . Of course that only works for a short period of time . But what I’m looking for is a way to permanently seal your skills . ”

“Did Lord Asura come to this dungeon in search of that method?”

“Well, dungeons are places that are out of this world’s way . So It is possible . I’ve been to dungeons all around the country, not just here . Besides, I am doing a request . ”

“What do you mean, Asura?”

Kiara asks back . It is a request? In other words, you came to this dungeon at the request of someone? But who?

“Well, if it’s Kiara and her friends, I guess it’s fine . It’s the gods . ”

“What?”

Chapter 343

Chapter 343

Kiara asks back . Is it a request? In other words did you come to this dungeon at the request of someone? But who?

“Well if it’s Kiara and her friends, It’s god!”

“What?” Kiara asks in disbelief . Apparently even Kiara can’t agree to those words . As if that was funny, Asura chuckled and continued to say more .

“Kukuku, Apparently, the gods have a peculiar obsession with divine swords . They are supposedly always being watched . ”

It is possible that depending on how the divine swords are used, they could become more dangerous than evil gods . That could be why they’re being monitored .

“And if something goes wrong, he’ll send the oracle flying . Well, I guess it’s just a matter of time before you start using it . ”

“Does that mean that you are commanded by God to do some kind of mission?”

“No it’s not something that big . This time it’s just a one way trip to the location of this place”

“Then, is it an order?”

God is sending me information about the place directly as if he wants me to go there, so it certainly seems like an order just like Mea says . But apparently, that's not the case .

"I've only ever received a proper order twice now . Besides, I've ignored your request a few times in the past, but I haven't been accused of anything before . "

"Y- You ignored him! The oracle!"

"Well, I was in the middle of some important work that I couldn't take off otherwise . But they didn't punish you, so I guess that means they're not angry . "

You're a brave man . Even if it wasn't an order, it's a request from God that you ignored . Even Kiara looks anxious as she listens back .

That's unusual for someone from this world . No, now that I think about it, I'm being made to struggle with a skill I don't want, so maybe I'm taking a surprisingly slanted view of God .

"Is it really that there is no punishment? Isn't it simply that there is no punishment yet to be meted out?"

"Hahaha, like the Laurentian tragedy?"

"A,aaa..."

"What is... the Laurentian tragedy?"

Huh? "Is the Black Cat Lady from another continent, perhaps?"

"Yes"

"Well, then I guess it's no wonder you don't know . "

The tragedy of Laurencia was apparently an incident that took place about 150 years ago on this continent . The story goes back another 50 years – or 200 years from now .

At that time, there was a small nation called the Laurentian Kingdom to the south of the Beastmen Nation . Due to their geographical position, they were always standing in the downwind of the Beastmen Nation and were treated like a vassal state . The king was too young and too patriotic to endure it .

‘What should such a king do?’ Foolish people with power would think the same anywhere . The King of Laurencia then invited an evil magician to summon an evil god by offering his soul to the evil god through that man . From the beginning, the king did not intend to summon evil gods, but rather to bring chaos and exhaustion by unleashing a large number of fecund goblins into the Beastmen Nation . The King of Laurentia, who imposed heavy taxes on his people, used the money he collected to buy slaves for sacrifice, and sacrificed the people who couldn’t pay their taxes for the shortfall .

But then the people who rose up to overthrow the king plunged the Laurentian kingdom into civil war and the king was eventually captured .

We don’t know what kind of negotiations took place at this time, but the king was not executed . The royal family was dismantled and the country shifted to a parliamentary government of the people . However, the former royal family was condemned to slavery and driven to the frontier, where they were ordered to cultivate the untamed wilderness .

But the royal family didn’t just die out . The former king started to make amends and set about cultivating the land . It was said that he worked hard, cultivated at an incredible rate, and contributed greatly to the productivity of the Laurentian Republic . Not only that, but he also did charitable work, such as running an orphanage and reemployment for the injured and sick .

By the time fifty years had passed, there were fewer people within the Laurentian Republic who spoke ill of the former royal family . Then, by unanimous consent of Congress, they were freed from slavery . Well, it seems like there was a lot of political talk involved, but it’s not relevant here, so we’ll skip that . What’s important is that the Laurentians were truly converted and accepted within the Republic . The former king and others were considered eminent persons by then .

However, there was a being who had not forgotten their sin . Namely, the gods .

Suddenly one day, divine punishment was handed down to the Laurentian family . The charge was that he used a large number of people to summon an evil god . Everyones must have thought, “Why now?”

However, the former king’s family, who were completely reformed and even revered by the people, were tragically killed by divine punishment . It was said that the only ones left were those who were of not direct descent or were from the branch family . This is the famous Laurentian tragedy of the Crome continent .

“Well, what this story shows us is how leisurely the gods are . ”

“Leisurely?”

“The God who originally existed in eternal time and us humans have different perceptions of time, I guess . For us, it seems like the punishment came after 50 years . But to the gods, 50 years isn’t that much, I guess . If you do something really bad though, you might get punished in an instant .

Well, it does make sense, somewhat . For example, if you compare a person to a bug, their perceived value of time would be completely different . I guess the same thing can be said of God and man .

“But then again, maybe Earthers just haven’t been punished yet?”

“Hahaha! It’s okay . After all, I checked directly with God’s apostle!”

“What? You’ve seen the apostle of God?”

“Yeah, I met him twice when he came to tell me his command . It’s no wonder when God commands them the Apostle will come down . I asked him if he was okay with me ignoring him, and he said he was okay with it .

“But why would he give you such a vague oracle that he doesn’t mind being ignored?”

“I don’t know . I don’t get it either..... The Apostle says it’s a personal thing, you know what I mean?”

“What do you mean?”

Asura tells his conjecture, based on what he heard from God’s apostle . Apparently, the gods will leave it at that if it’s some kind of incident . However, when evil people are involved, they’ll get involved .

It’s not something we absolutely have to fix, but if we can get our hands on it, let’s do it . Anyway that’s where the Divine Swordsman comes in . In addition to regularly monitoring them, it was easy for them to immediately send down oracles through the Divine Sword . In other words, it seemed that the idea was to use it as a surveillance tool as well as a communication tool .

“Well, as I said before, the gods are leisurely . Wouldn’t it have taken decades just to find someone near the place where the incident is likely to happen who could receive the oracle and solve the case and give the oracle? That’s why I thought I’d make a divine swordsman who can be contacted immediately . ”

It takes 50 years for God to punish you . If that’s the case, it might even take decades to make the oracle .

“This time around, it seemed like there was a dungeon involved . I figured I’d make a move . ”

“Hey Mea, have you ever received an ordainment, too?”

“An ordainment? No, I haven’t . Perhaps I am not yet recognized as the true owner . Not from the sword, not from God . ”

I see... . He looked surprised to hear the story, so it bothered me a bit .

Well, it seems like he still hasn't been able to unleash the true power of the Divine Sword, so I guess that's why .

Chapter 344

Editor: Makoto

Side Kraug

I am the gray tapir Kraug . I am the best of Gringot Intelligence . Well, even though it may sound like I am part of an intelligence organization, we never actually did anything spectacular like infiltrating enemy territory and bringing back important information or the like . If anything, our main role was to keep an eye out for enemy agents who may have infiltrated our city .

Not long ago, we managed to catch the mastermind behind the assassins who attacked the Black Thunder Princess . Speaking of the Black Thunder Princess, she's the current most popular local hero, having broken through conventional wisdom that the black cat tribe which was said to be incapable of achieving evolution . Upon usurping that deep rooted belief, she could even fight with Goddarfa to a stalemate . Hence, it would be unforgivable for anyone to even think of taking away this budding hope of the black cat tribe .

Although it took a bit of time, we managed to apprehend them in the end . On the other hand, however, it was much easier than expected for us to force them to speak up . No, it seemed to be that their mission was to leak this information in the first place .

“The Krishna royal family? The royal family that ruled the Beastmen Nation before the Narasinha family, right?”

“Yes, that's right... . We will only bow our heads to the rightful royal family . ”

Then I remembered a rumor . It was said that the current Beast King family has a dark history that people here no longer talk or even know about . One of the reasons for this is the lack of people working in a certain profession . There were only a handful of people of this specific profession or title in the Beastmen Nation . This profession we are referring to is a historian .

Despite our country being more militaristic and combative than others, it does not mean that only barbarians live here . There were also sorcerers, scholars, and in fact, my father used to be a biologist .

Yet, even though we did have all these knowledge classes, there were sadly still an extremely small number of historian students, historians, and archaeologists in this region . As a matter of fact, it's safer to say that there were almost none of them . One of the biggest reasons for this was that we didn't really have proper historical documentation left behind from before, and hence there are no old records left to be studied or kept . Apparently, it was the Beast King family of the past that destroyed the old documents . Therefore, this situation led to the fact that there wasn't really a need for this kind of occupation .

Another reason was that this profession was heavily cracked down upon by the Beast Kings a few generations ago, and most of the historians of the past have either been imprisoned and executed . As a result, the profession itself has disappeared .

Having been so thorough in their actions, it's obvious that there was a big secret that the Beast Royal Family did not want any of its citizens, or anyone else for that matter, to know . While the current Beast King was very lenient with regards to this incident up to the point where we are even able to learn about the situation, until a few decades ago, it was apparently forbidden to even mention anything of it .

What if that secret was the existence of a former royal family called the Krishna family? Moreover, what if the current royal throne came to be not from a regular regime change of successor inheritance, but instead an usurpation of its predecessors?

I wanted to know more about it . But regardless of the past, I am not dissatisfied with the current Beast Royal Family, which is currently running a good government . Rather, they are doing a fairly good job and are honorable leaders of our country .

But what about the politics behind all of this? What if a person, a survivor of the Krishna royal family, with whom the Bashar royal family is said to be cooperating with, was planning behind the scenes for a reinstatement and restoration into kingship? In some cases, they may be able to claim legitimacy .

At the very least, they may not be able to one-sidedly assert that Bashar Kingdom was evil . Regardless, even at a glance, it was a messy situation .

According to an agent of Bashar's Kingdom, the authorities of the kingdom were indebted to the Krishna royal family of the past and were unable to refuse their request . That's one thing for certain . But there's no country that can be driven to action just from gratitude alone . Instead, you can give legitimacy to your actions by appearing to be working in favor of others . In other words, this time, the war was not just a skirmish, and the Bashar Kingdom's side, anticipating this, should have been well prepared .

Half a day later . We had been sent north to scout the neighborhood . Then, near the Schwarzkatzte, we encountered a group of adventurers . They were the skillful men who marched with Master Kiara to intercept the evildoers . They also said that a knight of Bashar was amongst those that were captured .

It seemed that the knight was very loyal and wouldn't budge to any form of interrogation or extortion . But she had managed to put them in a trance and extracted information from them . Under normal circumstances, it's hard to force them to do what we want them to, and even I myself am not strong enough to make them do what I want . But apparently, he was put into a trance and it made it easier for him to fall into hypnosis . Well, even so, it was limited to just about a minute .

The knight also mentioned the name “Myrelia” . To repay the woman’s debt, the Bashar Kingdom was apparently lending a helping hand .

That Myrelia woman, she’s got some serious guts . By impressing upon one’s self-respect or patriotism, it was possible for a person to instill a favorable feeling from another to oneself . It was similar to a prostitute’s modus operandi for hitting on a man .

However, there is a high probability that the knights have already taken into account the information leaked to us, and have given only convenient information . It seemed that these knights may have already been brainwashed in the first place . In essence, the earlier testimony was not very credible .

“What’s the real purpose of this Myrelia woman? No, it’s not my job to think about this . In the meantime, I must report this to my lord... . .”

Side Rigdalfa

“Excellent work, as ever . To build such a wall in such a short time .”

“Oh, Lord Rigdalpha . You too, thank you for your hard work .”

In front of me, the young man who was smiling is of the human race, Lysius Laurentia . A member of the branch of the Laurentian royal family that perished in the famous Laurentian tragedy, he is one of the court sorcerers of our beastmen nation . Speaking of Lysius of the Great Wall, he is also known as one of the best earth magicians on this continent .

It’s unthinkable that this softly smiling figure could raise the earth and bury hundreds of enemy soldiers in the blink of an eye . However, I know that behind that smile is a strong fighting spirit . He is the same age as me, and he is also a friend who has also fought on the battlefield with me many times since the first battle 30 years ago .

”I think you’ve gone through quite a lot, haven’t you?”

I'm sure they're using the art of the Great Wall to build these walls, but I've heard they use quite a bit of magic . Furthermore, if he is to battle, his consumption must be tremendous .

“How can it be hard? I am merely doing this for the sake of protecting my place in this world . The Laurentians are now famous for being descendants of evil masters . It is a mockery in every country . It's only here in the beastmen countries that people dare to fully accept me . ”

“Is that so . ”

“Yeah . And I think you're reckless too . The White Rhinoceros' heroic breakthrough was visible even from the top of the city walls . I didn't think we'd go into the enemy lines with hundreds of infantry . ”

“Fu ha ha . Because I can't show my brother a pathetic fight now that my brother is gone . ”

My name is Rigdalfa . I am the brother of Goddarfa of the Vajra Wall, the chief of the White Rhinoceros tribe and a close associate of the Beast King . And I am also the second-in-command for this battle against Bashar Kingdom . It is my natural duty to take the lead and inspire my allies .

“So, how can I help you? It's not like you would bother to visit us on the battlefield just to warm up old friendships, right? So, is there a problem?”

“You're sharp . Take a look at this . ”

“This is.....”

Lysias looks over the letter sent to the command center . As he read on, a strong sense of bewilderment and a slight feeling of impatience appeared on his face .

I know how you feel . Because it was the same for me .

“The Krishna royal family, was it? I'm afraid I've never heard of such a name . ”

“It seems to be a royal family that reigned over our beastly kingdom 500 years ago . But it says in this letter that they’ve suffered a rebellion from the current House of Narasingha and have been usurped from the throne . ”

I’ve also spoken to my commander, the general, but I don’t care if this story is true or not . Or rather, it does matter, but it’s useless to argue further on that point right now .

Of course, I don’t think it’s an outright lie .

There are certainly some dubious aspects of the situation at the time of the Narasingha royal family’s ascension to the throne . However, he is a good King for us now, and to be honest, I don’t want him to step down now .

But in wars between nations, it was routine for such past events to be brought to light and be used as justification for vindictive actions . And that’s what you can’t fool around with . Post-war processing and so on will have a creeping effect .

I don’t know if 500 years ago is short or long . It’s definitely a time long past for us beastmen but to some of the long-lived species, it’s possible that they may still consider it as a recent event that it wouldn’t be surprising that some of them might still remember it .

However, if the Kingdom of Bashar really had at least one person from the Krishna royal family with them and they were planning on bringing that person out of the shadows, it is almost certain that they will raise complications in post-war negotiations and such . Depending on how the Bashar Kingdom intends to play out their story, there’s a substantial chance, one that we will be unable to ignore, that the surrounding nations won’t be on our side of this conflict .

“What’s more, it says that she is now an evil person...”

“Yes, that’s right . It seems like the former head of Krishna family, facing the dire situation in the past, turned to the evil god for help . Thus, as she was helpless against the onslaught of the usurpers, she had no choice but to dedicate herself to the evil god and has since become the evil god's maiden..."

"They plan to thoroughly denounce the Narasingha royal family as usurpers and are content with emphasizing the play of a woman of Krishna's blood being made into a sufferable victim of the circumstances . "

"It also says that they have no choice but to lend a helping hand because they were indebted to the Krishnas' in the past . And they also say that it is their duty as neighbors to denounce the usurper royal family and to restore the rights to the rightful royal family . "

It is tempting to question whether Bashar's kingdom is sane enough to join forces with an evil person, but it may be that the odds were stacked against them . Besides, it seems that this letter has been distributed not only to our country, but to other countries as well .

A number of inquiries have been sent from our neighboring countries, which were addressed to the Commander . We'll have to take care of that too . Each country seems to want to gauge the wind and take a careful look at the situation before doing anything else . Apparently, the same story has been circulating to other countries through channels other than the letter, and so far none country seems to think that the letter is complete bullshit, or rather, they couldn't simply brush off this news as a complete joke .

"To meddle with the power of an evil god would be nothing but a foolish thing to do, in my opinion . "

"It's very empathetic . "

"Well... that's..... I've been struggling with it since I was young . As a child of an evil mage, there wasn't a day that went by that someone didn't throw a stone at me . "

"Linford, the wizard huh?"

"He disappeared before I was 10 years old, so I don't remember much about him . Now that I think about it, he must have been mentally ill . He was an old man who always had a creepy grin on his face . I was picked up by the Beast King, but my father was despised for decades as a descendant of an evil mage, so maybe I can't help it, but..."

"You still can't find him?"

"Yes . To begin with, I'm a child from my father's old age, and if he were alive, he would be nearly 100 years old . Maybe somewhere... . he already... ."

"I'm sorry . I've been rude . "

"It's okay . The reason I'm looking for him in the first place is that I'm going to hand him over to you . Instead of talking about him, let's consult on that letter now . "

"Oh, yeah . "

It's really annoying when they just say that they have the upper hand on the war .

Chapter 345.1

Editor: Makoto

After the explanation, Asura stood up from the chair he created .

“Now, are we done here? Well, if so, you should go home now . ”

“Ha?! What are you saying?!”

“I’m fine being on my own in this place . Kiara, take them home . ”

Mea screams in surprise, but Kiara just shakes her head .

“Asura, It’s about time, isn’t it?”

“Yeah . Probably . So if you don’t want me to kill you, you need to get out of here . ”

Does that mean that Asura’s transformation into a mad demon is about to take effect? If so, it was certainly dangerous . He was already strong enough in his current state, but this change was definitely going to be a few more steps stronger and things will most likely spin out of control too . It’s no wonder that Kiara nodded honestly .

“Mea, let’s go . ”

“..... . I understand . ”

“Fran too, let’s go . ”

“..... . . mhm”

Both Mea and Fran nodded reluctantly . Mea’s sense of obligation towards her mission was so strong that she was not happy with the idea of leaving everything to Asura alone . The fact that she couldn’t do anything at this point also seemed to be a source of irritation to her . She seemed to be frustrated that she wasn’t recognized as the Lord of the Divine Sword earlier as well .

It’s a shame that Fran didn’t get a chance to witness how strong Asura is . But right now, it’s not exactly an option . At any rate, it would be bad if we got caught up in Asura’s outburst later .

“Come on, Fran . Let’s go . ”

“Mhm”

Kiara, in a somewhat impatient voice, also gave instructions to Quina and the others .

“We have to hurry . Quina, open the door . ”

“Yes, my lord . Meanoa you will take care of the Lord . ”

“Yes, sir . ”

With Quina in the lead, we hurried to the entrance . I supposed the reason they made Meanoa last was to see to it that Mea didn’t stupidly plant an imitation of herself . Well, I don’t think it’s possible, but if it is, I would have went back to Asura by myself .

“Wha . . ?”

“What’s the matter Quina?”

“It won’t open...”

“What?”

“When we entered this room earlier, I made sure it could be opened and closed . ”

I wondered if it was made so it couldn't be opened from the inside, but apparently Quina, unlike us, was already making sure it could be opened and closed securely before .

Isn't this bad? I tried using Dimension Gate . It didn't really matter even if we can't get out of the dungeon at the moment, as long as we all could escape this room as soon as possible .

“—That, what do you mean?”

But the magic didn't even kick in . When I tried to activate space-time magic, my magic power did not materialize as expected .

(Master?)

“Metastasis is blocked . ”

I knew this feeling all too well . The teleportation-disrupting barrier Myrelia had put up . That was the moment I came to that realization .

“Hahaha! That door is closed, you can't leave now, you know? I've set up a barrier so teleportation is useless you know, it's futile!”

“That voice!”

“Myrelia?”

A voice suddenly echoed in the room, and the younger group consisting of Mea and Fran braced themselves for it .

“That's right!”

Myrellia teleported to the opposing side from us, with Asura standing in between both parties . As it was a barrier put up by the power of the evil gods, only Myrellia, who had obtained their blessings, would be able to use teleportation .

She's still smiling and laughing, it's obvious that she was truly enjoying this . However, the evil spirit emanating from her body seemed to have weakened slightly . Was it the aftereffects of breaking evil manifestation? Well, regardless, she was still strong enough to not be underestimated, though .

"I didn't expect a divine sword user to come along . I also didn't realize the labyrinth we built to slow them down could be breached so quickly . "

"You are..., the dungeon master?"

"You're wrong . But well, in a way I am related to the dungeon . "

"I see... . . "

It looks like he was able to sense the evil spirit emitted by Myrellia and discerned at a glance that she was an enemy . Asura pulled out his divine sword, Gaia, and braced himself . However, that gaze was not only directed at Myrellia, but also at us . Asura opened his mouth with a serious expression .

"..... . Kiara"

"I understand"

"Look, you...,you just protect the kids . And when the time comes, don't hesitate, okay?"

"Yes . "

What should we do? As long as we can't escape this place, aren't we going to have to be stuck running around and getting out of Asura's way?

Or do we want to take care of Myrellia as fast as we can before Asura goes out of control? That might be possible with this group . If Asura was going to run amok in this space anyway, it would be the end of our adventure . If that's the case, I feel that it's better to end the fight as fast as possible and part ways with Asura .

Asura seems to think so too .

“We’re gonna crush that bitch as fast as we can . Let’s get on with it . ”

“I understand . We all must follow Asura’s command . ”

“Of course!”

“Yes!”

Mea is somewhat happy about that . Quina and Meanoa nodded silently .
Fran was ready to fight too .

“Fran’s sword in particular has the power to break the cycle of evil and reveal the truth . It is effective against the evil one . ”

“Oh? Well, that’s encouraging . ”

I’ve decided to reveal that I’m equipped with the skill ‘Breaking Evil Manifestation’ . After all, it’s a trump card against Myrellia .

“Black cat lady, don’t get carried away and get caught up in my attacks, okay?”

“Mhm!”

“Well, it looks okay . How do you get to be that strong at your age anyway? I’ve heard that the black cat tribe is weak, but Miss and Kiara, you guys are just awesome . ”

Well, both Fran and Kiara are a special case . They were probably the number one and two in the black cat tribe at the moment . While we were talking about this, Myrellia didn’t attack us . For some reason, she stood there with a wry smile on her face .

“Are you guys done talking, I wonder?”

“With all these people, you still dare to act so relaxed?”

“That’s not true you know~ to a certain degree that is . Anyway I want to ask you one more question, it’s fine right?”

“Haa?! What is it?!”

“You seem to be already on the edge of transforming, though? Are you sure you can fight in that kind of condition?”

Chapter 345.2

Chapter 345.2: - Rematch II

“You seem to be already on the edge of transforming, though? Are you sure you can fight in that kind of condition?”

“Tsk!”

Asura clicks his tongue loudly upon hearing Myrellia’s words.

“The urge for destruction is growing within you. The Great Labyrinth was breached in a flash, but it wasn’t entirely in vain, was it? Ufufufu... I wonder if the more you fight, the faster you change? I hope you don’t completely lose it and get your friends implicated...”

“Then I’m going to kill you before I go mad!”

That cry from Asura was the signal for the opening of the war. Asura ran towards Myrellia. There wasn’t to be any preemptive, discerning strikes. Instead, he went all out right from the beginning. Although Myrellia avoided it by teleporting away, the attack, which hit the ground, sent a loud vibration throughout the room.

It’s indeed difficult to teleport without chanting. But that doesn’t mean Myrellia is at a disadvantage. After all, just being able to teleport is already a huge advantage.

“Haaa! Flash Thunder!”

“Ahahahaha, impatient now are we!”

“Hmph!”

I would read the destination of the teleportation, while Fran was ahead of me. Even if the teleportation itself was interfered with, I could still sense the fluctuations of space and read the other's position.

“Haaaaaaa!”

“Sh!”

Fran used a flash of lightning to slash at high speed. It was a move that favored speed over blows. I've got it. Thanks to the skill, 'Breaking Evil Manifestation', if the attack connects, it will chip away at the evil spirit. Rather than just continuously bombarding Myrellia with regular attacks, this attack instead would put more pressure on her.

At the same time as I was attacking her, I was also making an imaginative steel cord. As I got more and more used to it, the transformation became smoother and smoother.

“Oh, that's not very nice.”

“You let her get away!”

Myrellia didn't retaliate and easily teleported away from us.

“What? Are you really that wary of the 'Breaking Evil Manifestation'?”

“Oh, scary, scary~. It's going to be a tough fight indeed. But how long will you be able to keep it together~? Struggle as much as you can.”

It's true that it would be an advantage for one person to be able to use teleportation while the others can't, but was that sufficient for her to have that much confidence? That was awfully over the top. Does she still have something else hidden?

But even after that, Myrellia rarely fought back. She would do nothing more than a light attack while running away from the attacking Kiara and Mea.

“Hey hey! What’s wrong? You can’t take me down with an attack like that, can you?”

We tried provoking her with words. By now, I’ve definitely noticed she was stalling for time. I’m sure everyone here was aware of that too. Regardless, we still couldn’t land a decisive hit.

This place was too small to unleash a wide range of high-powered attacks as it would definitely indiscriminately attack all of our teammates too. Having said that, it’s hard to keep up with the ever-evasive Myrellia. She hasn’t made that move yet, but if it comes down to it, Myrellia had the ability to just teleport out of the room if she really wanted to.

The only way to counter her teleports would be to unleash a wide range attack and detect which area she teleported to based on that. From what I’ve seen, the only people who could do that were Asura and Fran.

Quina and Mianoa specialized in close combat, so they don’t have attacks that spread over a wide area. Mea and Kiara have no way of detecting and following Myrellia’s teleportation.

In the end, it came down to either me, to detect the teleportation through space-time magic, or Asura, who can detect it through intuition. But I’m honestly worried about letting Asura do it.

The reason why Myrellia was stalling for time was probably because of Asura. All I could think of was that she was waiting for Asura to run amok. If that’s the case, I’m afraid to let Asura shoot a powerful technique so easily, as the more he involves himself in combat, the greater the danger of him running amok.

Then, I had no choice but to do it. We’ll have to settle this fight before Asura’s outbursts began. I can’t sense Asura’s destructive impulses yet. However, I could see a bit of impatience beginning to show on his face. Maybe Myrellia was right about the change being close. There was no more time. We must defeat Myrellia by any means necessary.

“Fran”

(Mhm)

“I’ll stop her! Don’t miss that moment. The only way to bring her down is to cut her yourself.”

(I understand)

“Good!”

Immediately after Myrellia avoided Mea’s white fire by teleporting, I activated the form transformation at full force. Thinner, sharper, and wider. I could control my own sword blade more perfectly by unleashing simultaneous operations at full throttle.

That’s not all. The power of ‘Breaking Evil Manifestation’ spread through every corner of the thread, and on every single strand. Otherwise, there would be no way to catch Myrellia.

“Ugh!”

The same – or even more painful – as when I used simultaneous arithmetic to activate multiple magic operations assaulted my spirit. As I used simultaneous magic attacks at the same time, the magic operations added up to give me the same amount – or even more – of pain to my spirit. Yes, I was supposed to be an invincible sword, but I was definitely feeling pain. Is this my sword? Or is it my spirit? I thought I heard something crack. But we can’t cut corners here.

I used not only the imaginative steel cords but also the sword blade, and like a giant spider’s web, my sword blade, which had turned into a steel thread, covered half of the hall.

“Gah! Even until here!”

“Gotcha, I got her!”

The prey that hung on the spider’s web was Myrellia, just after she made the teleportation. A sharp thread hugged her body, and her right arm and left leg were cut off halfway through. Lacerations were carved all over her body, and we could see the evil spirit fogging away. I manipulated the string further, tightening its encirclement to keep Myrellia from escaping.

“Ugh!”

At the same time, I’ve paved the way for Fran. Now it was her turn to play her part. Even though there were gaps in the threading, the steel threads would still damage Fran. However, Fran ignored the pain as she thrust me towards Myrellia, sprinkling red blood everywhere as she made me as thin and small as a dagger.

“Haaaaaaa!!”

“Ugh...!”

But I didn’t make it in time. Myrellia pushed the tangled threads away for a moment with compressed evil energy and escaped by teleporting.

A large hole has been drilled on Myrellia’s body, and a large hole has also appeared in the center of the hall, but there was still no sign of it repairing itself. On top of that, the evil spirit in her has been reduced to less than half of what it was at the start. She must be cornered for sure.

(Master, are you alright?)

“That’s my line.....”

(Mm. It will heal soon. But Master pushed herself too hard.)

“Aa.....”

I want to be strong, but that is not enough. Now is not the time to rest.

“I won’t stop”

(.....mhm!)

Chapter 346

Chapter 346: - Myrellia's Unfortunate End

Myrellia's evil spirit was greatly reduced by my and Fran's attack. But there was a smile on her face, along with anguish.

“Hahahahahaha! I knew you were strong!”

“Well, thank you.”

As if to warn Myrellia, who is laughing with her face contorted, Asura replies with a blunt word.

What is with this confidence from Myrelia?

However, it's still an opportunity. We'll stop her here before she gets away with teleportation again. I pushed down my mental fatigue and increased my focus to attack again. Asura seemed to be going for something, too.

The tension between us rose quietly. Myrellia should have sensed the atmosphere, but she remains as relaxed as ever.

But then, right when we were about to move, something happened. I could feel the magic power radiating through our feet from nowhere.

“What is this? What is this strange magical power?”

Immediately after that, a tremendous vibration coarsed throughout the dungeon. It's as if they were pushed up from the earth itself. It wasn't just Fran, who was lighter, but even Asura was floating for a moment. This is exactly what I was thinking about. I thought there had been a major earthquake.

Myrellia's smile deepened as she saw Fran and the others surprised by the shaking. That piece of shit Myrellia! I didn't feel any magic or evil spirits, so how in the world did she do it? Is it the power of the dungeon? Anyway, this occurrence gave her a chance.

"It's coming!"

(Yes)

Fran, still separated from the shaky ground by an aerial leap, focused all her attention on Myrellia's movements. As long as she had the trump card against the evildoers, Breaking Evil Manifestation, Fran would always be targeted by her.

"....."

(.....)

But Myrellia didn't make a move. On the contrary, she began to laugh loudly on the spot.

"Hahahahaha! Finally!"

It's not just Myrellia who is acting strangely. Asura and Kiara also stared at Myrellia, who was laughing, with an astonished expression on her face.

"Was that ... a dungeon scream?"

"Why are you laughing at that?"

"A dungeon scream?"

A dungeon scream is apparently an earthquake-like vibration that occurs when the dungeon master is defeated and the dungeon goes dormant. In some dungeons that have just been built, it may be barely perceptible, but in the case of older, larger dungeons, the tremors can be so great that you can't even stand up.

They say that the wavelength of the magic emanating from the core is unique, so anyone who knows about it can easily recognize it. I see. So what we felt before, the vibrations, in other words, was magic.

But why is Myrellia smiling? When the Dungeon Master dies and the dungeon goes dormant, everything that belongs to the dungeon, like monsters and other things should disappear. In other words, Myrellia would also disappear.

“Hmmm. I’m free now!”

“What do you mean? Didn’t you say you were involved in the dungeon? If that’s the case...”

“Extinguished?”

“Yes.”

“Too bad! I’m only half in control of the dungeon, so I’m not going to disappear right now. Well, you’ll have a few days to spare, isn’t that good? But it’s only for a few days, okay?”

“You’re right. But I don’t need a few days to kill you. A few minutes is all it takes.”

“You are talking bullshit now”

“Well, it’s certainly not going to be a normal win. He has a divine sword user and a breaker. Everyone else has evolved as well.”

Myrellia is calm while saying that. I have no idea what she’s thinking.

““But I can at least let my remaining strength run amok and self-destruct, you know? I’m going to be gone in a few days anyway, so why not self-destruct here? What would happen if I blew myself up as fast as I could in this small space? Even if you survive, the blast might trigger that mad demon to start running wild, you know?”

Even though Myrellia's evil spirit has been halved, she still accumulated an enormous amount of power. Besides, it was entirely possible that Myrellia's self-destruction would trigger Asura's outburst.

Was Myrellia desperate? But the way she spoke earlier, it was as if she was waiting for the Dungeon Master to be killed. Funny when you think about it, wasn't it? If she was going to self-destruct, it should have been before the dungeon master dies.

"Hey, would you like to make a deal with me?"

"What did you say?"

"If you're willing to do me a favor, I am willing to let you kill me here without making a fuss. No resistance. I promise."

It's not a lie — it's more like you can't discern it. When I think about it, it always felt strange to me. The illusionary theory has never concluded that Myrellia's words were lies. But that was unlikely. In fact, it should be more natural to lie all the time.

Perhaps, just like appraisal, the reasoning of falsehoods is not as effective as it should be against the words of the evil one.

"Fran, do you think she's telling the truth?"

(Mm. Those eyes are telling the truth.)

Fran has better intuition than I do. Therefore those words were believable.

"I don't get it. What do you, an evil woman, want? The Resurrection of the Evil God?"

"Don't be ridiculous. That's not the kind of shit I want to hear."

Hearing Myrellia's words, Asura was also crestfallen. The evil woman called the resurrection of the Evil Gods as a trivial matter. That was surprising.

“I’m only asking for one thing. I’m sure It’s not that hard for you guys.”

“...say it.”

“There is an aristocratic family in the Kingdom of Bashar called the Magnolia family. Could you rescue the recently born, legitimate son and put him in a safe place?”

“Haaa???!!!!”

“What did you say?”

Asura and Kiara ask back. I mean that was natural. I too don’t know what she meant. Rescuing a trueborn son of House Magnolia? What do you mean by ‘rescue’? Why not do it yourself in the first place?

“Whoa, whoa, whoa. What are you up to?”

“I’m not planning anything. To elaborate a bit more, I want you to take the heir son of the Magnolia family out of the kingdom of Bashar before he gets brainwashed and take him out of their reach. All I’m asking is that you let him live a normal life, okay? If possible, take him to an orphanage run by a rank A adventurer on the next continent. That’s all I want.”

“Why don’t you do it yourself?”

“If they know I’m obsessed with that child, the Dungeon Master will surely take that child as a hostage. I’m finally free, but I don’t have time anymore. That’s why I want to leave you guys to it.”

Neither Kiara, Asura, nor Mea said anything. No, it’s more like we can’t. We can’t believe it. In the first place, she was an evil and aggressive person, and she was a person who brought destruction wherever she went. Is that not enough already, and now you want us to save your child?

But as Fran says, her words don’t seem to be a lie. The look in her eyes were even sincere.

Fran opens her mouth to take over from Asura.

“What about the others guys? What about those knights?”

“You should just leave those guys alone. Being there is not worth anything other than being Romeo’s parent.”

“What did you say about the revival of the royal family or the black cat paradise?”

“Oh, I don’t care about it, the Krishna royal family is just a relic of the past. And about the paradise for the Black Cats? What’s the value of that stuff? This is all a diversion to hide my true intentions. Afterall you don’t know where you’ll encounter the ear of Bashar’s kingdom or the Dungeon Master. All I really want is for Romeo to be happy. Hey, please. Get that boy out of the kingdom of Bashar and out of the spell of Magnolia.”

“What the hell is—“

Asura was about to ask the question again, and that was when suddenly..

“Enough of this farce.”

“Gah!”

A figure suddenly appeared behind Myrellia, thrusting the sword in his hand from his back towards her heart. I could see the evil spirit flowing towards the figure from Myrellia, who was vomiting blood and looking in anguish. He is absorbing Myrellia’s evil energy. This guy looked familiar to us.

“Xellos Reed. You.... Betrayed me.....?”

“Well, don’t let me miss my chance to eat more power!”

“Guh!”

Xellos Reed shoved Myrellia away. Myrellia fell in front of us, and by all accounts, she was dying. I could barely feel the evil energy that had been stored up in her for so long. The wound she just received did not even begin to regenerate.

“Hey....Please ... That child ... please make that child... please make Romeo happy... please...”

She tried to reach her hand out to us, even though she was running out of breath.

“Hmm, you poor woman. You’re a family member of the evil gods, but you’re wishing for a human child to be happy. So no matter how crazy you are, in the end you’re still just a woman huh?”

“Aa.....”

Then her hands lost their strength as she crumpled to the ground.

Chapter 347.1: - Side Story Myrellia I

Hey! Just a kind reminder this translation belong to RNF please only read and donate at RNF. Enjoy!

Side Myrellia

The last thing I remember was a white light covering my vision. A divine and abominable light. It was the light of divine punishment that took my life away.

It's strange. It felt like that happened a long time ago. But it's not unreasonable. Five hundred years have passed since then. In other words, I failed.

What a mess. I was so close to achieving my dream... My mind coated with despair, I feel the reign of the Evil Gods strengthening. Still, I was able to remain conscious without being completely controlled by the Evil Gods because of a slight glimmer of hope.

I was told by Linford that the Magnolia name is still around today. And that even my name has been passed down. I couldn't contain my laughter when I was told about the myths which were full of mistakes.

The love between me and my lover quickly cooled off. He abandoned me for fear of the beasts around him, and I wasn't so vigorous enough to continue loving the man who abandoned me either.

It was around that time that everything in this world became indifferent to me. Losing motivation, I began to live a self-degrading life. Supposedly in the myths, I ended up as a wife of a certain noble. What a dull life!

However, in reality the story didn't end there. I have met my destiny. It's a boy born between my former lover who abandoned me and a prostitute who was enslaved to a marriage fraud.

I was captivated the moment I saw him. Is that what motherhood is? The fact that the image of my beloved man remains, albeit at such a time, maybe it's one of the reasons why I was interested. Anyway, I wondered how could there be such a sweet, cute and lovable being. It's strange that I didn't think about such a thing when I saw other children.

From that moment on, only the child's happiness mattered to me. So I didn't kill those two. I heard that children needed both their parents. Otherwise, I would have already killed my former lover and that prostitute who was afraid to earn my disgrace and tried to kill that child.

But things didn't work in my favour. My father had clearly begun to run amok. Apparently, my request to marry a human caused the beastmen in the country to distrust the Beast King family. He tried to hold it down with force as a civil war was on the verge of breaking out.

Eventually, my father turned to a forbidden power to protect his position. He tried to unlock the seal of the wicked god's tomb, which was under the control of the royal family, and use that power as his own. However, ironically, it was I who ended up endangering the beast royal family as the priestess of the Evil God. Dedicated to the Evil God as a sacrifice, I was revived by the power of the Evil God and for some reason ended up becoming a shrine maiden of the Evil God.

Whether or not I was still myself. Whether I was just a puppet controlled by the Evil God or not. Even if I ask myself the question, I can't get an answer. And then, I suddenly realized. That I gained power. It was the power to fulfill a great desire. That one wish still remained, smoldering in my chest.

Then, what is there to hesitate about? I decided to harness even the power of the Evil Gods.

First I offer my father a deal. Instead of wielding the power of the Evil God for the Beast King family, he asked for the elimination of all the human exclusionists so that that child could live happily in this country. Eventually, my father conspired with me to thoroughly suppress the anti-humanists in the country. The other black cat tribes easily changed sides when I gained power. It was hilarious to see those who previously accused me of being a filthy woman who had mingled with so many humans, and yet they didn't even try to hide their filthy desires, and they all wanted to shake my hand in order to gain power. Don't they know which one was dirtier?

But I was betrayed again. My former lover fled to the kingdom of Bashar with that boy. Behind the scenes, his kingdom seemed to be pulling the strings. And then he held that kid hostage and came at me. He asked for help in weakening the beastly nation.

I had no choice but to obey. Instead of wishing for the child's safety, he set up his own army and carried out all the pro-war movements who were planning to invade the army and invade the Bashar Kingdom.

At the request of the army from the beast kingdom, he sent the army of the beasts to attack and annihilate the army from the Bashar Kingdom with a pincer attack.

We also gave them everything they wanted, including rewriting the borders of the other side through post-war reparations and such. By that time, my father had already been brainwashed by me, so I could do whatever I wanted about it.

But perhaps because of their injuries, the human exclusionists were greatly reduced in strength, and I, who had given my soul, gained more power through the Evil Gods. All that was left was to get that child back from the Bashar Kingdom, and my wish will finally come true. If that white light hadn't taken my life, it would have happened.

It seems that all of the people who had even the slightest trace of the Evil God's factor entering their lives were also eliminated by divine punishment. Ha ha ha, good grief! The one that hit us the hardest was the black cat tribe, who were supposed to be our own people. Everyone, adults and children alike, called me vulgar and threw rocks at me. I should have destroyed them all anyway.

And 500 years later. I would be awakened and dominated by Linford. It was a humiliation to be used by such a man, but he certainly piqued my interest when he said that the descendants of that child remained in the present Bashar kingdom. I can't see that child anymore, but what of it? But the moment I saw that child's descendant, I lost interest.

Their spirit was so distorted that they looked only like puppets. Originally, the Magnolia family had been educated to instill patriotism. But now they've gone too far and it was nothing but pure brainwashing.

In the end I met that child again. His appearance was not similar, his hair and eyes different. But, the moment I saw him, I had the same ticklish feeling as when I met that child. Romeo, the just-born son of the Magnolia family. Did the blood of that child flow through his? That was the moment when I found a new purpose in life.

And I noticed. As it was, this Romeo would eventually become a puppet of the Bashar kingdom just like Johan. That was the only thing that must be stopped.

I've fallen into the role of Linford's servant, but I've been granted a modicum of authority. I began to take action to achieve my own desires, despite Linford's wishes.

The first thing I did was to negotiate with the current king of Bashar. I cooperated with him for the good of his country, and we made a promise that Romeo would be handed over to me when his wishes were fulfilled. No, if I designate Romeo, the country and Linford and others could take that kid hostage.

Instead I told the King that I wanted Magnolia's bloodline to summon my former lover's spirit. And since an innocent soul was better, I would like to receive Romeo intact if possible. It seems that the shrine maiden of the Evil God was likely to say that. Thanks to that, King Bashar seemed to think that I was trying to sacrifice Romeo. Well, it will be great if they misunderstood until the end. It's just a matter of time before I get my hands on Romeo anyway.

The wishes of the Kingdom of Bashar. It's a way of subduing the beastly nation, our sworn enemy, and rising above it. For the Bashar Kingdom, which had always been frightened by the shadow of invasion from the Beastman Nation, it could be said to be a long-cherished wish of the Bashar Kingdom.

Dear reader, the other day I found a certain website uploading my translation on their website. I hope you can help by telling your friends to read this translation at RNF and only donate at RNF.

The king apparently used my notorious lore, which was of course full of misunderstandings, to get the upper echelons of the Bashar Kingdom to approve an alliance with the wicked while flirting with profit. Most of them wouldn't believe in such worldly rhetorics as ingratitude towards me. However, the king seemed to have found a solution and that he didn't mind a little nuisance as long as he could get the Beast Country.

Also, ironically, because of historical evidence of me, an evil being, being used to depose the rule of the Beastman Nation five hundred years ago, he seemed to have little resistance to the idea of utilizing the power of the evil god. After all there is a precedent that an evil person can be used.

But we also had to think about what would happen if we lost. Of course, King Bashar also considered that possibility.

Even if someone put you in the line or in a fire and tell them that you are threatened by an evil person, you would not be able to avoid the Beastmen Nation's pursuit. After all we've caused so many wars of aggression, and if we lose, of course we'll be pursued by the beast nation. The least they would do was exiling us.

But no matter how bad the odds were, no matter how much of a losing game we played, we could still turn the tides. In other words, we could use the souls gained in the war to summon a large number of powerful and evil people. As a shrine maiden of the Evil God, I could control the evil people. And after causing chaos to some extent inside the beastmen's country, we would let the Bashar Kingdom Army invade the beastmen's country in the name of subjugating an evil person. Since the beast's hands would be tied with internal trifles, the subjugation would be simple. After that, they could effectively control it in the name of disaster recovery or subjugation. After all, there would be no power left to oppose in the Beastman Nation.

Nevertheless, we also need an excuse for our neighboring countries. Win or lose, we wouldn't want the nations around us to say that we were an evil nation in league with the Evil Gods. Hence, it was necessary to give the impression that I was in charge of the war.

I was no longer interested in the royal family, but one of my public reasons was to give the rights to the throne back to the Narashinha family from the Krishna family. I told him that my actual wish was to gain the paradise of the Black Cat. I tried to make Johan Magnolia and his allies feel like I cared about the 500-year old relationship. The truth was, I didn't care what happened to anyone but Romeo.

The whole thing was a prelude to taking the argument that this conflict is an extension of the Beastman Nation's internal strife 500 years ago and that the Bashar royal family was involved. Of course, I didn't intend to really kill the princess and her servant there. However, it made sense to spread words of hatred. Each country would be spying on the Beastman Nation, and I wouldn't know where or what any person would hear. That's why it was important to appeal to them consistently in a variety of situations.

By doing so, we could make the form of the conflict between the Krishnas and the Narasinha family more visible. In fact, I had sent a letter to each country saying that the usurper royal family was to be put to death in my name. All in order to make post-war risk as low as possible. Even if the nations don't believe it, as long as the Beastman Nation was destroyed, it was a matter that can be excused in any way possible. Because the truth was created for the convenience of the survivors. Just as how my lore was full of mistakes.

The best thing to do would be to win the war head-on in a big way and rule the beastly kingdom by the power of Bashar Kingdom alone, but that would be difficult. However, a pincer attack with a dungeon force should have a good chance of working.

I didn't want to use the power of an Evil God if I could. Without a doubt, the heavens will send out punishment again. Fufufu. Yes, I knew and so did King Bashar, that if you used the power of an evil god, you will surely be punished by heaven. That's why King Bashar kept the plan to summon the evildoers deep inside his heart. Perhaps he was going to focus the divine punishment on himself alone. I didn't know if it would work.

But, as was the case 500 years ago, there must be some time for leeway. In that little moment, King Bashar would nominate a successor, and I intended to let Romeo escape from the Bashar Kingdom. I also had an idea of where to leave Romeo. Although it would be on another continent, there was an orphanage run by a Rank A adventurer. I had it checked out, but it was a perfectly straightforward orphanage with no other side to it. If I left him there, he would be a few times safer than if he were to remain in the Kingdom of Bashar.

However, I thought all those plans were likely to end in vain. Thus, it was such a surprise that an irregularity such as the Divine Swordsman appeared.

Even though I knew I couldn't win against my opponent, I could never run away from a fight because of the force of the order that compelled me to keep doing so. Even I didn't think I could beat the Divine Swordsman. Therefore I knew that my life would end here.

The only bright side would be the appearance of Xellos Reed. Apparently he betrayed Linford. I'd eaten all the evil people here. But, traitorous though he is, he was willing to negotiate. What I presented to him was my life. In exchange for giving that power and my life, I decided to have Xellos Reed do three jobs.

The first was the killing of the Dungeon Master, the only person who could order me around. As long as that thing was watching us, we couldn't take any chances. However, at any rate, challenging the Divine Swordsman would just end in death. Thus, it would be better to get a little freedom at the end. Well, I told them I could move for a few days, but that was a lie. It will be an hour at the most. I don't have time to get to the child, I'm afraid.

The other thing I asked for was to kill me at the perfect time. Specifically, right after I asked the Divine Swordsman and the princess to protect Romeo, Xellos Reed will take my life miserably.

Why? People like them were susceptible to sad story developments. How could they refuse? After all, it was the last wish of a dying, poor woman. They wouldn't be able to refuse it. I've seen that the Divine Swordsman and the princess were particularly vulnerable to such stories. There is a higher chance though it's still a small chance, but the probability that Romeo will be saved increased. That was the last struggle I could make.

As a matter of fact, I've asked Xellos Reed for help too. It's just, I don't know how far he'll go to keep his promise, so I'd be grateful if the princess or the Divine Swordsman would protect him if possible. Although they were my enemy, the princess and the Divine Swordsman are much more reliable.

“Hey....Please ... That child ... please make that child... please make Romeo happy... please...”

“Hmm, you poor woman. You’re a family member of the Evil Gods, but you’re wishing for a human child to be happy. So no matter how crazy you are, in the end you’re still just a woman huh?”

When the princess and the Divine Swordsman heard Xellos Reed's words, a look of anger appeared on their faces. They felt sorry for me.

“Ah.....”

Thank you, Xellos Reed, for the greatest help.

“Hmm, you poor woman. You’re a family member of the evil gods, but you’re still wishing for a human child to be happy. It seems like no matter how crazy you are, in the end you’re still just a woman huh?”

“Ah.....”

“Hm.”

The indifferent man stared coldly, at Myrellia who collapsed and disappeared like a black mist.

I had no idea what the hell was going on.

Myrellia said something incomprehensible, such as wanting me to help save a child in Bashar Kingdom.

The Krishna royal family and their attitude toward the knights were all actually ways to hide their true intentions? What she really wanted to do was to save a boy named Romeo from the Kingdom of Bashar? Indeed, Johann Magnolia was brainwashed. The boy named Romeo is likely to end up like that if left alone.

I can see why it would be difficult for Myrellia to rescue the boy on her own, with Linford and the Dungeon Master in control.

But was it the truth? It didn't look like she was lying, but it's hard to believe that, that Myrellia would make a move like that. Moreover I am worried about Xellos Reed's sudden appearance.

And suddenly all the worries I was thinking about were blown out of my head. It seemed to be the same for Fran, Kiara, Asura, and, well, everyone here.

“Hey, hey.....until when will you....”

The evil energy emitted by Xellos Reed had become so powerful that it was incomparably stronger than before. That's about to measure up to Myrellia's. No, if he used the power properly, it might even be beyond that.

It used to be possible to read some statuses and other information in the appraisal. But now I couldn't see anything. In other words, it meant that the evil spirit has strengthened so much. From a glance it was the same as before, but now it gave off an even more frightening aura than before.

Even Asura frowned and showed caution. Kiara lightly braced herself, and as for Fran and the others, she quickly distanced herself from them and readied her weapon with a pale face. I could see the goosebumps on Fran's arms. In other words, Xellos had become just that much more powerful.

Perhaps he has been killing and killing and killing all the evil people and kept absorbing their power with his cannibalistic skills. I thought before that it would be good for the world in a way, but I didn't expect him to be able to nurture the evil spirit to this extent in such a short amount of time.

“What?”

“What the hell is Xellos Reed?”

“Are you a follower of the Evil God? You seem strong.”

“I am honored to have the Divine Swordsman say that! Kuhahaha!”

The evil spirit blew up from Xellos Reed's entire body with a tremendous amount of force as he laughed. The vibrations were scattered randomly and turned into a storm that blew around us.

This is seriously bad! Just when we were about to fend off Myrellia, another monster appears again!

Even though we have a trump card against evil, I seriously didn't want to interact with such a monster. The crisis of Asura's going berserk has not yet passed. I think running is the way to go here.

“-Chii!”

The Dimension Gate was not activated. I don't know if it was maintained even though Myrellia was dead, or if Xellos Reed had re-established it, but the teleportation containment has not yet been lifted.

“That little guy over there looks familiar. He was the one in Barbora...”

“...”

“How is that one boy?”

“...”

“Why are you not answering?”

It's not like I was trying hard to ignore him, or that I kept my mouth shut to avoid giving him information. But, I can't speak. Xeros Reed took his gaze off Fran as it was, as if he had lost interest, and looked at Asura with an epic smile on his face.

“You have a divine sword..... I wanted to go at it with you once..”

“Battle Junkie”

“Hey, you're just as crazy as I am, aren't you?”

“I don't want to be put at the same level as you, but I guess from a human perspective it's similar.”

“Moreover you have such a terrific skill set of enhancement! Ka-ha-ha! Nice!!”

Killing intent emanated from Xellos Reed, as if he had identified Asura as his prey. From his point of view, it might just be a greeting, but if the current Xellos Reed did it, it was no different than an attack. If it were an ordinary person, this killing intent alone would stop his heart.

Even Guendalfa unconsciously backed up and surprised himself by hitting his back against the wall. Apparently he hadn’t realized he was retreating. He was shaking with a sweaty face.

“Chi”

Looking at Xellos Reed who looked energized, Asura also got agitated.

“Oi, Kiara!”

“No! You can’t!”

Before I knew it, Kiara approached the entrance door and was looking into it. However, as I expected, it didn’t seem to open.

In the meantime, the killing intent emanating from Xellos Reed was rising tremendously! I found that even Quina, who normally didn’t show her expression, frowned.

“Hehehehehe, wanna get at it?”

“Oi you guys! Don’t get involved in this! Kiara, hurry up!”

Then the battle between the monsters began. Of course, the first one to make a move was Xellos Reed.

“Ora!”

Xellos Reed took out from nowhere a huge sword comparable to Asura’s earth sword Gaia. It’s name had become the Great Sword of the Evil God

Stone. I see, it might be a suitable weapon for this guy to use. Both in name and strength.

The great jet-black sword that was swung down was intercepted by the divine sword raised by Asura.

Dooooooooooooo!

The pair of great swords were struck together, causing a roar and a loud shockwave that reached Fran and the others who had taken shelter by the wall. From there, a bizarre scene unfolded as two giant men struck each other with great swords.

The attacks were offset by opposing attacks, and the two fought each other with even more attacks without being able to defend against the blasting shockwave. I couldn't imagine how powerful a single attack could be, but I didn't think I wanted to mix in there at all. However, it seems that Asura's swordsmanship was superior to Xellos' skills.

Every ten or so times, Asura's attack caught Xellos Reed. It would regenerate quickly, but I could see that the evil spirit was greatly diminished. But Kiara looked restless. Asura too.

"This is bad..."

"What's wrong?"

"Look at the corner of Asura. The color has turned red. It's a sign of a berserk. Soon, his demonization will be activated!"

Things seemed to be moving in the worst direction possible.

Every time he hit Xellos Reed with his sword, the horn that grew from Asura's forehead dyed a deeper red. At the same time, a red magic power began to rise from his body like a heat haze.

"Red is the color of madness..... The fact that he started to wear that aura meant his skills have already been activated!"

I've heard that it's just barely in control due to equipment and other effects. It was only a matter of time before the Demonization fully activated. That awareness was already fully focused only for the battle with Xellos Reed.

“Oraaa!”

“Chi! You are a divine swordsman indeed!”

Asura's attack becomes more intense. The earth sword, Gaia, was struck against the floor of the dungeon, causing a large depression, with a crack in the form of a cobweb surrounding it.

I was frightened when I saw it. Was this dungeon destructible in the first place? Maybe the strength of the dungeons varied. In the Goblin Dungeon, the floor was casually gouged by Fran's attack.

But this dungeon was mostly unscathed by Asura's rampage. Although he was manipulating it with earth magic, the dungeon itself wouldn't get hurt by a normal attack. That's why it was impossible to destroy the dungeon and escape. However, that common sense was overturned right now.

That casual blow probably contained a huge amount of magical power as well as physical strength.

“Graaaaa!”

“Uraaaaaa!”

The Great Kaiju War! Not only Asura, but Xellos Reed's attacks have also begun to destroy the dungeon!

“Aside from Kiara and the others, Guendalfa looks pretty bad!”

We still have plenty of time to dodge the aftermath of the attack, but Guendalfa already looked like he long reached his limit. He was desperately running away.

However, the battle between the two became even more intense. I mean, Asura didn't seem to care about his surroundings anymore. He began to use a wide range of techniques without hesitation, and the corresponding Xellos Reed was also releasing a wide range of techniques.

“Quina! Is it still not open?!”

“I’m sorry. I’m avoiding it while trying to open the door, so it will be a while yet.”

“Mea, Fran, Mia! Protect Quina!”

Ever since Asura's outburst began, Quina has been trying to open the door. She took position in front of the door and examined something, but it seems to be slow going as she was dodging the aftermaths of the battle along the way.

We all put up wards and barriers to protect Quina. Guendalfa needed to endure a little more.

I kept an eye on Asura and Xellos during that time, but they were moving faster and faster. In addition, the magic power in their attacks kept increasing. They were getting serious about each other.

Finally, Asura made a big move. He lightly distanced himself from Xellos Reed and raised the earth sword Gaia high in the sky.

“Divine sword release, ooooooooooooo!”

“Divine sword release, oooooooooo!”

Immediately after Asura shouted that, a light blasted up from the divine sword. Along with that, magical power started pouring out from inside the divine sword and surrounded Asura with light. The scene was as if a pillar of light was swallowing Asura.

Although they were far apart, a shock wave struck Fran and the others. At the same time, a cloud of dust and stone debris billowed everywhere. It was as if a dynamite had exploded at a close distance. Everyone was stuck in place and simply had to withstand the raging forces.

On top of that, a tremendous presence and magical power engulfed the entire room, rendering magical power sensing and presence detection useless.

“So this is the power of the divine sword!”

From the sound of that scream, he must have released the power of the divine sword. Furthermore, the magical power emanating from the divine sword was so intense anyone under its influence would feel as if oppressed by an unstoppable force.

Is it really the same weapon as me? I couldn't believe it. No, I guess this is why the Divine Sword is called a weapon.

“Fran! Are you okay!”

(Hmm!)

Like this, if someone were to approach us through the dust, it would be too late for us once we actually notice them. With maximum vigilance, we waited for the smoke to clear. A few seconds or so passed, although it felt like many times more.

After the smoke cleared, the figure of Asura, who was at the center of the force, came into view. There is no change in the appearance of Asura himself. But the divine sword in his hand had been greatly altered.

“That's the true form of the divine sword...? That's no longer a sword... right?”

How do I say this? It's a strange sight. The sword didn't seem to belong to any proper category of weapons. Before its power was unleashed, it was a greatsword with a straight blade, but now the blade is warped like a curved sword. In addition, five sharp and large spines, like spikes, grew at regular intervals along the curve, with the tip having transformed into a peculiar shape.

There was a huge block of iron on the end of the blade, just like a hammer. The part of the warped blade facing inward is sharp and pointed like a pickaxe. The other side is shaped like a flat hammer. Moreover, it is tremendously big. The thick blade alone is more than two meters long, and the hammer portion nearly twice as tall, wide and long like a drum.

It doesn't look very much like a weapon for personal use. It was probably closer to say that it was a kind of a siege weapon, like a battering ram.

Even after looking at the weapon and appraising it, I still could only see the name Earth Sword Gaia and a few abilities. The fact that it evolved to its true form must have raised its level to the point where I cannot appraise it at my current level.

Name: Earth Sword, Gaia

Attack Power: 4700

Magical Conductivity/SS+

Unfortunately, these were the only things I could confirm. However, this alone was enough to show that it was no longer just a regular divine sword.

“Oraa!”

Asura, who regained his true form, slammed the Earth Sword Gaia into Xellos Reed, faster than before. It was most likely the effect of its status being raised.

Xellos Reed tried to counter the attack with his greatsword, but he was easily pushed away. He still tried to twist his body to dodge, but it was to no avail.

Despite avoiding Gaia, an invisible force smashed half of his body.

Xellos Reed appeared to have suffered a fatal wound, with the entire left half of his body appearing as if cut off, but then he stood and still managed to balance the remaining half of his body. Normally, people would have died from that attack, but he was a person harnessing evil spirit power.

Immediately, the right half of his body began to regenerate and regain its original form.

“Oh shit! As expected of the divine sword!”

“Gah!”

“Hahahaha! Come! Come! I’ll kill you, you bastard, and I’ll take your divine Sword!”

Xellos moved even faster. Every time he swung his sword, he spread a vicious evil spirit around. Just a scratch and you’ll be damaged by the evil spirit.

Every time Asura slammed Gaia, the dungeon caved in and the ground underneath Fran and the others shook. Sometimes the wrecked dungeon floor would turn into torso-sized projectiles from the impact and come at them at super speed.

“Uu... ugh... gahhhh!”

In the midst of a fierce grinding contest, Asura held the divine sword on his shoulder. Then he poured his magic power into the divine sword and jumped out with even greater speed than before. It was the fastest he had been so far.

“Wha!”

The next thing I knew, Asura was right in front of Xellos Reed. Xellos must have realized he couldn’t defend himself. He seemed to have put up a barrier in a hurry, but the entire barrier was smashed by the divine sword.

The biggest roar and blast of the day hit the room as if we were at the center of an explosion. The barrier I set up was easily penetrated by the flying debris. Quickly, I equipped Physical Damage Nullification, but before I could, several shots gutted Fran’s body.

“Are you okay?!”

(Hmm)

Even though the barrier had been breached, its power was greatly reduced because of it. Thankfully, the wounds weren’t deep. As I healed Fran’s wounds with my [Heal], I checked on everyone.

“Are the others okay?” I ask Fran.

“Are you guys okay?” Fran asked the others.

” We are alright but.... Guendalfa is hurt because he defended us!!”

“I’m coming!”

It seems that Guendalfa used his huge body as a shield to protect everyone who was at the door. When Fran rushed and ran, I saw countless rubbles of all sizes were stuck on his back. His life was in danger.

“This is bad Fran!”

“Hmm!”

With me and Fran using Greater Heal in rapid succession, we managed to get him out of critical condition. However, he won’t be able to move for a while. If they keep attacking like that repeatedly, the rest of us will be in danger.

In the first place, given the performance of the divine sword, it seemed that even with the current attack, its power still wasn’t fully utilized. If a more widespread and high-powered attack was unleashed, even Fran would be in danger.

“Quina?”

“Sorry. I can’t open it yet.”

When asked by Kiara, Quina shakes her head.

“Is there no other choice but to risk it? I don’t want to bet on it but....”

“Bet on what?”

“Asura’s Demonization will be cancelled after a certain amount of damage is taken..”

“If so, Then we’ll all—”

“But! If it is not undone, he’ll turn against us! He’ll change his target and attack all of us!”

So that was it. Certainly it’s a bet. If we fail, we will be on the receiving end of that sword’s attacks. Then we had a slightly better bet.

“Fran. Let’s try that one.”

(...Skill Taker?)

“Hm. That’s right.”

Did Fran also notice? I’m thinking of trying to get rid of Asura’s mad demonization. However, I was hesitant for several reasons.

First of all, does taking away the skill after the demonization has begun will stop any further demonization? Also, won’t he lose his ability to compete with Xellos Reed? That’s what I thought. However, it was certain that we will not continue to be safe in this state. Then we should just give it a try.

“Stop Asura.”

“What? What will you do?”

“We could do something, maybe.”

Fran explains quickly. We might be able to erase Asura’s skill, which might stop him from running berserk. But we weren’t sure.

“I mean, it’s unclear what will happen, but is it possible?”

“Hmm...

“Let’s do it. It’s better than nothing.”

Kiara’s decision was instantaneous. I guess she knew it wasn’t a good idea to continue fighting as is. Even now, Mea is still protecting us from the occasional flying debris!

“Well then, Let’s do it!”

“Hmm...”

“Skill Taker!”

“Gugaaaaaaaaaaaaa!”

Immediately after I activated the Skill Taker, Asura stopped moving. Soon, he began to writhe and suffer.

“Guaaaaaa!!”

“Oi Oi, What’s wrong?”

Xellos Reed also stopped attacking, staring at Asura, who screamed as he knelt on both knees. After a few seconds, Asura stopped moving and came to a still, and silence enveloped them.

“What... the hell happened...?”

Asura didn’t seem to know what happened. He was looking around. Kiara approached him and tried to protect Asura.

(Now all we need is for Master to remove the mad demonization.)

“.....Aaa”

“Master?”

What is it? Someone said something. No, not someone, it’s Fran. My wielder.

“No, no, no-”

A sudden urge of rage and destruction overcame me. Both my eyes and my thoughts turned bright red.

In the first place, what was I doing here? Why am I resting in such a place? Why am I not fighting?

No! Fight! Destroy all enemies!

“Gaaaaaaa!”

Fight! I must fight! Destroy all Fran's enemies!

Side Nemea

It was abrupt .

Fran said she could block Lord Asura's mad demonization skills . I don't know if that will work, but Master Kiara said to give it a try .

And as Fran held her sword and started concentrating, Asura gradually slowed down and eventually stopped moving . They've really succeeded in calming the demonization!

“We did it!”

The worst that could happen has been avoided, although there was still the creepy evil villain, Xellos Reed . I thought as such and tried to run towards Fran, when all of a sudden...

“ ”
...

“Fran, what’s... .”

“Master?”

“Gaaaaahhhh!!”

Suddenly, a shrill scream resounded throughout the dungeon . Wait, actually, it’s as if the sound was directly transmitted into my brain . No, it probably was as such .

“Was that the master...?”

The moment I muttered that, the magic sword in Fran’s hand suddenly left her hand and took flight . The sword vibrated violently in the air . I could hear the scream emanating from it . It sounded as if it were the roars of a raging beast, but at the same time also sounded like a painful scream, one filled with anguish .

“Graaaaahhhh!”

A lightning bolt emanates from the sword and strikes at Xellos Reed . Although it was easily dodged, the sword moved on its own and rushed at Xellos Reed .

I looked at Fran, who was just standing there, looking stunned . After a moment, she ran after her divine sword, her face turning blue .

“Master!”

“It’s not taking action under Fran’s orders? Is your master running amok?”

“Hey Mea! Do you know anything about this?”

Seeing the situation with the sword suddenly moving by itself, Master Kiara also started feeling anxious . She took a look at Fran’s condition and understood that what was currently happening wasn’t as Fran intended .

“Um, well, the master...”

“Huh? What about me?”

“No, no! Not Master Kiara, but Fran’s Master!!”

“What are you talking about?!”

No! I’m not allowed to give out information that it’s an intelligent weapon . This is information that Fran trusted me with to keep after all . If I exposed her secret, isn’t it the same as me betraying her?

Just as I was overwhelmed by my dilemma, Quina interrupted from the side .

“Miss, please calm down . I’m sorry, the young lady seems to be getting confused . ”

“I see . What does Quina know about it?”

“I don’t know the details, but as for the one she referred to as master, I think it’s actually Fran’s sword . I heard it’s named “Master” . Fran-san’s sword seems to be out of control for some reason . That sword is a fairly high-ranked magic sword . Perhaps, one of the abilities of that sword is Skill Taker? And maybe, we are currently seeing the effects of taking away Lord Asura’s skills as mentioned earlier?”

“I see . And you think it was affected by the madness of the demonization and went out of control?”

“I can only assume as much . ”

Good, Quina explained it well . Nonetheless, as we talked about it, the master continued to run amok, its screams endlessly resounding .

“Gaaahhh!”

Once again, a tremendous lightning bolt descended towards Xellos Reed . More accurately, it was a tight pack of three lightning bolts . Cold sweat ran down my back as I watched each of those lightning bolts drill a large crater into the dungeon .

That was extreme grade magic no matter how you look at it . Moreover, it shot three rounds of that kind of magic at once? Do all intelligent weapons have that kind of power?

“That sword! Isn’t the red aura emanating from it looks like the one from the Divine Swordmaster from earlier, what the hell is going on?”

Xellos Reed repeatedly regenerated while being burned by the lightning, but I could see the confusion on his face . I guess he couldn’t keep up with the fact that the sword was the only thing that attacked him on its own .

“Master! Master!”

Fran squinted at the blast and called out frantically, but her voice didn’t seem to reach her master at all .

The Master continued to ignore Fran and suddenly jumped out at a terrifying speed . Apparently, the sudden acceleration from staying still was enough to catch Xellos Reed unawares and land a surprise attack . Before he had time to evade it, the sword blasted away half of his body .

“Guuh! What...! Is this!”

Moreover, it caused critical damage . Yes, that sword also had the ability to counter evil spirit energy and manifestations . Master’s chase continued against the anguished Xellos Reed .

“Latent Potential Release... . oooooo!”

Immediately after the master’s cry, a tremendous amount of magical power overflowed from him . The air surrounding him also vibrated by the magical power released, hitting my skin .

How much power did that sword have in it? Honestly, I felt that the intimidating feeling emanating from the current master was not inferior to the divine sword Gaia! To my regret, even if I swing Rind, I will not be able to exert all that power .

“Oh ohhhh!”

Lightning bolts were released again . What a surprise! It wasn’t just raining down from above, bolt after bolt was shot out from both sides . Three thunderbolts, clearly thicker than the previous extremely large magic shot it looked . Master, who instantly understood that he had escaped, started chasing after Xellos Reed .

Again, its shape changed and part of the main body returned to its original form . There were still about 100 threads wounding about and continued to chase after Xellos Reed . While guiding his opponent's movements in this manner, the master took a swing with his main body .

“Divine Judgment”

“Get down!”

The master cut through everything with the extension of the sword . Xellos Reed, the evil spirits, the magic, the air, the dungeons, everything . Before I knew it, the ceiling above me was torn asunder . No, not just the part above my head . All the walls that were in the area of the extension of the teacher's swing were cut .

I was scared . If I hadn't been dragged down by Master Kiara, my neck would have been sliced off by the current attack, and I would have died without even realizing what had happened .

“Gaaaaaa!”

Xellos Reed lost his body from the waist down . Moreover, his regeneration started to slow down . He must have suffered substantial damage . The evil man who was much more powerful, beyond even that monstrous Myrellia, was being hunted down and injured so easily .

I couldn't stop shaking . I was really scared . That's not just a normal magic sword . It was something else... . something much scarier .

“Gaaaaaaa... Ouuuuuu!”

“What is it this time?”

The Master changed his appearance again . What's that? The design of the sword's hilt seemed to rise up, and then the sword was led up with a dull metallic sound .

“One form after another... I won't let you!”

This time Xellos Reed initiated an attack . He concentrated his evil spirit on his blade and slashed with it . But that, too, was offset by the barriers that were already put up around the master . The current blow alone should have contained dozens of times my entire magical power .

“Uuuu- Aooooooooooooo!”

It is a howl of madness with the intent to destroy everything in existence . I finally realized what the master's body was trying to turn into . A wolf . A wolf with a jet black body and a height of about 5 meters, entirely made of steel . And what erupted from his body was jet black magic .

The black magical power mixed with the red aura and gave off a vicious color . I muttered as soon as I saw it .

“Fenrir...?”

It was like the Demon Wolf Fenrir in the myths of old . It was said that a great demon beast once tried to devour the world . However, the descriptions of the beast in past records pale in comparison to master's form in front of me .

“It's open!”

Apparently, Quina and Master Kiara had done their job well while I only trembled in fear . The sound of Master Kiara's pleasant voice was followed by the sound of the entrance door opening .

“Let's get out of here!!”

“Ye- Yes!”

“Mia, take Guendalfa . Quina, carry Asura! I'll bring Fran to you!”

I didn't receive any instructions . Of course . I was frozen in fear . Quina tugged my arm, trying to pull me out of the room . However, as I was trying to leave the room I saw it happen from the corner of my eyes . Master Kiara was attacked by Xellos Reed .

“Come on, let’s have some more fun!”

“Tsk!”

This was bad! Master Kiara cannot get past that man and bring Fran back . Fran was left standing there, still as dumbfounded as right after her master began his outburst .

“Damn it!”

“P- Princess!”

Quina’s worried voice hit my back . But it didn’t stop me . I didn’t know what I was doing anyways .

“Fran! What are you doing!”

“Mea, Master...”

“We have to run! Now!”

“No! I can’t leave my master!”

“But...!”

I could understand Fran’s painful feelings . If Lind had gone berserk in the same way, I too wouldn’t be able to just run away and leave . Still, I had to take her away from this place for now .

“Right now, your master is in a state of madness! He doesn’t even know you’re here . You will just end up getting attacked!”

“Bu- But...!”

“It’s a coincidence that you didn’t get involved in the previous attack!”

“...!”

“Now come!”

Fran’s ability to resist weakened . Taking advantage of this, I tried to pull Fran’s arm . But then I wonder why? I felt like the steel wolf’s eyes turned and looked at me instead of Xellos Reed . That was all it took to make me stand still . It was a tremendous killing intent .

“Oooooooooo! Fraaaaannnn!”

Did you just yell ‘Fran’ right now? By any chance, could you perhaps identify Fran? Wasn’t it a coincidence that you haven’t wrapped up Fran in your attack from earlier?

“Grrrrroooooo!”

The steel wolf opened its mouth . What emanated from that huge open mouth was a blinding light filled with enormous amounts of magical power . I held Lind over my heart, but I’m not sure if it could protect us . No, it was unlikely it could .

But the flash of light that tried to swallow me without me even thinking of fighting back was shielded by someone who stood in front of me .

“Master...Kiara?”

“Ou . Are you safe?”

“Ye- Yes... but master is...!”

“It doesn’t matter! Now get out of here!”

“Ye- Yes, Fran! Let’s go . ”

As instructed by Master Kiara’s words, I grasped Fran’s hand tighter this time so that she wouldn’t let go, and ran out to the entrance .

Chapter 351

Side Kiara

Just when one would think we were already out of the woods, the worst possible scenario struck...

The sword that Fran was holding began to rampage on its own . And when it came to the strength of its power, wasn't that already comparable to Asura? Maybe it's actually even more powerful .

Asura still had the ability to think and make sound combat decisions, even if he was out of control . Because of this, he was unable to go all out for fear of being caught in a dungeon collapse . His divine sword was best at widespread annihilation . However, in such a confined space, it wouldn't be able to show its true worth .

No, even without that, the sword was abnormal . It could activate the most powerful magic techniques in the world five times and at the same time it could even deploy Latent Potential Release, which was not normal . In addition, it has the ability to fly, transform, and it even took away Asura's skills . Having even just one of those skills alone would allow it to be called a top-tier magic sword .

“And we're not even close to the end of it yet . ”

It wouldn't be surprising to say that its power was on par with a top-tier divine sword . Really, just what was this place? How could a divine sword and a demonic sword suddenly just coincidentally gather here?

While I was thinking about that, Fran's sword suddenly transformed into a wolf-like figure made of steel, and gave off even more magical power . The ferocious red-black magical power that emanated from the steel wolf gave a feeling of pressure that made us feel uneasy just by looking at it from a distance . It's no wonder that Mea ended up being unable to move .

Mea began muttering about the mythical beast, Fenrir or something, but she might not be entirely wrong . At the very least, it was the strongest wolf-type demonic beast I've ever seen .

“Grooooooooooooo!”

I blocked the attack aimed at Mea as quickly as I could, but I took a lot of damage from just that one shot, my whole body screaming in pain . Still, I can't let myself go down . That wolf is not the only enemy here .

“Oi, oi, old lady . You're very motivated aren't you? Should I give time for the little ones to escape?”

Yes, it would be nice if they went easy on us, but it was scary to think about if they didn't . If you get chased by either, there was no way to escape . Someone has to stay here . Letting Mea and the others escape, I drew my sword .

“You know that you're going to die right?”

“It's not like I still have a very long time left to live anyway, It wouldn't be a bad idea to use it to save the young ones instead right? –Senkai Jinrai!”
(TL Note : in the raw it's written : 閃華迅雷)

“Kuhahaha! Good! No matter how weak you are, it's fun to deal with someone who's willing to die!”

“Goooooooooooo!”

And so the three-way battle began . The wolf of steel started relentlessly targeting the enemy in front of it, namely me and Xellos Reed .

And Xellos Reed was also trying to get at me and the wolf . No, it's more like he was enjoying the battle rather than aiming for it .

I could have tried stopping those two, only if I didn't collapse all of a sudden .

“The question is, how long do I have...”

I was hurt and I have been continuously fighting hard since last night . It was frustrating, but it would be impossible for me to fight for hours on end by now . The best thing to do is to launch a critical attack in one felling swoop and kill these guys in the blink of an eye, but... .

I couldn't . Xellos Reed, who was able to withstand even the attack of the divine sword, and the metallic wolf, who is on par or even stronger than that Xellos Reed .

Then, what should I do?

“...Hah!”

“That's a good move!”

“Gooooooo!”

Bracing myself I daringly turned my back on the wolf, as I attacked Xellos Reed . The sword and black thunder blocked the movements of Xellos Reed, and I barely avoided the wolf's attack from my rear . I couldn't stop myself from dripping cold sweat . I didn't expect that wolf would attack me with his tail like a whip . If I hadn't been wary from the start, I wouldn't have been able to react .

But as I have intended, the attack from the steel wolf struck Xellos Reed . Although it was only a glancing hit, I could see that the evil spirit of Xellos Reed had been reduced .

“I think I can go on like this . ”

Yes, this is the only way I could keep on fighting . In my condition right now this is the only way I could beat Xellos Reed . To be honest, I don't know how to beat the wolf . Huh, never mind, let's focus and make sure the one that can be beaten will be beaten first . That's all .

“Oh, come on, you don't think I'm going to let myself get hit again and again with an attack like that, do you?”

“Oh really? Then let's try it . ”

I focused my all on speed and evasion . It took all I had to read and guide the actions of the wolf and Xellos Reed to hurt each other . Naturally, both sides would focus their attacks on me, but that didn't matter . One will not survive to this age if you couldn't juggle despair at this level .

The wolf's attack became more intense, but they missed me and caused damage to Xellos Reed instead . Xellos Reed tried to close the distance between them to regain control . But I wasn't going to let you get away with it . I used the full force of the Black Heavenly Tiger to chase after Xellos Reed . Of course, with the wolf right on my heels .

“This damn old hag!”

“Gooooooo!”

“Fuhahahaha! There! There! What happened to all your power just now! You evil person!”

I continued to abuse my body with intense pain as I kept on dancing, swerving around between the two monsters . The price for doing so was my life . I dodged the wolf's fangs with a paper-thin gap, parried the sword attack from Xellos Reed, and I ended up vomiting blood .

I continued to abuse my body with intense pain as I kept on dancing, swerving around between the two monsters . The price for doing so was my life . I dodged the wolf's fangs with a paper-thin gap, parried the sword attack from Xellos Reed, and I ended up vomiting blood .

We were almost even in terms of speed – no, was the wolf faster than me? I was overwhelmingly defeated in terms of offensive power, and our defensive and regenerative powers were not even on the same plane . However, there were several factors that have allowed us to still fight .

For one, Xellos Reed was still fooling around . He still dared to take advantage of our intentions to enjoy the thrill of battle .

Furthermore, the wolf's movements were somewhat awkward . The speed at which it moved was tremendous, but the fluidity of the movements were slightly off sync . Apparently, he didn't have a perfect handle on his body .

However, the biggest factor in play was the difference in experience . I was sure that both Xellos Reed and the wolf would be very strong innately . However, there was a slight tendency for them to move too intuitively . Only with enough experience could one counter such instinct .

The fight proceeded as is . They both kept watch of each other's movements and anticipated how the other wanted to move and where they were aiming .

I continued the battle solemnly, wearing out my nerves and straining my brain .

“Ah! Damn it! Drop dead already!”

“Guruaaaa!”

“.....Hmm”

Neither of them look tired at all . I hated it . Whereas, here I am, already exhausted and in extreme pain, and I couldn't seem to manage it . But we can't leave any stone unturned . Even a slight shake will kill me in no time .

“Hah... hah... hah...”

“Old hag! Are you getting tired already? . ”

“Hmph . Even if I was tired, you can't seem to capture this old hag?”

I tried to provoke him, trying to keep him from turning his attention to Fran and the others, but he exerted the last of his strength . However, the equilibrium that was just barely being maintained was suddenly shattered from an unexpected source .

“Gaaaaaaaaaaaaa”

The steel wolf let out a loud scream and collapsed on the spot . His body fell like sand, in tatters . What happened?

Xellos Reed and I didn’t agree on anything, but once we distanced ourselves, we both stopped to observe the steel wolf . No, it was no longer a steel wolf . For the form had completely crumbled and disappeared, and was now a mere lump of metal .

But the collapse has not stopped . In fact, it accelerated .

After the steel wolf crumbled and disappeared, Fran’s sword was left lying on the ground . It was a shabby sword with cracks all over, as if on the verge of being discarded . The red aura and black magic power previously emanating from it had already disappeared, and one would even start to wonder if this was the same sword that had a vicious presence that seemed to rival the divine sword just now .

This one really seemed to have stopped moving . I couldn’t feel any magic from it . He was probably dead by now . That left us with Xellos Reed . I was thinking that I had to keep this guy down, but then Xellos Reed looked bored and released his stance .

“Oi, why do you put your sword down?”

“What? It’s boring, it’s no longer interesting . The old lady would be incapable of fighting in a heartbeat if left to her own devices . Then it would be better if I-”

“I won’t let you!”

“Oh? You’re still fine? But your speed is obviously slowing down...”

That is a given . The pain was so intense and dizzying that it's a miracle how I could still move my legs any longer . But I will not let him go beyond any further .

I didn't care about the future of the Black Cat Tribe, the future of the Beast Kingdom, or anything else . But those girls . I will not those young children, who share the same blood relations with me, be subjected to this .

“Un?”

“-Kiara”

What is it? I hear someone's voice . Is this a telepathic conversation?

(Who are you?)

“I'm Master . This is the first time I've ever had a conversation with you . Well, I had a one-sided conversation with you before though . ”

(Why? Where are you in the first place?)

“Right in front of you . That's me, the sword lying on the ground right now . I am an intelligent weapon . ”

(What!)

However, if that was the case, then it indeed made sense why it ran out of control because of the mad demonization skill . You never know what life had in store for you, who would have known that I would meet a legend at the edge of death .

(Telepathic talk is helpful . I can't even open my mouth anymore . )

“Kiara . First, release Senka Jinrai (TL Note : In the raw it's written 閃華迅雷) Otherwise, in a few minutes—‘

(No . As soon as I unleash the Senkai Jinrai, I'll end up getting cut down . .

“But ... you're really going to die if you don't!!”

I was told I was going to die . Even though I was aware that it was true, I feel relieved . That Fran wasn't alone anymore .

Quina also has a father who loves his daughter in his own way, although he is a snot-nosed boy .

But what about Fran? The other black cat people would not be able to keep up with Fran . If I died, she would be alone, wouldn't she? That's what I thought, but I guess she has a good partner .

We only had a mere ten seconds of conversation, but I could ascertain that the owner of this telepathic conversation was a person with a firm heart . With this guy, Fran won't be lonely .

Now I can put my life on the line without a care in the world .

(This old lady is already nearing her grave . Can you help me use this little bit of life I have left?)

“.....I see . I understand . Then can you lend me that little bit of life? To defeat Xellos Reed . ”

(Fuhahaha, that's good, fine! Then what do you want me to do? Use the rest of my life as you see fit!)

“First of all—”

Chapter 352

The haze that clouded over my mind cleared up and I regained clarity of the situation I was in .

This translation belongs to RNF .

As I took the madness away from the berserking Asura, I instantly went out of control myself . I vaguely remember the time of the rampage .

I fired a series of lightning bolts without chanting, mastered the use of Transform, and even used Latent Potential Release . I see, turning into a mad demon is a tremendous thing . The only thing I cared about was to fight even though I'd lost my mind and went crazy, surprisingly though I still did a good job in battle . On top of that, it felt like I unconsciously drew more power than my limit .

However, things became unclear right after . I busted through Xellos Reed... but then what happened? As far as I could recall, I was struck by a sensation of something with tremendous power flooding out from inside me – a sensation I had never experienced before .

That's right, something about it forced my body into a form of a wolf . But the berserk me and that something deep inside was fighting for control of our wolvern body and I ended up being unable to move well .

After that, I found myself lying on the ground, in a half-broken state with my sword blade in tatters . Perhaps, using Latent Potential Release for an extended period of time reduced the endurance value and that's what released the mad demonization... . I had less than a hundred left in my endurance value left . I only had a small amount of magic power left, and the regeneration of the broken sword blade still has not begun .

Just what exactly happened right before that...? No, it doesn't matter at the moment . Xellos Reed and Kiara were still in combat in front of me .

Moreover, Kiara was in a pinch . It seemed that she did as I told her to and kept on using the Senkai Jinrai, but any more continuous use of it would put her life in danger . That's why I tried to speak to her by telekinesis..... .

“Guuhh!”

An excruciating pain overwhelmed me . It wasn't physical pain . It felt like a mysterious pain that I will experience every time I exceeded my limits . I don't know how many times I've felt this today . Regardless, I can't hesitate here . I endured the intense pain as if it was directly cutting into my soul and sent a telepathic message to Kiara .

Even though she was in the middle of a battle, Kiara still responded promptly .

(This old lady is already nearing her grave . Can you help me use this little bit of life I have left?)

That being said, I couldn't tell her to stop deploying her skills any further . That would be disrespectful to someone who was prepared to die .

“.....I see . I understand . Then can you lend me that little bit of life? To defeat Xellos Reed . ”

(Fuhahaha, that's good, fine! Then what do you want me to do? Use the rest of my life as you see fit!)

“First, pick me up . But don’t equip me . If someone tried to equip me other than Fran, only disaster will occur . ”

I’ve actually been trying to use telekinesis for a while now, trying to endure that soul-rending pain, but I’m barely able to use it . If I really forced it, I could use it, but then I wouldn’t last long enough for my attack to reach Xellos Reed .

Therefore, I am working with Kiara here . Have Kiara carry me without Xellos Reed knowing and inject all of the power that remained in me before her time runs out .

“And then, all you have to do is throw me at him when you see an opening . ”

(Is that all?)

“Ou”

(I get it)

It was the only way that Kiara, who was already half-dead and half-alive, and me, who had lost most of my abilities, could possibly defeat Xellos Reed .

(Got it!)

Nice! Kiara picked me up firmly as she fought . Seeing this, Xellos Reed gave her a slight look of alarm .

He was probably aware that the attack inflicted by me earlier had the effect of breaking evil manifestations .

“Seems like you’ve got your eye on that sword . However, how could a broken sword, which has almost no magical power, be useful? It definitely looked almost broken or something . I presume the magic power must have been really low too . ”

“Haaaa!”

“Haha! I didn’t know you could still make that move!”

There’s plenty of leeway for that Xellos Reed guy . The high ranking evil man seemed to feel very little pain, and his strength was bottomless . Maybe he wasn’t a worldly creature to begin with . Even if his evil spirit was reduced now due to repeated fierce battles, he might still be able to recover with a simple rest just like human strength and magic power .

If that was truly the case, then this fight is really just a game to him . Playing with the powerful without fear of death . But I’m going to make you lower your guard!

“Shit! Rolling black thunder!”

“Mu!”

Good! I groaned unintentionally .

Kiara took a slightly larger swing at first, slashing head-on, breathless as she did so . It appeared like a weak attack . However, the slash was an invitation for Xellos Reed into a trap . Xellos Reed put only the slightest amount of force into his hand holding the great sword, intending to clash head on .

But the moment both swords struck each other, Kiara moved fast with a black lightning roll and got behind him . Xellos Reed, who had been putting a lot of effort into preparing for the coming slash, was momentarily delayed in his reaction to Kiara as he turned around .

By then, it was already after Kiara had thrown me toward Xellos Reed .

“aaaaaaaaaaaa!”

I’m going to use all the power I had left to activate Morphological Transformation . The true projection of the attack is of a thousand needles shredding into the body of the opponent . But right now, I could only be transformed into ten strands of half-hearted thickness .

Moreover, neither my momentum nor my sharpness was sufficient to penetrate Xellos Reed . Still, I didn't give up and wrapped myself around Xellos Reed's body .

Damn it! I need to twist with more power! Get thinner, sharper, and eat up Xellos Reed! In response to my intentions, the part that wrapped around his right leg turned into a needle and bit into Xellos Reed .

“I won't let you get away!”

“Gah! This sword still works! And what's more? What's that voice?”

“Giiiiii... Guaaaaa!”

“I won't let you get away!”

“Gah! This sword still works! And what's more? What's that voice?”

“Giiiiii... Guaaaaa!”

I was shouting out through telepathic communication . But now it didn't matter . I felt like I was going to lose consciousness from the pain . However, if we lose this chance, we'll most likely not get another one . We'll take him down! I kept furiously activating Morphological Transformation .

(Master! Are you okay!)

“Guh... I . . am . . fine!”

(I don't think you are!)

“I am fine!”

It's getting harder and harder to even communicate with telepathic language anymore .

“This fucking! Dumb-ass sword!”

“Gah!”

Xellos Read reached out to snatch me by force . Kiara slashed at him, but he ignored the attack . Did he even feel pain? I guess he thought that a few scratches would regenerate quickly anyway . So he decided that I, with my Breakthrough Evil Manifestation, was more threatening .

“Gugaa!”

“You son of a bitch! Get off me!”

No matter what I won’t let go!

A screaming Xellos Reed and me and Kiara, who can’t move at all .

Suddenly I saw a new shadow rushing into this room .

“Master! Kiara!”

“Fran...! why.....”

“I heard Master’s screams... and Kiara too . I felt like I had to return...!”

Kiara yelled with a determined expression as Fran yelled .

“Master! Please keep his attention just like that!”

“What?”

(I will use my trump card . All this time I’ve been looking for a way to use this little life of mine . I couldn’t find purpose for it before but at this moment I’ve finally found it . )

“Oi, if you do that, then your life!”

(I know myself the most . Stopping now would only delay my death by a week . I want to die here as a warrior . )

Kiara suddenly stood still . Her eyes were out of focus . It seemed that her vision was already blurred . However, she still wore a determined expression on her face .

(As I said a while ago . Let's show him our strongest form . Do you see the difference between humans and beasts? It's whether you care about appearance or not . Humans, how much do they care about appearance?)

(You're a good man . Fufufu... Hey, take care of Fran, okay . )

Kiara raised her sword behind Xellos Reed back . Black lightning immediately converged and wrapped around the blade of her sword . That was not all . Kiara's eyes changed to similar to a feline's, and I could see her hair, which had grown white with old age, turning black .

I could see the rapid loss of vitality in proportion to the sudden increase in power . Still, the only thing I could do now was to keep Xellos Reed from moving .

“Haaaaaa! Claws Of The Black Thunder God! Ooooo!”

In Kiara's hands, a sword of black lightning was produced . But unlike the Golden Annihilation Fire that Mea had used, it wasn't simply a convergence of power . There was even a sense of divinity from that black sword . The quality of the magic power is undoubtedly different .

It could be said that the magic power emitted was the opposite of the evil spirit that spread fearlessness and fear . The Black Thunder Sword was holy and awe-inspiring even from just a glance .

“Old hag! What are you... . . ”

The aim was slightly off! Kiara didn't even have the strength left to step forward anymore . I quickly brought my telekinesis to full strength and tried to correct the trajectory of Kiara's wielded Claws of The Black Thunder God .

Was it a result of the injury? The sword, which would have initially missed by an inch, had suddenly changed its angle and succeeded in slashing off Xellos Reed's left arm .

Xellos Reed screamed in agony . Even an attack with Breakthrough Evil Manifestation should not have made him shown such distraught . But it couldn't be helped . After all, Xellos Reed's evil spirit was already gobbled up and reduced .

“Wh- why haven't you died yet?”

It seemed that Xellos Reed was still trying to regenerate the wound by holding his left arm in place . But the skin in the cut did not respond at all . To begin with, the area around the wound didn't seem to attract any evil spirits anymore .

Apparently, the sacred atmosphere I felt earlier was not just my imagination . It seemed that the Claws Of The Black Thunder God was able to fight evil power more than Breakthrough Evil Manifestation .

“Fuha...”

Kiara collapsed with a satisfied look on her face . However I just didn't have any strength left to use my [Heal] anymore .

“Master! Kiara!”

“No, more than me, Kiara.....”

“Guuoooo!”

You sure can't read the atmosphere! Xellos Reed stared at me with an abhorrent expression as he held the wound on his left arm that was cut off . But it wasn't as intimidating as it was earlier .

“No way... using divine attributes... Maybe it's true what they say about beastmans being descendants of Divine Beasts... I'll leave for now, but be prepared for our next clash! Tell that old hag that I won't lose next time!

He got away . No, more like he ran away, . Actually, even though Fran came back, if he was really desperate enough and wanted to fight back without regard for anything else, he would still give us a heavy blow . Hence, it helped that he escaped instead .

“Kiara...”

(Master... we did it...)

“But you...”

(I am content . I was able to unleash the full power of the Black Heavenly Tiger . We had a good fight at the end, too . )

“...you are... really cool you know . ”

(Kuhaha... that was the best compliment I've ever gotten...)

Fran ran up to Kiara, who was lying on her back .

“Kiara! Kiara!”

“Yo, Fran...”

“I'll heal you now!”

“It’s useless...”

Fran ignored Kiara’s words and used a series of Greater Heal . However, there was no sign that Kiara would recover . That couldn’t be helped . After all, her life force was exhausted . Kiara was technically already dead, and the dead couldn’t be brought back to life .

Rather, I didn’t understand why she could still speak .

“...For a short time...it was fun...”

“Ugu... Kiara...”

“Even though we’re not directly blood related, you’re all like my grandchildren . ”

“Un”

“Revenge...is just a worthless endeavor...”

“Un”

“Be strong... gentle, cool... live freely...”

Then... Kiara’s words ended there, as she exhaled her last breath .

The vitality keeping her together to speak her last words visibly drained from her entire body . Her eyes, which were already flickering as they struggled to stay open, gently closed, as if she was finally at ease .

“Kiara?”

“...”

“Kiara!”

Fran’s cries for her would no longer garner any response from Kiara .

She had departed with a peaceful face, with a smile lingering on it .

“Guuuu... . Aaaaa... .”

The large tears that flowed down from Fran’s eyes stained Kiara’s chest .
And just like that, Fran plopped down onto Kiara’s chest, with a face befitting her age, and began to cry loudly .

“Uwaaaaaaa..... .”

Chapter 353

Chapter 353

As Fran was clinging to Kiara's body and sobbing, I saw several people running back into the room .

It was Mea and the others . However, there was a woman with them that I didn't recognize . Who was that? Right now, my appraisal didn't work as it should have either .

She must have followed Fran . Mea and the others rushed into the room in a panic, and when they saw Kiara lying there, their faces contorted .

“Master Kiara!”

“Kiara!”

Mea and Mianoa were the first to rush over . Aside from Mea, I've never seen Mianoa look so serious before . Both Quina and Guendalfa, who was carrying an unconscious Asura on her back, looked upset too .

They all seemed to understand the situation when they saw Kiara and Fran's condition . Everyone knew already that Fran could utilize recovery magic, and mythical ones too . Despite that, the fact that Fran was currently weeping without casting the recovery magic meant... . .

“Fran, did you manage to hear Master Kiara's last words?”

Mea spoke to Fran, as the tears flowing down both her eyes wetted her cheeks .

“Master Kiara was concerned about us . For Master Kiara, who had no family, we were close to her enough that she felt that we were like her own grandchildren . ”

This Translation belongs to RNF

“... she also said to be kind, cool, and live freely”

“I see . That sounds like things Master would say . ”

After hearing Fran’s words, Mea gave a big nod .

“Hmm.....”

“Live freely... . Master Kiara had a hard time because of that old bastard . ”

Old bastard? I wondered who that referred to, but it was probably the previous Beast King . He was the one who enslaved Kiara, but when I thought about it, he was a grandfather to Mea .

“But in the end, Lady Kiara looks happy with herself . ”

Please only read at RNF

Everyone nodded at Mianoa’s words . Mianoa, who was the lady in waiting, must have had a stronger bond with Kiara than anyone else . Understanding this, Mea and the others gave way for Mianoa to come close to Kiara .

Even Fran started to make space for her . Perhaps, she came to realize that she wasn’t the only one mourning Kiara’s death . She stood up, rubbing her eyes with her hands, which were bright red because she was crying .

“Thank you very much...”

Mianoa knelt down and wiped the dirt off Kiara’s face with her handkerchief .

“Kiara-sama... you’re smiling... . ”

Also only donate to RNF

Yes, Kiara was smiling . She seemed to be really satisfied with whatever she managed to do just before she departed .

Perhaps, when she released her last move, Kiara could barely feel her entire body anymore . I think she was not even aware that not only could she not see Xellos Reed, but her attack didn't even hit him directly and was also assisted by my telekinesis .

Still, she said she was content and said her goodbyes to Fran with a smile . Her face seemed really blissful . Would I end up with a smile like hers on my face like that if I was destroyed right now and it was all over?

That was definitely impossible . I'm sure it would have been unsightly instead . I won't be anywhere near satisfied and I would have cried with regret as I called out Fran's name .

Do not read at other website

Kiara must have experienced all sorts of things throughout her long life, both good and bad .

Talking and drinking with friends, tasting the sweetness and bitterness of life, sipping muddy water – no, that's wrong . She must have lived a life that cannot be imagined even by a monk already in his thirties . In other words, Kiara's life probably couldn't be fully expressed with such a simplistic outlook .

Also do not donate at other website

Thus, I think it's because of all of her life experience that Kiara was able to laugh and pass away so peacefully like that . It was impossible for me to be as such now . I admire her . I want to gain more experience so that I can end up laughing at the end too, together with Fran, hopefully after many fulfilling years to come .

Therefore, I cannot just do nothing and be broken in such a place . I managed to try to fix myself somewhat, but the intense pain didn't help .

“Guga...!”

What in the world has become of me?

While everyone was surrounding Kiara, one mysterious woman, who was not standing together with the group, approached me .

She was tall, with long silver hair and a white robe . Her eyes were sharp, no- her eyes were unsettlingly intense . Could it be that she was angry at being left alone?

I could see that the muscles on her body were well-toned despite being so lean . Merely from the fact that she was in a place like this suggested that she was not just any regular woman .

Her right eye, with only a slit opened, peeking out from between her long bangs, stared at me, holding me firmly in place . Ow... What shall I do... If Mea and the others were the ones who brought her here, then she was probably not an enemy . But if this woman starts to pick me up and tries to equip me, we'll all be in all sorts of trouble .

It couldn't be helped . I know Fran would have liked to be around Kiara a little longer, but If this woman suddenly picked me up in silence.....

“Fran... Guh...”

(.....Hm?)

“This, woman...”

Maybe it's because the adrenaline of battle had dissipated, but I could no longer hold back the pain . Still, I managed to ask Fran for help by sending her a telepathic message .

I think Fran then turned and saw me and the woman and understood what I was trying to say . She got up hurriedly, wiping away her tears, and ran up to me . Then she picked me up before the woman could .

Having said that, I couldn't shake this strong feeling of discomfort . No matter what I tried to do, I kept feeling this pain coming back again and again, and I couldn't even begin to repair myself . Moreover there was no sign that my magical power would recover .

Will I be cured if I get a blacksmith to repair me? No, I'll be in trouble if I can't heal . I couldn't do anything as it is now . This was a difficult moment for Fran, as she just lost someone she truly looked up to . I have to be strong, at least just for her .

Even though it was her possession, I understand that it was not polite to suddenly appear out of nowhere and take the sword all of a sudden . Fran approached the woman with a slight hesitation . The other person also slightly approached Fran .

The woman had a sour look as she asked Fran . I knew she'd be in a bad mood . Still, though, she still had enough sense not to complain about the crying Mea and the others .

“I see . Let me see that sword for a minute . ”

(Master?)

Hmm, what should I do? I don't think it's a problem just to show it, but I don't know who this woman is . However, if I refused, it looked like I might make her mad, and if that happened, it seems like it will be a pain . In the first place, is my appraisal camouflage working now?

“You should let her see . ”

As I was distressed, Mea suddenly approached me from the side . From the way Mea said, she seemed to be surprisingly more superior than Mea . Moreover, the tone of voice earlier felt somewhat familiar .

“Lady Alistair wouldn't do anything wrong . Lind also meets Lady Alistair on a regular basis . ”

(Master, is it fine?)

“Oh . ”

Mea trusted her that much, so it would be rude to say no here . Besides, she was the kind of person who could handle a divine sword, right? She must be a great blacksmith . I don't know what someone with an awesome skill like that is doing here, though .

It's strange because both her tone and her sour looks didn't seem too strange when you think of her as a blacksmith . Rather, I even think that it was very fitting for a craftsman .

Alistair stared at me as Fran stuck me out, and she kept staring at me sullenly . Her gaze scoured my brim and hilt .

“I knew this design was..... But the shape of the pattern... . May I take a closer look?”

“Hmm”

“Now, if you'll excuse me..... . Analysis Eye!”

I could see the magical powers in Alistair's eyes . There was such a strong magical power concentrated in her eyes that if we were in a dark place, her eyes would glow .

Then Alistair let out a murmur of surprise .

“That's a very strict equipment registration..... . No, is this power a remnant of God's...? Moreover ... this ... this thing ... this bullshit sword, who made it? Was it a divine blacksmith?”

“Is there a problem?”

“No, that's not something to say out loud here . Could you give me a few minutes of your time later?”

Apparently, she has been able to see my status and other information through her appraisal-like abilities . And, based on the reaction she gave just now, she might have found out that I was an intelligent weapon .

“The magic circuit is shredded . At this rate, it's in danger of being unable to make a proper restoration . ”

“!!! Is this true? What should I do now?”

“Wait a minute... Can I touch it?”

“Hmm”

Now that’s a confirmation, you’re definitely talking to me . I knew it . This is a true intelligent weapon .

Alistair gently touched my hilt with her thin fingertips and began to pour a small amount of magic into it . However, I did not feel any discomfort . It was rather warm and soothing, so much such that it even felt good . I guess It may be time for me to have a blacksmith perform maintenance .

“Oh.....”

Is this similar to the sensation of healing wounds? I could sense that something deep within me was healing .

This translation belong to RNF

Still, self-repair couldn’t work . Was it because it wasn’t that kind of healing that worked, or was my damage that serious? However, this Alistair woman feels trustworthy .

A bit simple minded huh, if I do say so myself . Was I the type of person who, when I was injured severely, would easily sway if someone was a little kind to me?

If you read this at other website that means they stole from RNF

(Master?)

“I’m fine . ”

I experienced less pain now when using telepathic communication . No, I’m sure, it was definitely much less than before . It’s all thanks to Alistair . I wonder who Alistair is exactly?

“I have administered first aid . If you don’t overdo it, it won’t get any worse than that, but you should refrain from fighting until it’s properly fixed . ”

“Then, can you heal it properly?”

“Of course . There are no weapons I can’t fix . ”

“For real?”

“Oh, just leave it to me”

“Is that so... That’s great... . !”

Immediately after hearing Alistair’s words, Fran squeezed my hilt and let out a sigh of relief . “Hou” . And then she shed a big tear .

She had lost Kiara and even I was feeling sad about it . I’m sure she couldn’t stop herself from having negative thoughts, and she was always anxious all this time too . I was too busy with my own problems to notice earlier .

“Fran, I’m sorry . I didn’t mean to worry you . ”

(No ... uh ... it’s okay . But really, it’s a relief that you’re okay master... . )

Chapter 354

Chapter 354

As Fran and Alistair were talking, Mea joined in the conversation .

“That conversation just now... Does that mean Alistair will undertake the restoration of the sword?”

“Yes . That is, if the girl allows it, I will work on it”

“You should allow Alistair to repair it Fran . I mean how often do you get this kind of luck?”

Mea and Alistair look at Fran .

(Master? Is it fine?)

“...Yes, I'll leave it to you . ”

In the first place, this woman healed me and made it tremendously easy for me to use the telepathic ability without feeling any pain . I felt like I could trust her skills . Above all, Mea gave an obvious sign that she deeply trusted Alistair from her fervent expression that seemed to have come from the bottom of her heart .

“Hmm, then, please . ”

“Yes, I'll take good care of it . So, what are you guys going to do after this?”

“Yeah... about that...”

Mea turned to look at Kiara . Kiara, who led everyone all the way up to this point, was dead, and Mianoa was incapacitated . Quina was only a maid and Guendalfa is still inexperienced . Asura just lost consciousness, and Fran was not fit to be a leader yet either .

Mea was the only person who could possibly hold this group together . She must have realized it as she looked around . She turned over slowly, rubbed her red eyes lightly, and then quickly looked up .

“First of all, we have to make sure that the master of this dungeon is really dead . After that, we will destroy the core . ”

“Are you sure? Wouldn’t it be a waste to destroy this large and valuable dungeon?”

Quina asked Mea, who answered Alistair’s question . But Mea nodded with certainty .

“It will only be another potential source of future disaster, especially a dungeon that spanned between two countries like this one . If we left this dungeon be it would spur a conflict between nations for ownership since a dungeon is a great source of incomes . ”

Well, even if any country eventually gains ownership of this dungeon, the other countries will still remain suspicious and be on guard against them . The fact that it was used for the war will have caused it to always have that image attached to it . However, the benefits of having power over the dungeon was too great for any parties involved to give up on fighting for ownership . Unless all sides created a clear-cut mechanism for co-governance, it would surely lead to conflict at some point .

Nonetheless, there was no way the Beastman Nation and Bashar Kingdom, which were already not on speaking terms with each other, would join hands and share such an extraordinary bounty . Their relationship would most likely only worsen as times goes by . Thus, destroying the dungeon would nip any future problems in the bud . Apparently Mea thought so too .

“As a royal family, we might have to consider the use—”

“No, I agree with you . ”

Also, considering the character of the Beast King, I feel like I’m in favor of destroying the dungeon . It’s like they’re going to say, “If it’s going to be a lot of trouble, let’s go ahead and destroy it instead . ” Anyway, Mea seems to have decided to destroy it herself . There was no hesitation in her eyes .

“Me and Quina will go deeper . Lady Alistair, please take Fran and the others and get out first . ”

“Well, since you have shown me your sword . Fine . I’ll take care of them until we get out of here . May I go straight to my house?”

“If we can’t catch up, we’d appreciate it if you could . ”

“What will you do after that?”

“I’m going to take Quina and the others back to Gringote . I have a lot of things I want to find out and research . But I want to entrust Fran and her sword to Alistair . Is that fine with you? ”

“No problem, and I’d like to take a closer look at that sword too, of course that is if that’s okay with you . . ”

“Is that alright with you, Fran?”

“.....Hm”

Fran reluctantly nods .

“I’m sorry . ”

(No, Master is the most important thing right now . )

I think she actually wanted to go with Mea . But I swallowed my words, understanding that my restoration was top priority right now .

“And what about that stupid demon over there? If you want, I’ll take him with us . ”

It could be said that she was acquainted with Asura as well . It's not simply a feeling of familiarity, but more of a sense of comfort . After thinking a little, Mea bowed to Alistair .

“Could I bother you with that?”

“Accepted . ”

Alistair approached Asura, who was lying on top of Guendalfa's cloak . She carried him up easily . Contrary to her slender frame, she was actually so powerful!

“Anyway, we need to get out of here . I think we should give Kiara a proper burial too, don't we?”

“That's right..... . ”

“Could you please take care of Lady Kiara, Lady Fran?”

“I understand . ”

Fran nodded at Mianoa's words and put Kiara's body away in her dimensional storage . I felt like storing the bodies of people I knew in dimensional storage was treating them like objects, and for a moment I wondered if that was okay, but apparently the rest of the guys didn't feel any particular sentiment about it except for me .

This is a world in which death was much more familiar to us, and that the way we thought about corpses was also different and more serious . If left alone alone, they could potentially become undead . The idea seemed to be that because of the concept of the soul in the first place, after you died you were no longer there .

After quickly getting ready to leave, we headed straight for the dungeon's exit, with Fran and Urushi in the lead .

After quickly getting ready to leave, we headed straight for the dungeon's exit, with Fran and Urushi in the lead .

It took longer than I thought it would because everyone was still worn out, but it wasn't as particularly dangerous due to the lack of monsters .

I've tried it lightly on the road, but apparently Fran's and my skill sharing was already starting to work well . That was the only blessing I received in this whole bundle of misery . However, since my magic power was empty, I had to make do with just Fran's magic power for now . We will have to be very careful about that .

While we were going through the labyrinth part of the dungeon, the dungeon started trembling greatly . It's likely that Mea and her team have succeeded in destroying the dungeon core .

Then, just before escaping the dungeon, Mea and the others caught up with us . Then, they reported that the core was destroyed and the dungeon was on its way to collapsing . Thus, from now on, this place will be nothing more than an ordinary underground structure .

“Well, I guess this is goodbye for now . ”

“Hmm...”

“A lot of things happened, but let's meet each other again in the future . ”

“.....Good luck . ”

“Thank you . We will also pray for Master's recovery, and hope that he will be able to heal properly . Also, can I leave Master Kiara with you for a little while longer? Once we get settled in, we will arrange a funeral for her, after all we want to make sure the funeral service goes off without a hitch . ”

“Leave it to me . ”

After escaping the dungeon, Mea and Fran gave each other a firm handshake and encouraged each other onwards .

We are supposed to still be at war with the Kingdom of Bashar . I don't know what will happen in the future, but I'm sure they won't lose now that the threat from the North has disappeared . They should be able to repel the kingdom of Bashar .

No, they have to... otherwise, it wouldn't be worth it for Kiara to risk her life . And I am sure that Mea understood it as well . With one last emphatic nod, Mea left with Quina, Guendalfa, and Mianoa .

As Kiara's apprentice and a princess, I am sure that she has a lot of responsibilities, especially now that Kiara is no longer here, she will surely bear more responsibilities . Though thinking how much that small back of her has to endure from now on I can't help but want to root for her .

Fran stared off at Mea's back and the others as they climbed into the carriage .

(This Translation Belong To RNF)

“We'll see each other again soon . ”

After the golem carriage which Mea and the others were in rode off, Alistair spoke to a lonely-looking Fran .

“... . Should we get going now too? But first, you may have an idea who I am by now, but I'll tell you who I am anyway . ”

“Hmm . ”

“My name is Alistair . My occupation is a divine blacksmith . A pleasure to meet you, Black Thunder Princess and... . Mr . Intelligent Weapon?”

(For faster release read at RNF)

I knew it . I got found out . But still, a divine blacksmith? I thought it was possible that she was in charge of taking care of the divine sword, but I didn't think it was really true.....

There was just so much going on that I didn't have the energy left to be surprised anymore . Fran looked to be the same . She opened her eyes lightly and introduced herself normally .

“I am a rank C adventurer . Fran, the Black Heavenly Tiger . ”

“...I am Master”

“Hoo!”

“And this is Urushi”

“By the way, is Fran the one that gave you the name master?”

“Hmm...”

“So it's not named..... . How is it possible to not be named at this level?”

Wasn't the Named system supposed to be a way for gods to name their great equipment? I'd be honored to be compared to an item in that class, but what about it? I'm aware that I'm a good sword, but I'm not overconfident enough to say, “I'm a sword accepted by God! Now bow before me you fool!”

“For now, we're going to my house . Once we get there, I should be able to analyze and repair your master . ”

“I look forward to working with you . ”

“Thank you . ”

“It's the same for me, I get to touch a great sword, thanks to you . Alright, now get in this one . ”

What Alistair took out of the item bag was a golem carriage that looked exactly like the one Quina had in her possession .

Fran climbed into the carriage as prompted . Alistair threw Asura onto the floor of the carriage .

“Is that okay?”

“Serves him right! How could this idiot demon get out of control until like this anyway? I bet he’ll wake up with a stupid look on his face . ”

That’s a bitter pill to swallow for Asura . What happened between them in the past anyway? Well, we can ask him about that too when he wakes up .

“Well then, let’s depart!”

Then we got into the golem carriage and left for the divine blacksmith’s house .

Chapter 355

Chapter 355: - On The Road With Alistair

Alistair's mansion was eastwards from the dungeon. Their golem carriage advanced along the boundary mountains.

“Well, shall we talk lightly along the way?”

“That, is that fine?”

What Fran worried about was the driver's seat. It was just the horse-powered golems right now. Even if they did remember the way, what if demon beasts attacked and stuff?

“It's ok. There is a powerful barrier against demon beasts. And there is no thief crazy enough that they would attack my carriage. No, more like they are long gone already. Kukuku”

It appeared that all sorts of things had happened before. Well, if a divine grade blacksmith said it was okay, then it probably is okay. Plus, there's Urushi there running alongside us. If push came to shove, Urushi will kick the shit out of them.

“So, first of all, would you like to talk about your master?”

“.....Hmm”

Fran nodded and then glanced at Asura. She was wondering if she would hear them. Then, Alistair took out a mysterious tool from the item bag.

It looked like a cord about 1 meter long, I think?

“It’s a telepathic communication device. Well, it’s an unfinished product that requires you to touch the string and that if you make it longer than 1 meter, you will instantly lose the telepathic communication. It’s a good tool for a few people to have a private conversation, right?”

Fran and Alistair, sitting side by side on the seat by the carriage wall, each grabbed the end of the cord. I was in Fran’s arms, and she wrapped the cord around the handle. So the cord was just barely long enough. I see, the ones using this needed to be extraordinarily close to each other for it to work.

(How is it? Can you hear me?)

(Hmm)

“I can hear you”

There was no pain from telepathy anymore thanks to the careful consideration of the item’s effect. Since this was the case, I could have a normal conversation. I mean, it worked as well for me, a sword.

(So let me ask you again. I would like to ask about the master himself, his creator and the period of production)

We decided to be honest about answering the things we were asked. We were going to need her help to fix me, and we’re dealing with a divine blacksmith anyways. If we lie badly, we will just end up getting found out. On top of that, they might find out about my roots so we decided it was best not to lie to her.

That being said, I really didn’t know anything about my creator. There wasn’t much that could be said of it. When I replied so honestly, Alistair uttered a word of surprise.

(I see..... so the master was a human previously right?)

“You- you know?”

To my surprise, she had already found out before I could explain myself. Why? Could it be that an appraisal used by a divine grade blacksmith could even show that the item was originally human?

(No, because even I couldn't create an artificial soul spirit that can do master's level of response. And when I looked at the shape of the soul, it didn't look like it was artificial)

Apparently she had the ability to see souls, like the unique skill Soul Spiritual Eye that Jean the necromancer possessed. I don't really know much about it, but I guess there were many forms of souls.

(Your soul looks just like a person and could give out responses just like a human's. It's way too similar to a person. But it all makes sense if you consider that it was originally a human. Well, that leaves me wondering.)

“Of what?”

(I don't know how to contain a person's soul in a sword. I'm a divine blacksmith. But I have no idea what kind of method they used.)

That's where it all comes down to, wasn't it? Who put me on the sword? Was it the creator of the sword, or was it someone else?

(I'm hoping that once we do the analysis in my house, it will give us some further insight into this. Let's leave this for later. Yeah, I'm looking forward to it now. Kukuku)

Alistair seemed like a pretty sensible person, but the way she looked at me right now is a little scary. It's similar to a child's eyes when being given a new toy.

(Next, I want to hear about your encounter with Fran, is that okay?)

“Ah, yes. Don't worry. I'll try my best to remember it.”

However, Fran was already asleep. No wonder I thought it was strangely quiet. She must have been tired from crying earlier.

(I guess we'll have to wait to hear from Fran later.)

“My bad. I’ll answer as much as I can.”

(Well, it’s a kids’ job to sleep anyways. There’s nothing we can do about it. So let’s start with the encounter, shall we?)

I talk about everything without leaving out any details. I told her the story of how I met Fran, and even Alistair was taken aback upon listening to more of the story of how we first met.

Even I myself thought it was pretty absurd, so I don’t blame you.

After that, we continued on our adventures together, and together we’ve traveled and grown after reaching place after place. Sometimes, we delved into dungeons, crossed the seas, and finally came to this land at the end of our previous journey.

For the most part, Alistair showed little interest in our journey though. It seemed that she was more interested in knowing the way I matured and grew than of the adventure stories and such. She had a lot of curiosity, but it appears that it was only limited to the fields she was interested in.

My explanation then came to the part where we entered this continent and fought the Valkyries. During this time, a serious incident happened, which may have something to do with my mutation.

“For some reason, I’ve started to feel pain from time to time when I use my skills and consume mana.”

(Even though you are a sword you can feel pain? That’s interesting. Does it hurt every time you use a skill?)

“No, I only usually feel pain when I activate multiple techniques at a time, or when I’ve used too many form transformations.”

I’m supposed to have no sense of pain, but somehow I could feel it. No, I have no pain, and I’m doubtful if it actually hurt. However, the sensation of pain was certainly the closest I could relate it to.

(It's hard to say without using equipment to examine that. And I've never seen a sword in pain before. However, it could have some serious effect on the master. In the future, refrain from doing anything that might cause you pain.)

"I understand."

I've got this tool for telepathic communication, so I'm sure I can handle it for now. I then explained the process of eradicating the army of evil people and meeting Alistair. I don't remember where I got all of the skills, etc., as expected, but as far as I've been asked, I could answer all of them, and I don't think I've made any mistakes.

After that, time continued to pass as we discussed the sensation of absorbing a magic stone, the desires to become human, and the differences between humans and swords when using the skill.

She was particularly interested in the ability to absorb magic stones. She asked me in detail what demonic beasts had high magic stone values and what had low values.

Are these really the questions I need to answer for her to fix me? Aren't you merely putting your curiosity first?

But basically, the magic stone value of stronger demonic beasts are higher, and the magic stone value of evil people is low, etc. I told her.

And then there was that other thing, with regards to leveling up skills. The system of spending points is a system that Alistair has never heard of.

(The more I hear about it, the more intrigued I am.)

"I am honored to have a divine blacksmith say that to me."

(When it comes to combat power, we have more weapons than master. Like the divine sword. But there aren't many swords that are this mysterious. You surprise me, a divine blacksmith. You should be proud.)

2 hours later.

Around the time I finished answering most of Alistair's questions, the carriage stopped.

"Oh, we're already there. Well, time flew by so fast! It was a good ride! Hey, Fran, wake up.."

".....Nyu"

"Come on, you stupid demon, wake up!"

Alistair kicked Asura in the head next to a sleeping Fran rubbing her eyes. Oi, Oi, Is that fine? Even if the damage didn't look like much, he should be worn out from the mad demonization and other things, right?

However, Alistair's kicks didn't stop. Only after he had been kicked five times like that...

"Ah? Where is this...?"

"You finally woke up huh? You stupid demon."

"Geh.... Alistair!"

Asura looks up at Alistair and lets out a pathetic scream.

"Wha- what are you doing!"

"That's because I could feel the magic of the divine sword. There were two to be precise. So I went to see the situation. If it's a battle between two divine swords, it's a big deal."

A divine grade blacksmith even has the ability to sense the magic power of a divine sword? And the way you just spoke, were you thinking of stopping a battle between divine swords?

"If it's broken after a fight, I'll have a chance to fix it!"

Apparently, she was a person who was faithful to her desires.

Chapter 356

Chapter 356: - Start Analysis

Alistair's mansion had a strange appearance. It was a two-story building made of stone, but the outer walls were all made of one huge rock. If four 25-meter-long rock walls, polished to a mirror-like surface without the slightest irregularity on the surface, were put together to form a box, and one more rock wall was placed on top of it instead of a roof, it would look like this ㄅㄅ.

Such a mysterious looking structure was equipped with evenly spaced small windows. If the windows were not there, you wouldn't think of it as a residence for sure. At best, you would think it's part of a ruin or a magical device.

"How about it? What do you think about my house?"

"As always, your tastes are really weird. It's even more ridiculous because it's portable."

It seemed that this building itself was a magic tool and is portable. As expected from a divine grade blacksmith's house, it's amazing.

"Hmph. There is not an ounce of waste in this house. You just don't understand that, you're the one who is too big of a waste."

"Gu..."

Alistair didn't like what Asura had to say, so she glared at Asura and spoke harshly. But Asura didn't even talk back, he just flinched.

As I suspected, Asura is not very good at dealing with Alistair. I will not say it out loud though. I wonder what on earth happened between the two of them.

While being guided by Alistair, who had put the carriage into a special item bag, we stepped inside the house. The scene there was as mysterious as it appeared on the outside – no it's even more mysterious.

Apparently the entire building had been turned into a workshop and there was no entrance hall at all. As soon as we stepped inside, we immediately saw a room that seemed to be Alistair's laboratory and workshop.

However, I wouldn't have thought that this was a laboratory and workshop if I wasn't told beforehand. I mean, I had no idea what kind of use the room would be for from just a quick glance.

The walls and ceiling were dimly shining. Moreover, it was not a magical light. To my surprise, it turned out to be metal that was sticking to the wall like plating. The metal wall, like polished silver tableware, reflected the light from the lamps and shined brightly.

“Cool...”

My eyes flickered, and Fran stared at the walls and ceiling while squinting. When Alistair saw this, she explained it to me like it was nothing.

“Oh, that thing. That is Mithril plating. The magical power of the outside world is the most intrusive in order to perform magically delicate work.”

“Mithril? Is it Mithril?”

“Yes”

It's also a rare sight to see Fran constantly being surprised about something. But even though it's plated, this amount of mithril? Isn't that crazy extravagant? As expected of a divine blacksmith.

“You're not going to be able to deal with this woman if you keep getting that surprised.”

“Shut up, you stupid demon. We’re about to have an important talk, so you’re going to go upstairs. You know where the guest room is, don’t you?”

“I know. I want you to explain what’s going on before I go.”

“How much do you remember?”

When Fran asked that, Asura snorted, placing a hand lightly on his chin. I guess that triggered something and opened his memory.

“I..... I heard from the princess that I went berserk and you used your skills to take the madness away from me and stop me from going out of control. But soon after that, I lost consciousness and found myself waking up here. I can’t tell clearly but I think the evil bastard was fighting someone or something after I passed out...”

It looks like he was protected by Mea and the others after the mad demonization was lifted and they lightly explained to him about what happened, but apparently they didn’t tell him that I lost my mind after taking the demonization skill and went out of control and started fighting Xellos Reed.

“I haven’t woken up feeling this good in a long time. Thank you.”

Asura bowed deeply. It seemed that he was really grateful for the help he received.

“But even though I just took it away, I think it will be back soon.”

“Still, even if it’s only for a few days, I’m grateful to be free from the fear of not being myself. I owe you big time for this.”

“We would only be putting ourselves in danger if we didn’t do anything.”

“I suppose I should be thankful that I didn’t kill the princess and Kiara myself.”

I see. It looks like Asura still didn’t know that Kiara was dead. However, Fran has not yet been able to bring herself to explain from her own mouth.

She wrinkled her brows and looked down with a look that couldn't stand something.

“.....”

“What happened?”

“Haa..... this stupid demon! Let's talk about it later! I'll tell you what happened to Kiara later.”

“.....Oh.”

From Alistair's words and Fran's demeanor, he must have understood. The emotions drained from Asura's face. But I had to tell him this.

“It's not your fault.”

“.....Who?”

I'd really like to tell him more about it, but I still can't have a telepathic conversation on my own yet. However, I thought it was absolutely necessary to tell that Kiara did not die in the hands of the berserk Asura.

I don't know what kind of relationship they had, but it sounded like they were old acquaintances.

“I'll tell you all about that later. But you didn't kill her. After you passed out, Kiara fought with the evil one, and the battle with the evil one got too much for her.”

“I see... I understand. Then I'll borrow a room.”

“If you're hungry, go to the dining room. If you tell the golem, they'll give you something.”

“Oh.”

Asura went up the stairs with a heavy heart. I guess the upper floor was the living space. Alistair looked away from it and looked troubled for a moment, but quickly turned to face me and Fran with a serious expression on his face.

“Now, get on with restoring master. Just the thought of leaving things as they are is enough to make me stressed.”

“Hmm, please.”

“Please.”

“Master doesn’t have to force himself to talk. More importantly, I need to repair the blade immediately. I don’t know if it’s just a matter of repairing it or more, so I’ll take a sample and analyze it. So, while adding the missing materials, I’ll be restoring it in a way that won’t be too hard on the master. Is that fine?”

“??????”

Yeah, Fran is in a completely muddled state. However, there was no one who knew more about and was better at restoring weapons than Alistair. So I’ll leave it all to her.

“I’ll leave it all to you”

“...In the meantime, let’s wrap a telepathic cord around master.”

Alistair wrapped the telepathic cord around my hilt. This made it somewhat easier to talk to both of them. I’ll have to get Fran and the others to hold the string every time, though.

“Fran, put your master on that table.”

“Hmm”

“Okay, let’s start the analysis. What about you, Fran? If you want, I can fix you a meal or something.”

“No, it’s fine. I want to watch.”

“Okay, I understand.”

Then the analysis by Alistair began. Alistair used various magic, skills, and magical tools on me on a table made of strange metal materials. What was amazing is that they were all appraisal and analysis type materials. It’s amazing that she could use that much variety of tools and still process all the received information and use it effectively.

Though if you see it from the outside, it’s so plain. After all, all she had to do was hold her hand over my half-broken sword and stay put.

I’m sure Fran will get bored with this as fast as she can. That’s what I thought, but after ten or twenty minutes, Fran was still staring at Alistair as she worked.

No signs of sleepiness, no signs of getting bored and starting to squirm around. That’s how seriously she cared for me, I guess. Maybe it’s uncalled for, but it made me a little happier. Because I realized again that I was truly loved by Fran.

One hour later. Alistair’s analysis was finally complete. Alistair muttered as she wiped the sweat from her forehead.

“As I thought The metal part is Oreichalcos after all.”

“Oreichalcos?”

“It is a special metal that can only be produced by a divine blacksmith. A person without the right knowledge would only think of it as a harmonium-based alloy, but when processed with a special technique, it can be used as material for a divine sword, a divine metal.”

I’ve heard that name before in Ulmut.

“Am I made of that metal?”

“That’s right.”

“So the person who made master was a divine blacksmith?”

Chapter 357: - Discarded Divine Sword

Hi everyone! We've got some donations from anonymous so get ready for some bonus chapters!

TL Note : Hi everyone for this chapter I use ‘ 『 』 ’ for master’s dialogue and I italic master’s monologue. And so I want to know your thought which is better using ‘ 『 』 ’ for dialogue and italic for monologue (like in this chapter / chapter 357) or nothing (like in previous chapter/ chapter 356)? Leave a comment below on what you thought!

Well, it turns out that Alistair might know something about me. However, she doesn't seem to have a lot of confidence on her face.

“I just don’t know if this is true...”

“What do you mean?”

“Just a moment— Truth of the Sword, activate!”

Alistair closed her eyes and concentrated. And then she activated some kind of skill. Immediately afterwards, something that looked like a clear, thin plate floated in front of her. There are characters and pictures that were displayed there.

“That is?”

“It’s part of a divine grade blacksmith’s unique skill, a skill that has a function to know the truth behind the creation of a sword. Well, to put it simply, it is like an illustrated book filled with divine swords and knowledge about them, from which divine grade smiths could draw information from. Information can also be displayed externally in this way.”

I think it’s something like an encyclopedia. And it looks like it can display the information you wanted too. Maybe it’s just a picture book with a really high performance.

If you look at the information display function of Truth of the Sword, which looked like a hologram, it looks more like science fiction rather than magic or skill.

“Well, there is a lot of information that is not available for others to see. How is it? Do you think you can read it?”

Even if you ask me if I can read it, since it’s right in front of me so—

『Hmm? What is this?』

“I can’t read it.”

The text on display was a mess. If it’s not encrypted, it’s completely nonsense. But apparently, Alistair already expected it. Therefore she only calmly nodded.

“I knew it. So what about the painting?”

『I can see a sword』

“Mm. it’s looks a bit like Master.”

『Is that so? Well, maybe that’s right』

Although the shape of the most important emblem area was completely different, the hilt and sword blade were exactly the same.

“The picture looks fine.”

The picture seems to be exactly what Alistair wanted to show. I mean, the text was just gibberish when viewed by someone who isn't qualified, but it looks like Alistair can see the proper textual information.

『If you went to the trouble of showing it to me, does that mean the sword isn't irrelevant to me?』

“Yeah, as Fran said, it has too much in common with you, Master.”

Then Alistair went on to list the similarities between this picture and me. First of all, the pattern. Then the shape, the size, the color of the braid and the weave, everything seems to match perfectly. It was so much alike that it would have been impossible to say that it was just a simple imitation.

Moreover, the sword blade. The blue pattern and other minor decorations were similar. The length of the sword blade is said to be a perfect match too.

However, the most eye-catching part, the brim, was completely different.

I had a heroic emblem of a wolf at the base of the sword, but in this painting, there were four human face-like things drawn side by side. It is an emblem with the design of four beautiful women with their eyes closed and each face has something that looks like angels' wings on the back.

『Sure, they might be similar except for the emblem.....』

“Right. A detailed explanation will take time. We'll have to wait until after we've made the necessary repairs. Give me a minute.”

Alistair paused and pulled out some kind of basketball-sized metal sphere from the item bag. When Alistair cast a spell lightly and touched the metal ball, the shape changed at once. It had a strange shape, like a tangled web of thin metal threads, or like a cotton candy made of metal.

Alistair made more changes as she wrapped that metal cotton around my sword blade. Then, she poured some kind of potion on top of it and applied some magic.

“—Fu. With this, this Oreichalcos should be absorbed into master’s blade and automatically begin to repair itself.”

So this is Oreichalcos. She took out a lot of it, even though it is a legendary metal.

“Thank you.”

“That’s my job. But more importantly, about what we were talking about earlier.”

Alistair pulled a chair from the corner of the lab and sat down. She offered another chair to Fran.

“Well, let me start by saying this... in my opinion, master was created by more than one person.”

『Multiple? Does that mean there were many creators?』

“Well, it’s close to that. The sword on the outside and the one who created the ability to seal human souls and absorb demonic stones inside would be different people. The quality of their work is too different, even on a casual glance. I’m going to proceed on that premise, okay?”

“I understand”

『I understand』

Unexpectedly, it’s more of a shock. There were quite a few surprises. We didn’t know anything about it in the first place, but I was actually a sword made by multiple people! That being said, when I heard it, I’m like, “Hmmm”. If it were from a human being’s perspective, isn’t it similar to a situation where there were multiple parents with complicated circumstances?

Once she was sure we understood, Alistair moved the still-displayed picture of the sword in front of Fran.

“This sword, inscribed with the word ‘Wisdom Sword Cherubim’. Currently it is one of the divine swords that have been lost.”

『Eh? A divine sword? You mean this is a divine sword? This sword that looks like me?』

I cannot ignore this information. After all, it's the divine sword you know? It's like the best sword in the world, and you say it looked like me?

“What do you mean?”

“Well, there are several possibilities... but, I think master is a discarded divine sword.”

『Discarded divine sword? Another word I don't know.』

“don't understand.”

“Hmm, I see. It's certainly not a widely known story. Let's start with the explanation first.”

“A discarded divine sword is apparently a divine sword that has been discarded, as the name stated. There were two main reasons why the Discarded Divine Sword was born.”

“One of the reasons, out of a variety of others, is If one failed to create it. Most of them were discarded because they have the power equivalent to a divine sword, but their abilities were unfortunately half-hearted and in danger of going out of control.”

In that case, the said sword fails to become a divine sword. It may seem a shame to discard it, but the potential for it to go out of control, on the other hand, would certainly be hard to overlook.

“The other is when the finished divine sword is ordered to be destroyed because it is too dangerous.”

“Ordered? By whom?”

“God. In the past, there were three divine swords that were allegedly ordered by God to be destroyed. It was said that all of them were so dangerous that they were discarded by the Divine Grade Blacksmith himself without activating most of the swords’ abilities.”

I see, so it’s a case of succeeding but having to dispose of it because its ability was more dangerous than expected. Though, I can’t imagine an ability so dangerous that God would order it to be discarded.

“Speaking of divine swords, they are as intimate as children to us divine blacksmith. How much pain the past divine grade blacksmiths who were ordered to dispose of it have to endure.....”

Alistair murmured with a strange face.

“But it’s also true that you can’t really let a sword that could bring calamity out into the world when the sword was supposed to protect the world instead. It would be unavoidable. That’s why I want the divine sword that is alive and well now to remain intact. It is a discarded divine sword that has escaped destruction for some reason.”

Is that why Alistair treated us so well? I thought you were just a sword nerd.

“What were those three swords?”

“One of the three is the nuclear strike sword, Meltdown. The details of it were not even recorded in the Truth of the Sword, but it was a terrifying divine sword that produced tremendous power and poison. It was ordered to be destroyed because, if left unchecked, it could threaten to wipe all creatures off the face of this world.”

Power and poison..... You mean nuclear energy and radiation? The name was also Meltdown. I don’t know how powerful it is, but it would definitely be dangerous if it was used around the world. It must have been so powerful that God considered it dangerous.

“The other was the beheading sword, Judgment. It is said that it was a divine sword that could simulate divine punishment. However, this was also discarded because it may twist the world’s reason.”

I can't imagine this at all. However, when it came to the possibility of abusing God's rules, it may indeed be seen as dangerous.

“And the last one is the wisdom sword, Cherubim. It is said that it was able to access, interfere with and even rewrite all the knowledge stored in the God Realm. However, It seemed that the ability to browse knowledge was the main problem, though. They said that people were able to access even knowledge that they shouldn’t know.”

So that's it. So it's a risk of spreading dangerous knowledge to the world? But I wonder if this Cherubim-san might have anything to do with me? I'm a little scared.

Chapter 358

Chapter 358: - Announcer-san and Cherubim

“So, the two of you have come to understand a little bit more about the Discarded Divine Sword right?”

“Hmm.”

『Oh』

“Alright. Now, let’s talk about the possible relationship between Cherubim and Master.”

So, this conversation is finally happening. I’m getting a little nervous.

“I’ve been thinking about it. When one is told to dispose of a divine sword, just how exactly is it done?”

“Hmm.... By throwing it away?”

『No, that alone won’t be enough. It shouldn’t be allowed to exist anymore, so unless you could melt it down into an ingot or something....』

I shuddered as I imagined the scene of myself being melted down. If I were human, it’s like imagining a horror scene where I was murdered in a freakishly gruesome manner. Hmmm, I was a little surprised to find myself more inclined towards my existence as a sword than I thought I was.

“Of course, there’s also a method of disposal by smelting it again in the furnace and turning it back into a chunk of Oreichalcos. However, don’t you agree that that’s a waste of time?”

『Even if you ask me.....』

A divine sword would take a huge amount of time and effort to make. Can you destroy it completely and pretend it never happened? I couldn't do that.

『I think they'd rather do something about the parts they've been told are no good and think about reusing the good part.』

“Right? It's a divine sword, you know? That is a first class sword. Then we can just erase the abilities inside and divert the outside to something different.”

『In another words are you saying that I'm a product of that kind of process?』

“Maybe, just maybe. Even if you'd lost the function of a divine sword, its size as a vessel is incomparable to other magic swords. I'm sure you could add a new and different ability.”

『But why is the emblem part different? Isn't it strange that it is not an angel emblem as in the picture?』

“You could make several modifications if it were limited to superficial matters like that. And it wouldn't be strange to have a new emblem when the sword is born anew, right?”

“Hmm. I guess.”

“And I'm not really sure what I'm about to say is true but..... There's another possibility it could have been a test run or a failure when making Cherubim. The other possibility is that it was a prototype made before the production of the completed product.”

“My Master is not a failure.”

『Thank you Fran』

“What I can say for sure is that there is some kind of connection between Master and the Divine Sword Cherubim. At the very least, they may have inherited similar abilities.”

Cherubim’s ability.... When Alistair talked about this, I was reminded of something, or someone. I had thought about it maybe around the time I started hearing about the Discarded Divine Sword, but the more I heard about it, the more I became convinced of what I’m thinking of.

A reliable person who was always there for me, the announcer. He was still the announcer who mechanically delivered level-up and title notifications to me, but once, I was actually able to talk to him. It was in the middle of the first time I used the potential release in a fight with the Lich, and Announcer-san left some words of concern as his voice dissipated.

〈Thanks to the individual named Master, I, who was not allowed to exist by God, who was erased from existence by the Maker and allowed to exist only as a vessel, was finally able to exercise power for the Lord. May the blessing of the God of Wisdom be on your way—〉

Isn’t that exactly what Alistair told me? Moreover, if I’m not wrong, Announcer-san also mentioned the word “divine realm” while releasing the potential limit.

〈——Attempting to access the divine realm——Success. Accessing library. Obtaining information on Clairvoyance in exchange for loss of access ability. Building the skill Clairvoyance— Successful〉

That’s what he said. I think he also mentioned the ability to browse and interfere with the knowledge of the divine realm that Alistair was talking about. And so I decided to tell Alistair about Announcer-san.

“It’s interesting. It may indeed be the remnant of the Cherubim, which makes it more likely that it really was created by reusing Cherubim.”

『Someone else mentioned that too.... Yes, that mysterious voice. That voice sounded like Announcer-san and he said, ‘Remnants of an existence that supposedly already gone, It just miraculously came to the surface with the potential limit release. The price of using so much more power than he had, even the residue of it, will disappear.’ I’m sure he said something like that.』

That voice was also a mystery. It sounded more like an ally than an enemy, and it didn’t seem like something I can think and do something about, so I tried my best not to worry about it after that, but... We can no longer ignore it at present. I decided to ask Alistair about the mysterious voice as well.

『Actually, do you think there is one more person inside me besides Announcer-san? I think there is another person inside me.』

“What? What kind of person is that?”

『Hmm...』

『No matter what you say. All I can say is he is a somewhat bad attitude man.』

They say you can get your strength back when the Moon Festival approaches, but I’ve never been able to have a proper conversation with them because of all the things that get in the way each time. However, he seemed to know various things about my situation.

“I can’t guess it with just that.”

『After all, I don’t know his name or what he looks like. It can’t be helped - no, wait. I think I did see him once?』

He showed up at an inn in Barbora, like a phantom. As I recall, he came with the intention to apologize and told me that the potential release had worn that man out for some reason, and that I wasn’t going to be able to talk to him for a while.

『Let’s see, he was a mature man. He had silver hair, and he was wearing a loose-fitting, robe-like outfit in all black colour.』

“I still don’t think that’s a clue after all.”

『After all?』

I'm sure there are plenty of men with silver hair but....

“However, just keep it in mind. Maybe, if you keep looking into it, later, you may find out something. Anyway, once I'm done repairing the blade, I will start analyzing and repairing the interior.”

I mean, I feel like if I could have a conversation with that man, it would all be solved. Can't we use Alistair's power to search for more clues?

“Yes. Well, let's do our best to get in touch with that mysterious voice, too.”

『I'll leave it up to you』

“Leave it to me.”

『Any other information that might help— yeah, I'm apparently a member of the God of Chaos, right?』

“What? The God of Chaos? Not the God of Wisdom?”

“Hm.”

“Hmm.....The divine sword, as its name implies, is a sword that bears the power of a god. Each divine sword is a family member belonging to the god who gave it the power.... Cherubim was supposed to have been a family member of the God of Wisdom. Hmm.... Belonging to the God of Chaos, huh... Well, it seems worth investigating.”

Oh that's good. It might have helped a little. Hmm... Is there any other information I have not yet told them?

『Ah. Can you give me more information about the place I was stuck in, or perhaps some other hint?』

“Was it the Field of the Demon Wolf? Honestly, it won't do anything to help, unless you can examine the altar or whatever it is directly.”

“I see.”

“I don’t think I’ve ever been there either. I’ve conquered every continent in the last 100 years or so, but I still haven’t reached the Demon Wolf Plains.”

“100 years?”

『Eh? How old are you now?』

I was more surprised by learning of how long she had already lived than the information that she has been to all the continents. From appearances alone, I was sure she was completely human.

“I am half elf.”

“Your ears? Amanda’s were sharp.”

That’s right. Amanda, a rank A adventurer who used a whip as her weapon, was a half-elf, but her ears were as pointed as an elf’s. However, Alistair’s ears are round like any other human.

“Ha ha ha, do you know any other half-elves besides me?”

“Hmm.”

“Well, in my case, it looks like my father’s blood who’s human was thicker than my mother who was an elf. Therefore my appearance is closer to a human than an elf’s.”

So that’s how it is. Even if one was half elf, they don’t necessarily inherit the appearance of an elf.

“Well, the longevity isn’t just a tribal thing, it’s also an occupational thing.”

『Does your occupation affect your lifespan?』

“It’s not so much my profession, but rather, my profession’s specific skill is called Physical Mastery. As the name implies, it’s a skill that keeps the body in its prime, but it also extends the life span of the body by keeping it young for long periods of time.”

Skills that keep you young? It’s not a very blacksmith-like skill. No. Is it possible, considering that she will remain at her prime as a blacksmith for a long period of time? And she said she had a number of unique skills. As expected of a divine blacksmith, she was just truly as impressive as her title sounds.

Chapter 359

Chapter 359

I asked Alistair about her prediction that I might have something to do with the discarded divine sword, Cherubim, but she wasn't completely sure about it either .

“Either way, let's make restoration our top priority for now . Soon I'll finish repairing the external components . And then I'll start working on what's inside . ”

『What do you do to restore the inside?』

“That's where a divine blacksmith can truly utilize their skills . Just leave it to me . Just, it will take a lot of time to analyze and repair, so be prepared for that, okay?”

『I understand . 』

“As for you, Fran... Honestly, I don't think there's anything you can do to help even if you just watch . ”

“It's fine . I will just keep watching . ”

Fran replied in the same way as before, facing Alistair with a look of determination that displayed her intention that she would not move away from his spot even if just for an inch .

“Woof!”

Urushi also sat down in a well-mannered position beside her and looked at Alistair .

“Suit yourself . ”

Alistair muttered and said nothing more . Then she turned her back to Fran and the others as she faced me .

“Well then, let’s get started . Well, there’s nothing for Master to do though . Your job is to stay put . ”

『All right . 』

“Fuhahaha!!”

『What’s the matter? 』

“I never thought I’d see the day where I’d be repairing a sword and telling it to not move . ”

After laughing lightly at that, Alistair held up her hand above me with a serious expression .

“Eye of Analysis...!”

It was the same appraisal type skill that she used when we first met earlier . She began to observe me carefully with her magic-laden eyes . They were several degrees more serious and keener than they had been the first time round .

“...”

“...”

Complete silence engulfed the room . Neither Alistair, Fran and Urushi uttered a single word at all . Alistair needed her full attention to carry out her task and Fran and the others, understanding that, did their best to not disrupt that concentration . The only thing they had in common was the seriousness of each other’s expressions .

The only sounds in the silvery room were the sounds of two people and one animal breathing .

“...”

After a while, actually I stopped keeping track of how long we've been at it . Alistair's forehead was covered in beads of sweat . She had been concentrating her magical power for a long time, analyzing me . The exhaustion she should be going through right now was too large for me to imagine seeing how quiet the situation was .

Fran was still watching her work, not moving even slightly .

“Fuuuu~”

And then, after finally finishing her analysis, Alistair slowly looked up and exhaled . I could see the fatigue draining colour away from her face .

『Is it over?』

“Mhm . I'm sorry . ”

Suddenly Alistair apologized .

Eh? What? What... happened? Why are you apologizing?

『I- Is it possible that I can't be repaired?』

“No, you can be repaired . Let's be clear on that . However, even after so much time has passed, I still couldn't complete the analysis . I'd like to apologize for that first . ”

『But it's not like you didn't come up with anything at all, right?』

“Well... kind of . I've gathered all the information I need to make the necessary repairs without any problems . ”

Then, it's fine . It would have been nice to know what's going on, but my current priority is to repair myself . No . I was too impatient .

“In the meantime, I’ll explain the results of my analysis while I start with the repairs . ”

『I’ll leave it to you . 』

Alistair began taking out multiple potion-like objects again and started to concoct something next to me . It seems that the magical medicine prepared for repairs was made and customized according to the sword to be repaired . Not only does this mean that Alistair’s skills in blacksmithing was top-notch, but she was also quite adept in alchemy .

Alistair, who has finished mixing the concoction, poured it onto my sword blade . A second later, I felt something well up from inside my body .

It wasn’t a bad feeling though . It’s a warm and gentle feeling, completely opposite of the intense, dark one I had when I was under the control of the mad demonization . I could feel that soft, fluffy comfort spreading all over my body .

“Okay, the repair of the magic circuit has begun . How are you feeling?”

『Somehow, it feels good . It’s like soaking in a hot bath . 』

“That is quite an interesting expression . You are most definitely a person before . I don’t know if I will ever have this opportunity again in the future to hear thoughts directly from the sword, but this is very interesting!”

When Fran saw Alistair smiling and muttering excitedly, she felt that a huge burden in her chest had been lifted . Then, Fran asked Alistair with an expectant look in her eyes .

“With this, will Master finally heal?”

“No, not yet . This potion is just going to close up a big wound in the magic circuit . The next step is to close up the more delicate and deep wounds . This is the most difficult job I’ve been tasked with since I last created a divine sword! I’ll finally be able to go all out again and prove my abilities!”

I don't know how she'll do it, but I could guess that it was going to be a very difficult and intricate process . I'm glad Alistair was willing to do this, but I also think it's going to take a while .

Even so, you have made a divine sword huh .

She IS a divine blacksmith, so I guess I might say, it's expected of her, but hearing her say of her past work herself brings a different kind of surprise . I'm getting an awesome blacksmith to fix me up, huh .

However, after hearing Alistair's outburst, Fran fell back down into her chair again, looking dejected as she probably understood that my restoration was likely to be a long way off .

"I see . "

"Well, don't look so gloomy . It will take some time, but Master will certainly get back on his own feet . "

"Really?"

"Let's bet on it with divine swords!!"

I know you're trying to tell me that it's a sure thing to succeed, but betting with divine swords... .

Does that mean... If she fails to repair me, do we get a divine sword? That meant that for Fran, the more you fail, the better the sword you will give her..... . ??

"I don't need it . Instead, return Master to his original condition . "

『Fran!』

Good girl! As expected of Fran!

"I know . I'll definitely fix it . Well, returning it to the original... That's the problem . "

『What?』

“No, don’t worry about it . Let’s just focus on fixing it now . ”

『?? I understand...』

“That said, it will take a little longer for the potion to finish repairing the damage to the magic circuits . And while we wait for that, I’ll tell you what I found out earlier .

“Hmm!”

『Please do . 』

I know I said earlier that restoration was my top priority, but that doesn’t mean I don’t want to know!

“Oh, I think Master can at least use telepathic communication now, right?”

What? For real?

『Aa- Aa, test test . Can you hear me Fran?』

“Hmm! I can hear you!”

Oh, I can really use it now! And it no longer causes pain .

It felt a little laggy or slow to activate when I used it, but it was enough for conversation . I’m really getting better . Once again, I felt that I was really getting better, and I was moved by it .

“Did you say you have two persons in you?”

『Yes . The announcer and the mysterious voice . 』

“Let’s start by talking about this Announcer-san thing . ”

『Oh』

“Hmm . ”

Fran had a plain reaction to this revelation . I suppose it’s because she has heard of the announcer, but she has never spoken to him in person .

“It is severely damaged, but there is certainly an area that is deeply connected to the sword . It is similar to a nerve that stretches out its branches and leaves all over the interior of the sword . It is specialized in analyzing information and other stuff, moreover originally it is made for the host or in this case, it was made for Master . It was made in a way so it’s capable of assisting the host . ”

『Assisting? So I still have notification settings for leveling up?』

I don’t think there’s that big of a difference between before and after Mr . Announcer’s success in releasing the potential limit . But that was only scratching the surface of the story, apparently .

“No, that’s not all . Originally, it was supposed to assist in the activation of skills and assist in calculations . ”

『So you’re saying that he had the ability to help you activate skills and magic?』

“Ah . But unfortunately before we realized the benefit, that part was damaged . It was originally an ability that Master needed after you level up more . ”

Alistair said that it was for me – or in this case, in terms of the sword’s ability – is an ability that was reserved for when I level up more . If Announcer-san had been fully prepared and had that ability to support him, he might not have been injured from overuse of his abilities like he was in this case . On the contrary, if the ability was intact he could have warned me when he was nearing his limit .

But if it wasn’t for his success and sacrifice, we would have been defeated by Lich on the floating island . Therefore I won’t say words of regret .

『So will Announcer-san heal?』

“I am afraid it would not heal . It’s a miracle that there are even some remnants of Cherubim lasting to this day . There’s nothing we can do to fix it if it’s broken this badly . ”

Unfortunately, if Alistair said she can’t do it, then she really can’t .

『Is that so.....』

“There’s only so much I can do to prevent the residue of Cherubim disappearing or get any worse, such as reinforcing it . ”

『I understand...』

If you think about it, Announcer-san did a lot for me during my early days . It distracted me from my loneliness, and I’ve gained a lot of knowledge from it . If the only thing I could do was help it avoid from completely disappearing, I would be grateful enough for that .

『Please take care of Announcer-san . 』

Chapter 360

Chapter 360

Alistair opened her mouth again as she was working on reinforcing Announcer-san .

“Now, we’ll talk about the mysterious voice . ”

『 Oh, finally . 』

(I wonder, how is the result of the analysis? Could it be that we can find out who they are or how to call them out?)

“That being said, there’s not much more we know about this one than what’s left of Cherubim . ”

『 Ah, is that so? 』

“Yes . However, in a fairly deep part of the sword, I could certainly sense a soul separate from Master, albeit a weakened one . ”

So does that mean it was not part of a discarded divine sword or something like Announcer-san, but it’s instead sealed inside a sword like I was?

“The ability to get skills from the magic stone would have been an ability that this soul originally had . ”

『 You mean a being that has the power to absorb skills and magic power from magic stones? How is it that I was also able to use this mysterious soul ability? 』

“That’s where it gets complicated . Master’s interior is in a more complicated state and more mysterious than you yourself can imagine, you know?”

(Eh? What is that? Complex and mysterious?)

I’m a little afraid to ask . But it’s too late to retreat anyway . A man has courage, and a sword should face his enemies without hesitation .

『Tell me more . 』

“Before that, I’d like to see Master absorb the magic stone, will that be alright?”

I see... Well, she will certainly find out more about it if I show it to her in person .

“Then here . ”

“What am I supposed to do with this magic stone?”

“You have to cut it like this . ”

“I see, so it’s like that...”

The magic stone that was handed over by Fran, was hit by my blade by Alistair as Fran instructed . Then, the absorption was done as usual . The weak demon stone didn’t fill me up very well, but I’m sure it was properly absorbed .

『What do you think of this? 』

“Hmm, it’s an interesting flow of magical power . But I still think my analysis is correct after all . Therefore, I’ll tell you my conclusion now . Even if Master absorbs the magic stone, you’re not getting your power directly from it .

『What? What do you mean? 』

“The magic is flowing towards the mysterious soul, not to Master directly .

To sum up Alistair’s explanation, here’s how it worked .

When I absorb the magical stone, the mysterious soul sealed inside me receives its power . Apparently, this soul is quite damaged and it’s a mystery how it could still exist . According to her, the fact that it was sealed inside the divine sword might have been to protect its existence instead .

And from this mysterious soul that regained its power after eating the magic stone, the power will be shared with me . Apparently that was how it worked .

“Perhaps, this mysterious soul is the identity of the mysterious voice that Master heard previously . It is quite an extraordinary thing . It’s soul level is, shall I say, at a superior plane that even I can’t analyze . ”

『 You don’t know where or who he is? 』

“I’m sorry . However, I don’t sense any kind of evil intent from it . I get the impression that it’s more than willing to cooperate with you . ”

Well, if this mysterious soul is the identity of that mysterious voice, it was certainly not an enemy . And if anything, I think he is more of an ally than an enemy .

“To make things even worse, it seemed that the ability to strengthen Master with self-evolution points was handled by something other than this mysterious soul . ”

『 ‘Something else’ huh..... That’s a more vague description than the mysterious soul . 』

“I know that, but I can only say as much . ”

Inside of me, the remnants of Cherubim and the mysterious soul seem to be intricately intertwined . It’s a complicated situation, and apparently a third mystery exists within it . I couldn’t sense any soul or thoughts in this other mysterious thing, and it felt more like a magic program or system built inside a magical tool or device .

“Even though I say it’s a mystery, what I mean is that I don’t know the creator or the method of making it but I still understand some of its functions . Regardless, it’s too advanced for my understanding, and the analysis I conducted earlier could not completely catch up to it . ”

『Even Alistair, a divine blacksmith, can’t analyze it out?』

“Honestly . Whoever created this system is a monster . I don’t know if there’s such a profession, but it’s at a level that’s impossible to build without assuming that there’s a divine grade mage or a divine grade alchemist or something of that caliber . At least as a blacksmith, I know that I can’t build one from scratch . ”

『Is- Is that so』

“Ah . It may be similar to the dungeon core I’ve seen before . It’s exactly the same as that because it was impossible to duplicate or imitate and it makes me feel defeated . ”

Alistair smiled bitterly after saying that . Even Alistair, a divine blacksmith, feels defeated after seeing that? Isn’t that like super messed up? I’m getting excited . What kind of tremendous ability does it have?

『Oh, so what kind of function does this mystery system have?』

“Oh, as for that ——”

The system’s primary purpose, it seems, is to manage the power of the mysterious soul . Earlier, I said that power was flowing from the mysterious soul to me, but it seemed that this system was taking over and intervening each time .

It was this mysterious system that took the power from the mysterious soul who regained his power and changed it into a form that even I can use .

Well, I also heard that it's only because the mysterious soul is cooperating with me that I'm able to extract that power .

The power of the mysterious soul was quite tremendous, and it's difficult for me to use it on my own if I just let it run loose without control .

The power of the mysterious soul was quite tremendous, and it's difficult for me to use it on my own if I just let it run loose without control .

The same was true when it came to learning skills . The mysterious soul seemed to have the power to get skills from the magic stone, but it's usually difficult for me to use it as it was . Even though they're sealed inside me and had a connection to me, we're still separate souls to begin with .

However, the truth is that the skills the mysterious soul absorbed from the magic stone was converted and transferred by the mysterious system so that even I can use them . The power of skill sharing between me and Fran is an added benefit thanks to this mysterious system .

In other words, It seemed that the thing that adjusted the mysterious soul power into a form that even I could use was the mysterious system . And apparently the form it used to do so was the rank-up and the self-evolution point system .

“I just don't know why they're setting up this thing called magic stone value, I honestly don't understand . I think we could have built a system to make it easier to strengthen Master without setting it up like that . ”

『In other words, the more magic stones you absorb, no matter what kind, the more you get strengthened on the spot?』

““Yeah, exactly like that . Is it necessary to set a hurdle such as a magic stone value?”

『Maybe there are steps needed to be taken as a requirement?』

“Maybe . Well, to be honest, the creator of this mystery system feels like a pretty drunk person to me, or just someone with a lot of mischief . That's just the impression I got from doing my analysis, though . Or maybe it could simply be a hobby of his, you know?”

Hobby... . Even though I’m having a lot of trouble thanks to the magic stone value... If it was really a hobby, he must be an awfully twisted guy .

“Oh, one more thing . You said you couldn’t get any magic stone value from even the powerful evil one’s magic stone? This is just an assumption, but maybe the mysterious soul can’t absorb all the evil spirits . ”

In other words, a magic stone with too much evil energy won’t restore the mysterious soul . That’s why the power wasn’t transferred to me and I didn’t accumulate any magic stone value . Maybe, the reason I couldn’t get the evil one’s skill was also because the mysterious soul couldn’t absorb the evil one’s magic .

Apparently, goblins and other evil one are able to absorb power to some extent because they contain not only ordinary magic power, but also some evil power .

『Um, it’s getting really confusing . Let’s get this straightened out a bit . 』

First of all, inside of me there is Announcer-san, the residue of Cherubim, a mysterious soul, and a mysterious system .

Announcer-san was responsible for my ability to process information from the outside world and communicate to me what’s going on inside me . It is the so-called announcing ability, and apparently, the reason why even though I’m a sword and have vision of the outside world was because of Announcer-san . The ability to use telepathic communication is probably the announcer’s ability as well . It’s kind of like a secretary I guess? Announcer-san the Secretary, that sounds great .

The mysterious soul is something sealed inside me . Even Alistair can’t find out more about his background than that . However, he is extremely damaged and seemed to be recovering by absorbing the magic stone . And he transfers the power he’s gained from his recovery to me . Apparently the reason I get pleasure from absorbing the magic stone is because I feel this mysterious soul's delight in it . In other words, it wasn't me who ate the magic stone and felt good about it! It was Mr . Mysterious Soul who was the one with the perverted sexuality! So when I ate the magic stone and said, 'Oho!' It's not my fault that I'm saying that!

And then there is the mysterious system that adjusts the power from that mysterious soul so that even I can use it . Without it, the tremendous power emanating from the mysterious soul would, on the contrary, consume me . Self-evolution points and the like seem to be a benefit from this mysterious system . Although we don't know who its creator was, there are suspicions that he has a bad personality .

“Hmmm, we've managed to figure some of the things out, but I feel like now the mystery surrounding the creators of these... 'things' just got deeper . ”

“As far as I can analyze, I think at least four or more people are involved in the production of Master . One thing for sure is Elmera, the divine blacksmith who is said to have created Cherubim is involved . ”

“Elmera...”

This is a great piece of information to help me figure out who I am . In the future, if I am able to follow Elmera's footsteps, I might be able to find out more of myself .

“And then there's the mysterious soul himself . Perhaps it is not human, but some kind of demon beast, but they would not be able to build such an elaborate system without it agreeing to be incorporated into the system at will . ”

『Are you saying that the demon beast agreed to do this?』

“Some of the beasts are more intelligent than humans . That's exactly what happens when they reach the divine beast class, as their intelligence then far transcends that of humans . And it wouldn't be strange if there were some circumstances involved or if they agreed to some kind of agreement . ”

When he showed up in Barbora to make a gesture of apology, I thought he was human because he appeared in human form, but apparently he wasn't .

It seems strangely human, but when you think about it, Urushi also had some human qualities . Maybe if you become a high-ranking demonic beast, you're no different from a human inside .

“And then there's the person who put this mysterious system together . If it was Elmera's job, I, as a fellow divine grade blacksmith, would know . Hence, it's definitely a different person . ”

If Alistair said so, then it must be so . It must be one of Elmera's collaborator then . So there was someone who created a tremendous magic system that even a divine grade blacksmith couldn't analyze?

『Did I miss something?』

Cherubim, the mysterious soul, and the mysterious system . No, there must be someone who brought me to this side of the world in the first place . And, according to Alistair's view, it's not the former three .

『Me?』

“That's right . It's Master himself . In the first place, I can't find anything about the existence that sealed Master to the sword . At least, it's impossible for Elmera . I think it's impossible for Elmera to seal such a mysterious soul on a sword . ”

『What about the one who made the system?』

“It is possible . It just that—”

『Just that...?』

“It might be just my intuition as a divine blacksmith, but it feels like the method of work involved for the two is different . ”

『The method of work?』

“Yes . I don’t think the magic circuit of the mystery system and the magic circuit that connects the master to the sword was made by the same creator .

I had no choice but to only believe that as it is the word of a divine blacksmith . Just like how, on Earth, craftsmen could spot the subtle differences between two antiques that an amateur wouldn’t be able to detect .

“I have no idea how to seal the master and the mysterious soul to the sword . It’s a mystery... . I’m sorry for only adding to all the mystery and unknowns you face . I couldn’t figure out that you are acting as a subordinate of the God of Chaos, and I also couldn’t keep up despite all the analyses I’ve done . I am a divine blacksmith, and yet this is what I look like . I am pathetic . ”

Alistair ridiculed herself as she said this .

Chapter 361

Chapter 361

Alistair regretted that she was unable to complete the analysis .

“Also, I don’t even know why Master was sealed inside a sword . ”

『The reason why I was sealed?』

“Yes . Considering the timing, the mysterious soul was first sealed in the remnant of the Discarded Divine Sword Cherubim for the purpose of protecting itself . Then, someone built a mysterious system and arranged for the power of the mysterious soul to be used by the sword’s main personality – or in this case Master . ”

『Ah』

“We can only speculate as to why they did so, but I think it was for the sake of the mysterious soul . If the number of magic stones it absorbs increases, the stronger it’ll become, then the person that has equipped the sword will continue to voluntarily absorb more magic stones . In doing so, the mysterious soul will be able to recover faster too . ”

I see . So we’re doing exactly what the creators of the sword might have intended us to do . No . Am I on the creator’s side? And if that’s the case, should we say that Fran was the one we’re looking for?

Still, I won’t complain about this because it is useful for Fran’s sake anyway . Rather, I am grateful towards this system . After all, it was because of this system that I was able to meet Fran .

However, the following words from Alistair made me feel like I was doused in cold water .

“But is it really necessary to have Master?”

『Eh?』

“Maybe Master’s soul was locked up in the sword at the same time as the mystery system was built . It should be so because Master’s soul and the system are paired together . But do we really need Master in this system?”

“Master is indispensable!”

Fran, who hadn’t said a word and had been listening intently to us previously, opened her mouth for the first time in a long while . I guess she was just trying to keep quiet so we wouldn’t be disturbed . You have really grown up, Fran, to be able to listen to a difficult story without dozing off even a bit! I’m a little impressed .

However, the moment she heard words that she couldn’t just ignore, she couldn’t help but shout her thoughts out loud .

“Don’t look at me like that . I’m not saying it in a bad way . It’s just that I am worried . Why did they have to go through all the trouble to seal Master in the sword just to have him act as a mediator of all this power? Couldn’t they just let the person who equipped the sword to directly wield the power of the sword?”

When you put it that way..... The sword had the ability to share skills, and we have Announcer-san . I suppose it’s possible for the wielder of the sword to choose their own skills and draw the power from the sword without me .

Ah... . Am I simply a leftover, an unwanted child...?

“We need Master! It’s only because I have Master, and because I could count on him that I could get this far!!”

“Fran...”

“Hmm!”

I’m glad I was Fran’s sword!

“Well, I’m not saying that it’s completely useless either . There’s a certain amount of merit to the fact that the sword itself has its own will . Besides, there’s no way that a high class blacksmith who has created so many swords would imitate sealing a human soul into a sword for no reason . Not to mention, sealing a human soul to a sword isn’t an easy task . Therefore there must have been something, an important reason why he put Master as the main personality of the sword . Well, I wasn’t able to find out anything about that from my analysis though...”

『No, we managed to find out about a lot of things, and all of it was pretty significant for me . Isn’t that right?』

Now, I understood better what my powers were, and I came to know of the name Elmera . It also turns out that I was potentially created from a discarded divine sword . This was a huge discovery .

“I don’t know if it has anything to do with Master’s role, but there’s one place in the sword that’s completely beyond my analysis . Should I say the deepest part? It’s in the deepest part of the sword . ”

『Are you sure?』

“Yes . I am sure . No doubt about it . Only, this part is different from the others, and it’s designed to prevent analysis and appraisal . ”

『Could you guess what kind of function it has?』

“There is too little information . I have no idea what it does or how it works... . I’m sorry, but I really don’t have any ideas . ”

She blamed herself again for this, but I think Alistair has done really well . If it wasn’t for her, we wouldn’t have gotten this much information . And it’s not like I didn’t know what to expect . I had come up with a possibility after hearing the results of Alistair’s analysis so far .

『I have a little hypothesis – or maybe it’s more of a wild guess – about the identity of the mysterious soul, but I have a bit of an idea . 』

“Oh? What is your hypothesis?”

『Well, it’s just a possibility but... . 』

『I’ve been thinking about the identity of the mysterious soul . And I think It’s Fenrir . Well, I know that I might be overestimating myself by saying this, thinking that the legendary Demon Beast could being sealed inside me . 』

The wolf emblem design on my handle . The name of the place with the pedestal I was stuck on was the Plains of Demon Wolves . The legend of Fenrir that was once roaming in the plain . The title of Divine Wolf’s Attendant that Urushi possesses . The fact that the mysterious soul is a demon beast .

We could list any number of possibilities . But with this information that we have gathered so far, that was the only conclusion I could come up with .

“I see... Fenrir huh?”

“I see... Fenrir huh?”

『Yes, what do you think? 』

“It’s not out of the realm of possibility . Some divine swords have those kinds of demonic beasts in their swords to borrow their power . There is also a type of magical sword called a ‘magical beast weapon’ that is used to contain magic beast souls . ”

『Isn’t that the same as manipulating the soul? Didn’t you said you it was almost impossible to manipulate and seal a soul in a sword? 』

“It is very difficult to control the soul . However, it is not impossible to create it with a body that is deeply connected with the soul and seal the soul altogether into the sword . ”

“What kind of other divine swords are there?”

『I'm interested in that too...』

“As for the items used to seal demonic beasts, the Demon King's Sword Diabolos, the Tyrannical Dragon Sword Lindwurm, the Serpent Emperor's Sword Jormungand, and the Golden Dragon Sword Eldorado were also used in the past, although Eldorado is already broken now . ”

Alistair counted on her fingers as she stated the names of the swords . However, Fran looked like she was curious about a different part of the story .

“Even though it was a divine sword it still breaks?”

『I'm curious about that, too . In the list of divine swords I saw before, there were names of swords that were already destroyed...』

In addition to Cherubim, Judgement, and Meltdown, which were said to have been discarded at the behest of the gods, the names Fanatics and Holy Order should have been listed too as destroyed divine swords . And now she mentioned the name Eldorado . Was it also destroyed unexpectedly?

“Ah, it's simple . Divine swords are rarely destroyed . But there are exceptions . When a god or divine grade blacksmith makes a move themselves . Another way would be when they get destroyed in a battle between divine swords . ”

Ah... Of course it was like that . God swords could certainly destroy each other .

“For example, the divine sword Fanatic has quite a dark history behind it . Dionysus, the divine blacksmith who created this sword, was a blacksmith who had a certain... inclination . ”

“Inclination? What kind of swords did he create?”

“Instead of turning the user into a warrior, Berserk, the mad divine sword, makes the user run out of control and turns mad instead . It is said that he sacrificed a saint to create it, and it also had the ability to control the demon, Diabolos . Hypocritical Sword Pacifist brainwashes others into becoming puppets . There are many people that get their desires and dirty sides reflected onto the swords they create . ”

Indeed, the divine sword Fanatic that was made by such a guy would be no ordinary sword .

“Fanatic is, to put it bluntly, a sword that connects people together in spirit . ”

“? What’s so bad with that?”

『Does that mean it has something like telepathic powers?』

People connecting with each other in spirit... Does it mean you won’t have any quarrels with each other because you could understand all of each other’s thoughts? However, Alistair’s explanation was even more appalling than expected .

“I’m sorry . It seems like I didn’t say it well . Fanatic has the ability to force the mind of the person they dominate to integrate into themselves . ”

『Integration? Two people become one? And if so, what about the body of the one being eaten?』

“This one’s a little outrageous . ”

Fanatic was able to integrate the spirit of others into themselves, but also maintain a connection to their original bodies . As a result, the body may appear to be a separate organism in motion individually, but the soul inside is in fact the soul of the owner of the divine sword, Fanatic .

I guess you could say that the owner of Fanatic is moving multiple mentally connected bodies at the same time . However, since the original owner of the physical body is integrated into Fanatic, it seems that the external surface can behave as it is .

“The whole spirit takes in others and fuses them together . As a result, you can own all of their memories, experiences and emotions . But do you think those who have taken in the memories of dozens or hundreds of people can keep remaining sane?”

『I don't think so . 』

“Exactly . The spirit of the owner who continued to use that sword grew so large that he could no longer retain his sense of self . In the end, he started turning crazy . The Holy Spirit Sword Holy Order was created by the earliest divine blacksmith Ulmer, who saw the Fanatic as dangerous, to counter it . It was apparently a specialized divine sword acting as an anti-Fanatic . As a result, both sides collided, and both sides were destroyed together . ”

So there are a lot of different types of people who are divine blacksmiths, and there's a lot going on between them .

『I believe Ulmer was the guy who made the first divine sword, wasn't he? He was supposedly the creator of the Beginning God Sword, Alpha . 』

“You know your stuff . That's right . He's a legendary man who received a divine revelation and became the first divine grade blacksmith in history . ”

『Did Ulmer and that Dionysus live in the same era? 』

“They were brothers, you know . Apparently Dionysus was his older brother all along . ”

I thought he was Ulmur's apprentice when he was blacksmithing, and he picked up Ulmur's divine skills while he was being ordered around in the smithy .

“But Dionysus was fiercely jealous of his brother, who was recognized by the gods and revered as the best blacksmith in the world . As a result, he went through his brother's work, stole the techniques of a divine grade blacksmith, and became a divine grade blacksmith on his own . ”

『Isn't that amazing?』

“To be honest, he was most likely a genius . In a book left by Ulmer, he wrote, ‘My brother is the true genius . That is why he is dangerous . ’ As a result, two divine blacksmiths were born in the same era, and many divine swords were created . ”

Now I understand after all this explanation . That's why this Dionysus guy produced so many weird swords, but I think he was just trying to match his brother . In order to surpass his brother, who made orthodox swords, he must have created many specialized divine swords with unique abilities to surpass his brother .

“We've digressed . But anyway, I think in normal circumstances it's rather impossible to seal off Fenrir completely in a sword . ”

『So, it means that the person who helped Mr . Mystery Soul was also the person who wants to help Fenrir, and he is the one that made me, right?』

“That would only apply if the mysterious soul is indeed Fenrir”

At least it meant it's worth looking into Fenrir's story in the future . Well, if the mysterious soul wasn't Fenrir, then it would be a waste of effort..... .

Never mind... We shall cross that bridge when that time comes I guess .

“So, let's head back to the Plains of the Demon Wolf once more . ”

“Hmm . ”

TL Note : the words in “()” are what Fran talk with telepathy

Alistair continued to ponder on my theory that the identity of the mysterious soul might be Fenrir .

“I’m sure if we took more time, we could do a more detailed analysis...”

“How long will it take?”

“Well, if you want to find out who the mysterious soul is, it’s going to take years . ”

『Well, that is impossible . 』

“Hm . Impossible . ”

I can’t let Fran’s precious early teens be wasted here .

Of course, it might be a good experience to learn a lot of things from Alistair, but I still have to let the cute child travel .

Besides, I have to return to the Kingdom of Kleinzell to participate in the auction . I also have an appointment with Gallus .

“I know . If it’s not possible, I won’t force it . Well, let’s put a pause to all this rambling, and move on to serious restoration and refurbishment . ”

“Refurbishment?”

『Isn’t simply repairing enough?』

As far as I was concerned, as long as I could get back on track, it’s enough .

“Yeah, I decided that as long as the residue of Cherubim wasn’t working, it won’t be enough . ”

『It’s not good enough?』

“Originally, Cherubim’s remnant should have managed Master’s vast array of skills and assisted him in using them, but this is not the case right now . That’s probably why Master’s condition had gone so awry this time . Seems like Master can’t keep up with the processing power by himself . ”

Apparently I’m forcing myself to do the part, even though it should have been Cherubim who should take care of it for me .

“If you simply just put it back together, it will do the same thing right away . That’s why it needs to be refurbished . ”

『What exactly do you mean by “refurbished”? Is it like increasing its processing power?』

“That would be impossible . There’s nothing I can do to improve it any further in terms of ability . In the first place, Master is a semi-divine sword class— No, Master’s body has a complicated structure that can almost be called a divine sword . It’s not easy to achieve that, even for me . ”

So there’s nothing you can do about the hardware, the constituent parts . Then maybe the internal circuitry, the software... No, that’s not going to be easy either .

To put it bluntly, there’s a tremendous amount of software residing in the system, and it’s a situation where the gargantuan size of the space consumed by the software is too overwhelming for the local storage . Since I can't remove that software, there will be no choice but to secure capacity in more detailed parts .

Is it because of my knowledge as an earthling that I still carry here? Surprisingly, I could easily understand Alistair's explanation . Fran, who was listening next to me, had already started to doze off, as her head tilted to one side, nodding throughout .

『Does that mean you're going to cut out the unnecessary parts of my insides somehow?』

“You sure understand quickly . That's right . To put it more bluntly, I will reduce the number of skills you have . If the remnants of the Cherubim had been there, they'd have had no problem managing the inexhaustible growth in skills . But as it is now, even if you're not using them, you're still in possession of a tremendous amount of skills, which places quite a burden on you, Master . ”

In other words, the more magic stones I ate and the more skills I added, the closer I got to my processing limit . I gained a huge amount of skills, especially in the most recent fight . Right now, I should have over 200 in total, and in the worst case scenario, it might have even reached 300 .

After I explained that, Alistair murmured with an amazed expression .

“Oi, Oi, what is that about . ”

“Nn . Master has lots of skills . ”

“Hah . Really??? Even divine swords have at most 30 or so skills that were granted to them . If the number exceeds 50, it will malfunction, and if it goes over 100, it's no wonder the sword goes out of control . And you say you have over 200 skills? That's crazy! Normally, it would have destroyed itself already!”

『Woah—』

“How could you not feel any pain before? In fact, I’m surprised that you’re able to hold on this long . ”

Alistair’s words made me realize how much I had been pushing myself .

If we hadn’t met Alistair here, I don’t know if we would have been able to repair me . Also, if the enemy hadn’t left us, we would have been even more overwhelmed on top of being in a half-destroyed state . If that actually happened, what awaited us would definitely be a bleak and rough future .

As we were talking about this, Fran raised a question while tilting her head slightly .

“Hey, why would Master feel pain?”

『Hmm? As Alistair just mentioned, the overwhelming number of skills takes a toll on me, right?』

“No, that’s not what Fran is trying to say, is it? You’re asking how Master, who has no biological body and is not supposed to feel pain, can feel the sensation of pain, right?”

Oh, is that what she was asking about? I was actually curious about that too .

However, Alistair apparently knew what to expect .

“If Master was an artificial spirit, he wouldn’t feel pain . He won’t know the feeling of pain in the first place . But in Master’s case, he still has a slight sense of what pain feels like when he is human . I think, because of that, Master is able to perceive occurrences that causes pain like forcing himself too hard to think or process skills, and unconsciously recreates the nonexistent pain . ”

『I- I see . 』

“I think the reason why you don’t feel pain when the sword part was damaged is either because you are too far removed from your human sense to feel pain, or you have a strong belief that it can't hurt because it's a sword . ”

So you're saying that the pain I feel is all because I unconsciously perceive it, even though in truth it shouldn't really hurt at all .

“Well, it's a tricky one, but that's not a bad thing for the current Master . At least, he could sense his limitations without the remnants of the Cherubim from the pain he feels . ”

If you ask me, that's probably right . If it weren't for the pain, I wouldn't have realized my own limits and would have destroyed myself in the fight against Myrellia and Xellos Reed .

“Now, let's talk about the refurbishment . We need to remove some unused or wasteful skills to reduce the chance of Master feeling that pain again . Just, listen properly to what I am about to say . If there were just one or two skills to discard, then it would have been easy . However, with this large number of skills, your choice is either you just discard this huge amount of skills, just delete all of them, or you can select your skills one by one and choose ones to keep and others to delete . Unfortunately, this will take years . ”

『Huh? Wait a minute, that's a problem! We can't do that!』

If a useful skill I've acquired just disappeared, I'm definitely going to lose my strength in a heartbeat!

“However, it doesn't mean I'm just going to erase skills at random . Don't worry about that . ”

『I don't understand what you mean?』

“Ah, hmm... how can I explain it easily? What if I told you that I could use the ability of the mystery system within Master to integrate and optimize your skills?”

『Can you interfere with the mystery system?』

“No, I can’t change the main feature, but I could use the system to change things up a little bit . For example, we could combine skills of the same roots into one and evolve them into higher-level skills .

So, it seems like the problem is that I have a lot of skills that aren’t too useful, and you’re suggesting to lump them all together, and see if they’ll evolve or not? Isn’t that being too reckless?

“But we can’t really control the details, so it’s up to the system to choose the best option . ”

『I thought so..... . 』

“Evolving will increase the capacity of individual skills, but it should be much better than being overwhelmed by the process of managing so many wasted skills . Well, I can’t assure you that you might not lose some useful skills in the process . It’s the first time I’ve ever done this after all . ”

『... . What do you think of this, Fran? 』

(I’ll do whatever is good for Master . )

『But the worst would be if I lose all my useful skills, like swordplay and all that . 』

(If you lose them, we can get them back . )

Fran was very casual in her responses, and that’s when I made up my mind .

That’s right, and even if I become weak, I can still grow stronger again . If I have something I lost, I can get it back .

“I do have one question, though . ”

“What is it?”

“What happens if, after Alistair reduces Master skills this time, the number of skills increases again?”

There's that problem too . Exactly as Fran described it, isn't this just a temporary fix?

“Then come back periodically to see me . When the time comes, if you find out anything about Master, will you let me know? Hopefully I can be of more help then . ”

『...Is this help just out of kindness?』

“Well, I wouldn't say I'm not interested in Master's background . ”

Of course . Those are the eyes of someone who is completely engulfed by curiosity . Regardless, even for me, I wasn't planning on breaking relations with a Divine Grade blacksmith . It's really relieving to have someone offer repair assistance in an emergency .

In human terms, isn't it similar to the peace of mind one gets with being seen by an excellent doctor at any time? Anyway, with this, I can fight again with no worries .

“All right, we will definitely return . ”

『Please take care of the refurbishment . 』

“Sure, leave it to me . ”

Chapter 363

Chapter 363

Editor Makoto

Hi everyone! Here is more bonus chapter thank you to Asekhan for donating!

This translation belongs to RNF! Enjoy!

It's been a few hours since Alistair started the refurbishment process . Apparently, it takes a lot of time to get my internal system up and running, and ready to control .

As before, Alistair stood still with her eyes closed throughout, before suddenly opening her eyes and looking up .

“Okay, it's ready . We can get into the renovation process at any time now .”

Then, she wiped the sweat from her forehead . She has been working continuously for several hours without drinking or eating . I think she's pretty worn out, but I didn't see any significant signs of fatigue on her face .

『Hey, do you need a break? It's already night, you know?』

From the only small window provided in this room, we could already see the darkness of the night before we realized . The room was so bright and shiny that I didn't notice the passing of time at all .

“I'm okay . I don't get tired easily . However, we do have a long way to go . Let's take a little break...”

『Fran must be tired too, huh?』

“I’m fine . ”

“I’m tired . So let’s go take a break . ”

You just told me right now that you’re not tired .

Alistair was openly showing her concern for Fran . Lucky enough, Fran wasn’t a child who couldn’t read the air well enough to make that concern worthless, so she nodded with a coy smile at Alistair’s words .

“All right...”

“Then let’s go upstairs . ”

“Is resting here not good?”

“I don’t eat my meals in the workshop . ”

It seems like that’s a rule she abided as a craftsman . Good thing, the glutton Fran did not take out any food and started eating it during the analysis . Alistair’s concentration would probably have been disrupted and she might have messed up because of it . Or rather, the analysis process might have been interrupted .

“But then.....”

Fran glanced at me . She appears to be worried about leaving me here .

『Fran, it’s okay . I’m not experiencing any pain anymore, don’t worry about it!』

“But...”

『Unlike me, Fran is tired, and she needs a break . Even if I’m cured, what good will that be if Fran is incapacitated?』

And then, Alistair casually lifted me up .

What is she doing?

“Nothing, we’ve done some basic repairs, so as long as we don’t do any heavy fighting, we can carry you around . ”

You could have told me that earlier! We had such a heartfelt exchange for nothing!

“Here Fran . ”

“Hmm . ”

Oh, I knew I’d feel right at home on Fran’s back, sheathed in old man Gallus’ special scabbard . It fits me perfectly and I feel like I’m wrapped up in a comfortable blanket . Is this what it’s like, the comfort of coming home? Anyway, the relief I felt was beyond words .

Alistair led me up the stairs, and I found myself in a surprisingly ordinary mansion . It was probably just slightly more luxurious than a moderately posh inn . The interior was made of stone and was decorated in a stylish villa style .

Through the door where Alistair just passed into, there was a dining room . There were also guests in front of the large marble dining table .

“Are you done?”

“Not yet . I’m just taking a break . ”

“I see.....”

“Hey, make more space, stupid demon . ”

“O- oh, I’m sorry . ”

I still felt that Asura was feeble or reserved around Alistair . There’s definitely familiarity, but it also looked more than that, as if Asura was restraining himself .

Even towards that Kiara, Asura still spoke in a commanding tone . There's a strong sense of dissonance that I felt when I saw Asura acting so meekly like this . It's as if they weren't the same person .

Fran seemed to think the same way, as she tilted her head slightly in puzzlement .

“Hey, are you two bad with each other?”

It was a straightforward question . Alistair raised her eyebrows and Asura looked troubled . Was it something that we shouldn't have asked about?

“It's not that we don't get along . ”

“We- well...”

“Then why?”

I felt like they were trying to dodge the question . However, Fran continued to pursue it . I was interested in knowing more too, so I won't stop here .

“Haa, when this guy first came to me, I was so taken aback by his stupidity that I gave him a little lecture . I've been calling him stupid demon ever since then . ”

“Lecture?”

“Yeah, and what do you think this guy said the first time we met?”

Alistair turned a stern gaze onto Asura . It sounded like they had a very bad first meeting . Just from remembering that time seemed to have already made her angry .

“This guy, you know, came up to me, and the first thing he said to me was ‘A divine grade blacksmith can destroy a divine sword, right?’ And then he gave me his sword and told me, ‘destroy this thing!!’”

“Th- that... . I already said sorry about that...”

“Of course! To us divine grade blacksmiths, divine swords are like our own children! No matter if it was made by another divine grade blacksmith, they’re still special to us! And you wanted me to destroy one? By any chance, did you want to get your head split open, do you?”

“...”

Asura stroked his forehead silently . It was as if his head really got cracked . Afterwards, she made Asura sit upright while lecturing him with heated passion, continuing to do so for half a day .

“The Divine Sword Gaia, once it has been assigned to an owner, can only be used by that person . And even if it is thrown away, it will come back . But It’s not like they have free will.....”

For a moment, I thought Gaia had a mind of its own, but apparently it didn’t . Maybe it’s more of a mechanical type of artificial spirit, something like Announcer-san .

“I don’t know why they picked me, but I thought it sucked . ”

I understood how Asura felt . Just when he was in agony after mutating into a calamitous demon and gained the mad demonization skill, suddenly he obtained the divine sword . If it’s going to come back to him when he discards it, then it means he’ll definitely have it in hand when the mad demonization is triggered .

To put it bluntly, it would be the birth of the worst kind of demon who could spread mass destruction . If he knew that he couldn’t seal off the madness, he must have at least tried to deal with the divine sword .

“I’ve already accepted that now . ”

“Hmm”

“That’s why I’m hunting demonic beasts in the middle of nowhere so that I don’t bother people.....”

Asura seems to have accepted his ownership of the divine sword by now, too . That's probably why Alistair wasn't complaining about it and kicked him out . Despite that, I still thought it was impossible for her to be gentle toward him .

“...Even now, I ended up causing you trouble . ”

“...Kiara didn't die because of you . ”

“I understand . I'm not trying to put blame on who killed that woman, I just want to know what happened . Would you mind telling me about it?”

“Hmm . ”

“I'll tell you . ”

“It's fine . I'll speak . I want to tell him what happened myself . ”

Alistair tried to take care of it, but Fran turned it down herself . She was only with her for a short while, but it was the death of Kiara, whom she respected . She probably wanted to speak of the incident in her own words . She seemed to think that this was her role as the person who witnessed Kiara breathe her last .

That's not a bad thing . Personally, I think it's a lot easier for Fran to get herself together by doing this than just dealing with it by herself . Besides, as Fran said before, the end of Kiara's life was not a tragedy . She began to tell the story, including the part that she heard from me, as if she saw the events herself . It was the ending of a warrior, one who fought a powerful enemy and departed contentedly .

Asura no longer kept a sad expression on his face when he heard Fran's retelling . Rather, he laughed .

“Ah, so you left while smiling..... You fought a powerful enemy that you couldn't win even if you put everything you've got against it, scraped your life away, and died with laughter . It's a very Kiara-like way to go . And I'm ... well ... jealous... . ”

I couldn't fully understand the thoughts of these battle maniacs, but I could at least understand the weight of their feelings . Right to the end, having a satisfying battle and dying on the battlefield... All of that seemed really enviable to Asura .

Perhaps, this ending isn't possible for Asura right now . If he gets caught up in a battle to the death, his mad demonization would be triggered . If that happened, he'll either kill his enemies without realizing it or he'll end up dead . Asura wouldn't be conscious when that happens . At that point, the only thing driving him would be pure madness .

“I don’t know what you guys are going through..... But I’m pretty sure I could also imagine that person dying peacefully on her deathbed, surrounded by her disciples . ”

“Right . That’s right . ”

“The sword is for the battlefield..... I guess that means the same thing for warriors . That some of them would feel happier rotting away on a battlefield than on a shelf..... I’d like to understand that kind of feeling too .”

That's just like Alistair to be so empathetic .

Chapter 364 - Evolution

Editor Makoto

“.....Now I’m a little heartbroken. Let’s just eat. I’ll have them fix a meal for us.”

“Can I have one too?”

“Hmm, I’ll give you a special one.”

Alistair stood up with a forcefully cheerful voice. It was followed by Asura and Fran. Everybody there seemed to have understood that a change in atmosphere was in order.

“Who will prepare the meal?”

“A golem. I have a type that can cook.”

A golem making food? Now that’s something new.

“Is the food they make delicious?”

“...Well, it’s all right.”

Fran turned her gaze to Asura, as Alistair and gave her that answer. I also thought that it was okay, although it didn’t feel like it’s going to be too delicious. Fran seemed to share my thoughts on this too.

“It seems hard to prepare the food for now. Let’s just eat this.”

“Hoo. You have leftovers stored in a time-space spell? That’s handy.”

“Nn. You could always cook beforehand and then just store them, and you can take the food out anytime you want to eat. The best food is always the freshly made ones after all.”

“But still, this one looks good.”

“This is curry, the best food.”

Fran took out a curry pot. Then, she placed a clay pot filled with rice and a side dish for curry on the table together.

“Put this on the plate like this, and then like this.”

“Aside from the color, it smells good. May I have some of that?”

“Of course. I’ll put this, this, and this on top of that, and then we’re done.”

Fran took out some more additions, which were some of my favorite toppings lately. They were a pickle, one that looked just like the fukujinzuke<sup>1</sup> I found and stocked up on in Barbora, crispy fried onions, and even a boiled egg.

Alistair and the others also imitated Fran, pouring the curry into their mouths in a fearful manner. I didn’t hear anyone saying the word “delicious” out loud, but anyone could tell by the way the food was shoved into their mouths that they all liked it. Rather, they were so absorbed in eating the curry that they couldn’t speak.

Both Fran and Urushi, who had been served a super-sized portion of curry by Fran, started wolfing the curry down their mouths in silence. For a while, the only sounds in the room were the sounds of chewing and the clinking of dishes and spoons as they collided with each other.

In just five minutes, they all emptied the super-sized curry pot. However, this special curry made with plenty of magical beasts’ meat was so generously served.... Fran seems to have liked the combination a lot.

With his belly churning, Asura pounded on his own abdomen and burped.

Mmm, that's vulgar. It's bad for Fran's upbringing. Oh, come on Urushi! Don't imitate the burp!

“Fu. It was delicious. I don't think I've had anything this good in a long time.”

“Me too. Where did you get it from?”

Oh, did you think that we had put away something we bought at some restaurant.

“Master made it.”

“Hou...”

“Who is the master? Is it Miss Fran's master?”

(Master, is it fine?)

Fran glanced at me. I think she wanted to reveal me to Asura.

I knew you'd like this guy.

『As I've said before, if Fran wants to tell him, then I don't mind.』

“Nn. This is my Master.”

“...What? What happened to that sword?”

『Hi. My name is Master and I'm an Intelligent Weapon. Pleased to meet you.』

“Wha- tha- I- is that sword speaking?”

I was surprised to see Asura almost fall off his chair. I wondered what the owner of a divine sword would say when he found out, but apparently he was also surprised when he saw a talking sword.

After that, Fran and Alistair explained me to Asura. After he heard all the explanation, Asura is looking at me with great interest.

But still, he was quicker to accept me than I thought he would be. After all, he was also a user of the divine sword, and I wonder if he had more resistance to strange swords.

“I see... So it was Master who made my madness disappear.”

『Maybe it's just temporary.』

“No, as I told Miss Fran before, I am truly indebted to you. If you need any help, just tell me. I will help you with everything I got, okay? Just keep that in mind.”

Maybe, the mad demonization was taking a bigger toll on Asura than we had expected. I could tell that he was really happy.

『Hey, can you show me your Divine Sword?』

“Gaia? I don't mind.”

Asura lifted the great sword that was propped up at his side and placed it on the table. The name of it is Ground Sword Gaia. It seems that if he breaks the seal to unleash it's true power, the sword will regain its original name and ability as the Earth Sword Gaia.

The sword looked really big. A handle wrapped in thick leather, and was long enough to be held by both hands, with a plain, rectangular hand guard without any particular carving on it.

The blade had a straight shape with no curvature, a so-called Western sword. The thickest part of it looked like it's a good 30 centimetres. It was a lump of metal that emphasized smashing rather than slashing. The black, dull-colored sword blade, which was devoid of all decoration, gave off an oppressive sense of intimidation.

It looked like a greatsword just like any other. However, when you look at it this way, the intimidation it could display was overwhelming. Anyone could guess that it wasn't just a regular big sword.

Just for a while, I, for some reason, felt inferior just from looking at it. Was it my instinct as a sword? The feeling came naturally and I immediately understood that it was far superior than me.

It's frustrating, but I'm only a semi-divine sword. Well, that's only if it's permissible to say so. And over there is a complete divine sword. The difference was large.

“... Someday, Master will exceed this.”

『Fran?』

“I'll see to it!”

Fran has a frustrated, yet motivated look on her face. I felt oddly pleased. I'm inexplicably glad that Fran believed in me so.

『That's right!』

“Then we will need to get Master back to full form first.”

“Hmm! Please!”

『Please.』

I was motivated. I'm worried about what my remaining skills will become, but if I don't do it, I won't be able to fight in the future.

“Now that we've had enough of a break, let's get back to the workshop.”

10 minutes later.

“Then, we'll begin.”

『Oh.』

“Hmm.”

Chapter 365 - Refurbishment Completed

Editor Makoto

Hi guys! For master's status I'll upload it as a separate chapter (the next chapter is only master's status) if I post it in this chapter I'm afraid it will be way too long and you'll get sore thumb from scrolling way too much.... Anyway enjoy!

『————』

I suddenly realized I couldn't hear anything.

Deafening silence...

It took me a few seconds to realize that the scream I was raising was gone.

『Is it over?』

Since then—How long has it been since the refurbishment began? The severe pain that irritated my whole body has completely subsided and disappeared.

『Is it over?』

I asked myself again. There was no longer any pain. Neither was there a feeling of fatigue nor discomfort. Instead, I felt something like a refreshing feeling.

However, only the sense of time I had was strangely obscure.

I wonder how long I was in pain. From what can I could see through the window, it's dark outside. I guess it's not dawn yet. Is it a few hours since then?

『No, I think it's been a day or a night.』

Honestly, my memory was fuzzy, but that's just how tough it was.

If you told me that only been a few minutes had passed, I wouldn't believe it, since it felt like a long time had passed.

『Fran is—』

There she is. She was sleeping while breathing soundly under the workbench I have been resting upon. I must have worried her a lot. Her sleeping face looked as if in anguish.

She had large dark circles under her eyes, and her hair was shaggy as if she hasn't had a bath in days. I remember her looking pretty distraught too, when I was screaming in agony.

Listening to the cute breaths resounding in my ears while she slept, I'm tempted to just let her sleep, but it's still better to reassure her that I was now awake.

I stroked Fran's head using telekinesis. I was a little anxious, but it went smoothly with no pain or lag. It actually feels smoother than before, but does it just feel that way because I feel refreshed?

『Fran. Fran.』

No problem with telepathic communication. It looks like the refurbishment went well. I lightly shook Fran as I called out to her.

『Fran, are you awake?』

“Munyu...”

As I shook her further, Fran's eyes opened thinly. And when she saw me floating, her eyes widen.

“Master...!”

Fran stood up, vigorously and hugged me. Her hug was enough to cover me. I quickly dulled the blade with a form-transformation, and I activated it with no problem here either. Usually, I'd be unconscious already, but right now, I'm not sure if I can use it or not, so I cringed for a second.

“Master, this isn't a dream...?”

『Yes. This is me, you know?』

“Hmm”

Oi Oi, this is intense. But as it is, Fran hugged me tighter that her chest ended up touching me as she started shaking her shoulders.

“.....I am relieved.....”

『It's look like I have made you all worried.』

“....Mhm. Worried.”

『Ah, I see, I see. I'm sorry』

“Hmm...”

Fran won't let go of me as large drops of tears keep falling off. I stroked her head and back gently, trying to calm her down.

After a while, it seems she's finally settled down. Fran's hold on me loosened. But instead, she leaned back, leaning her whole weight against me.

『What's going on? You are such a spoiled kid.』

“.....Hmm”

『Fran?』

“Su-Su—”

Eh? She fell asleep again... I know she was a good sleeper, but sleeping in this situation?

I was once again reminded of Fran’s incredible pace...

『Fran? Hey, Fran!』

“Let her sleep.”

As I was about to wake up Fran again, Alistair came down from the second floor. Like Fran, she had shaggy hair and dark circles under her eyes.

“How are you doing?”

『I’m in great shape. Telepathic communication and telekinesis have not been a problem so far.』

“I see, that was good... *Yawn*.”

『Alistair looked sleepy too.』

Not as much as Fran, but she blinks her eyes heavily and looked like she’s about to fall asleep.

“Well, even with my body, staying up all night for five days is unbearable.”

『Huh? What did you just say? Five days?』

“Oh, you don’t know huh? I see. Today is exactly the fifth night since we began our refurbishment ritual. I cannot sleep in case of an emergency.”

『Really..... Has it been that long? I thought it’s still the night of that day』

“Well, it can’t be helped if you can’t tell the time since you were in that state.”

『Then..... Fran also didn’t sleep...』

“She hasn’t slept a wink in five days, and she has been standing beside you all this time. Well, she ran out of steam and fell asleep about three hours ago.”

I see, so that’s how it is. Fran, who is usually easy to fall asleep, didn’t sleep for five days? Well, seeing her like this, It seems like she won’t wake up for a while.

I gently laid her body on the floor as I stroked Fran’s head, who still wouldn’t let go of the hand she put around my sword blade. Of course, Fran was still hugging me. I have given her so much to worry about, I should at least be able to let her cuddle me like this.

Unlike the anguished expression on her face earlier, Fran now slept with a look of relief on her face. She was distraught before huh.

Sweet dreams Fran.

『So, is this the end of the refurbishment?』

“Well”

『We- Well.....?』

“This is the first time I’ve ever done something like this. I’d rather like to hear more about it. Are you in pain now?”

Well, that’s true.

『I’m fine. As I said before, I feel refreshed.』

“Oh, I’m jealous. I can’t wait to get into bed, so I could feel refreshed like you.”

『Ah.... Somehow I feel bad, I'm sorry』

“Haha, I'm just joking. Usually, when I'm making a divine sword I go without sleep for more than 10 days. It's not as bad as that, yet.”

Wow, I knew it would be hard to make a divine sword, but 10 days of sleepless nights? Is that what physical mastery maximal skills were for?

“From what I've seen on the outside, you haven't changed much.”

『Eh? Is that so?』

I had the sensation of my body being rebuilt, and I thought my appearance might have changed on its own..... But apparently, according to Alistair, nothing changed.

『I have been refurbished, haven't I?』

“That's what I want to know too. How about your skills? Did the consolidation go well? I would like to know if there are any changes in performance.”

『I haven't had a look at it yet.』

It's a little scary, but now I can't help but look. I appraised myself, pushing down a strange mixture of fear and anxiety, hope and expectation.

『Eh?』

I was so stupid that I was amazed at myself. No matter how much I thought about it, I do remember my status.

『How can it change like this.....?』

Alistair said that my appearance has not changed, but in truth, my classification has changed. It evolved from an Intelligence Weapon to an Intelligence Unique Weapon. Unique..... I don't know if that meant as the odd one out or the one and only. I'm torn. But maybe it was just the effect of the change in class, but my abilities were also increased.

Chapter 366 - Verification of Integrated Skills

Editor Makoto

My memory skills were outrageous. I guess this is what they call consolidation.

I acquired several Lord Weapon Combat Skills and Lord Tactical Skills. However, the only difference between it and the Lord Swordsmanship Technique and Lord Swordsmanship that I originally possessed would be the word “base” attached to it.

I asked Alistair to analyze it as well, and it appeared that the lord arts • base and the lord technique • base were apparently a skill that’s upward compatible compared to the original lord arts and lord techniques.

The sword arts is a skill that comprised all sword-based weapons, such as dagger arts and sword arts, but the same is true for the lord arts • base. That means if you had a lord archery • base, you could use short archery, long archery, crossbow archery, and any other archery.

However, its efficacy seems to be reduced by half. It’s said that the Lord Swordsmanship Technique • base is only half as effective as the Lord Swordsmanship Technique at its highest level. So it’s multipurpose, but not very effective..... That being said, it’s nice to see skills I don’t regularly use put together in one place.

“Master, you can analyze your skills, but what about whether you can utilize them or not?”

『Oops, that's right..... wait a minute.』

I tried to remind myself how to set my memory skills as I did before. I could still set fire magic with no issues. Also, there was no particular change in my magic skills, with none reduced or increased by the refurbishment.

『—OK, seems like there is no problem in using it.』

When I cast the torch magic without chanting, a small light floated in front of me. It seems like for magic, at the very least, it will be pretty much the same as before refurbishment.

“If you're okay with using that skill, let's analyze the other skills.”

『You're right.』

Alistair sometimes gave skills to weapons, and because she had information on divine swords, she was well versed with ancient and modern skills, which helps a lot right now.

The next skill is physical manipulation. This is apparently a skill that integrated physical enhancement or manipulation skills such as herculean strength, instantaneous movement, and evasion.

Omnidirectional Perception, Omnipresence Perception, and Covert Concealment is the type of thing that integrated all similar skills as well. However, as Alistair told me, it was a skill that was too powerful and very difficult to master.

In fact, I've tried using Omnipresence Perception before... I was supposed to have only activated my magic perception, but my electromagnetic perception and airflow vision were activated simultaneously. Then, all sorts of extraneous information were displayed in front of me, making it tough to use.

This inconvenience could prove fatal if I suddenly received a lot of extra information during a battle and distracted myself. I think I need to think of a countermeasure for it sooner rather than later.

“How is it?”

『Looks like it's going to take a while of practice to handle it with precision.』

“It's just as I thought. After all, those are skills that could only be learned by a master-level person who trained for many years. There's no way you were going to get it and use it right away.”

『Even if that was the case, I have to be able to use it. They're all essential skills in combat.』

My skills have indeed grown, but there was a possibility that my combat strength would decline for the time being. It's a pretty serious situation.

“I think it's quite difficult to use. For example, right now, you can use herculean strength and instantaneous movement. However, if you want to use it unconsciously, you must first reach a high level. However, if we tried to compensate for those effects with physical manipulation methods, more subtle use would be required.”

『So that's how it is.』

“If you make a mistake in boosting the power output when you use instantaneous movement, it could send you flying. If you make the mistake of using the wrong output of herculean strength when you hit your opponent, you could end up shattering your own arm along with your opponent.”

『I thought the change from a specialized skill to a higher level all-purpose skill would make it harder to handle, but not so much.』

“Just make sure you know what you're doing before you use it.”

『Yeah, I will do that.』

The next thing to try is the Lord Intimidation skill. Apparently, this is a skill possessed by dragons and other high-level magical beasts. It's a high-level skill of intimidation and fear, and it's quite powerful.

It turned out that the intimidation that I emitted increased abnormally. I didn't mean to intimidate her, but Alistair's face contorted. After all, it was not possible to perform precise manipulation. Rather, in this situation, the frantic Fran was impressive.

Even if this Lord Intimidation skill was used as lightly as the former fear and intimidation, it could cause ordinary people and others around me to flap and faint. In the end, I guess that means I need to train myself to use it.

Magic resistance is an integration of resistance skills to magic, such as flame resistance, thunder resistance, and storm resistance. This is, well, is it fine if I think that it has got stronger?

I also had good technical skills. Although the painting and singing skill that I had before disappeared, the only skills remaining are Dismantling: LvMax, Blacksmith: LvMax, Throwing: Lv5, Cooking: LvMax, Trap Release: Lv6, Trap Creation: Lv5

All the skills that I wanted remain. Could it be that my unconscious mind was at work in the choice of which skills to stay and to discarded, like the mad demonization skill? I'm especially glad the cooking skill is still here. I'm sure Fran will be deeply disappointed without it.

There was no change in the arts and science skills section. However, the magic ability skill section and special ability skill section had changed dramatically after the refurbishment. There were a lot of skills that I'm unfamiliar with.

“Hmm. Those are also skills I've never heard of. Some unique skills manipulated the elements, such as Flame Principle and Water Principle, but.... Maybe it's an upward compatible skill of those advanced skills, just like the lord arts • base. It must be the result of the integration of so many skills.”

I then asked her what I was most curious about.

『Aerial Jump is gone. Has it been merged into one of these?』

I can't seem to find the name of a particularly well-used skill, Aerial Jump. This considerably limits my scope of combat.

“Hmm, isn't it possible to manipulate air?”

“Manipulate air...” I'll give it a quick try.

Right then, I had the sensation of a foothold being created in front of me. Was that a wind-based skill? I didn't even realize it. Unfortunately, there's a problem. Doing so had consumed more than twice as much magic as it had in the past. Moreover, the foothold collapsed immediately. The downside of being a high-level skill seems to be here as well.

The rest of the new skills are Kill Master, Strengthen Senses, and Strengthen Body. Well, at the end of the day, these skills are also higher-level skills that were integrated with various skills.

Kill Master is a higher skill of killer skill system such as Goblin Killer and other killer-based skills. The damage efficiency to certain races was reduced, but it is a powerful skill that always activated and increased a small portion in attack power no matter what kind of enemy you are fighting.

Sensory Enhancement is a sensory enhancement system that included improved vision and acute sense of smell. Strengthen Body enhancement is an integrated physical enhancement skill, such as hair or fur enhancement, and shell or crust enhancement. It was actually probably the most useful skill I obtained this time, since just having it in my possession would strengthen my entire body.

Chapter 367 - Master's Transformation

Editor Makoto

I was happy with the consolidation of my skills, but Alistair groaned at me with a problematic look.

“I don’t know if I can say I’ve succeeded…….”

『What do you mean? It- It worked, didn’t it?』

“Not really. The number of skills wasn’t as low as I thought it would be.”

Ah, Speaking of which... I was only focused on the growth part, but my main goal was to reduce the number of wasted skills and save more processing capacity.

“There are still about 150 skills left. Master, do you feel any pain or discomfort?”

『Hmm. For now…….』

While I struggled to use the higher-level skills, I don’t experience any pain when using them.

“Let’s do a thorough analysis once more.”

『Please』

Alistair analyzed me as Fran held me in her arms. I thought it would take a long time, but it didn’t seem to take that long to re-analyze it, as she had analyzed it in detail once. A few minutes later, Alistair's eyes widen in astonishment.

『How is it?』

“No way, this much... As I thought, Master, you are really interesting.”

Alistair said there had been quite a change in my internal structure.

“The mysterious souls and the mysterious systems connected to the Cherubim's residue. Maybe they're making up for the lack of processing power.”

Does that mean that the other parts of the system have changed to compensate for the other parts of the system that the damaged announcer was in charge of?

“One more thing. The flow of power to Master may have changed.”

『What does that mean?』

The flow has changed?

“Well, to put it bluntly, it's possible that the master's growth rate has been greatly reduced, and he's been sent to deal with that. In the future, even if your magic stone value builds up and your rank rises, you might have little to no growth in attack power or anything else.”

『Eh? For real?』

I was delighted that my abilities had improved... My attack power is in the 1000's, you know? The tension is high, right? And yet, she said I might not be able to grow any further...

“Instead, you will be more efficient than ever when it comes to managing your skills. In other words, you sacrificed the abilities of the sword itself and are reborn as a skill-focused fighter.”

『Hmm.... But for Fran's sake, I'd rather have enhanced skills...』

Well, my strength isn't my offensive power as a sword; it's my skills. While it was honestly disappointing to hear that my growth rate has dropped, I was genuinely happy to see that the skill's operational potential had been expanded further. Besides, it didn't seem to have completely stopped growing, and there's still hope for me.

“Apparently, Master's internal structure was more flexible than I thought it would be. I didn't expect the mysterious soul and the mysterious system to change as much as it did.”

『Hey, is that okay? Won't the mysterious soul or mysterious system get overloaded this time?』

“Hmm. I can't say whether it will be a burden or not. At least, not until we see how that affects us in the future...”

『Alistair too doesn't know?』

“I do not know.”

Well, there's a lot of things I don't know about my body. I guess we'll just have to agree that our immediate crisis is over.

『It's not a complete solution, but it's better than before, right?』

“I can assure you of that. The load on Master should have been lessened greatly.”

『Then I guess we'll just have to wait and see for now.』

There was no doubt that I could climb higher heights, and it also helped improve my processing power, so it can be said that the repair was a great success. For now, I'll just be glad to be safely back in Fran's hands. Rather, that's the most crucial part.

After we finished checking some things out, we came back upstairs to the dining room. Alistair wanted some curry before she took a short nap, so I served it to her, and somehow I ended up feeding it to Asurasu as well.

“This is really good, isn’t it?”

“Ou, I want to eat it every day.”

“Woof!”

Fran was carried on Urushi’s back while I supported her with telekinesis. Urushi seemed to have had a good night’s sleep these past few days and was full of energy as usual.

Fran has been tirelessly watching over me, and you stupid dog..... You look like you’re enjoying your curry. Here, let me help you.

『Hmph』

“Yelp!”

I pulled his tail.

Anyway, the curry diminished at a tremendous rate. Fran won’t get mad at me later, right? I was a little worried when I saw Alistair and the others gorging on the curry.

I glanced at Fran lying on the couch in the corner of the dining room with me in her arms. Then Fran’s nose started to sniffing around. Immediately after, Fran’s eyelids slowly open.

“...Unyu...curry smell...”

“I- I’m treating everyone.”

“...wanya eat...”

You’re not making any sense. However, it cannot be helped. It’s been less than an hour since you fell asleep, right? You must still be insanely sleepy. And yet you still reacted to curry...

It seems that she has more of an appetite than the desire to sleep.

I'll take out the curry plate. But I just don't see Fran getting up.

“Muyumiyu...”

『Fran?』

“...Curry”

She was too sleepy to move. I'd like to tell her to go to sleep now, but she won't be able to sleep comfortably until she had her curry.

『It can't be helped...』

“Hmm—?”

『Here』

I used telekinesis to wake Fran's body. Then I fed her a spoonful of curry and brought it to her mouth.

“Momumomu...Aaaaannn”

『Here』

“Mugumugu... Aaaa”

『Yes, yes』

Like a baby bird begging its parents for food, Fran opened her mouth when there was no more curry in her mouth. I fed curry little by little in her mouth.

It's cute to see Fran munching on her curry with drowsy eyes, and it's getting a little fun. In the end, I fed her three bowls of curry.

“Oh, can you use telekinesis for such dexterity?”

“I see. That's why you can cook.”

Somehow, they were impressed. Apparently, they were wondering how I cooked. I've been taking it for granted, but I guess it's a mystery for someone who didn't know me well.

TL Note : Surprise! Bonus Chapter Thank you to Asekhan! Enjoy everyone!

Another note : thanks to all of your suggestion i make some change

1. From now on Asura will be Asurasu
2. Demolition in the technical skills will be change to dismantling

Sorry for the inconvenience guys!

While relaxing after finishing our meals, I talked to Alistair and the others.

『Did anything happen while I was out screaming?』

“Even if you ask me what happened.... What Master is thinking about is the outcome of the war, right?”

『Well, that's the most important thing. After all, if the Beast Kingdom lost, Fran would be sad.』

“I’m sorry. I don’t know. There’s no way to get any information from the outside world from here.”

Well, I kind of guessed it already. After all, this place was so out of the country and rarely anyone came here. It's not a place where someone can just casually come here to deliver information to you. Besides, Alistair was standing by all this time in case something happened to me.

Asurasu – he didn't seem to be the type of person who cared about disputes between countries. I mean, he is still here.

『Does Asurasu have business with Alistair?』

“What do you mean?”

『No, well, You've been here for five days, haven't you?』

When I said that, he laughed at me. Although he said he was planning to leave after thanking me for last time, I've heard bad things about him too. Even so, he was actually a pretty sincere guy.

“Like I said before, I'm in your debt. I can't just leave without saying anything.”

『Speaking of which, what happened with the mad demonization?』

“It's already back. However, we're not in a combat situation, so I can feel relieved for a while.”

I knew it would be back in a few days. I took it away with the skill-taker but then it disappeared after the refurbishment, so I figured it would be resurrected in Asurasu. Yeah, It didn't work so well. It seems like it was born on its own from within Asurasu.

“Oh, and about Fran's equipment.”

『That's something I've been wondering about as well.』

Actually, Fran wasn't wearing her usual black cat equipment. She was now wearing a downy cloth outfit and pants that looked like pajamas.

It's not the right size at all and she was wearing it with the hem and sleeves folded wide open. If it had not been folded, we would not be talking about moe after all.

Maybe she borrowed it from Alistair? The quality was quite high. It wasn't as good as the black cat equipment, but it was far more powerful than those leather armor. It would easily protect against a bandit's knife or something similar.

『What happened to the black cat armor set? 』

“It's a pretty good armor, but it was getting worn out from all the repeated fierce battles. The automatic repair function and other functions have been considerably deteriorated. Hadn't you noticed?”

『For real? 』

This battle was hard fought. Fran's armor was also damaged and then automatically repaired, and it seems like while it was being fixed, it was damaged again. Because of this, I didn't even notice that the automatic repair function of the armor had deteriorated at all.

The functions of magic tools deteriorate and I know this because I've been in the body of a sword myself. Just as my processing power was being squeezed out over a long period of time, the more you use a magical tool, the lower its specs become.

“Restoration... isn't the answer. So I'm modifying that one too. And honestly, it looks like you guys were getting so strong that it couldn't handle the intensity of the fights.”

It's true that the opponents we're fighting grew stronger and the scale of the battles were bigger than when we got the Black Cat set. From Alistair's point of view as a divine grade blacksmith, she might feel that the Black Cat set isn't enough for us to deal with such powerful enemies.

“I've discussed this with Fran, and she's agreed to let me get my hands on it. Although it will be modified without the permission of the creator.....You can't put your lives on the line. You're going to see him later, right? Tell him I'm sorry.”

Hmm. I'm sorry Gallus, but even for me, I'm grateful to have Alistair, a divine grade blacksmith, strengthen the armor.

Chapter 368.2 - Native World (II)

Editor Makoto

TL Note : Another bonus chapter Thank you to Asekhan!

However, I can't share my secret without telling Fran. When Fran wakes up, we'll talk to her about it.

That's what I thought as I watched Alistair's back as she went back to work.

*****

“Hmm, good.”

『That was easy!』

“Because Master wanted to say something to Alistair.”

『Well, that's true』

“Well, then?”

“It's a pretty big secret, but.....”

When I consulted Fran, it became simple. She said that since it's my secret to keep, I can tell it to whoever I want. Well, I said the same to Fran all the time, too.

“Also, I don't want to keep it a secret from Alistair either.”

Down in the workshop, Alistair seemed to just be taking a break. She sat on a chair and wiped the sweat off her face.

“Alistair, we need to talk to you.”

“Oh? What is it? Could it be that something has changed in Master?”

『Well, there's a change, or rather, something I haven't told you about yet. Would you listen to me?』

Alistair could sense the seriousness of our mood, and she straightened up on the spot.

“I have already analyzed Master, but Master still has a secret? In a way, the secret of Master, who is even more unique than a divine sword, is quite exciting.”

And then she looked at me with eyes that were brimming with anticipation.

『Oh– uh, well..... I don't want to sound like a crazy person, but... Well, you see....I've told you that I was once a human being, right?』

“Oh.”

『But it's not just that I was a former human. Actually, I've been living in a different world than this one.』

“Hmm? A different world? Did you mean, otherworldly? In other words, Master is an ex-otherworlder?”

『Well, something like that』

““Could it be that you're talking about the Native World?”

Alistair was astonished, but it turned out differently than what I expected. It looked like she believed that I was from a different world quite easily. But still, the Native World? What's that?

I asked Alistair, and she explained it to me. Apparently, the gods of this world were believed to have come to this world from a different one and created the earth along with all the creatures within it.

It doesn't seem to be explicitly told, but it was just mentioned in some myths and the like. The world in which these gods were born and originally existed is called the Native World.

『No, how do I say this? To begin with, I was born and raised in a world with no magic or skills. So, I don't really know.』

“What? Then how do you build things?”

I continued to explain Earth's culture and technology for a while, as Alistair asked me to. Anyways, I was only a former salaryman, so I could hardly provide detailed answers on specific matters.

She seems to be very curious and asks whatever question that pops up in her mind. She seemed to have a keen interest in Earth, which has acquired high technical skills without the benefit of skills or magic.

“No, it's interesting! I want to listen to this forever!”

『As for me, you believing my story so easily is kind of a letdown.』

“If you don't know the anecdotes of the Native World, this wouldn't be happening.”

『Even so, that Native World story may or may not be true, right?』

“I believe it is true, I am a divine blacksmith after all.”

“Hmm?”

If one wondered what the divine grade blacksmiths had to do with it, it seems that the origins of the divine grade blacksmiths were told in the Native World Mythology.

In the myths, there was a theory that the Sword God fought against the Evil God by summoning a weapon. That weapon could be called his own alter ego, which he later left in the world while leaving to Native World. It seems that the sword of the Sword God is the source of the divine sword. In other words, the first divine sword was the beginning divine sword, Alpha, but Alpha began as an imitation of that Sword God's sword.

“Well, even until now, I don’t know the name of the god or the sword.”

Apparently the lore has been lost over the years.

“Oops, I’m a bit off topic. At any rate, I believe in the existence of other worlds, and I think it’s possible that there are beings that have come to this world from there. Well, I can’t be too sure if Master really came from the Native World...”

『Certainly, there must be a lot of worlds out there?』

“Ah. But maybe, the reason why Master was locked up inside the sword might be there. Is there anything you can think of? Even just a little might help.”

『Not at all. Just because you're an otherworldly person doesn't mean you have special powers. Perhaps me being an otherworldly person makes me somewhat special, but...』

"I see. Ah...that's a shame. Well, if you know anything, please tell me."

『Of course.』

If one day, I have things I need to discuss, I won't just stay silent. At that time, I will definitely consult it with you.

Chapter 369 - Skill Practice

『Fran, let's go!』

“Hmm!”

The day after I woke up, Fran and I were confirming the usability of the skill.

“Hah!”

『OK! Good move!』

“Shhh!”

『That's right!』

Fran used me to slice through the chunk of rock I created with Earth Magic. There's a rock about 5 meter long that's been neatly cut in half. My own magic conduction and use of the attribute sword was also fine.

However, Fran had a disgruntled look on her face that came from the bottom of her heart.

“.....No good”

『Still?』

“Mhm. No good at all.”

『Right.』

Well, it's no wonder Fran didn't like it. First of all, the physical manipulation method took too much magic power. Although it didn't go out of control, it took a long time to activate, and the effectiveness was low. In general, it meant that there was too much waste.

Still, Fran could handle this skill far better than I can use the physical manipulation method... Maybe it's because she's used to moving her body. Regardless, it was also clear that it was not at all up to the standard we were looking for.

That wasn't all. Her mid-leap air manipulation for creating footholds was also terrible. Fran was going to run up in the air and slash the rocky mass from above, but the second foothold did not activate as she imagined it to. Therefore, she lost her balance because she couldn't feel it.

Although she managed to make a big leap by injecting too much magical power into the third leap in the air, she would have fallen if she made a mistake, and would have fallen straight down and ended up underneath a chunk of rock. Well, that's not really going to happen because she had my support, but still, it was a potential hazard.

Other than that, she seemed to have activated her omnidirectional detection to try to find the fragile spot on the rock mass, but she frowned at the amount of information she received. It would still take a while of practice to be capable of utilizing it in the heat of battle. In the end, we were able to slash that chunk of rock, but it was a clunky move that left a lot to be desired in terms of attack power.

When it came to the battling technique using air compression, it didn't even activate. The air leap was too difficult to control, and the skill did not work well either.

『This is not looking good.....』

“Hmm.”

All of my skills have evolved into higher-level skills, but my combat power has actually dropped tremendously. In my current state, we could have a hard time even dealing with a D-class demonic beast, let alone a C-class threat.

The physical manipulation regeneration I tried before was also unusually inefficient. I think it took about 10 times as much magical power to use the regenerative skill as usual to heal wounds on Fran's arm. However, the regeneration power itself has increased, so if she comes to be proficient, Fran might be able to heal wounds more easily than using the recovery magic. But It's going to take a long time to master it.

Fortunately, there were some parts that are in great shape. I was visibly improving my ability to control magic. The simultaneous activation of magic was faster than ever before, and morphing is more delicate than previously possible. The activation of the barriers to keep the rock chunks out was also surprisingly smooth.

The Earth Magic consumed less magic and activated faster. It might have been possible to arrange Kanna Kamui like Myrellia did. No, I definitely could.

Well, we are still in recovery, I guess? I'll wait and see how it goes, and then try it out once again. Currently, my ability to use skills in combat is reduced while my magic-related skills are enhanced.

This will certainly help us surpass what we used to be once we become more proficient in handling the skills.

“Master, one more time.”

『Oh!』

Next, we used our various skills to gauge our current skill proficiency and train in them. I transformed, and I also verified the lord techniques • base, and the lord arts • base, To be honest, my impression is that it's not really a force. Well, I guess I could use Lord Archery • Base for long-range attacks and Lord Fist • Base for melee attacks. Still, I think it's better to improve my sword mastery by earnestly refining sword arts.

We continued to test out Physical Manipulation, Omnidirectional Perception, Omnipresence Perception, Covert Concealment, Lord Intimidation, Flame Operation, Water Operation, Soil Operation, and Wind Operation.

In the end, the training method I used was to maintain my Lord Intimidation and Covert Concealment skills while accelerating and stopping repeatedly with Physical Manipulation. I also utilized Wind Operation, Flame Operation, and to detect the stones and wind debris in all directions, I used Omnipresence Perception to dodge... In addition, it is also to avoid the wall produced by the Water Operation and the Soil Operation.

After a long training session like that, Asurasu emerged from inside Alistair's mansion.

"It looks like you're having a hard time."

".....Hmm."

Shortly after, Fran nodded to Asurasu's words.

"Hmm."

"...!"

『Wha!』

Asurasu suddenly grabbed the Earth Sword Gaia that he was carrying on his back and swung it at Fran. The attack oozed with murderous intent. Gaia thrust deep into the ground as Fran avoided it.

If Fran hadn't ducked on the spur of the moment, she would have been badly injured.

『What are you doing!』

"Kukuku. You evaded it pretty well. That was an attack you wouldn't have been able to duck if you hadn't used your skills to the fullest!"

Hmmm, Well, now that you mention it.... Fran also heard Asurasu's words and clapped her hand with a pop sound while giving a look of understanding.

So you're saying that she instinctively sensed the danger and subconsciously used the skills. I didn't quite master it, but it was certainly smoother to use than when I was consciously thinking about it in my head.

"It's good to repeat the training to master it, but live battle is just as important, you know?"

Well, I understand what you're saying, but you could've just told us about it.

Unfortunately, Fran, a passionate fellow, seemed convinced by Asura's actions. She then nodded many times to his words.

"Mhm. I understand."

"Then fine. With Master here, you wouldn't die easily, would you?"

Fran set me up so that we could match Asurasu's fighting spirit.

『Ho!』

"Haa!"

"Fuu!"

Before I could say anything else, Fran and Asurasu started a mock battle.

Sheesh! That's why you guys are battle junkies! They didn't even ask for permission first!

For the next few moments, the two continued to engage in an intense mock battle. No. Is it even a mock battle anymore? There were no reservations in each other's attacks. It's just like a face off, as long as one didn't die, they kept unleashing high-powered attacks on each other.

In fact, there were several moments along the way where they used healing magic. Nonetheless, it's also clear that Fran's movements have visibly improved during this battle.

After all, as Asurasu said, there is nothing better than a real battle. Asurasu didn't seem to be triggered in a fight of this magnitude, thanks to the resetting of the mad demonization once. It would be the only time I could get him to train with me.

I'm really grateful to Asurasu for caring and lending a hand to Fran.

“Fuhahahahaha! Your movements are gradually improving!”

“Shhh! Not yet!”

“Hahahaha!”

Well, it sounds like you're totally enjoying it.

Chapter 370 - One's Destination

Editor Makoto

It was already well past noon by the time Fran and Asurasu ended their mock battle that looked nothing short of a killing contest. Fran and Asurasu were now chatting over a pile of onigiri I served as a slightly late lunch.

“Mogu. You seem to have gotten a lot of your fighting sense back.”

“Mhm. Mogyu Mogyu.”

The half-day battle with Asurasu allowed both Fran and I to improve tremendously in using our skills during combat. While it’s still not as good as it once was, it’s unlikely that we will be in a pinch while in combat because of it.

It seems that the foundation has been solidified. Now it’s just a matter of application and practice.

『Thank you. You really saved us.』

“Mogu mogu. I had a good time, too, you know?”

Asurasu only laughed lightly in response to my gratitude. He looked embarrassed. Perhaps, he was not used to being thanked.

“After this, try to actively hunt for demonic beasts in various places. That’s the most efficient way to train.”

With a rice ball in each hand and a grain of rice sticking to the side of his mouth, Asurasu told me what we needed to do in the future.

Training in live combat with demon beasts... Well, now that you mention it, it might be useful, but... To be honest, I'm worried. Wouldn't it be better to practice with our skills a little bit more?

That's what I thought. But...

"Master, I'm going to find a demon beast."

『Isn't it too early for that?』

"I'm finding one now."

Fran was motivated.

It can't be helped, let's find a demonic beast. Let's at least start with the weaker demonic beasts at first. If there are some goblins around, I can eradicate them without a care in the world.

As we were discussing what kind of demonic beast we should look for, Asurasu lightly stepped forward. I guess he was done eating as he hit his stomach lightly. This guy ate about 20 rice balls by himself.

"I'll show you some interesting stuff at the end."

"Interesting stuff?"

"Oh, since Master is so determined to one day surpass the divine sword."

『Fran believes that I can.』

"Mhm. Master will be the strongest one day!"

Hearing those words, Asurasu smiled ferociously. Then, in a slow motion, he thrust Gaia up to the heavens.

What are you doing???

"Then, witness this! Witness this and see how far you've come!"

In response to Asurasu's spirited voice, we could see magic gushing out of his massive body.

“Ooo ooooo! Divine sword release!”

A magical power strong enough to visually manifest flowed into Gaia from Asurasu. Then, using that magical power as a source, Gaia unleashed her true power.

“Ooooo—”

『Uooo!』

If we hadn't put up a barrier as soon as possible, we would have been blown away. Even if we were already more than 10 meters away, we would still get blown away. That much magic was raging around Asurasu.

I know you think we'll be fine, but you need to be a little more careful!

Fran looked at me with a twinkle in her eye, though!

When the stormy magic subsided, Gaia's figure had mutated into the oddest weapon I saw in the dungeon before. It's that thing, like an over-decorated mixture of a siege hammer and a greatsword.

Just by existing, a tremendous sense of intimidation, even more so than the Lord Intimidation skill, covered the surroundings. Even though she knew Asurasu wasn't hostile, Fran can't help but back away.

Furthermore, the surrounding atmosphere, magical power, and the earth itself were shaking as if resonating with the magical power of the earth sword, Gaia.

“Appraisal doesn't work on it after all ...”

However, probably because of my growth due to the refurbishment, it was a little better than before.

Name: Earth sword, Gaia

Attack power (ATK): 4700

Magic Power (MP): 20000

Durability: 30000

Magical Conductivity : SS+

Skill

Only attack power, magic power and durability can be seen. Well, progress is progress.

“What I’m about to show you is a piece of Gaia’s power. Let it burn in your eyes!”

Asurasu set up to carry Gaia on his back. A brownish aura glaringly rose from Gaia. I could feel a vicious and intimidating magical power spreading.

“Haaaaaaaaa!”

It’s no longer at the level of vibrations or the like. The Earth was now shaking as if it were an earthquake, with Asurasu as the epicenter.

“Look at this! Ohhhhh!”

Asurasu leaped. However, that leap was really unnatural. He didn’t seem to have put much effort into it, but he rapidly accelerated and rose to the sky. Perhaps, they manipulated gravity.

He continued to jump up to a height of about 30 meters and only then began to plummet with unexpected timing and speed.

“Gravity Blow!”

Then, the moment Asurasu slammed the swirling magic-clad Gaia into the earth, the 30-meter square of earth surrounding him caved in at the same time, reaching a depth of over 20 meters. Earth with that much mass was compressed in an instant.

“So cool...!”

『Ye- Yeah』

What if we were in the range of that attack? We would have been helplessly crushed to death. At the very least, there would have been no way to save ourselves other than to escape with a dimensional leap.

“How was it? I can’t really release all of its power. This was only about 50%...”

Are you telling me this is only half of the full power even though it’s already this powerful?

Once again, I was reminded of the violence of the divine sword. At the same time, I was glad that Asurasu was out of control in a dungeon where he couldn’t get serious.

If we’d been out there fighting Asurasu at full throttle, we wouldn’t be here at all. Moreover, what’s frightening is that Asurasu, who unleashed that attack, wasn’t perturbed at all. Maybe, as he himself said, this wasn’t his best.

“Perhaps, this is the level you are aiming for right now. However, this is only part of it.”

“One’s Destination.”

“Ho?”

『Because Fran said so. I can’t just give up.』

“Fuhahaha. I see! Well, next time we meet, let’s do a mock fight again! At that time, let me be a little more serious.”

“Mhm! Let’s absolutely fight seriously!”

No, No, Fran?

I'm nodding with such a motivated look in my eyes, but I don't want to have a mock battle with a serious Asurasu or anything like that. No, Asurasu can't do mock battles seriously because of the mad demonization, right? So that means it's just pep talk for Fran.

"Then, I'll be going first."

Sheathing Gaia, he turned his back on us and began to walk away. He wasn't heading to Alistair's Mansion. Rather, he was going the opposite direction.

"You're leaving already?"

"Ou. It's not in my nature to stay in one place for very long."

That's a lie. I don't have to use my skills to know that. After all, as long as he had mad demonization, the fear of not knowing when he was going to go off the rails haunted Asurasu. In fact, it's probably because we've become so close that we couldn't stay together for long.

If it wasn't for the training with Fran, you could have stayed here much longer.

However, if he said that, it would watered down Asurasu's spirit, who was willing to go along with the mock battle, even if he had to speed up the activation of his own mad demonization.

Fran waved with a forlorn look while looking at Asurasu.

"Bye bye."

"See you."

"Yeah, see you soon!"

Then, Asurasu left with a quick dash.

Hmmm, it looks cool.

I can't help but admire it. If I was just a little bit more young, I might have called him 'Aniki!'

Chapter 371 - Dismantling the Spoils Of War

Editor Makoto

After Asurasu left, me and Fran borrowed one of the work rooms on the ground floor of Alistair's mansion and worked on dismantling.

The carcasses of a large number of demonic beasts obtained in the riot this time are overflowing in the dimensional storage. It doesn't look like the storage is full yet, but since it's already dead it can't be left there.

Besides, some of the materials are quite valuable demonic beasts. I wondered if there was something that could be used to modify the armor, so I tried to provide it to Alistair, but it seems that the materials in Alistair possession will be sufficient for the modification.

I mean, I'm terrified just to hear how valuable the materials that divine grade blacksmiths will use are..... Well, I'll ask her about that when it's finished.

However, Alistair asked me to show her a list of materials that could be used by her when we finished dismantling them, as some of the materials might be usable for some things.

So for now, I'm starting to dismantle the demonic beasts that are high threat level first. Because the material of a low threat level miscellaneous demonic beast wouldn't be necessary for a divine grade blacksmith. There was not enough time to dismantle everything, so it was necessary to select and disassemble the ones with the highest priority.

The top priority will be the five demon beasts, the bosses of the first flock of demons that we fought before fighting the evil one forces. There are five types: Graphite Hydra, Crimson Wolf, Steel Titan Bear, Adamas Beetle, and Baron Devil.

Well, Graphite Hydra vanished without a trace with my Kanna Kamui attack. The ones who bothered us most, the Adamas Beetle and the demon of the phantom wizard, have already been disassembled.

Perhaps it's because we have defeated a lot of the evil ones and the like, but the dismantling of a demon-like humanoid monster does not feel particularly repulsive. Well, after all that killing, it's a little late to feel that way. Well, in the case of demons, the color of blood and internal organs are completely different from people, so it's probably a big part of why they don't look like people.

“Master, what do we do about this?”

『Hmmm, the fur is tattered, but...』

The next thing Fran took out was the corpse of the Crimson Wolf, the threat level C demonic beast that had fought a fierce battle with Urushi. Its fur is balding, and the bones are brittle, and its flesh smells foul because the entire body has been consumed by the poisonous magic of Urushi. There are very few parts that remain intact.

『But let's try dismantling. After all there might be some parts of it that still remain intact.』

“I understand”

『I think I'll take this one apart.』

I took out the Steel Titan bear. More than half of what should be a reasonably large workroom is now occupied. It is a huge bear that is over 10 meters long. The material remained in perfect condition as the magic stone was crushed with a single blow.

Because of that, dismantling it will be very messy. Peel off the skin, separate the meat, and put the organs away in individual dimensional storage. It took nearly 30 minutes just to dismantle it. Even though I have maxed out my dismantling skills and can move at will with telekinesis, but, this is only work for me. It would have been a half-day hard work for an ordinary adventurer.

We also dismantle other demonic beasts that are strong in their own right, such as the Dragon Lizard, a dragonish monitor lizard, a dryad lion that uses tree magic, and a special individual of a high ogre, which is a class D threat.

Fran stopped halfway through, but I continued to dismantle it throughout the night. All in all I think I have dismantled about 50. It is certain that a large amount of meat will be secured and Fran's future meals will be luxurious.

Next morning. I, along with a still sleepy Fran, went to ask Alistair if she had the materials she needed.

“Are you done with the dismantling?”

『Well, not much to show for it. Here's the list.』

I showed her the list I had written out, but after all, there didn't seem to be any material that was good enough for a divine grade blacksmith. She was just amazed at how fast we were dismantling.

“Really you dismantled this much overnight?”

『Because we did it together』

“Teacher did most of it.”

『Fran is doing about 30% of it.』

While chatting, Alistair reads the list. In the end, it was decided to give the Crimson Wolf's esophagus and the Steel Titan Bear's fangs away since Alistair said she has a use for them.

『After that, there are some magic stones, but do you think it's okay to absorb them?』

“Hmm... how do I say this. I'm not even sure how the skills will be integrated... After all I wouldn't know for sure if I didn't see it.”

『Yeah, I guess you're right.』

“Well, how about you just absorb it for now.”

“Oo, that's a good idea”

『I understand』

So, let the experiment begin. I take out some magic stones from the evil ones. You can't see the skills that dwell in the magic stones when you appraise them, but the hobgoblin spearer's magic stones should belong to the evil ones who were led by the Valkyrie.

I remember the appraisal result at that time. Almost all hobgoblin spearer possessed the long spear technique. What will happen when I absorb this?

『Well then, let's do this.』

“Hmm”

When Fran presses the hobgoblin spearer's magic stone against my blade, it is absorbed without problems. There seems to be no big difference in the functions around this area. No. Did it make me feel a little more satisfied when I absorbed the magic stone? Maybe it's because the refurbishment connected me more deeply with the mysterious soul.

『What happened to the skill?』

If I check my skills, there is no long spear technique or long spear art. Perhaps it was absorbed and integrated into the Lord Spear Technique • Base. Later, the skill that should have disappeared due to refurbishment, hole digging from the Technical Skill was added.

『I got hole digging』

“So, will the skills that have disappeared be revived if absorbed again from the magic stone?”

『Isn't this pretty bad? I was finally able to reduce my skills.』

“Hmm... wait a moment.”

Alistair is analyzing me. Then she asked me to absorb the magic stone again, so this time I absorbed the hobgoblin archer's magic stone.

I still don't get the longbow art and longbow technique, but I do get the carpentry skill from the Technical Skill.

『How is it?』

“Hmm... this is just a probability, but I think it's because you are reborn as a skill-specific type due to the refurbishment. It seems that you can afford a lot of skills.”

“Meaning?”

“I think it's okay to increase the skill if it's about 120 to 150. Well, I think it also depends on the quality of the skill...”

『That's good news』

What's scary is that the number of wasted skills increases again, and because of that, I become unable to move again.

“But don't build your skills until you're close to the limit. Come to me before that if you can.”

“Of course”

『I get it. But it just, I will get another refurbishment.....』

“That’s something you should put up with. Well, I think you’ll get used to it after a few times, right? Besides, it wouldn’t be as bad as this one if it was just to get rid of a skill.”

『I hope so.』

I then absorbed the magic stone while Alistair watched over me. It's reassuring to have someone that can deal with it if something goes wrong.

In the end, the magic stone value was 2203 from about 100 magic stones. I had gained about 15 skills. As far as skills go, it's all Technical Skill skills.

The dungeon-born evil ones were probably given these skills for building their positions on the battlefield.

『.....I guess we have a long way to go before the next self-evolution.』

Chapter 372 - Black Heavenly Tiger Equipment

Editor Makoto

The day after Asurasu departed. After fully absorbing the magic stone, we prepared to leave the Alistair's Mansion.

『I'm indebted to you for all your help.』

“No, it was a great experience for me too. I look forward to seeing you again.”

『You even had Fran's armor improved, but are you sure you want to be paid like that?』

“I don't mind. Looking at Fran's reaction, I can tell that it is much more valuable than money.”

The other party was a divine grade blacksmith, and I had the opportunity to ask her to repair and refurbish me, and also modify Fran's armor. Moreover, I'm sure she used a lot of valuable materials to complete said tasks.

In a normal course of events, it wouldn't be surprising if it would cost hundreds of millions of golds, is it? However, Alistair said she didn't want any rewards. She added that all of it would be worth it with just being able to analyze an interesting sword, which was me.

Still, I felt bad, but when I insisted on giving a reward, Alistair said,

“Okay, I'll only take 1 million gold. It's just a feeling. You know, I got the materials from the monsters. Also, I want a whole pot of curry to be left on the table.”

A million gold is quite a lot of money, but I figured it was a small price to pay for Alistair. Well, it’s just a hunch. Thus, I decided to leave a million gold and one of the largest curry pots on the table.

Fran insisted she’d leave all the money she had if we didn’t have to give Alistair the curry, but I convinced her that if we go to the town and get some spices we would be able to make more of it. Even a full-sized cauldron which people use to sell food filled to the brim with curry wouldn’t cost 10,000 gold.

When I tried to give her the recipe, she said she didn’t want it because she couldn’t cook at all. Apparently, the golem for cooking could only make dishes that have been programmed in advance.

“Thank you for the armor.”

“The original armor was a good one.”

“Yeah, it’s so cute and strong. I’m really glad I asked Alistair to help me out.”

Fran was wearing a series of black cat equipment that looked much different than before. No, the name had already changed, so it could be called new equipment. The shape of the armor had been drastically changed while retaining its appearance.

Regardless, its performance has changed even more tremendously than its external experience. First of all, the defense power of each piece increased by 50. Originally, the total defense power was 350, but now it has increased by 300 to a total of 650.

The durability had also been increased by 200, making it more sturdy. The effects are also enhanced in a modest way.

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Uniform

Defense: 150

Durability: 800/800

Effect: good sleep, deodorization, purification, greater mental attack resistance

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Gloves

Defense: 120

Durability: 800/800

Effect: greater impact resistance, increase in strength

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Light Shoes

Defense: 115

Durability: 800/800

Effect: Jumping, increase in agility

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Earrings

Defense: 65

Durability: 500/500

Effect: greater noise resistance, greater attribute resistance

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Cloak

Defense: 135

Durability: 800/800

Effect: Cold resistance, heat resistance, automatic equipment repair

Name: Black Heavenly Tiger Leather Belt

Defense: 65

Durability: 500/500

Effect: granted during magic resistance, granted during abnormal condition resistance, small item bag

Moreover, the protection of the black cat has been enhanced with the protection of the black heavenly tiger.

The Black Cat's Blessing was +10 for all stats while wearing the complete black cat equipment. Furthermore, there was a skill to nullify immediate death. Also, I think there was an effect that made it so it could only be equipped by the Black Cat Tribe.

However, the Black Heavenly Tiger equipment was even more intense. In addition to all stats +20, there was instant death nullification, thunder nullification, and enhanced stealth. Now, the Black Heavenly Tiger was almost exclusively for Fran.

Well, it's a pretty cute design, so I don't think Grandma Chiara would have said she'd equip it if she were still alive.

It's basically black cat equipment. However, flares and lacy fluttering in the details added to the overall girliness of the dress.

A big change will be the black cat's uniform. There is a large collar around the neck that looks like a false collar, and the shoulders and chest have ruffles. The lower half of the body became a completely fluttery skirt type of thing. Underneath it, it looks like she is wearing pants that are somewhere between a culotte and an underskirt.

After all, Aristair was a woman even if she acted like a man. It's much more girly than the boyish one made by Gallus.

"It's fluttering but I can still move."

『Yeah, Fran is cute.』

"Yeah, I'm getting pretty good at this. It looks good on you. I'm sure you will stand out and become the envy of every man in the world. You know what I mean?”

“? We can’t stand out.”

“Why?”

“We will be found by monsters.”

『Fran, when Alistair says stand out, that’s not what she meant...』

Hm. Fran is not interested in cuteness at all. She is not interested in anything other than being easy to move and strong.

“Master...”

『I know. I know, but there is nothing I can do, right? I’m a man, and Fran isn’t interested in cute things at all!』

“Yes, but the material is good.”

Alistair had no makeup on, but others seem to care. She stared at me with jittery eyes.

『I- I knew it wasn’t a good idea to go on like this either. I’ll do my best.』

“.....Well, I’ll just wait and see what happens.”

『So be it.』

“?”

Finally, Fran and Alistair give a firm handshake to each other.

“Thank you for everything.”

“Be careful. You haven’t mastered Master’s skill yet, have you?”

“Nn. We will train as we go.”

『I won't be reckless for a while.』

Worst case scenario, we will have to use teleportation to get around the guy who looks like they could be trouble. Or, until my skills are stable enough to use them, I'll be fighting mainly with my magic.

『Hey, when we want to see Alistair to do some maintenance, do we come here?』

“No, I travel around the world regularly. I will be moving out of this place in less than a month.”

Eh? So how do I get in touch with Alistair?

“I'm planning to move to the Gilbard continent after this. You guys are going to go back to Gilbard one of these days, right?”

“Hmm.”

『I'm going to attend the auction in the capital of the Kingdom of Kranzell.』

“Oh, that one huh? Is it in about two more weeks?”

“Yes, more or less.”

“If that's the case, then I might cross over to Gilbard first. In case you're wondering, they should be on the side of the town of Ulster in the southwestern part of the Kingdom of Berrios. If you are near me, I'll get in touch with you. I can already sense Master's magic, you know.”

It seems Alistair has the ability to detect the magical power of weapons even from a distance. If so, we might be able to meet easily.

『Let's meet over there』

“Hmm”

“Ou, be careful.”

Chapter 373 - Gringott Again

Editor Makoto

After leaving Alistair's Mansion, we were on our way to Gringott. We want to know if the Black Cats were able to evacuate safely, and we also want to get information about the war.

“I see it”

“Woof!”

We left in the morning and by mid-afternoon we had Gringott in sight.

“The rampart is a little bit broken”

『Yeah, it seems like there's been some pretty intense fighting.』

Even though Kiara, Mea and the others had eradicated the swarm of demonic beasts to some extent, but of course there would still be some of them that ran away before Kiara and the others managed to strike them down. They must have been the ones who attacked Gringott.

It can be seen from the damage on the rampart and surroundings that there was a fairly fierce battle. There are burnt marks on the rampart, and part of the surrounding forest is burned down. Not only that, but a lot of trees were knocked down, making lots of hollow parts in the ground.

But the gates, though damaged, remain undestroyed, and soldiers can be seen patrolling on the ramparts. It seems that they have prevented them from getting into the city.

For the time being, we decided to get off just before the castle gate. In the past, there would have been a long line of people waiting to be screened to enter the town, but now the gates of the castle were tightly closed and there were no people in sight.

As we got off Urushi's back and approached the gates on our own, we were approached by a soldier on the ramparts asking who we are and what do we want by coming here.

“Who- Who are you!”

We can also see that there are multiple bows pointed at us at the same time.

『Fran, I don't feel any killing intent .....maybe』

“Mhm”

Omnipresence Perception is doing too much work and I will only get information overload, but I don't think the soldiers on the ramparts are going to kill me. However, there is considerable caution and fear coming from them.

“Fran. Adventurer”

“Like you—”

“Hey! Wait!”

A soldier who was about to raise his voice further was stopped by a colleague next to him, who looked flustered.

“What are you doing!”

“That person is fine!”

Apparently, there was a soldier who remembered Fran. This is going to save me a lot of extra time.

Eventually, the soldier was able to identify Fran and get us into the city. It's pretty crowded in there. But there is no liveliness at all. This is because many of them are refugees who have fled from the surrounding villages.

In the middle of central avenue on both sides of the area families were huddling together. Perhaps they had escaped in a hurry with only their clothes on. Most of them were just tired and sat down without a smile.

However, as I walked down the street toward the lord's mansion, there was a corner that was different from the other area where other refugees came together. Here, tents are regularly set up and even a simple kitchen is built. And everyone was chatting there comfortably.

『They just saved us the trouble of asking for the direction to the lord's house.』

“Hmm!”

It's an area where the refugees from Schwarzkadze gathered. I kind of know it when we escape from the pack of demonic beasts, and I heard that the black cat people are really used to escaping. They are obviously well prepared beforehand and seem to be more adaptable than other beastmen in places like this.

They are indeed a wanderer who has been on the run. Apparently, even though they had a safe haven in Schwarzkadze, they hadn't lost their escape skills.

Fran spots a familiar man and runs over to him.

“Chief!”

“Oh! Princess! You are fine!”

“Everyone! The princess is back!”

“Princess! Welcome back!”

Everyone greets her with an awesome smile. Fran seems a little confused, but I think the thought of joy is even greater than that.

“I’m back”

She nod to everyone shyly. Damn, it’s so cute. The black cats seemed to have the same impression as me, and everyone were either laughing or giving a wide smile.

Fran is a hero and idol to the Black Cat tribe. In no time at all, we were surrounded by a crowd of black cat people.

“Gentlemen, we mustn’t barge on the princess like this. Don’t come too close!”

“E~~ii, It’s not fair that only the village chief talks to the princess!”

“That’s right! That’s right!”

“E~~ii! So noisy! Shut up! Anyway, scatter for now! First of all, let’s have the Princess rest!”

“Yes”

“Tsk”

The village chief disbanded the Black Cats. Then he leads us straight to a place like a plaza set up in the middle of the Black Cat Tribe’s tent village.

“Now, now, please sit here, but I’m sorry we only have this one chair.”

“Mhm. Thank you.”

“Hey, bring us some tea!”

In the square, Fran sat on a chair and the village chief sitting on the ground in front of her. And the people from the village remain and surround her. Well, the area around it is filled with the black cat people.

“And what happened outside? What happened to the village?”

Well, It's obvious that, that's what you want to know. Naturally, we were on our way to Gringott to check on Schwarzkadze's condition.

“The village is safe. Few houses are broken. And now that all the demon beasts have been killed, we can go back to them whenever we want.”

“Is it really true?”

“Hmm”

“Is that so!”

“We did it!”

“As expected of the princess!”

“Princess Banzai!”

The moment Fran told them that the village was safe, the Black Cat tribe, including the village chief, seemed to explode with joyful emotions. There was an earth-shaking roar, followed by cheerings sound. I suppose that was their number one concern.

“Thank you very much! Di- did the princess exterminate the demon beast?”

“Not just me. Mea and Kiara are with us.”

“When you say Kiara, is that Kiara?”

“Do you know?”

“Of course! For our Black Cats, it's another hero lined up with the princess!”

I see, so you know her.

“Everyone is happy, and surely Kiara is happy too.”

“And, so where is Lady Kiara?”

“Hmm... Kiara—”

Fran is at a loss for words. It seems that just by seeing her, everyone, including the village chief, realized that Kiara was dead. He keeps his mouth shut with a painful expression. However, Fran told the story of Kiara as it was. Everyone is quietly listening to her words.

The village chief was taken care of by Kiara when he was young, or something like that, and he started screaming and crying halfway through. Other sobbing voices rise from among the black cat people.

But Fran concludes the story while smiling.

“Kiara won’t be happy to see people crying. I’m sure that she will be happier if everyone laughed and remember her as a hero.”

“Pri, princess...! Tha- That’s right!”

“Ou, it’s as the princess says!”

You can't seem to laugh all of a sudden, but at least no one's crying with a dark expression anymore. It's a reminder of the tremendous power of Fran's influence. Fran wiped her own tears and smiled.

However, many black cats are still crying all at once. The way it looked was nothing short of bizarre. Moreover all the other species in the vicinity are looking at us like they are looking at something creepy.

Chapter 374 - The Result of the War is?

Editor Makoto

TL NOTE : I'm sorry for not updating last week because I need to be at the Hospital.....

As we finished explaining everything to everyone of the Black Cat tribe, the knights came over. Apparently, he heard the collective cry of the Black Cat tribe.

“We just received a report of a disturbance in the area.....”

“What happened?”

“Who is in charge?”

Apparently, the other refugees had notified the knights. Well, they must have wondered what happened.

After the village chief explained to the knights what was going on, their eyes turned to Fran. However, their gaze didn't seem to be irritated from looking at the source of the commotion. Instead, they looked at Fran with a twinkle in their eyes.

“You are the Black Thunder Princess, right!”

“I've heard of you.”

I heard that Marmano, the lord of Gringott, and Mea, who visited the city shortly before we returned, had told them many stories of Fran's heroic deeds.

Fran was asked by the knights to join them by all means to visit the city lord's house. I was a bit troubled by the many beastmen, who froze and kneeled when they saw Fran walking by. They even worshipped her on the spot.

It appears the rumors of the Black Thunder Princess were widely known among the beastmen of Gringott. Apparently, the Black Cat tribe had also been going around preaching the splendor of the Black Thunder Princess like missionaries.

Furthermore, from the news brought by Mea, it became known that the Black Thunder Princess took the lead in the annihilation of the demonic beasts and risked her life to defend the beast kingdom. In such a situation, it was only natural that if an evolved black cat that was said to be impossible was walking around, their identity would be discovered in a matter of seconds.

Thus, the inhabitants of Gringott saw us off as we reached the lord's mansion, and as soon as we arrived, we were ushered into the reception room, where we were able to meet the lord, Marmano.

As they were still in a state of war, he struck a brave figure in his heavy armor. It gave off a completely different aura compared to the negligee I saw him wear when I visited him the night of the demonic beast attack.

"Welcome, Black Thunder Princess!"

"Hmm."

"I have heard about Her Highness' great service! Thank you for saving Gringott."

"I just wanted to protect my friends."

"Still, our city has undeniably been saved as well. I even heard that you kicked out more than 10,000 packs of demonic beasts and destroyed the evildoers!”

Apparently, Mea exaggerated when she told him of the details. It’s true that we defeated 10,000 hordes of demonic beasts, but the stories Marmano heard seem to have been greatly embellished and beautified.

With a twinkle in his eye, Marmano recounted the story of Fran’s defense that Mea told him. Slaying a thousand demonic beasts with a single swing, and defeating ten thousand demonic beasts with a single magical strike... Who is this hero? Isn’t it hard to possess a divine sword?

“Well, in front of the power of the mighty demon beasts, the dainty appearance of the Black Thunder Princess who stood tall made her compatriots shed tears! I wish I could have seen it happen in person!”

Who are you talking about? The story isn’t exactly wrong, but I feel like it wasn’t about Fran? Well, Mea did intensely love Fran, after all. She must have been a bit too excited.

Then, Marmano bowed deeply.

“Thanks to your hard work, it’s not just Gringott. Our country too has been saved. Once again, let me thank you.”

“Like I have said before, I didn’t do anything special.”

“Fuhahaha. I cannot reward my men if you said your help is not something special. It’s fine. You did a great thing. I’m not saying you should show off and become arrogant. However, you should take credit where credit is due. Otherwise, you might end up making some unnecessary enemies.”

Marmano, suddenly with a straight face, advises us in a serious tone of voice. Well, he does have a point.

‘Fran didn’t do anything special’. If we kept insisting on saying we only did the obvious thing and declined compliments and rewards, wouldn’t it be hard for the other soldiers and knights to be proud of their achievements?

Also, it was okay now because Marmano is a good man, but some of the nobles might be offended by Fran's attitude. It may be easier to take a little pride in our accomplishments than to be humble to such a person, just so that they won't hate your guts.

These people have their own ways to measure others. Therefore, a reputation as a naive adventurer of a young age who gets carried away when praised would be less alarming to the nobility than an uncanny and noble warrior girl with no greed and no weaknesses to be exploited.

"Mhm, I Understand."

"Is that so! Well, forgive me. I started preaching to you all of a sudden."

"No. Thank you for your concern."

"Apparently, the Black Thunder Princess really is such a generous person as described! Well, I'm impressed!"

"Too much compliment."

"Gahahaha. If we had been pinned down from the north too, our country would have been in a crisis. Preventing one of them, destroying the dungeon and annihilating the demonic beast was an unparalleled achievement in this war. It's no wonder that Black Thunder Princess, Your Highness Nemea and Kiara-sama are dubbed the heroes and the country's salvation. The only people who could match them would be the two lion generals on the southern front line."

Southern Front line... I'm curious as to what happened on that side of the war. I also can't deny that I'm worried about the two generals, who played important roles in this war.... Wait. Before that, what happened to the war? Did we lose? Did we achieve victory? Marmano's face wasn't clouded or moody, so I don't think we lost.....

"What happened to the southern battle?"

"It was a great victory for our country!"

“Is it over?”

Wasn't it only about a week since the war started? Moreover, they must have deployed large armies to each other. If they can't achieve victory with that they will deploy more soldiers or use different tactics, therefore I don't think it would be surprising if the war went on for months, or even years.

“There is also the fact that the difference in strength of the forces was too vast. The Beast Kingdom was overwhelmingly superior in terms of number of mobilized troops and quality of soldiers.”

“Still, I heard that the Bashar Kingdom is very good at magic.”

“Well, yes. In terms of magic, the quality of sorcerers and the ability to develop magical tools of ours are both outclassed by Bashar Kingdom.”

The magic tools for long-distance calls were made by the Magician's Guild of the Bashar Kingdom, I believe. Perhaps, they developed a lot of other useful tools as well. If that was the case, then it could be said that even if we won in terms of the number of soldiers, we couldn't have won by simply overwhelming them.

At least, that was what I thought, but then I was made to know that regular soldiers were too weak to utilize their magical advantage at all.

“What can I say... There's the racial difference. But really, even more importantly, there is a bigger difference between our senses.”

“Senses?”

“Yes”

Of course... If we compared beastmen and humans, beastmen were more powerful in combat. However, it was not only that, as there is also a big difference in the senses of the soldiers from the two countries.

“They definitely have a substantial number of outstanding soldiers. Just, in war, soldiers are also recruited from farmers, amongst many other layman workers.”

Well, that was normal in this world. Rather, the army and knights were mainly responsible for maintaining security in peacetime and defeating demonic beasts. They would definitely be overwhelmingly short of manpower to fight a war on their own.

“On top of that, there were already notable differences between our country and the Kingdom of Bashar from the time of the conscription.”

“What difference?”

“The Bashar Kingdom dispatched an officer called a conscript officer to each village and forcibly gathered soldiers. In each village, although people were reluctant to betray their homeland, they also weren’t exactly willing to volunteer to become soldiers.”

That was also not surprising. No one wants to send their family to a dangerous war zone.

“However, in the case of the Beastmen Nation, there was no need to do that. Most of the time, volunteers come from the surrounding villages on their own. Some of them even come to us as if they were going hunting. In fact, it was harder for us as there were too many volunteers wanting to sign up!”

As expected of the fighting race. Even ordinary people were fierce.

“In both countries, although most soldiers were originally farmers, the soldiers of Bashar Kingdom were just peasants, while ours are semi-farmers. Also, I think theirs were forced into a war that they didn’t want to be in, whereas our soldiers— in particular those in the frontier villages— were soldiers by profession, and they usually feel that by farming they are making supplies for the logistics.”

I see, so the soldiers’ will to fight was overwhelmingly different. Moreover, the soldiers of Beastman Nation do training on a regular basis. Only, the Black Cats were thought to be particularly weak, so they weren’t associated with that kind of atmosphere.....

Chapter 375 - Journey To the Royal Capital

Editor Makoto

After hearing of the end of the war from Marmano, Fran asked what she was most concerned about to Marmano.

“Do you know how Mea is doing?”

Yes, it was about where Mea and the others are now, and how they are doing. However, Marmano only shook his head apologetically.

“I don’t know. The princess left Gringott for the southern battlefield.”

“Is it safe there?”

“I don’t know that either. She is very strong though, so I’m sure she is safe.....”

“I see.”

“If you want to find out more, you should go to the royal capital.”

It can’t be helped after all huh. I’m also curious about Myrellia’s will. She said she wanted me to help a boy named Romeo.....

But, well, I’m hesitant to head to Bestia, the royal capital.

“Is this town okay?”

After all, the Black Cat tribe has taken refuge in Gringott. There's no way Fran can ignore the safety of this city and leave.

“Are you worried? Don't worry. The war is over, and the knights and soldiers we sent from our city will soon return. Those who have volunteered to fight for us will do the same too. We'll have no problem finding food to shelter them in the city until they return.”

It's just like what he said. Well, now that the monster beast in the dungeon is gone, things are back to how it was before. If only there were no concerns about food supply, it wouldn't be so much as a crisis for Gringott.

“Gringott is all right now. Please leave the Black Cats to me. I won't treat them badly.”

Marmano had Fran's back. Perhaps, he sympathized with Fran's anxiety.

“Please.”

“Leave it to me.”

After that, we were asked to stay at Marmano's residence for one night, but we decided to leave immediately. It would have been nice to stay with the Black Cats for one night instead of in Marmano's residence, but Fran wanted to hurry ahead.

Now that the Black Cat tribe was safe and sound, Fran wanted to ensure that Mea and the others are safe as well. We left Gringott with the Black Cats seeing us off as the sun set.

The soldiers were quite worried about us, but with Urushi around, we can manage attacks from most demonic beasts. If it was of a lower rank, we could use dark magic to defeat it, and small fry can't catch up with Urushi's speed anyways. If it is of the same rank or higher than Urushi, we'll use detection skills to steer clear of them.

“Su~ Su~ Su~”

Fran was already used to a forceful march on Urushi, that she could sleep soundly on its back. While firmly grasping its hair and belt, she slept soundly, buried in Urushi's hair. Looks like we won't even need telekinetic support. Actually, I'm not going to turn off my telekinesis.

She was even dexterous enough to eat her dinner before bed, and what she ate wasn't something like skewers or bread, but soup and pasta. She managed to balance it well, and ate it with a fork and spoon.

At this rate, wasn't it already possible for her to live on Urushi's back? There was no problem with sleeping and eating.

What's left... a bath? No, she definitely couldn't take a bath, indeed. However, I think we could go for a shower, though Urushi will get soaked. Wait, I think that can be prevented if we set up a wind barrier.

Seriously, I think I could handle most things while on Urushi's back. Just, it would be quite a nuisance for Urushi.

“Woof!”

『What's wrong Urushi?』

“Woo- Woof!”

Oh, it seems that Fran, who was sleeping while hugging Urushi's neck, was holding on too tightly and strangled Urushi. Fran's hand seemed to be in his neck in just the worst way possible.

『Good luck?』

“Woo, Woof?”

『No. If you pull it off badly, you'll wake up Fran. That's why... Good luck?』

“Wo, Woof!”

It's not that I'm getting back at you because Fran was with me while I was struggling with my refurbishment and Urushi was fast asleep, okay? It's the truth you know?

“Unn~~ muu~~...”

“Whimper!”

『Good luck』

“Whine~ Whine~!”

While having such an exchange, we pushed through the night sky, and by next morning, we had reached the royal capital.

There were no signs of war having broken out here. The royal capital was there, looking exactly the same as when I visited before. Outside the gate, a line of merchants and adventurers waited to enter, as usual. The aftermath of the war seemed to have barely reached the royal capital.

『Let's get off in front.』

“Woof!”

“Master, over there.”

When I instructed Urushi to descend to the plains before the royal capital, Fran, who was already awake, pointed to the sky.

『What? That is— a Wyvern?』

“Mhm. Mea.”

『I see! Is that Lind?!』

However, I couldn't tell. Just from looking at it, it looked like a wyvern, or something flying, passed us.

I'm going to try again to use my omnidirectional detection against the shadows flying far away. Then, I sensed a vaguely familiar magical power.

“It was definitely Lind.”

『How could you know who it was from so far away?』

“Friends don't mistake each other.”

It was such a simple reason.

『Is- is that so? Oh, well. Urushi, don't stop there. We're going to meet up with Mea and the others.』

“Woof!”

They seemed to notice us, too, and slightly deviated from their original course toward the royal capital and headed toward us. As they were moving in the sky at high speeds, in a blink of an eye, the distance between us was closed.

One wouldn't make a mistake at this distance. It was Mea, Kuina and Lind. But, it looks like Mianoa isn't with them.

“Fran! Master! Urushi! It's been a long time!”

“Mhm!”

Mea waved from above Lind. Urushi and Lind, as they were told, lowered their altitudes and headed towards a corner of the plains.

As they landed, Mea jumped off Lind's back and ran at us. The same goes for Fran.

“Fran!”

“Mea!”

“What were Mea and the others doing?”

Fran and the others sat at the table set that Quina had arranged according to the maid’s etiquette, while drinking tea and reporting back to each other on what they had been doing since they had left each other.

As a matter of fact we got steak as snacks that’s served with the tea. Sipping tea on one hand while munching on a thick steak. It’s already more of a meal instead of tea time, right? However, it is a common sight in the Beast Country. Quina, who acts as the Tsukkomi, doesn’t say anything either.

To be honest, I think it’s okay to share the information to one another later after we entered the royal capital but..... It seems that neither could wait.

We explain how the skills have become difficult to use and about my modifications.

“So the skill transform to the advanced level but the fighting power has declined? Isn’t that a grave situation!”

“Mhm, very terrible”

“But it’s not entirely unheard of, is it?”

『Is that so?』

“Yes”

According to Quina, this is a phenomenon that often happens when a sensory or physical enhancement skill reaches the highest level and changes to an advanced level skill.

It seems that the skills we usually use intuitively are more confusing when they change into a more advanced level.

“Well, even so, I can’t give you any advice, because usually it’s not possible for more than one skill to change to an advanced level at the same time, like what happened to you.”

『I see..... But how do you usually get over that?』

“Training.”

It was a very brief answer. But it’s the only way to go. And if there was an easier way to overcome it, Asurasu would have told us about it.

The next thing Mea got her teeth into after talking about skills was the story that my outer body was originally a divine sword cherubim. According to Mea, Quina is also very surprised.

“I never thought I’d meet a divine sword in a row in such a short period of time.....”

“Yes. I’m surprised.”

『I will return the words back to you. I’m only at the level of a former divine sword or a semi-divine sword, but you guys have a real divine sword.』

“No, no, no, it’s a semi-divine sword, and an intelligence weapon, moreover it seems to have some more secrets? Isn’t that much more better?”

『Isn’t the divine sword much more better?』

Mea and Quina are looking at me with a dumbfounded expression for some reason, but it can’t be helped after Asurasu showed me the Earth Sword Gaia’s capability.

It's not totally, but I don't think I can say that I'm better than a divine sword. Lind hasn't shown his true power yet, so Mea's perception of him may be a little too naive. Or rather, it's scary to see what kind of monster Lind will turn into when he's regained his true form. I am after all only a semi-divine sword.

When I muttered something like that, Mea glared at me sternly.

“Master, aren't you putting yourself down way too much? It doesn't matter whether you are a divine sword or not. You saved this country! Be proud!”

“Mhm! Master is an awesome sword!”

『I- Is that so?』

“That's right! Besides, the sword is rated by its owner, remember? It's one of the talents of an adventurer to come across excellent armor and be able to get it!”

So that's it. Luck is part of the talent, or maybe it's just that the adventurer's reputation is based on the strength of the armor they are using.

“Master, if you keep putting yourself down you will undermine Fran's achievements! Puff out your chest— no, you don't have any, but you should be proud of who you are!”

『I'm putting myself down too much....? And Fran will.....』

“That's right! Besides, think about it! You single-handedly fended off a huge army of demonic beasts and evil one that could destroy the country, defeated the vicious evil ones who were pulling the strings behind the scenes, and conquered the dungeon that resulted in saving the country.”

Well, if you look at it objectively, it's certainly pretty amazing. If I didn't know I would think she was talking about some Hero.

『I see..... I am— We are amazing』

“That's right! It's amazing!”

Fran said something similar to Marmano, apparently it was a word that applied to me as well. He has told Fran not to be humble, but apparently I was putting down myself too much as well.

I can understand the reason myself. The divine sword. With Gaia in front of me, I took the liberty of rating myself and thought I couldn't win now. And I thought I was no big deal.

I vowed that one day I would catch up with the divine sword. That means that I have admitted that I am not good as I am now, and that I am losing. It was no wonder that I couldn't beat the divine sword, but apparently a large part of me was unknowingly feeling frustrated and defeated. It seemed that my inferiority complex with the divine sword had caused me to belittle myself more than necessary.

But as Mea said, if I'm not good enough, that means Fran is using a bad sword. Besides, Fran and I are always fighting together. If I despise my accomplishments, that means I despise even Fran's accomplishments. I can't let that happen!

『I'm sorry. I'm fine now.』

“Um. That's good.”

I don't mean to be conceited, but I'm going to be more proud of myself from now on. As befits Fran's sword.

“But did you say he showed you Gaia? Did Asurasu show you the released state?”

“Hmm, just a little.”

And when I told her the story of our mock battle, Mea was very envious of us. Come to think of it, it's a mock battle against a rank S adventurer. How could the battle-crazed Mea not be envious?

“I- I wish I could have fought Lord Asurasu too!”

It seems that the tablecloth is about to be chewed at any moment. But apparently a pat on the head from Pessili and Quina brought her back to her senses. She cleared her throat with a cough and changed the subject.

“Nevertheless, the equipment looks pretty good. You said that you had your original equipment modified by Alistair-dono, how is it performing?”

Mea looks at Fran’s new armor and squints at it. Apparently, even though she is a combat fanatic like Fran, she likes cute things.

“Mhm. Perfect”

“I see. Fufu”

“What’s wrong?”

“No, nothing”

Mea smiled suddenly. What’s the matter with you? Did Fran’s cuteness get to you?

“Lady, Why don’t you honestly say that you’re happy to have matching equipment, since both of it was made by Alistair-sama?”

“Wha.....! What are you talking about, Quina! I- I don’t think about such a thing at all!”

“Your expression is becoming softer.”

“Shu- Shut up!”

So this is what it seems to be about. Quina continues to be calm and exposing her.

“Tha- that’s being said, what are we talking about?”

“Hmm”

She is embarrassed. It was Mea who forced the conversation back to its track.

“Did you go to the war area after we part way?”

“Hm, that’s right. Do you know?”
